"Mr Horatio Walpole seconded his Brother in "favour of the French Refugees, and deplor'd "the lamentable Condition of their Ministers "and the Poor amongst them, to whom the "Lord-Treasurer had not paid one Penny of the "15000 l. per Annum, voted by Parliament, and "allow'd in the Civil-List towards their Subsi-"stance and Relief, since he came into his Of-"fice. He added, That some amongst the Refu-"gees now suffer'd more in England, than they "did during the Persecutions in France; since "there were always some charitable People who "relieved them, while they were in Prisons and "Dungeons; whereas here they were let starve." I observ'd elsewhere, that the affected Zeal for the Redress of the Grievances of the Protestants in Silesia, since these Men were Ministers, was rather to give Vexation to the Emperor, than out of Hope, or Desire, to have them redress'd. For would they otherwise have suffer'd the French Protestants at their Doors to starve, by defrauding them of the charitable Relief provided for them by Parliament. We have been quite tir'd, as well as shock'd, with the Blessings which were pour'd down on us by the Peace. This has been dwelt upon in Speeches from the Throne, and in Answers to Addresses. Nay what is still more extraordinary, and not a little terrifying, in solemn and public Prayers of Thanksgiving, from the Date of which the Piety of this Reign can no more be insisted upon, it being a palpable mocking of the Almighty, as will appear by what that noble Englishman the Lord Finch, said in relation to Mr Steele's Reflexions upon the Peace. We may, said his Lordship, give it all the fine Epithets we please, but Epithets do not change the Nature of the thing. We may, if we please, call it here honourable, but I am sure it is accounted scandalous in Holland, Germany, Portugal, and even all Europe, except France and Spain. We may call it advantageous, but all the trading part of the Nation find it to be otherwise. If therefore it be really advantageous, it must be so to the Ministry that made it. Sir William Wyndham saying thereupon, according to the Annalist, "The "Ministry would not say the Peace was advanta-"geous to them. My Lord Finch very smartly "reply'd, That it was plain it was advantageous "to no body but our late Enemies." The Lord Finch endeavoured also to justify Mr Steele, with relation to the nicest and tendrest Part of the Charge against hm, His Wish in the Close of his last ENGLISHMAN. That his Electoral Highness of Hanover would be so grateful, as to signify to all the World, the perfect good Understanding he had with the Court of England, in as plain Terms as her Majesty was pleased to declare she had with that House on her Part. His Lordship thereupon said, "That supposing there were "in this Wish some injurious Insinuations, yet "the same could not, without Injustice, be ap-"plied to the Queen, but only to her Ministers; "that no body doubted the good Understanding "between her Majesty and the House of Hano-"ver, but that it was notorious that the Mini-"sters shew'd no great Regard to that illustrious "House, witness, to pass over other Instances, "the Slight they put upon Baron Bothmar's "Memorial, which the Queen had, perhaps, "never seen, had not the Duchess of Somerset "shew'd it to her Majesty in print in the Daily "Courant." At the same time that these Professions of good Understanding between the Queen and the House of Hanover were made, the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Wharton, the Lord Halifax, the Bishop of Salisbury, and other Lords in the Secret, knew very well what Sentiments that illustrious House had of the Conduct of the Ministry, with respect to their Succession, and yet they put it upon her Majesty, to affirm and confirm it upon all Occasions, without any regard to their Duty, or even to Appearances. The Lord Oxford's Historian speaking of this, with reference to Lord Bolingbroke and his Faction, it is the Historian's own Phrase, says, It can never be sufficiently lamented by every true Subject of Britain, how far the Honour, Dignity, and Reputation of the Queen, became a Sacrifice in the Hands of these Men. How far they abandon'd the Regard, which in Duty they ow'd to their Sovereign's Veracity. How far they expos'd her Sincerity to common Censure, &c. Though it is easy to prove that the true Author was as regardless of it as the Secretary, till they fell out among themselves.

Lord Finch calls the Peace scandalous

The Lord Lumley, the Lord Hinchingbroke, and other Members of the like Dignity and Worth, spoke with a great deal of Vivacity in favour of Mr Steele, and against the Conduct of the Ministry; and I do not find any greater Names on the other side of the Question, than the two Auditors, and Cousins, Mr Foley, and Mr Harley, except two or three that were deeply engaged in that Conduct.

A.D.1714. However, by a Majority, 245 againſt 152, it was reſolved, That Mr Steele, in the Engliſhman and Criſis, had highly reflected, not only on her Majeſty, but on the Clergy, and the Univerſities, &c. That they were ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, and that he be expell'd the Houſe. Where, at that time, there could be no great Pleaſure in ſitting, unleſs it was to bear Teſtimony to the Cauſe and Intereſt of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, which, doubtleſs, was in the extreameſt Danger, as any one that has common Senſe will perceive, by this Step of the Earl of Oxford, whoſe Couſin, Thomas Harley, was then at, or going to, Hanover. He mov'd for the bringing in a Bill, with a ſpecious popular Title, For the farther Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by making it High Treaſon to bring any foreign Troops into the Kingdom. At which, ſays our Author, many Peers were ſtrangely ſtartled and ſurpriz'd. Among the reſt the Earl of Nottingham, who immediately perceiv'd the dangerous Drift of that Motion, repreſented that ſuch a Bill might be turn'd againſt the very Guarentees of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and ſo weaken that happy Settlement; for the Security of which, the ſaid Bill was pretended to be intended. This is one of the Steps of the Earl of Oxford, by which the Extent of his Genius ought to be meaſur'd, and not by the Succeſs of his caballing againſt the old Miniſters, which was owing chiefly to the Miſrepreſentations, Miſinformations, and Inveiglings, of Mrs Abigail Hill. Could he have eſcap'd the Obſervation that ſuch a Bill would affect nothing but the Proteſtant Succeſſion itſelf? If any foreign Powers were ſtrong enough, and had a mind to invade us, they would hardly be hinder'd by an Act of Parliament, and to join with them, if Papiſts or Enemies, was already High Treaſon by all our State Laws. There was now a Report, that his Electoral Highneſs of Hanover had concluded a Treaty with the States-General, by which they oblig'd themſelves to furniſh him with a conſiderable Body of Troops, over and above their Quota by the Guerantee, and Shipping upon Occaſion, that the Proteſtant Succeſſor, and his Friends, might not be unprovided for the Defence of his Highneſs's undoubted Title, if the Pretender and his Adherents, ſhould make any deſperate Attempt upon the Demiſe of the Queen. This was ſtrongly ſurmis'd at that Time, and truly the Treaſurer's Bill is as good a Reaſon for it as any. The Viſcount Bolingbroke, notwithſtanding he hated the preſent Treaſurer, as much as he had done the laſt, yet thought it concern'd him, who was in the Secret of that Motion, to bring him off as well as he could; and finding the Bait was ſmall, he endeavoured to palliate the Matter with ſaying, He doubted not but the noble Lord who made the Motion, meant only ſuch foreign Troops as might be brought into the Kingdom by the Pretender or his Adherents. The Lord-Treaſurer having declar'd this to be his Meaning, he was anſwered, That in that Caſe, ſuch a Bill was altogether unneceſſary, ſince ſuch Troops were, ipſo facto, either open Enemies, if Foreigners, or Traitors and Rebels, if Natives; and if the Bill was not intended againſt the Dutch, Pruſſians, or any foreign Troops, for the Support of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, it was the greateſt piece of Impertinence ever offered to ſo auguſt an Aſſembly. And as ſuch the Motion was dropt.

Mr Steele expell'd the Houſe of Commons.

The Lord-Treaſurer's Bill to prevent the Guarentee of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

On the 19th of March, in a Debate about the State of the Nation, ſeveral Lords ſpoke again in favour of the Catalans, and inſiſted, "That the "Houſe ought ſtrictly to examine, how that poor "People came to be abandon'd after they had "been ſollicited and drawn in to declare for the "Emperor." We ſhall find preſently, that they were drawn in by Engliſh Generals, Admirals, Miniſters, and Agents, and are abandon'd in the moſt ſhameful and execrable manner by the Men now at the Helm; but inſtead of one Word in their Excuſe, Endeavours were us'd to ſhuffle it off under the Shelter of a Majority. The Earl of Angleſey ſaid, "That, for his own part, he was "one of the firſt who had appear'd againſt the late "Miniſters, becauſe he was fully convinc'd of "their male Adminiſtration, Corruption, Avarice, "and unbounded Ambition." Was he fully convinc'd of the Corruption and Avarice of the Earl of Godolphin, the Prime Miniſter? A.D.1714.

If the Ambition of the Duke of Marlborough to extirpate French Tyranny, and, with the victorious Arms of England, to ſecure the Liberty of Euorpe, was unbounded, what Soul, in the leaſt degree ſenſible of heroic Virtue, would not have rejoic'd in it. It was added, "That he would in "like manner, be one of the firſt that ſhould "attack the preſent Miniſters, if he thought them "guilty of the ſame Faults of raiſing the Glory "and Credit of the Nation above all Example, as "his PRESENT MINISTERS ſink them be-"low it again. But as he had obſerv'd, that it was meerly out of Spleen and Envy: Incomprehenſible! Spleen and Envy to the Lords Oxford and Bolingbroke! "that ſome Perſons were for enquiring into "the Conduct of PATRIOTS, meanning thoſe "two worthy Gentlemen, who had given ſignal "Proofs of their Zeal for the Public Good in "the Utrecht Peace and the French Commerce-"Bill; he was of Opinion, that they ought to "examine into the Conduct both of the late and "preſent Miniſters, that ſo, by comparing one "with the other, they might ſee which of the "two had committed leſs Errors." What had ſuch a Compariſon to do with the Catalans, the Affair in queſtion, unleſs to evade it? He could not pretend, that the late Miniſters had ever given up a whole People to Slaughter and Slavery, contrary to ſolemn and repeated Engagements of Protection and Friendſhip. He does not only extol the Conduct of theſe Men, as Miniſters, but as Patriots; and they are the ſame of whom the Lord-Treaſurer ſaid, in his Letter to the Queen of June 9th, I believe the whole would be of uſe to give Light to her Majeſty into the Foundation of their Follies and Madneſs. Some noble Peers took Notice of the Danger the Queen's Perſon and the Proteſtant Succeſſion were in, from the great Number of Out-law'd Jacobites, who were permitted to come over from Beyond-Sea, and complain'd of the Favour ſhewn to the Pretender's Friends, in granting Noli Proſequi's to ſome who were under Proſecution, for writing againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Among theſe were Daniel Foe, who had alſo the Queen's ſpecial Pardon, as has been already hinted. This mercenary Scribler had the ſame Turn of Head and Heart as his Patron: He had, like him, been a Diſſenter, and one of the moſt zealous. He lov'd Trick, and ſupported himſelf by it after his Bankruptcy, till Mr Harley found him Work and Money. An Addreſs being mov'd, to have Liſts of thoſe Out-Laws, and Noli Proſequi's; the Miniſters knowing this would bear hard upon them, would have put it off, by an Adjournment, to a long Day; but the Earl of Wharton propoſing the next Monday, the Earl of Oxford, with much Quaintneſs, ſaid, That the Solemnity of Eaſter Feſtival, which was the Sunday, and Week following, ought, according to the primitive

A.D.1714. Institution, and the constant Practice of the Church of England, to be set apart for Works and Exercises of Piety, and therefore moved to adjourn to Wednesday, the 31*st of* March, nine or ten Days forward. The Earl of Wharton, who had perfect Knowledge of his Education, Principles, and Ingenuity, said, God forbid he should oppose that noble Lord who had made so plain and serious a Motion, but that he appeal'd to that venerable Bench, pointing to the Bishops, whether Humanity and Christian Charity, did not require it at their Hands, not to lose a Moment's Time in addressing her Majesty in Behalf of the distressed Catalans, who were reduced to such an Extremity, that the least Delay in procuring them Relief, might prove their utmost and irretrievable Ruin. The Reader will have observ'd, that there's a Mixture of Farce in the Tragedies of this Ministry. The Lord-Treasurer's Sermon on the Sanctity of the Easter-Holidays, to be set apart for Ecclesiastical Works and Exercises, and not to spare a Moment of them to save the Lives and Liberties of so many Thousand Christians, whom our own Delusions had brought into such Peril, may certainly be reckon'd of that kind, without the Charge of Partiality. The Addresses concerning the Out-Laws, Noli Prosequi's and the Catalans, were resolv'd to be presented; and then the House adjourn'd to the Day set by the Lord-Treasurer, who had thereby full Leisure for his Easter Devotion; tho' it is to be question'd, whether any one else of his Family was so good a Proselyte to Fasts and Festivals, as to keep him Company in them.

Upon a Motion of Lord Halifax's to address for a Proclamation against Jesuits, Papists, Priests, and Bishops, and all such as bore Arms against the late King William and Queen Mary, or her present Majesty. The Earl of Anglesey spoke again, "That for his own part, he was against "widening our domestick Divisions, by keeping odious Distinctions; and therefore if "they, who were born her Majesty's Subjects, "and had been in Arms against their Country, "were sensible of their Faults, we should take "their Words for it, and open the Door for them "to come in." That august Assembly had other Thoughts of the Matter, and resolv'd, "1. That no Person not included in the Articles "of Limerick, and who had born Arms in France, "or Spain, should be capable of any Employment, Civil or Military. 2. That no Person, who is a natural born Subject of her Majesty, should be capable of sustaining the Character of a publick Minister from any foreign "Potentate." These Resolutions were made with an Eye upon Patrick Lelish, whom some call'd Sir Patrick Lawless, who had been Gentleman of the Pretender's Bedchamber, which doubtless had more of such Gentry; and his Envoy to King Philip, who gave him a Credence for our Court, where the ministers receiv'd him with as much Ceremony as if he had came from a Protestant Prince, and a Friend: But Lelish, knowing what would be his Fate, if he fell out of their Hands into that of Judges, got away as fast as he could, carrying with him both good Words and good Bills, as was then generally reported and believ'd.

Votes against Papists and Jacobites, and Patrick Lelish.

The best, if not only, Apology the Lord-Treasurer could justify his Conduct by, was, in the Charge against him about the 4000 l. Pension to the Popish Highland Clans in Scotland; a like Pension having been paid before by his late Majesty King William's Order. It was so extraordinary a thing to see the Treasurer get so well off of any Charge against him, that the Lord North and Grey immediately made a Motion, for returning the Lord-Treasurer the Thanks of the House for his good Services. This was very inconsistent with Bolingbroke's secret Endeavours to get the White-Staff from him, by the same Means he himself made use of to get the Lord Godolphin's, the Suggestions, and Inveiglings of the Court-Ladies near the Queen's Person, which was not at all strange for him to succeed in, whose Time, since he was a Man, had been as much taken up with that Sex as his own. He said, therefore, to put it off, That he was persuaded the Lord-Treasurer was contented with the Testimony of his own Conscience: For even he too, in his Youth, had not been unacquainted with Conventiclers, and desir'd no farther Satisfaction, than their Lordships Approbation in that Particular; which he had.

A.D.1714. Lord North & Grey moves to thank the Lord-Treasurer.

On the 12th of April, the Lord-Chancellor, attended, says the Annalist, by the Whig Lords, presented to the Queen their Address against the Pretender.

"We, Your Majesty's most Dutiful and most "Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Tem- "poral in Parliament assembled, having a just "and tender Concern for Your Majesty, and our "Country, and being encourag'd by that Zeal "Your Majesty has so often express'd from the "Throne for the Protestant Succession in the Illustrious House of Hanover, do now presume "to renew our most humble Applications to "Your Majesty upon a Subject so agreeable to "You, that whenever Your Majesty, in Your "great Wisdom, shall judge it necessary, you "will be graciously pleas'd to issue Your Royal "Proclamation, promising a Reward to any Per- "son, who shall apprehend, and bring the Pre- "tender to Justice, in case he shall land, or at- "tempt to land, either in Great Britain, or Ire- "land, suitable to the Importance of that Service "for the Safety of Your Majesty's Person, and "the Security of the Protestant Succession in the "House of Hanover.

"We also desire Leave to express our very "great Concern, that Your Majesty's Instances "for the removing the Pretender out of Lorrain, "have not yet had their Effect; and do humbly "entreat Your Majesty, that you will be gra- "ciously pleas'd to insist upon, and renew Your "Instances, for the speedy removing the Pretender "out of Lorrain; and likewise, that Your Ma- "jesty will be graciously pleas'd, in conjunction "with the States-General, to desire the Emperor "to enter into the Guarantee of the Protestant "Succession in the House of Hanover, and also all "such other Princes as Your Majesty shall think "proper."

The Lords Address against the Pretender; and for a Reward to the Person that should take him; and for a Guarantee of the Protestant Succession.

To which She answer'd,

My Lords,

It would be a real strengthening to the Succession in the House of Hanover, as well as a Support to my Government, that an End were put to those groundless Jealousies which have been so industriously promoted.

I do not at this time see any Occasion for such a Proclamation; whenever I judge it necessary, I shall give my Orders for having one issued.

As to the other Particulars of this Address, I will give proper Directions therein.

A cold Answer.

It is to be noted, that ever since the Change of the Ministry, the Epithets, Groundless, Seditious, Factious, have chang'd their Meaning, and are become Negatives instead of being Affirmatives,

A.D.1714. as they were before. All Europe knew, that if any Fears were juſt and well grounded, it was thoſe of the well-affected in Great Britain, for the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. " 'Tis need-
" leſs to be obſerv'd, ſays the Committee of " Secrecy in their Report, what little Effect was " to be expected from ſuch Repreſentations, made
" in the ſeveral Courts of Europe, which were " known to be contrary to the Senſe and Intention " of the Court of Great Britain, and as to the " giving Directions about the Removing of the
" Pretender out of LORRAIN." It was not forgotten that the like Anſwer was given to a former Addreſs on that Subject, upon which the Committee ſay, " And if any further Demonſtra-
" tion was wanting to ſhew their true Spirit and
" Inclination, it may be obſerved, that the Ad-
" dreſſes in Parliament were made in July, 1713.
" And the firſt Letter that Lord Bollingbroke

" ter the Addreſſes were preſented to the Queen."

Lord Bollingbroke's Negligence in the Affair of the Pretender.

It was well known, that to correſpond with any of the attainted People of St Germans, was as much Death by our Laws, as the robbing a Church. Yet not only Leliſh, the Iriſh Ruffian, was admitted to the Court-Cabinet, but an Agent from Mary de Eſte, Widow of the abdicated King, offer'd to file a Bill in the Court of Chancery, in her Name, for the Sum of 650,000 l. due to her ſince the Death of her Husband, for her Dower of 50,000 l. Inſtead of ſending this Fellow to Newgate, the only Objection that was made to Him and his Bill was, that the Agent had given her the Title of Queen Mother, which was in a manner to proclaim the Pretender in the High Court of Chancery. Upon this Objection the Agent was pleas'd to change the Stile to the moſt illuſtrious Princeſs Maria, Relict of James II. King of England. The Annaliſt writes, " Tho'
" no Notice was taken of this formal Demand,
" yet, purſuant to a private Agreement made in " France by the Lord Bollingbroke, about 50,000 l.
" were remitted thither, for the Uſe of that moſt
" illuſtrious Princeſs, as ſhe's ſtil'd in the Bill in " Chancery. Simon Lord Harcourt being Lord-
" Chancellor." We come now to an Incident of very great Importance, which threw the Miniſters into the utmoſt Diſtraction and Confuſion. The Annaliſt's Account of it is all that was then known.

Lord Bollingbroke gets 50,000 l. for her.

" On Saturday, the 10th of April, moſt of the " well-affected Lords held a Conſultation at the " Lord Halifax's, to which Baron Schutz, En-
" voy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover,
" was admitted; and therein it was reſolv'd,
" either purſuant to the Orders the latter had re-
" ceiv'd from his Court, or the diſcretionary
" Power that was lodged with ſome of their
" Lordſhips, that the Envoy ſhould take the firſt
" Opportunity to demand a Writ for the Electo-
" ral Prince to ſit in the Houſe of Peers, as Duke
" of Cambridge."

Mr Acherley, the Counſellor, Author of the Britannic Conſtitution, has printed a Relation of this Matter, with ſeveral original Letters, to prove that the firſt Step taken in it, was upon Advice he gave to a Friend of his, who correſponded with the Court of Hanover, that ſuch a Demand was Law; for the Particulars of which I refer to the Book itſelf, and proceed as our Author does.

A Writ for the Electoral Prince of Hanover demanded.

" Accordingly on Monday, the 12th of April,
" in the Afternoon, Baron Schutz made a Viſit
" to the Lord-Chancellor, and among other Ci-
" vilities, acknowledged the Affection his Lord-
" ſhip had ſhewn, on ſeveral Occaſions, to the
" moſt ſerene Electoral Houſe of Hanover. The A.D.1714.
" Lord-Chancellor told him, he was extremely
" ſenſible of the Honour he did him by his Vi-
" ſit and Compliment, and deſired him to aſſure
" the Elector of his entire Devotion to his Ser-
" vice, hoping his Electoral Highneſs gave no
" Credit to the falſe Reports that were induſtri-
" ouſly ſpread abroad, in order to give him Jea-
" louſies of her Majeſty's Miniſters." This muſt needs be pleaſant to the Baron, whoſe Maſter, and Himſelf by Reports which they knew not to be falſe, confirmed by Actions known to all the World, were fully convinced that his Jealouſies were well grounded; for the Counſels of our Court were no Secret to his Serene Highneſs. Baron Schutz anſwered, " That he would not fail diſ- The Envoy's Diſ-
" charging ſo agreeable a Commiſſion. But ad- courſe
" ded, he had a Favour to ask of him, in the with the " Name of the Electoral Prince, viz. That Lord-
" his Lordſhip would be pleaſed to make out a Chancel-
" Writ for his Highneſs's ſitting in the Houſe of lor Har-
" Peers, as Duke of Cambridge. The Lord- court.
" Chancellor being ſomewhat ſurprized at this " unexpected Demand, told the Baron, That " it was not uſual to make out Writs for Peers
" that were out of the Kingdom; however he
" would forthwith apply to her Majeſty for Di" rections in this Caſe. The Baron reply'd, He " did not doubt his Lordſhip knew, and would
" perform the Duty of his Office; but as to the " Difficulty of the Duke of Cambridge's being " out of the Kingdom, he might aſſure him
" his Highneſs had reſolved to come over very
" ſpeedily, and perhaps might be landed before
" the Writ was made out. Upon this the Baron
" taking his leave, the Lord Chancellor deſired
" him to remember, He did not refuſe his De- " mand, but only thought it proper to acquaint her
" Majeſty with it; to which the Baron ſaid,
" with great Vivacity, I likewiſe deſire your
" Lordſhip to remember, that I apply'd myſelf to your
" Lordſhip for the Duke of Cambridge's Writ."
The Lord-Chancellor having the ſame Evening acquainted her Majeſty and her Miniſters with theſe Paſſages, a Council was immediately called, who ſate from nine o'Clock till after eleven, and though to be puzzled was then no new thing at that Board, they never were ſo much at a Loſs how to extricate themſelves out of a Difficulty as now. And as it was an uſual Misfortune with them, they took the worſt way they could have fallen into. The Maſter of the Ceremonies was The Ha-ordered to forbid Baron Schutz the Court, but they nover were afraid of taking upon themſelves the Refuſal Miniſter of the Duke of Cambridge's Writ, which the Lord- forbidden
Chancellor had Direction to make out. The the Court.
Pretence for inſulting his Electoral Highneſs's Miniſter thus was, for not doing a thing which was never done before; for not applying to the Queen concerning the Writ, before he applied to the Lord-Chancellor. The Baron, a Day or two after, took them at their Word, and ſet out Poſt for Harwich, in his way to Hanover, leaving a Letter for Secretary Bromley, importing, That having had the Misfortune to incur her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and being thereby rendered incapable of ſerving his Maſter in this Court, he thought it his Duty to return home. This was deliver'd to Mr Bromley, by Monſ. Kreyenberg, the Elector of Hanover's Reſident; and the Secretary having read it, told him, That He, or any other Miniſter whom the Elector of Hanover would be pleaſed to ſend over, would be well received by her Majeſty.

ed

A.D.1714. ed the Pretender's Adherents, and wonderfully rais'd the Spirits of the well-affected to the Houſe of Hanover. The Lord-Treaſurer's Couſin, Thomas Harley, had but a cold Reception there, which makes the Report of his carrying thither with him a Copy of the Letter which the Queen wrote to the Pretender with her own Hand, the more uncertain. Tho' ſome ſaid it was not the Copy, but the Original itſelf, which the Earl of Oxford, by his Dexterity, got into his Hands, and ſent the Copy only to the Pretender. The Lord-Treaſurer's Couſin having been ſo coldly treated before News came to Hanover of Baron Schutz's being forbidden our Court, the Lord Paget and Burton, who was nam'd Envoy-Extraordinary to his Electoral Highneſs, declin'd that Employment, and the Earl of Clarendon, a Nobleman of leſs Genius and Delicacy, was appointed to go upon that important Errand, as the Hiſtorian terms it.

The Lord-Chancellor reported the Queen's Anſwer to the Addreſs againſt the Pretender, on the 13th of April; and ſome Expreſſions in it not giving Satisfaction, a Motion was made and ſeconded for another Addreſs, to ſet forth the Grounds and Reaſons for their former. The Miniſters and their Abettors rightly judging that that could not be done, without bringing their Conduct into queſtion, which was very dangerous, ſtrenuouſly oppoſed ſuch an Explanation. However, it being like to be carried, the Duke of Leeds, who had been impeach'd by both Whigs and Tories to curry Favour with the Court, ſays the Annaliſt, mov'd, that at the Cloſe of the Addreſs that was offer'd, the Word induſtriouſly may be added, where it was ſaid Fears and Jealouſies univerſally ſpread. So the Order for it ran thus:

Another Addreſs againſt the Pretender.

" Ordered, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, " in Parliament aſſembled, that an humble Addreſs be preſented to Her Majeſty, to return " Her Majeſty the Thanks of this Houſe, for her " moſt gracious Anſwer to their Addreſs, and to " aſſure Her Majeſty that this Houſe will continue " to conſider of, and humbly to offer to Her " Majeſty, as well as to concur with Her Majeſty in all proper Meaſures, for ſupporting Her " Majeſty's Government, and for ſtrengthening " the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Ha" nover, as the only effectual Means to put an " end to the Fears and Jealouſies which have " been ſo univerſally and induſtriouſly ſpread " throughout this Kingdom."

The Duke of Leeds by his induſtriouſly, without doubt intended unreaſonably and maliciouſly, if it was meant carefully and conſtantly, it was certainly very neceſſary to warn People of the Perils they were in, that they might the better guard againſt them.

There happen'd ſomething in the Houſe of Peers on the 14th of April, which will be ſome Relief to the Reader, after ſo much Pain which the Conduct of theſe Miniſters muſt have put him to, the State of the Nation being to be conſidered. The Lord North and Grey ſtood up firſt, and ſaid, If any Lord had any Objections againſt the Spaniſh Treaty, he was ready to anſwer them. This was compar'd to Champion Dymock's throwing down his Gauntlet, as to the bluſtring part of it, and gave the more Diverſion; becauſe of all the Members of that moſt honourable Houſe, this Peer was thought the leaſt qualified for ſuch a political Combat. However, the Annaliſt tells us, He in a challenging manner skirmiſh'd for ſome time. After he ſat down, there was Silence for a quarter of an Hour; the Lords who had been againſt that Peace, being ſenſible that the Miniſters who made their ſole Dependance on their Majority, the Conſequence of the Harleian Creation, meant to draw them into a Debate, merely to haſten the Queſtion, on which to found an Addreſs of Thanks. 'Tis of this Peace which Lord North and Grey declar'd himſelf the Champion, and of that with France, that this auguſt Aſſembly ſaid, in their firſt Addreſs to his late Majeſty King George, they will take ſuch Meaſures as may recover the Reputation of this Kingdom in foreign Parts, the Loſs of which we hope to convince the World, is by no means to be imputed to the Nation in general. We muſt not forget that Mr Torriano, a Spaniſh Merchant, who one may ſuppoſe to underſtand Trade as well at leaſt as Lord North and Grey, made it appear before the Houſe of Commons, that our Commerce with Spain would be intirely ruin'd by the eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh Articles of the Treaty with France. Sir William Hedges, and other Merchants, prov'd they could not trade to Spain, on the Foot of the Treaty the noble Champion had undertaken to defend, without 25 per Cent. Loſs. Something more Mercantile, as well as Political, might have been expected from the Earl of Clarendon, his Lordſhip having been at New-York. But he contented himſelf with ſaying, My Lords, ſince no Objection CAN be made againſt the Spaniſh Treaty, we ſhould addreſs her Majeſty, to return her our moſt humble Thanks for having, by a ſafe, honourable, and advantageous Peace with Spain, delivered theſe Nations from a long conſuming Land-War, and to deſire her Majeſty, notwithſtanding the Obſtructions that might be thrown in her way, to proceed to the Settlement of Europe, according to the Principles laid down by her Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech. The Lord Cowper, the Reader will think the Match very unequal, anſwer'd. My Lords, this is the moſt bare-fac'd Attempt that ever was made by this, or any other Miniſtry, to ſecure themſelves by endeavouring to get the Sanction of this Houſe for themſelves. My Lords, I have no Objection againſt theſe Treaties, are the Miniſters themſelves jealous that their Actions ſtand in need of the Sanction of this Houſe? Elſe why this Endeavour at an Addreſs to make their Act the Act of the Houſe. The Lord that ſpoke firſt, acting like a Soldier, would, by ſkirmiſhing, have drawn on a general Engagement; but the Troops are too well diſciplin'd to fall into an Ambuſcade of HIS laying. But I cannot remove my Finger from the Original of our Misfortunes, the CESSATION of ARMS. We were then told, that if a Blow had been ſtruck, it would have ruin'd the Peace; would to God it had ruin'd THIS Peace. The Lord Halifax ſeconded his Lordſhip thus: What was laſt mention'd, my Lords, makes me riſe into the higheſt Reſentment of the vile Uſage given my Lord Duke of Ormond, a Lord for whom I have the moſt profound Reſpect: My Lord Ormond went over into Flanders with a true Engliſh Heart, which, my Lords, is the beſt in the World, with a Deſire to do his Cuntry all the Service his great Ability capacitated him to do, therefore it muſt be inconceivable, the horrible Anguiſh it muſt give his noble and generous Heart to receive ſuch Orders, to reſtrain the noble Ardour of his Soldiers, fluſh'd with former Victories, and Hopes of ſtill greater. My Lords, added the Earl of Nottingham, I never knew the like Addreſs to this ever offer'd at, but once, in the Caſe of the Duke of Suffolk, who, in Henry VIth's Time had made a Treaty, for which he thought it conveniant to get the Sanction of this Houſe, by an Addreſs, and got SEVEN LORDS made at ONE TIME, even he, did not venture upon TWELVE, to carry

Lord North & Grey's Challenge.

Earl of Clarendon's Speech, in praiſe of the Peace.

A.D.1714. carry the Vote, yet he was called to an Account afterwards, notwithſtanding the Addreſs. I ſay no more of the Man, becauſe he came to an untimely End, to which all good Britons expected the Makers of this ſafe, honourable and advantageous Peace would have come; and Poſterity will be extreamly ſurpriz'd to find it otherwiſe. Then the Biſhop of Salisbury ſaid, My Lords, I don't underſtand what Law or Reaſon can be given, to impower one Ally to diſengage from his other Allies, unleſs, in a proper Time, he acquaints them, he has done his Ultimus Conatus, his utmoſt Efforts, and that to proceed further, would be Certa Pernicies. That we had not come to our Ultimus Conatus is plain, ſince in the Year of the Ceſſation of Arms, and the Year following, wherein nothing was done, we made as great Efforts as the former, when we had done ſo many glorious Things; and to proceed further, in all human Probability, it would have been Certa Pernicies to our then Enemy the French. The Biſhop of London, who was a Negotiator of the Peace at Utrecht, thought himſelf concern'd to ſpeak up for the Miniſters who ſet him to work. My Lords, ſaid he, at the Ceſſation of Arms, our Caſe was the very Caſe in Point which the Biſhop of Sarum puts, for we had then come to our Ultimus Conatus, and for ought we know, to proceed farther, would have been Certa Pernicies. The Earl of Wharton reply'd, I did deſign to have ſaid a great deal to day, but I find it all anticipated by the Lords who have ſpoken before me; only I muſt ſay what I learn by ſitting here, that the carrying this Vote, is the Ultimus Conatus of the Miniſtry; and that if they don't carry it, it will be to them Certa Pernicies. Good, my Lords, gratify my Curioſity, to let me ſee what Certa Pernicies will be. The Biſhop of London's utmoſt Effort was ſufficiently expos'd by what other Lords urg'd, That there was no Neceſſity of making a Peace, the Nation having given near as much Money for three Years paſt, as during any three Years of the War; and as for any pretended Advantages gain'd with the Treaty of Spain, 'tis plain, they were no more than what had been ſtipulated by the Treaty of the Year 1667. We may aſſure ourſelves, that neither the Lord North and Grey, nor the Earl of Clarendon, nor, in all likelihood, the Biſhop of London, knew much of this; which is the beſt Excuſe for their ſtanding by the Miniſters ſo ſtrenuouſly in concluding their Spaniſh Treaty. The Lords, who were againſt that, and the French Treaty, complain'd of the Method of carrying on the latter, and of our giving up the Intereſts of the Emperor, the King of Portugal, and of the poor Catalans. But theſe Peccadillo's were deſpis'd by the Miniſters, and their Adherents. The major Vote being ſecur'd, and the Addreſs of Thanks was accordingly reſolv'd.

The Earl of Wharton merry with the Miniſtry.

As much Money given after the Peace as before.

To prepare the Houſe of Commons to give their Approbation to the Conduct of the Miniſtry, in concluding their Treaties with France and Spain, the Viſcount Bolingbroke, or ſome hireling Pen of his, drew up a long Account of the State of them, full of Falſhood and Sophiſtry, ſo varniſh'd over with Gloſſes, and popular Pretences, that many Members, who were willing to believe what was ſaid, did really believe it, having no Opportunity, or Inclination, to be better inform'd, for they were deaf and blind to every thing that ſerv'd to undeceive them in their favourable Opinion of their Party Leaders.

On the 15th of April, Sir Edward Knatchbull, after reading the Papers relating to the Removal of the Pretender out of Lorrain, and the Paſſes granted to Out-laws, made a Motion, and the Queſtion was put, Whether the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover be in Danger under her Majeſty's Government? Mr William Bromley, Secretary of State, argu'd for the Negative, by expatiating upon what the Queen had done to get him out of Lorrain. He was anſwer'd by Mr Walpole, who, with a great deal of Spirit, ſhew'd the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be in Danger, not from her Majeſty, but from the dubious Conduct of ſome Perſons in high Stations; and therefore inſiſted, that her Majeſty might not be mention'd in the Queſtion. Mr Campion, a new Spokeſman, vindicated the Miniſtry, a Task which Men of greater Talents and Practice could not hope to ſucceed in. He was anſwer'd by the Earl of Hertford. The Lord Hinchinbroke expreſs'd his Fears of the Proteſtant Succeſſion being in Danger, from the Encouragement that was given the Pretender's Friends, and particularly in North-Britain; which his Lordſhip had an Opportunity to obſerve when he was there with the Regiment, in which he had a Troop. Theſe, and other noble Lords and Gentlemen, ſpoke ſo reaſonably to the ſame effect, that the Harleians being apprehenſive the Queſtion would go againſt them, mov'd, that Mr Ralph Freeman, Chairman of the Committee, might leave the Chair, thereby to have it dropt: Upon which, Sir Thomas Hanmer, the Speaker, made a memorable Speech, importing in Subſtance, "That he was ſorry to "ſee Endeavours had been us'd to wave that "Queſtion, and ſtop their Mouths; but he was "of Opinion, this was the proper, and, per-"haps, the only Time for Patriots to ſpeak: "That a great deal of Pains were taken to "SCREEN ſome Perſons, and in order to that, "to make them to overlook the Danger that threat-"en'd the Queen, the Nation, and the Proteſtant "Succeſſion: That, for his own part, he had all "the Honour and Reſpect imaginable for her Ma-"jeſty's Miniſters; but that he ow'd ſtill more to "his Country, than to any Miniſter. That, in this "Debate, ſo much had been ſaid to prove the "Succeſſion to be in Danger, and ſo little to make "out the contrary, that he could not but believe "the firſt;" and thereupon he took notice of Sir Patrick Lawleſs being ſuffer'd to come over, and admitted to an Audience of her Majeſty. Notwithſtanding the great Influence this Speech had on the unbiaſs'd, and unprejudic'd Members, yet the Majority, under a greater Influence, that of the Miniſters, to go no higher, voted the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be in no Danger; and an Addreſs was reſolv'd upon, to return her Majeſty their Thanks for the Inſtances ſhe had us'd for the Removal of the Pretender out of Lorrain. This is the moſt provoking Impoſition on the Underſtandings and Morals of the People repreſented, that ever was offer'd by their Repreſentatives. But when that Vote came to be reported from the Committee to the whole Houſe, April 16th, there aroſe a Debate, in which Mr Walpole, Mr Lechmere, and General Stanhope, ſpoke with equal Energy of Eloquence and Reaſon. Mr Walpole, in particular, applauded the publick Spirit the Speaker had ſhewn; but added, he deſpair'd of ſeeing Truth and Juſtice prevail, ſince notwithſtanding the Weight of a Perſon of his known Integrity, Merit, and Eloquence, the Majority of Votes had carry'd it againſt Reaſon and Argument. And yet after his late Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, ſome wrong-headed Politicians pretended to wonder, why ſuch a Majority was annihilated by a Diſſolution. General Stanhope endeavour'd

An amazing Vote againſt it.

Mr Walpole, in Praiſe of Sir Tho. Hanmer.

A.D.1714. to prove the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be in Danger by this ſingle, but forceable Indication. That as it was univerſally acknowledg'd it had been the French King's Intention, ſo it was ſtill his Intereſt, and he had it more than ever in his Power to reſtore the Pretender. But the Vote was agreed to without a Diviſion; and the Anſwer to the Addreſs was, that her Majeſty would inſiſt upon, and renew her Inſtances. After the carrying this Vote in ſuch a manner, the Well-affected could not but rejoyce that it was not put directly for the Pretender, it being impoſſible that any one in his Senſes could think ſuch a Majority had the leaſt Regard for the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Sir John Ward's Speech againſt the Commerce Treaty with Spain.

On the 22d of April, the Houſe went upon the Meſſage from the Lords, to concur with them in another Addreſs of Thanks for the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with Spain. Mr Ward, afterwards Sir John Ward, Lord Mayor, and eminent Merchant, of great Extent and Solidity of Knowledge and Experience, ſpoke to many eſſential Points, particularly, the Duties on ſeveral ſorts of Goods and Merchandizes, left looſe and undetermin'd, and therefore liable to arbitrary Explanations. 'Tis amazing that after a Member of ſo good Senſe, and long Practice in Trade, had deliver'd himſelf with ſo much Judgment, Auditor Foley ſhould engage Attention, when he pretended to anſwer him. He himſelf was anſwer'd by Mr Horatio Walpole, and the latter was ſupported by Sir Peter King and John Aiſlabie, Eſq; who having diſcover'd to what bad Ends the Conduct of the Miniſters tended, left their Party, and was immediately turn'd out of his Place, as one of the Lords of the Admiralty. He ſpoke in this Debate with great Vehemence againſt their precarious Peace: But the Harleians exulting in their Majority, by their Noiſe and Laughter, ſhew'd they were not to be convinc'd by Reaſon and Argument; and the Patriots perceiving that they ſhould only ſhew their Weakneſs by dividing, puſh'd the Matter no farther; and it being reſolv'd to agree to the Lords Addreſs, Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer carry'd that Reſolution to their Lordſhips, and it was preſented jointly by the two Houſes. The Queen's Anſwer was,

The Miniſters Adherents lengthen the Debate.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The Q's Anſwer to the Addreſs of Thanks for the Treaty of Peace and Trade with Spain.

The State of Publick Affairs in Europe, as well as the Neceſſities of my own Kingdom, obliged me to enter into a Negotiation of Peace; and, notwithſtanding all Obſtructions and Difficulties, I have, by the Bleſſing of God, brought it to a happy Concluſion.

I eſteem this Addreſs as the united Voice of my affectionate and loyal Subjects; and I return you all the heartieſt Thanks which can be given by a Sovereign, who deſires nothing more than to ſee her People ſafe and flouriſhing.

'Tis a moſt deplorable Inſtance of the Tendency to Infidelity, which is in Man's corrupt Mind, that the Miniſters imagin'd, they could mock God as well as Man, and aſcribe to him, as his Bleſſing, a Thing, which being equally dangerous and ruinous, a ſinful Nation ought rather to have look'd upon as a Curſe. As to the united Voice of the People, compare it with what the Lords ſaid in their firſt Addreſs to his late Majeſty King George; It is by no means to be imputed to the Nation in general. And what the Commons ſaid of theſe Treaties of Peace and Commerce in leſs than a Year after: We are ſenſibly touch'd not only with the Diſappointment, but with the Reproach brought upon the Nation by the unjuſtifiable Concluſion of a War, which was carry'd on at ſo vaſt an Expence, and was attended with ſuch unparallel'd Succeſſes: But as that Diſhonour cannot in Juſtice be imputed to the whole Nation, ſo we firmly hope, and believe, that through your Majeſty's great Wiſdom, and the faithful Endeavours of your Commons, the Reputation of theſe your Kingdoms, will, in due time, be vindicated and reſtor'd. A.D.1714.

Not approv'd by the united Voice of the People.

The Perplexity the Miniſters were in upon the Demand of the Duke of Cambridge's Writ, and the Report, that the Princeſs Sophia intended to deſire the Queen's Approbation for his Electoral Highneſs's coming over, put them upon procuring a Letter from the Queen to her Serene Highneſs, which was publiſh'd in Engliſh and French.

A la Princeſſe Sophia.

Madame, ma Sœur, & ma Tante.

To the Princeſs Sophia

Madam, Siſter, Aunt;

The Q's Letter to the Princeſs Sophia.

" SINCE the Right of Succeſſion to my Kingdoms has been declar'd to belong to you, and your Family, there have been always diſaffected Perſons, who, by particular Views of their own Intereſts, have enter'd into Meaſures, to fix a Prince of your Blood in my Dominions, even while I am yet living. I never thought till now that this Project would have gone ſo far as to have made the leaſt Impreſſion on your Mind: But, as I have lately perceiv'd, by publick Rumours, which are INDUSTRIOUSLY ſpread, that your Electoral Highneſs is come into this Sentiment, it is of Importance, with reſpect to the Succeſſion of your Family, that I ſhould tell you, ſuch a Proceeding will infallibly draw a long with it ſome Conſequences that will be dangerous to the Succeſſion itſelf, which is not ſecure any other ways, than as the Prince, who actually wears the Crown, maintains her Authority and Prerogative. There are here, ſuch is our Misfortune, a great many People that are ſeditiouſly diſpos'd. So I leave you to judge, what Tumults they may be able to raiſe, if they ſhould have pretext to begin a Commotion. I perſwade my ſelf, therefore, you will never conſent, that the leaſt Thing ſhould be done that may diſturb the Repoſe of me, or my Subjects.

" Open yourſelf to me with the ſame Freedom, and propoſe whatever you may think may contribute to the Security of the Succeſſion, I will come into it with Zeal, provided, that it does not derogate from my Dignity, which I am reſolv'd to maintain. I am, with a great deal of Affection, &c.

St James's, May 19, 1714. Subſcrib'd,

To my Siſter and Aunt, Electreſs Dowager of Brunſwick and Lunenburgh.

As the Court of Hanover had perfect Intelligence of the little Regard our Court had to their Intereſt, and their favourable Diſpoſition to the Pretender's, what Sentiments muſt the former have, not only of the Sincerity but the Wiſdom of the latter, to imagine they could impoſe on the Serene Electoral Family a Belief of the Contents of this Letter? The Letter to his Highneſs the Duke of Cambridge, was as follows.

A.D.1714.

To his Serene Highneſs the Duke of Cambridge.

Couſin,

" AN Accident which has happen'd in my Lord Paget's Family, having hinder'd him from " ſetting forward ſo ſoon as he thought to have " done, I cannot defer any longer letting you " know my Thoughts with reſpect to the Deſign " you have of coming into my Kingdoms. As " the opening of this Matter ought to have been " firſt to me, ſo I expected you would not have " given Ear to it without knowing my Thoughts " about it. However, this is what I owe to " my own Dignity, the Friendſhip I have for " you and the Electoral Houſe to which you be- " long, and the TRUE DESIRE I have that " it may ſucceed to my Kingdoms; and this re- " quires of me that I ſhould tell you, that no- " thing can be more dangerous to the Tranquil- " lity of my Dominions, and the Right of Succeſ- " ſion in your Line, and conſequently more diſ- " agreeable to me than ſuch a Proceeding at this " Juncture. I am, with a great deal of Frien- " ſhip,

St James's, May 19, 1714.

Your very Affectionate Couſin,

ANNE R.

The Lord Treaſurer contradicts the L Bolingbroke.

The Lord-Treaſurer, who now began to be ſenſible that he ſtood in a tottering Condition at Court, where Bolingbroke, and the Ladies of his Cabinet-Council had viſibly the Aſcendant, thought it his wiſeſt way, to ſecure a Retreat, if poſſible, behind the Proteſtant Succeſſion, which St John and the Females undermin'd with more Precipitation than they thought adviſable before. The Truth is, the Queen had never recover'd her Fit at Chriſtmas, which was rather apoplectick than aguiſh, tho' that was moſt induſtriouſly conceal'd; and Bolingbroke thought it abſolutely neceſſary to haſten the wicked Meaſures he was taking to defeat the Hopes of the Well-affected, and crown thoſe of the Papiſts, and other Jacobites, by excluding the Proteſtant Succeſſor, and putting in his Place a Frenchfy'd Out-law, bigotted to Idolatry and Tyranny. The Treaſurer, who was no Stranger to his Intentions, tho' he concerted nothing with him in this Matter, wrote the following Letter, probably with as much Integrity as he was capable of, to the Elector of Brunſwick.

His Letter to the Elector of Hanover.

May it pleaſe it your Royal Highneſs,

" THO' I expect Mr Harley every Moment " in Return from your Court, and thereby " ſhall have another Opportunity of doing myſelf " the Honour to preſent your Royal Highneſs " with my humble Duty, and the Aſſurance of " my utmoſt Services, yet I cannot ſlip this Op- " portunity of the Queen's Meſſenger attending " your Royal Highneſs with her Majeſty's Let- " ter, to lay myſelf at your Feet. I have no " Enemy that knows me, who is not juſt enough " to allow me to be inviolably devoted to your " Succeſſion, nothing coming into Competition " with that, becauſe I know I pleaſe the Queen, " when I am zealous for the Service of your Se- " rene Houſe. I hope, therefore, I ſhall find " Credit with your Royal Highneſs, when I hum- " bly lay my ſincere Opinion before you. The " Queen is moſt heartily for your Succeſſion, if " there be any thing which may render it more " ſecure, which is conſiſtent with her Majeſty's " Safety, it will be accompliſh'd. It is not the " eager Deſires of ſome, nor what flows from " the Advice of others, whoſe Diſcontents, per- " haps, animate their Zeal, can balance the Se- " curity you have in the Queen's Friendſhip, " and the dutiful Affection of all her faithful Sub- " jects; for as I am ſure your Royal High- " neſs's great Wiſdom would not chuſe to rule " by a Party, ſo you will not let their narrow " Meaſures be the Standard of your Govern- " ment. I doubt not but the Accident that hap- " pen'd about the Writ, may be improv'd, to " increaſe the moſt perfect Friendſhip between " the Queen and your moſt Serene Family. I " will ſtudy to do every thing to demonſtrate the " profound Veneration and Reſpect, wherewith " I am,

A.D.1714.

May it pleaſe Your Royal Highneſs,
Your Royal Highneſs's moſt Dutiful, and moſt Humble, and moſt Obedient Servant,

OXFORD.

The Q's Letter to him not lik'd

The Queen's Letter to the Elector himſelf, was written in a Style ſo unbecoming the one, and the other, that the Perſon to whom theſe Letters were tranſmitted, did not think fit to give Copies of it; but the Copies of the other were diſperſs'd in Print, which gave ſo great Offence to the Miniſters, that the Publiſher, and the Perſon who ſent him theſe Letters, were ſeiz'd by Bolingbroke's Warrants, and bound over to appear at the Queen's Bench Bar; but, Thanks to Almighty God, before Michaelmas Term came, Bolingbroke had enough to do to contrive how he himſelf ſhould eſcape the Hands of Juſtice. About this time, Baron Bothmar arriv'd at London, with the Character of Envoy extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, and, on the 29th of June, had a private Audience of the Queen, to notify the Death of the moſt excellent Princeſs Sophia, who being in the 84th Year of her Age, when theſe fatal Letters above-mention'd were brought to Hanover. It ſtruck ſuch a Damp on her Spirits, which, till then, had been ſuperior to all Shocks of Fortune, that as ſhe was in the Evening, May the 28th, his Electoral Highneſs's Birth-Day, walking in the Gardens at Herenhauſen, ſhe was ſeiz'd with a Fit of an Apoplexy, and dy'd in the Arms of the Electoral Princeſs our Sovereign's Royal Conſort, and the Counteſs of Pickenbourgh, who were walking with her, before any other Perſon could come up to her Aſſiſtance. Upon Notification of the Deceaſe of her Serene Highneſs, an Order was made in Council for Mourning, and for Prayers for the Elector of Brunſwick in the Liturgy of the Church of England, which was ſome Mitigation to the Affliction into which the Death of her Electoral Highneſs threw all the Well-affected in Great-Britain. The Occaſion of publiſhing the three Letters above-mention'd, was, a Report induſtriouſly ſpread by the Pretender's Agents, " that the Duke of Cambridge might have come " over, if the Elector, his Father, would have " let him, but that his Electoral Highneſs did not " think the Crown of Great-Britain worth ac- " cepting."

The Electreſs Dowager of Hanover dies in the Arms of her Sacred Majeſty Q. Caroline. Her Son, the Elector of Brunſwick, order'd to be pray'd for.

We have mention'd a Conſultation held by the Miniſtry immediately after the Duke of Cambridge's Writ was demanded, wherein 'twas propos'd to invite his Highneſs over. The Earl of Oxford, the Lord Harcourt, the Earl of Dartmouth, mouth mouth, and another, were for the Affirmative; but the Lord Bolingbroke inſiſting on the Negative, carry'd it, and, after this audacious Proceeding, reſolv'd to puſh his Point, and to uſe all poſſible Means to defeat the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The Earl of Oxford's Friends ſaid, it was with this View that he broke all Meaſures with the Treaſurer, and united himſelf more cloſely with High-church, between whom and the Pretender there paſs'd great Endearments. In order to accompliſh their traiterous Purpoſes, the Annaliſt tells us, he and they thought the utter Ruin of the Diſſenters abſolutely neceſſary, and therefore began it with the Schiſm-Bill; which was mov'd by Sir William Wyndham on the 12th of May, and no doubt he will have a Name for it in Hiſtory till Names and Times are no more. This was pompouſly introduc'd by reading the eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh Sections of the Act of Uniformity, paſs'd after the Reſtoration, and loaded with the Guilt of turning two or three thouſand pious Proteſtant Divines out of their Churches, Houſes, and Livelihood, with their Wives and Families, a Foundation equal to the Structure that was to be rais'd upon it; accordingly, it was order'd by the Majority of this Houſe of Commons, which ſome would have kept ſetting after his late Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, that Leave be given to bring in a Bill, to prevent the Growth of Schiſm, and for the further Security of the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd; and that Sir William Wyndham, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Mr Cholmondley; Sir John Stonehouſe, Comptroller of the Houſhold; Sir Arthur Kay, Mr Champion, Mr Gore, Mr Aldworth, Mr William Bromley, Secretary of State; Lord Downe, Mr Finch, Mr Windſor, Sir William Whitlocke, and Dr Paske, do prepare and bring in the ſame. After theſe excellent Patriots were thus ſet to work, it was reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen for a Copy of the Inſtructions given to the Earl of Strafford, with relation to the Declarations made by him on the Part of her Majeſty, to the Miniſters of the ſeveral Allies who had any Troops in her Majeſty's Pay before the Ceſſation of Arms. This Addreſs was voted with Intention to prepare the Way for refuſing to pay the Arrears of 65,022 l. 8 s. 8 d. due to the Elector of Hanover's Troops, which had been lately demanded by his Electoral Highneſs's Miniſter. The Breath is hardly cold with which the Treaſurer, not to go higher, had made ſuch Profeſſions of Affection and Zeal for the Intereſts of the Serene Electoral Family, and here again it is about to be ſhewn in the uſual Way.

Sir W. Wyndham moves for the Schiſm Bill.

The Members that brought in the Schiſm Bill.

For ſtrengthening the Jacobite Party in Scotland, which the ſame Party in the Houſe call'd Epiſcopal, a Motion was made for a Bill, to inveſt the Revenues and Rents which did belong to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of that Part of Great Britain call'd Scotland, in her Majeſty, to be apply'd to the Support of the Epiſcopal Clergy. Obſerve the monſtrous Partiality and Injuſtce of theſe Men miſcalling themſelves, the Church, they are at one and the ſame time hammering out a Bill to take away from the Diſſenters, becauſe they were Friends to the Houſe of Hanover, the natural Rights of Fathers and Mothers in the Education of their dear Children, and for enriching the prelatical Prieſthood in Scotland, becauſe they were Enemies to that Illuſtrious Family. The well-affected in the Houſe of Commons, to render this Bill ineffectual, propos'd this Addition, after the Words Epiſcopal Clergy there, who ſhall pray for her Majeſty and the Princeſs Sophia, in expreſs Words. "The Court Party, ſays our Author, had not the Confidence to oppoſe this, ſo the Bill was order'd to be brought in accordingly." Moſt of theſe Epiſcopal Revenues having at the Revolution been forfeited by the Biſhops refuſing to ſwear Allegiance to their lawful and rightful Soveraigns King William and Queen Mary, who had given them to the Miniſters of the Church of Scotland, as by Law eſtabliſh'd. The Jacobites intended to have anſwer'd two Purpoſes by this Bill; the one to ſupport and animate the Non-juring Clergy, the other, to mortify and oppreſs the Presbyterians; but the Addition we have mention'd, gall'd them ſo much, that they dropp'd the Bill, and apply'd themſelves vigorouſly to their other more favourable Bill, becauſe ſtill more barbarous in itſelf, and more dangerous to the Proteſtant Succeſſion: And on the 26th of May, the Committee of the whole Houſe went through the Schiſm-Bill; and, on the 1ſt of June, a Motion being made, that it ſhould paſs, it occaſion'd a very warm and long Debate; in which Mr Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, Mr Lechmere, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, and Sir Peter King, exerted their Abilities and Eloquence in oppoſing it. Poſterity will hardly believe it was poſſible for Faction to bring together ſo many Gentlemen as to make a Majority, calling themſelves Proteſtants, to give their Vote for a Bill that was a Scandal to Humanity, and much more to Chriſtianity. It was well urg'd in the Houſe, that it look'd more like a Decree of JULIAN the APOSTATE, than a Law enacted by a Proteſtant Parliament, ſince it tended to raiſe as great a Perſecution as either the Primitive Chriſtians ever ſuffer'd from their Heathen Emperors, or the Puritans from Popery and the Inquiſition. General Stanhope ſhew'd in particular, "the ill Conſequences of this Law, as it would of courſe occaſion Foreign Education, which, on the one hand, would drain the Kingdom of vaſt Sums of Money, and, which was ſtill worſe, fill the tender Minds of young Men with Prejudices againſt their own Country." This great Man knew High Church too well, to hope his Reaſons would affect them. What was Chriſtianity, Humanity? What the draining of the Nation of it's Wealth? What the alienating the Affections of Engliſhmen to their Country, to a Power of perſecuting and ruining thoſe that were given over to Damnation, by ſuch Doctors as Sacheverell, Atterbury, and others, who were at the Bottom of this Bill. The General illuſtrated and ſtrengthen'd his Argument by the Example of the Engliſh Popiſh Seminaries abroad, which he ſaid, were ſo pernicious to Great Britain, that inſtead of making new Laws to encourage Foreign Education, he could wiſh thoſe already in Force againſt Papiſts were mitigated, and that they ſhould be allow'd a certain Number of Schools.

A Bill to encourage the Jacobite Clergy in Scotland.

Monſtrous Partiality.

The Annaliſt ſays, "The chief Sticklers for this Bill, were Mr Bromley, Principal Secretary of State, Sir William Wyndham, Mr Hungerford, and Mr Collier." The latter, Collier, was ſo poor a Creature, that he had his chief Subſiſtence from the Playhouſe, and his Morals were ſuitable to ſuch a Livelihood. Mr Hungerford has been recorded with the Brand due to Corruption; and a Cauſe ſupported by Pillars of their Characters muſt needs do much Honour to thoſe that join'd with them in ſupporting it. Mr William Bromley maintain'd, that the Diſſenters were equally dangerous both to Church and State: However, if the Members who ſpoke in their Behalf, would have this Bill dropp'd, he would

The Honesty of such a Proposition is equal to the Wisdom of it.

P. 702, 703. Our Author adds, "Mr Walpole answer'd this "Speech with a great deal of solid Reasoning". He goes on. "After which, Mr Hungerford "recapitulated, and in his usual ludicrous Way, "faintly labour'd to confute what had been offer'd "by the Whig Members. Mr Collier, who "brought up the Rear, did still worse: This "Man, formerly a pettifogging Attorney, had, by "a Wife, got the Directorship of the Play-house in "Drury-lane, and afterwards, by his bold, in-"truding Assurance, the Acquaintance and Inti-"macy of the Lord Bolingbroke, who from a "Buffoon, an obsequious Companion, thought "fit to advance him to a brighter Station. Here-"upon, at his Lordship's earnest Request, "Mr Collier, tho' hardly worth 30*l.* a Year, "was by the Duke of Beaufort's Interest, brought "into the House of Commons, where he took "this solemn Occasion to signalize his Zeal for "the Cause he was to serve. With this Inten-"tion he back'd Mr Hungerford; and, in or-"der to expose the Dissenters, he desir'd Leave "to read to the House a Collection of Absur-"dities and impious Expressions, which he pre-"tended to have cull'd out of their Writings. "After the reading of part of his impertinent "Legend, he fell on a Passage taken out of the "nonsensical Rhapsodies of the late Mr Hicke-"ringill, Minister of Colchester, wherein Mr Col-"lier said, he averr'd, that our BLESSED "SAVIOUR was a Son of a W——. At "these shocking Expressions, Mr Bromley stopp'd "him short, saying, such impious Words ought "not to be repeated in that Assembly. Some "other Members observ'd, on the other hand, first, "that Mr Hickeringill was not a Dissenting "Teacher, but a Minister of the Church of "England; and, secondly, that he was known "to be crack-brain'd; so that his Extrava-"gancies and his Blasphemies prov'd nothing against "any Set of Men. "The Ignorance, and Impu-dence of this Collier, gave great Occasion to many Reflections on his Company, and the Cause he was engag'd in, they said, they could not but wonder, that Sir William Wyndham would suffer it to be defil'd by the tainted Breath of such a miserable Wretch as Collier, and that he was not asham'd of being seen with him in such an Affair. There was no such Wonder at Dr Paske, and Mr Aldworth: The former liv'd by the Church, and the other's Character was equal enough with Collier's. Mr Lechmere spoke against the Bill with great Vehemence, and, among other Things, said, That the Indulgence granted to Dissenters since the Revolution, had been so far from hurting the Church, that it had enlarg'd it's Pale; and that it was notorious, that some Persons who had been bred among Schismatics, meaning the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer, Lord Treasurer, the Lord Chancellor Harcourt, and the Lord Bolingbroke, were, or at least pretended to be, the strongest Support of the establish'd Church. But the High-Church Members calling out for the Question, there was no more Room for Reasoning. The Majority past the Bill Yea's 237, Noe's 126; and Sir William Wyndham, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who brought it into the House, was order'd to carry it to the Lords.

A.D.1714.

It is not out of Choice or Laziness, that I make use of other Mens Words on so many Occasions, but to support my own Sentiments by those of others, and silence, if possible, the groundless Clamour of Partiality against me; tho' if Truth happens to bear hard upon those that take Offence, we cannot think any one is to be blam'd for it but themselves.

A Paper has lain in my way, in which this Affair of the Schism Bill is particularly handled, and I choose to copy it, rather than give the Narrative myself.

Having thus shewn, says the Author, "that Sir "William Wyndham was the Father of the Schism "Bill, and personally promoted it in every Step, "till it was by his own Hands brought up to "the Lords, and there put into the Care of the "late Lord Viscount Bolingbroke, I shall give "some Account of it from the Secret History of "the White Staff, a celebrated Tract, publish'd "in the Beginning of the last Reign, to justify "the Earl of Oxford from the wicked Proceed-"ings of the late Lord B——ke; and this Tract, "which hath ever been reputed of so great Au-"thority, as to be written under the View, and "from the Informations of the noble Earl, af-"firms, in p. 33, that the Schism Bill was cas-"trated by his Lordship; that he took out the "most malicious and persecuting Part which the "WILD-FIRE Men had form'd to RUIN Fa-"milies, and OPPRESS the People. By which "WILD-FIRE MEN, the Writer of this "Piece, in p. 32, shews, that he means the Bi-"shop of Rochester, Atterbury, who sollicited this "Bill; the Peer Lord B—L—NGBR—KE, who "clos'd with it; and the Commoner, Sir W— "——M W————M, who negotiated the "said Bill. Hence we learn, that there was a "farther Design to RUIN Families, and OP-"PRESS the People, than even appear'd on the "Face of the Bill, when it became a Law, that "this most malicious and persecuting Part, was "form'd by B—KE, Atterbury, and Sir W— "W————M, and that it was castrated, and "taken out of the Bill by the Earl of Oxford." This explains the real Design of the Promoters of this Bill, and that the Church was no more concern'd in it than in any other of the unwarrantable Practices which the Factions disguis'd with her Name. When Sir William Wyndham had carry'd the Schism Bill to the Lords, the Lord Bolingbroke, who, as Mr Lechmere intimated, had been bred among Schismaticks, after the first reading, said, "It was a Bill of the last Impor-"tance, since it concern'd the Security of the "Church of England, the best and firmest Sup-"port of the Monarchy. Both which, all good "Men, and particularly this August Assembly, "who derive their Lustre from, and are nearest "to the Throne, ought to have most at Heart." The Lord Cowper had no difficult Task to an-swer a Man who had said nothing. His Lord-ship said, "That the Bill instead of preventing "Schism, and enlarging the Pale of the Church, "tended to introduce Ignorance, and it's infe-"parable Attendants, Superstition and Irreligion." The Lord Cowper spoke near half an Hour, and, with his usual Reason and Eloquence, shew'd the Weakness and Injustice of the Act; which was farther set forth by the Earl of Wharton, who could not help using his wonted Pleasantry, when any thing absurd and ridiculous lay in his way; as

He calls the Contrivers of this Bill MAD-MEN.

"ſider what MAD MEN were the Contrivers "and Promoters of this Bill." His Lordſhip refers here to the WILD-FIRE MEN above-mention'd; and the Character being given them by both the Earl of Oxford, or his Advocate, and the Earl of Wharton, and coming from two different Quarters, from Perſons who diſagreeing in every thing elſe, agreed perfectly in theſe Men's Characteriſtic. It is not to be doubted, but this Brand will always ſtick upon them. The Earl of Wharton excepted in particular againſt the Word Schiſm, with which the Frontiſpiece of the Bill was ſet off, ſaying, "It "was ſomewhat ſtrange, that they ſhould call "Schiſm in England what is the Eſtabliſh'd Religion "in Scotland; and therefore, if the Lords, who "repreſented the Nobility of that part of Great "Britain, were for this Bill, he hop'd that, in "order to be even with us, and conſiſtent with "themſelves, they would move for bringing "in another Bill to prevent the Growth of "Schiſm in their own Country." The Earl of Abingdon ſpoke for the Bill, as did alſo the Earl of Argleſey, and ſaid, among other Things, "That Reflections againſt the Diſſenters.

"the Diſſenters were equally dangerous both to "Church and State; that they were irreconcileable "Enemies to the Eſtabliſh'd Church, which they "had ſufficiently manifeſted in the late King "James II's Reign, when, in order to obtain a "Toleration, they join'd themſelves with the Pa-"piſts." I think there will be no Occaſion of entering farther into this Argument, than to repeat what the Lords ſaid in Conference with the Commons upon the Occaſional Bill, in the firſt Year of this Reign. In the laſt and greateſt Danger the Church was expos'd to, the Diſſenters join'd with her, with all imaginable Zeal and Sincerity, againſt the Papiſts, their common Enemies, ſhewing no Prejudice to the Church, but the utmoſt Reſpect to her Biſhops, when ſent to the Tower. This laſt Argument for the Bill being founded on a Fact, the Lords Managers have ſo amply prov'd to be otherwiſe, we leave the Debate on the beſt Foot upon which it can be left, to ſhew the Uprightneſs and Integrity of the Perſon who promoted it. We ſhall therefore omit what the Lord Halifax ſaid againſt the Bill, as reaſonable and forcible as it was, and believe it will not be taken ill, that we do the ſame by what the Lord North and Grey urg'd for it: But we cannot omit the Cloſe of the Earl of Nottingham's Speech againſt the Bill, where his Lordſhip excepted particularly againſt that Part of it, which enacts, That any Perſon who ſhould keep any publick or private School, or inſtruct any Youth, as Tutor, ſhould have a Licence of the reſpective Archbiſhop or Biſhop of the Place, &c. The Earl of Nottingham proceeded: My Lords, I have many Children, and I know not whether God Almighty will vouchſafe to let me live to give them the Education I could wiſh they had; therefore, my Lords, I own I tremble when I think that a certain Divine, who is hardly ſuſpected of being a Chriſtian, (meaning, as we read in the Annals, Dr Swift) is in a fair way of being a BISHOP, and may one Day give Licence to thoſe who ſhall be intruſted with the Inſtruction of Youth. It was generally ſuppos'd, that the Lord Bolingbroke, and the Wildfire-Men, abovemention'd, levell'd this Bill againſt the Lord-Treaſurer, with a View, that if he voted for it to keep his Staff, he would loſe the Diſſenters and the Whigs entirely; if he voted againſt it, he would loſe the Queen. He was not inſenſible of their Deſign, and contented himſelf with ſaying, I have not yet conſider'd of this Bill, but when I have, I will vote according as it ſhall appear to me to be either for the Good or Detriment of my Country, and therefore I am for reading the Bill a ſecond Time. And when the Presbyterians preſented a Petition, praying to be heard by Council againſt this unjuſt and uncharitable Bill, it was obſerv'd, that the Earl Poulet, the Lord Manſel, the Lord Foley, and ſome other Friends of the Treaſurers, voted with the Whig Lords for allowing their Petition. Every one was ſatisfy'd, that High Church would never have brought this Bill into Parliament, had they not been ſecure of a Majority; To which the Queſtion being referr'd, it was carry'd, as they knew it would be, that it ſhould paſs, Yea's 79, Noe's 71. But the following noble Peers and Patriots enter'd, and ſign'd a Proteſt again it.

When

A.D.1714. When the Bill, with ſome Amendments, was ſent back to the Commons, a ſhort Debate aroſe; Mr Walpole and Mr Lechmere repreſented, "That "ſince the Proteſtant Diſſenters of Ireland were "made liable to the Penalties of this Bill, it were "but juſt either to inſert a Clauſe in it, or to bring "in another Bill, to make them enjoy the Bene-"fit of the Toleration Act, as it was paſs'd in "England in the laſt Reign." But Sir William Wyndham, and Mr Campion, ſaid, If Leave were given to bring in ſuch a Bill, they hop'd they ſhould have Leave to bring in another, to incapacitate Proteſtant Diſſenters from voting in Elections for Parliament Men. The palpable Injuſtice of this Motion did not hinder it's being repeated by theſe two Members, after Mr William Bromley had fail'd in it before. The Ultima Ratio, the major Vote being made uſe of, the Bill paſs'd with the Lords Amendments, Yea's 168, Noe's 98, and had the Royal Aſſent by Commiſſion. It was to commence Auguſt the Firſt, the ſame Day upon which the Queen expir'd: But I ever had an ill Opinion of entering into the Secrets of Providence, and making raſh Judgments contrary to Charity or Reaſon.

The Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion underſtood perfectly well the Stile of the Court, which, for four Years paſs'd, had been adapted to anſwer the preſent Purpoſe, with little Regard to what had been done, or was to be done by them; and having good Information of the Machinations of the Enemies to the Houſe of Hanover, ſuch as objected to the Reward of 100,000 l. they were indefatigable in their Endeavours to guard againſt them, and let no Opportunity ſlip to bear their Teſtimony againſt all Attempts to leſſen the Security of the Succeſſion in that Illuſtrious Houſe; nor were there wanting proper Conſultations to put them in a Condition to make a Stand againſt Force as well as Treachery, which we have no Reaſon to think, would not have diſappointed all their Enemies Deſigns, whether Foreign or Domeſtick.

On the 14th of June, the Earl of Nottingham mov'd in the Houſe of Lords for an Addreſs of Thanks for the Proclamation againſt the Pretender, and was ſeconded by the Lord Halifax; the Earl of Wharton, who back'd the Motion, holding the Queen's Proclamation in his Hand, did moſt pathetically lament her Majeſty's owning, that her Endeavours to remove the Pretender from Lorrain had been ineffectual. Unhappy Princeſs, ſaid he, How much is her Condition alter'd! Will Poſterity believe that ſo great a Queen, who had reduc'd the exorbitant Power of France, given a King to Spain, and whoſe very Miniſters made the Emperor and States-General to tremble, ſhould yet want Power to make ſo petty, ſo inconſiderable a Prince as the Duke of Lorrain comply with her juſt Requeſt, of his removing out of his Dominions the Pretender to her Crown. The Addreſs was carry'd unanimouſly, and the next Day preſented to the Queen; whoſe Anſwer was, They might be aſſur'd ſhe ſhould continue to do whatever ſhe judg'd neceſſary for the ſecuring our Religion, the Liberty of her People, and for putting an End to the vain Hopes of the Pretender. In the Debate, upon the Bill, to prevent the Liſting Soldiers for the Pretender, the Earl of Wharton, the Lord Townſhend, Lord Somers, Lord Halifax, and Lord Cowper, ſpoke to the Neceſſity of it, That though the Pretender was inconſiderable of himſelf, and not to be fear'd, yet ſo far forth as he was countenanc'd and protected by the French King, whoſe Intereſt and conſtant Deſign was to impoſe him on theſe Realms.

Such a Bill, to make it High Treaſon for any of the Subjects of Great Britain to liſt in his Service, or the Service of any Foreign Potentate, without Licence under the Sign Manual of the Queen, her Heirs, or Succeſſors, was neceſſary. Indeed, the Well-affected could not do too much to aſſert the Right of the Proteſtant Succeſſor, and ſecure the Poſſeſſion of the Crown upon a Demiſe, when, by the Countenance of Bolingbroke, and the whole Band of Schiſm. Men, the Friends to the Pretender were ſo inſolent, as to aſſert his Right openly, and drink his Health. To this Purpoſe, above 100 Iriſh Papiſts met the very Day the Addreſs for 100,000 l. was voted, at the Sun-Tavern in the Strand, where the Lord Fingal was choſen their Steward, and all that came to their Treat were admitted by a printed Ticket, in which was the Image of a Pope, or Popiſh Saint, treading Hereſy, as they call the Church of England by Law eſtabliſh'd, under Foot. But that good Proteſtant Viſcount Bolingbroke, and well-belov'd Knight, that brought in the Bill, could ſee no manner of Danger in ſuch an Aſſembly as that, tho' they ſaw Danger imminent and dreadful in the Aſſemblies of reform'd Chriſtians. Will Poſterity believe, that a reform'd Church did ever breed up ſuch Sons, or that Religion was ſupported by ſuch Pillars? One of theſe Pillars was the Lord North and Grey, who, a few Years after, abandon'd her and his Country, having it no more in his Power to do either of them any Miſchief. We muſt not forget how he ſtood up in Defence of the Treaties with Spain; and tho', probably, he knew the leaſt of thoſe Matters of any one in that moſt honourable Houſe, he challeng'd very formally thoſe who knew moſt, to take up the Cudgels againſt him. The Ridiculums of this will be fully explain'd in what follows.

A.D.1714.

A Popiſh Meeting in the Strand.

On the 2d of July, the Lords took into Conſideration the Trade to Spain, and the Weſt-Indies; and the Earl of Nottingham made it plainly appear, that by Reaſon of the Diſcouragements to which the Trade was ſubjected by Explanations of the Third, Fifth, and Eighth Articles of the Treaty of Navigation and Commerce between Great Britain and Spain, it was impoſſible for our Merchants to carry on that Trade without a certain Loſs. This was confirm'd by the Teſtimony of Sir William Hodges and about thirty more eminent Merchants, who being call'd into the Houſe, unanimouſly averr'd, that unleſs the Explanations of the three Articles before-mention'd, made by the Britiſh Miniſter at Madrid, after the ſigning of the Treaty at Utrecht were reſcinded, they could not carry on their Commerce without loſing Twenty, or Twenty-five per Cent. What Applauſes have been given and taken for the Advantages of this very Treaty? Some of them have come from the Throne: And here the Merchants, who were moſt immediately concern'd in it, declare, they ſhall loſe Twenty, or Twenty-five per Cent. if the Treaty ſubſiſts. This is prodigious, and not to be reconcil'd to the juſt Opinion our Nation had of their own common Senſe and common Honeſty, from their Origine down to the Harleian Miniſtry. The Breach between the Treaſurer and Secretary, better known by their own Names, Harley and St John, was now ſo open; that the former, who foreſaw what a Slur the Opinions of the Merchants would be to the Spaniſh Treaty of Commerce, manag'd chiefly by Bolingbroke's Creatures, join'd with the Lords, who were againſt it, in inſiſting upon the hearing of the Spaniſh Merchants; which Boling-

broke

A.D.1714. broke ſtrenuouſly oppos'd with a traiterous Deſign to conceal from his Country the Injury he had done it in ſetting that ruinous Negotiation a-foot. The Houſe reſolv'd on an Addreſs for the Papers relating to it, and came directly to a Point, which would have done Bolingbroke's Buſineſs in any other Times, and, perhaps, even in theſe, as bad as they were, had this Auguſt Aſſembly continu'd ſitting longer. They addreſs'd, to have the Names of the Perſons who advis'd her Majeſty to that Treaty. To avoid this Rock on which he was ſo like to ſplit, he got the Queen to take the whole Matter on herſelf; which might the better be done, becauſe ſhe had been pleas'd before to lay ſome Streſs on the Advantages that would accrue to her Subjects by it. Her Majeſty's Anſwer was, That being given to underſtand that the three explanatory Articles of the Treaty of Commerce with Spain were not detrimental to the Trade of her Subjects, ſhe had conſented to their being ratify'd with the ſaid Treaty. But her Majeſty was now given to underſtand, by thoſe that were to carry on the Trade, that they ſhould loſe 25 per Cent. by thoſe Articles, and the Ratification of them encreas'd ſtill the Guilt of her evil Counſellors, yet ſhe had ſo much Regard for them, that ſhe hearken'd more to them than to the Reaſons of the Merchants who were to be the Loſers by the Bargain that was made for them. Several noble Members excepted againſt that Anſwer as unſatisfactory; and amongſt the reſt, the Earl of Wharton and the Lord Halifax repreſented, That if ſo little Regard was ſhewn to the Addreſſes and Application of that Auguſt Aſſembly to the Sovereign, they had no Buſineſs in that Houſe; and mov'd, that a Repreſentation be made to her Majeſty, to lay before her the inſupportable Difficulties that attended the Spaniſh Trade on the Foot of the late Treaty; which was agreed to. It was alſo mov'd, that the Houſe ſhould inſiſt on her Majeſty's naming the Perſons who advis'd her to ratify the ſaid Treaty; but that being entirely the giving up Bolingbroke to national Juſtice, the Courtiers, ſays the Annaliſt, warded off the Bow.

Queen takes it upon her ſelf.

The next Day, July 6, the Lords proceeded to the Conſideration of the Spaniſh Trade, and to the Examination of the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations. The Earl of Wharton referring to that mean Agent of Bolingbroke's, Arthur Moore, ſaid, ironically, He did not doubt one of thoſe Gentlemen could make it appear, that the Treaty of Commerce was very advantageous. Moore having made a Jobb of it, as the then Chancellor would have done of the ruinous Expedition to Canada; Bolingbroke knew ſo little of Commerce or Decency, that he pickt out the moſt contemptable Perſon amongſt them to explain Articles, which, not many Years before, he could hardly read. He blunder'd and contradicted himſelf in his Anſwers to ſeveral Queſtions asked him by the Lord Cowper. This was aggravated by the Confeſſion of the three other Commiſſioners, particularly Robert Monckton, Eſq; who declared, that Mr Moore only read curſorily to them the ſaid Articles, without giving them time to examine the ſame. Mr Popple, Secretary to the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations, depos'd, That Mr Moore had ſhewn him a Letter in French, from Monſ. Orry, directed to Don Arturo Moore, importing, that he muſt not expect the 2000 Louis d'Ors per Annum, unleſs the three Explanatory Articles were ratify'd. Such was the Prevalency of the Miniſtry at that Time, that even this baſe and deteſtable Negotiation went off with Impunity in Parliament; but the next Day, the general Court of the South Company reſolv'd, That Arthur Moore, Eſq; while a Director of this Company, was privy to, and encourag'd a Deſign to carry on a clandeſtine Trade to the Prejudice of this Corporation, contrary to his Oath, and in breach of the Truſt repos'd in him. They alſo reſolv'd, That the ſaid Arthur Moore, for ſuch a Breach of Truſt, be declar'd incapable of being a Director, or having any other Employment in the Company. How ſhameleſs was Bolingbroke and his Aſſociates, to put an Affair of the greateſt Importance to the Trade and Intereſt of England, into the Hands of a Perſon branded thus by the greateſt trading Body in the Nation, as guilty of Perjury; for what elſe could one make of his breaking his Oath and his Truſt? There's a Complication of Frauds and Falſhoods in this Spaniſh Buſineſs. On the 8th of July, the Lords examin'd Mr Lowndes, Secretary to the Treaſury, and Mr Taylor, chief Clerk, concerning the boaſted Aſſiento Contract, which was always thrown in the Way as a Golden Bait to draw in People to approve the Treaty. They confeſs'd, they were only nominal Aſſignees for the Quarter Part of the Aſſiento Contract was reſerv'd for her Majeſty, whoſe ſacred Name was proſtituted by Bolingbroke and his Confidents, to ſupport their Credit and Intereſts; and that ſome Perſons to them unknown, but who were ſtrongly ſuſpected to be the Viſcount Bolingbroke, Mrs Abigal Hill, late Lady Maſham, and Arthur Moore, were to have the Benefit of it. The Lord Cowper repreſented, That the Uncertainty the South-Sea Company had a long time been kept in, whether the Queen would keep that Quarter, or give it to them, had been a great Obſtruction to their carrying on that Trade. The Earl of Wharton mov'd for an Addreſs, to have that quarter Part of the Aſſiento Contract, and the 7 ½ per Cent. granted to one Galligan, aſſign'd to the South-Sea Company: But upon the Queſtion, it was carry'd in the Negative by 54 Votes againſt 43. Upon a Motion of the Earl of Angleſey, it was reſolv'd by 56 Voices againſt 40, to preſent an Addreſs, "to thank her Majeſty "for having ſo graciouſly given, not only Licences "for two Ships of 500 Ton each, and the Aſ"ſiento Contract, but alſo the quarter Part, "which her Majeſty was pleas'd at firſt to re"ſerve to herſelf; and that ſhe would be pleas'd, "that ſuch other Advantages which were, or might "be veſted in her Majeſty, might be diſpos'd of "for the Uſe of the Publick." To which the Anſwer was, That her Majeſty had always a great Conſideration for the Advice of the Houſe; and, as to the Particulars deſir'd, her Majeſty would diſpoſe of them as ſhe ſhould judge beſt for the Service. This Anſwer was very ill reliſh'd by thoſe Lords who preſented the Addreſs, and ſome Members complain'd of the Queen's Silence in relation to the Perſons who had advis'd her to ratify the Three explanatory Articles; but the Lottery Bill being ready for the Royal Aſſent, her Majeſty came that very Day, July 9, to the Houſe of Peers, and put an End to that ungrateful Debate, and the Seſſion of Parliament, after having paſs'd ſeveral Acts, by the following Speech.

The Parliament prorogu'd to ſcreene Lord Bolingbroke

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"THE Progreſs which has been made in the "Publick Buſineſs, and the Seaſon of the "Year, render it both convenient and neceſſary, "that I ſhould put an End to this Seſſion.

A.D. 1714.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I return you hearty Thanks for all your " good Services to Me and to your Country, " and particularly for the Supplies you have " given Me as well to defray the Expences of the " current Year, as towards the Diſcharge of the " National Debts.

" In Our preſent Circumſtances it could not " be expected, that a full Proviſion ſhould be " made on both theſe Heads.

" What you have granted, ſhall be laid out " with the beſt Husbandry, and to the greateſt " Advantage.

My Lords and Gentlemen.

" I hope early in the Winter to meet you " again, and to find you in ſuch a Temper " as is neceſſary for the real Improvement of " Our Commerce, and of all the other Advan- " tages of Peace.

" My chief Concern is, to preſerve to you, " and to your Poſterity, our Holy Religion and " the Liberty of my Subjects; and to ſecure the " preſent and future Tranquillity of my King- " doms. But I muſt tell you plainly, that theſe " deſirable Ends can never be attain'd, unleſs " you bring the ſame Diſpoſitions on your Parts; " unleſs all groundleſs Jealouſies, which create " and foment Diviſions amongſt you, be laid " aſide, and unleſs you ſhew the ſame Regard " for my juſt Prerogative, and for the Honour of " my Government, as I have always expreſs'd " for the Rights of my People.

Then the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 10th of Auguſt. This Hint about the Prerogative was a Fling againſt the Well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, who were now ſtigmatiz'd as Republicans, tho' both Court and Country knew, there was not a Common-Wealthſman in England who did not heartily profeſs Revolution Principles, and eſpouſe the Intereſt of all the Governments founded upon it, as was this Queen's. The Truth is, Bolingbroke, and his Confederates, made her ſay what they pleas'd; which was, whatever they imagin'd would delude the People, till their Conſpiracy againſt the Conſtitution was ripe for Execution. Tho' one cannot doubt, but that mercenary Scribler Daniel Foe was the Author of the Pamphlet call'd, the White Staff; yet it is as evident, by the Facts it contains, that the Treaſurer ſupply'd him with the Memoirs, and approv'd every thing in it, which makes it a good Authority, in the Caſe of Bolingbroke and his Aſſociates, who, as he tells us by his Hiſtorian, ſacrific'd her Honour, Dignity, and Reputation, abandon'd the Regard they ow'd to their Sovereign's Veracity, and expos'd her Sincerity to common Cenſure: He means here Bolingbroke, Harcourt, Atterbury, a Perſon now living, then in high Station in the Exchequer, and even now not aſham'd of profeſſing Friendſhip to the ſame Bolingbroke. Theſe Men, according to the Earl of Oxford's Hiſtorian, beſt of any Denomination, deſerv'd the Name of a Faction, theſe ſcandalous Perſons; theſe Wild-fire Men, as he calls them elſe-where, alluding to the High-German Doctor, a Weekly Paper, where the Gentleman of the Exchequer goes by the Name of Sir William Wild-fire, on account of his furious Zeal in promoting the Schiſm Bill: Theſe Men, according to the Lord-Treaſurer Harley's favourite Advocate, had, even in the Queen's Time, ſo behav'd, that they were afraid of the Gallows. They were ready, to uſe that Hiſtorian's Words, to deſert both their Country and themſelves, for fear of Publick Juſtice. It is true, the Treaſurer's Advocate labours much, to have it believ'd that his Maſter was guiltleſs of the treaſonable Deſigns carry'd on by that Faction againſt the Conſtitution, and affirms, that they quarrell'd with him purely on account of his Attachment to the Houſe of Hanover, whoſe Succeſſion theſe ſcandalous Perſons were reſolv'd to betray and prevent. His precious Words are, If the Queen was not really in the Deſigns of theſe Men, and was not conſenting to Meaſures fatal to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, it was not their Faults, nor for want of frequent Attempts on their Side to bring it to paſs, and tho' they were not yet arriv'd at that Height, as to own their Deſign to her Majeſty, yet a Genius of very little Penetration might ſee they were not ſo remote to it as they pretended to be.

The ſame Writer deduces the firſt Occaſion of a direct Breach between the Lord-Treaſurer and theſe Men, from a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, for Payment of the Hanover Troops in Engliſh Pay, which they ſuppos'd he was at the Bottom of, and did it to make his Court to the Electoral Family. Be that as it will, it is certain, that about this Time, the Breach was irreconcileable. The Female Buz, as the ſame Author calls Lady Maſham, and other Courtiers of her Sex, had been engag'd by St John, always willing to plough with Heifers, and to give the Queen ill Impreſſions of the Treaſurer, who, in Truth, had been the Inſtrument of their Riſe, and conſequently of his own Ruin. Here the Writer belies his Maſters, and his own panegyrical Account of the Queen's unalterable Reſolution to ſupport the Proteſtant Succeſſion. For he informs us, that the Treaſurer's Enemies thought they could not hurt him any way more with her Majeſty, than by repreſenting him as inviolably attach'd to it. The Party, ſays he, took hold of this Article, as if they had a great Advantage given them againſt the White Staff, intimating, that it was a great Affront to her, and an apparent carrying on his own Game at the Court of Hanover; accordingly, her Majeſty was prejudic'd by it, as if it had been a Diſhonour to her.

Pag. 34.

There were ſeveral Rumours of the Cauſe of the Rupture between the Treaſurer and Secretary. But one need not dive deeply to come at it. The former had engroſs'd all the Favour and Power at Court; and the latter, who had a much better Opinion of his own Merit than of his Patron's, and as ſtrong an Appetite for Superiority, was not long without Thoughts and Means of ſupplanting him. He knew that the Treaſurer was univerſally hated by all the Friends to the old Miniſtry, who were indeed all the Friends to the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion; and he took little Pains to leſſen the Odium he lay under. His Advocate pretends it went ſo far, that the Secretary had the Happineſs to have his own falſe Steps imputed to the Treaſurer, who, continues he, was charg'd with the very Miſtakes he had oppos'd, while the Oppoſition to their ill Meaſures was in it's Vigour, and before the Parliament had approv'd the Peace, which ſucceeding Parliaments have been ſo far from approving. Both the Treaſurer and the Secretary thought it not ſafe for them to divide, and their mutual Danger kept them together till it was over, by the ſolemn Approbation of their diſhonourable and diſadvantageous Treaties. After this, the Rupture widen'd daily, and neither of them was at any

A.D 1714. Trouble to conceal it. In the mean time, the Well-affected had ſo mean an Opinion of their Integrity and Intentions, that they were not much amus'd with this ſudden Turn in their Miniſtry, expecting no Good from either of them, tho' they were ready to make uſe of them as Occaſion offer'd, for the Service of the Cauſe which they had at Heart, the Security of the Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover. Both Oxford and Bolingbroke judg'd rightly, that they could not gain their ſeveral Ends by the Strength of their own ſeveral Parties; and as they were both ſenſible, that the Queen's Life was very precarious, and their Ruin certain, if they were found, at her Demiſe, in this disjointed Condition, and againſt them not only the whole Body of the Whigs, but the Factions they had ſeparately form'd, they were determin'd to fall in with any Meaſures to eſtabliſh themſelves in Oppoſition to each other. In order to this, they both began to give the Whigs good Looks and good Words. Bolingbroke had, probably, from the Beginning of his Miniſtry, reſolv'd to ſecure the Game in his Hands, by bringing in the Pretender. The Earl of Oxford careſs'd the Jacobites, to increaſe his Party with them; and if he could not have kept his Ground, without playing the ſame Game, no body doubted but he would do it at the Extremity; nor that he would run himſelf ſo deep in the Mire, that he would not be able to draw out when he had a Mind to it; but the conſtant and vigorous Oppoſition they met with from the true Lovers of our Conſtitution, kept them in ſuch continual Alarms, that they could not ripen their dark and treaſonable Counſels for Execution; and finding by the Senſe even of this very Parliament, that the Nation was entirely devoted to the Intereſt of the Houſe of Hanover, and had founded all their Hopes of future Security and Happineſs on their Succeſſion to the Crown; they thought it neceſſary for their Preſervation, to reconcile themſelves, if poſſible, to the Leaders of the Whigs, eſpecially to the Duke of Marlborough. The Lords Oxford and Bolingbroke acted not in this in Concert, but each ſeparately made his Intereſt in the beſt manner he could to the Duke, then in Flanders, where he had ever ſince his Retirement there, been very attentive to the Tranſactions in England; of which he was well inform'd by the Earl of Sunderland his Son-in-Law, General Stanhope, and General Cadogan; nor did he fail in keeping a ſtrict Correſpondence, by proper Agents, with the Court of Hanover. As the Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion had been very buſy in forming traiterous Schemes to prevent it, the Friends to it were not idle, but had a watchful Eye upon all their Motions, and were not without counter Schemes to aſſert and maintain the Right of the Electoral Houſe, whenever it ſhould take effect by the Queen's Death. This is ſo certain, that a noble Lord in a Place of great Truſt at that Juncture, in which he continu'd ſome Months after his late Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, having Converſation with an inferior Officer, who was a hearty Friend to the Hanover Succeſſion, and a Man of good Capacity and Intelligence, the latter frankly remonſtrated to him againſt the Miniſtry, for their conſpiring to ſet it aſide, and impoſe the Pretender upon us. He inſtanced ſeveral Meaſures taken by them with that View, and talk'd of it as a Thing that was very near ſucceeding. The Lord heard him patiently, and then ſmiling, ſaid, I find, as great a Whig as you are, your Chiefs have not let you into the Secret. They knew well enough, that as willing as Bolingbroke might be to have done ſuch a Thing, it was not in his, nor any one's Power. The Whigs had taken Care to be ready upon any ſuch Attempt, and with a Force that the Jacobites could not pretend to make Head againſt. Ask Stanhope, and he will tell you more, if you let him know you had it from me. The Gentleman came immediately to me, to know whether I had any Knowledge of ſuch a Diſpoſition of Things in Favour of the Succeſſion? I told him, I knew nothing more than what I had learn'd by a few confus'd Whiſpers, but that I was always of Opinion, that there were Hearts and Hands enough in the Kingdom to make good the Elector's Way to the Throne, whenever he ſhould be call'd to it by the good Providence of God. And indeed I was not ſo much in Pain for the Succeſs of the helliſh Contrivances of his Enemies, as for the Miſchiefs, any the leaſt Oppoſition to his Succeſſion might occaſion. The Lord who ſaid this, was certainly in the ſtricteſt Confidence with the Earl of Oxford, if not with the Viſcount Bolingbroke, but was no farther a Jacobite, than as his Engagements with them might involuntarily have drawn him in to be. If there was any thing in this Explanation of his, there is no Queſtion but the Duke of Marlborough was in the Depth of that Secret, and then we may eaſily account for his Grace's being always in a Readineſs to take Paſſage for England, during the laſt three Months of her Majeſty's Life, which he knew, by the beſt Information, was not like to be of long Continuance. It is, however, more certain, that both the Earl and the Viſcount did by Turns, invite the Duke to come over. The Lord Oxford, though more his Grace's Averſion, as having been the prime Cauſe of his and the Nation's Diſgrace, and Misfortune, had a better Pretence to a Reconciliation than Bolingbroke, as having been the prime Cauſe of the Permiſſion the Duke obtain'd to go beyond Sea. If his Grace had not been detain'd at Oſtend, by contrary Winds, he would have been in England before the Treaſurer loſt the Staff. It had been intimated to Earl Mortimer and Oxford, that it would be taken kind if he would reſign, but he knew too well what Support the Staff was to him under the Weight of the publick Hatred, to part with it till he was forc'd to it; and he hop'd, if the Duke arriv'd before he was turn'd out, he ſhould either be able to preſerve himſelf in it, by the Aſſiſtance of him and his Friends; or, if he was diſgrac'd, that it would make his Fall the lighter. Bolingbroke was in the ſame Way of thinking, and flatter'd himſelf, he might get into the Earl's Poſt, by the ſame Means, the Earl thought to keep in it: So they both agreed in this, that neither of them could be ſafe without accommodating Matters with the Duke of Marlborough; who, upon this, was invited to return to England, with Aſſurances of great Deference to his Counſels, and Zeal for his Intereſt: Nay, the Complement went ſo far, that Orders were ſent to the Commanders of the Caſtles and Forts on the Coaſts of Kent, Eſſex, and Suffolk, to pay the ſame Honours, by firing of Guns wherever his Grace landed, as was done when he return'd triumphant from his glorious Campaigns in the laſt War with France: But, on ſome Account or other, this Ceremony was ſoon after countermanded by an Expreſs; ſome imagin'd, it was by Procurement of Bolingbroke, upon Intelligence, that his Rival was before-hand with him, and had ſucceeded better in the Application

Others thought, they had both Apprehenſions that he came not to ſerve either of their Turns, but with juſt and warm Sentiments of the Guilt they had contracted by their wicked Contrivances and Actions in the four laſt Years of the Queen; and that ſuch a Parade of Flattery would rather expoſe them to the Contempt of the People, than be acceptable to his Grace, who wanted not the Roar of their Cannon to add to his Glory, or proclaim his Welcome to his native Country, which had been depriv'd of him ſo long by their Malice and Machinations.

In the main, the Treaſurer and Secretary were very induſtrious to take off the Edge of the Whigs Enmity to them. The Earl of Oxford put his uſual Arts in practice to gain the Friendſhip of the Lord Cowper; and with that View, procur'd him to be choſen Umpire between his Son and the Lord Pelham, in a Controverſy about the Inheritance of the late Duke of Newcaſtle, whoſe Daughter had been marry'd to Lord Harley. So diſproportionate a Match, that it rais'd the Indignation of every one who was acquainted with, and judg'd of it rightly; that Lady having a Fortune of 13 or 14000 Pounds a Year; which was as many thouſands as her Husband could have had hundreds from his Family; and the Rank of the Wife was equally out of Proportion with that of the Husband. In the Management of this diſagreable Buſineſs, the Treaſurer had the Help of a Prieſt's Craft as well as his own, and it was ſaid, a good Deanery was the Reward of the Reverend Doctor's Painſ-taking in that pious Negotiation. The Lord Cowper arbitrated that Matter ſo judiciouſly and reaſonably, that both the Parties concern'd were equally pleas'd with it, but he did not think fit to have any Participation with the Treaſurer in his Politics, who made his Court alſo to the Duke of Shrewſbury when he return'd from Ireland; but that Lord did not think himſelf well us'd by the Miniſters during his Stay in that Kingdom, and by no means met the Advances that were made him by the Earl with the Acceptance the Earl of Oxford expected, and he had but a melancholy Scene before him where-ever he caſt his Eyes. He was hated by the Whigs, deſpis'd and inſulted by the Tories; he had loſt his beſt Friend, the Lady Maſham, who would not forgive him for making a Demur, in paſſing a Grant ſhe had obtain'd for 1500 Pounds a Year, and now did with the Queen whatever Bolingbroke would have her. In this forlorn, diſtreſs'd Condition he went to Court, July the 27th, when the Staff was taken from him with very mortifying Circumſtances; inſtead of being abaſh'd at his Diſgrace, his Reſentment burſt out in Words to this effect, I have been wrong'd, and abus'd, by Lies and Miſrepreſentations, but I ſhall be reveng'd, and leave ſome People as low as I found them. The Account of this Matter in the ſecret Hiſtory of the White Staff is a Series of Falſhoods from the beginning to the end, perfectly agreeable to the Characters of the Treaſurer and his Hiſtorian. It begins with theſe notorious ones; That he came to lay down the Staff, (which indeed was taken from him) and had never taken it, but with a View to her Majeſty's Intereſt. What has the Appearance of Truth in the Speech that Writer tells us he made at parting, relates to Bolingbroke, Harcourt, Atterbury, and the Wildfire Men, as he terms them, and what Sort of Men they were, by the Earl of Oxford's own Account, will be ſeen by theſe Paſſages. The only Grief I conceive in my Removal is, the Aſſurance I have that thoſe People who pretend to ſucceed me, will embark your Majeſty in impracticable Schemes; which, if your Majeſty's own Wiſdom do not prevent it, will be your Ruin. The Meaſures they are upon, will embroil you not only with your Neighbours and Allies abroad, but with your own Subjects at home. I make no queſtion but to detect the BLACKEST DESIGNS of a Set of Men now pretending to ſerve you, and to convince your Majeſty, that they have ſacrific'd your Peace, and that of their Country, to their own Avarice and Ambition. I have choſen to decline my private Advantages, rather than be concern'd; where I foreſee the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution. Theſe Men will defeat your Subjects of the Bleſſing of Peace. Theſe Men, I am ſatisfy'd, aim at Things, which if they do not directly advance the Intereſt of the Pretender, yet tend to the Prejudice of the Succeſſion of Hanover. I cannot refrain to oppoſe thoſe who have given ſuch Proof of their being embark'd in dangerous Things againſt their Country, in which no honeſt Man can join with them. Pray Reader, remember that theſe are the very Men who oppos'd King William in every Article of his Government; who were againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters in the firſt Year of Queen Anne's Reign; who have been always againſt Supplies, and a War with France, if they could hinder it; who made the fatal Peace at Utrecht, who vindicated Sacheverel, and were the Heads of his Sedition; who were for the French Commerce Bill, and for the Schiſm Bill, theſe are the Men, whom their Patron Harley confeſſes to be engag'd in the blackeſt Deſigns for the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution, and ſuch as no honeſt Man could join with. I defy the moſt prejudic'd of my Ill-willers, who are ſo ready to accuſe me of Partiality, to give one Inſtance where I have ſaid Things in any the leaſt degree ſo bad of theſe Men as the Earl of Oxford and his Hiſtorian ſay of them in their Secret Hiſtory. When the Earl had ſpoke in this Manner to the Queen, he addreſs'd himſelf to the Chancellor and the Secretary. " He expos'd, ſays this Writer, their new " Schemes, ridicul'd their impolitick Meaſures, " and foretold them to what Diſtreſſes they would " reduce themſelves in a little time, putting them " in mind of a Debt they would owe to the " National Juſtice at laſt, and how unwilling " they would be to pay it. He prophetically told " them, they would be in a little while reduc'd " to the primitive Meanneſs and Contempt in " which he found them! That he had too long " born the Reproaches which was due to their " Meaſures, which he had in vain perſuaded " them againſt, and that it was time now that " the World ſhould ſee who were the Enemies to " the Britiſh Eſtabliſhment." And threatens them with Scaffold Gibbet.

We ſee ſee here what a fine Picture he has drawn of the Perſons the Queen was about to intruſt with the Religion, Laws, Riches, and Welfare of their Country; a Truſt which God committed to herſelf. The Rage with which the Treaſurer ſpoke, as well as the Reaſon he had to ſpeak, could not but be very ſhocking to her Majeſty, whoſe ill State of Health could not ſtand ſuch Shocks; and the Effects of it are generally ſuppos'd to have been mortal to her. The Surmiſe that the Earl's Speech made ſuch Impreſſion on her Mind, that ſhe chang'd her Diſpoſition to put Bolingbroke at the the Head of Affairs, and inſtead of it, to give the Staff to the

The Ruffle it was in, being very unfit for ſuch important Counſel; and as the Duke of Shrewsbury was in no great Friendſhip with Lady Maſham, the Lord Chancellor, or the Lord Bolingbroke, one may more reaſonably conjecture, that the Chancellor, the Secretary, the Biſhop, the Baronet, and the reſt of that Faction, as the late Treaſurer call'd them, were not yet come to a Determination into what Hands the Staff ſhould be put. Biſhop Atterbury had a Promiſe of the Privy-Seal, and was ſo ſure of poſſeſſing it, that he had given Orders for making a Coach of State, ſuitable to his new Dignity; and St John, who expected to be Prime Miniſter, whether with, or without the Staff, had not yet, adjuſted the Diſpoſal of the latter with them. He ſeem'd inclin'd at firſt to let it go in Commiſſion, and ſeveral Perſons were nam'd for it; ſome of whom were very far from being likely to be concern'd in any thing under his Influence, as will appear by naming them. Sir William Wyndham was moſt certainly very ready to keep his Place as Chancellor of the Exchequer; the others that were talk'd of, were the Lord Bolingbroke himſelf, Lord Paget, Lord Lexington, Lord Maſham, Lord Bathurſt, the Biſhop of London, (for in ſuch Times as theſe, ſuch Prelates were always apt to make their Market of Court Favours, tho' in direct Defiance of their Duty and holy Vocation), the Honourable Mr Boyle, Mr Hill, Mr Brydges, and even Sir John Packington, and Mr Compton were alſo nam'd. There were ſeveral Conſultations in the Cabinet Council upon this Subject, but they came to no Settlement, ſeveral Perſons who had been ſpoken to, declining to accept of the Employment in ſo tickliſh a Juncture. They were to ſit again, on Thurſday the 29th of July, but the Meeting was put off to the next Day, by reaſon of the Queen's Indiſpoſition, which, according to the Annaliſt, ſhe was ſenſible was occaſion'd by the late Quarrel among her Servants, having intimated to one of her Phyſicians, That ſhe ſhould not outlive it. It was Sir John Shadwell's Opinion, according to the ſame Author, That the Agitations it put her into, hinder'd the uſual Diſcharge of the Impoſthumation in her Leg, ſo that the gouty Humour tranſlating itſelf upon the Brain, was the immediate Occaſion of her Death. On Thurſday Morning ſhe found herſelf indiſpos'd with a dozing Heavineſs, for which ſhe was cupp'd, and ſomewhat reliev'd by it; the next Day, Friday, the 30th of July, about eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, being riſen, and having had her Head comb'd, which ſhe took Delight in, ſhe went to look on the Clock, and one of the Bed-Chamber Women taking notice that ſhe fix'd her Eyes a long time upon it, ask'd her Majeſty, what ſhe ſaw in the Clock more than ordinary? One cannot believe ſhe was then taken up with Reflections on the Situation of her Affairs, and meditating how to recover the falſe Steps ſhe had made, as the Treaſurer and his Hiſtorian pretend, in removing him from his Office, or that ſhe thought of the Duke of Shrewsbury, or any one elſe, to ſucceed him in it. She anſwered her Bed-Chamber Woman only with turning her Head, and a dying Look, upon which the other called for help, and the Phyſicians in waiting caus'd her to be let Blood, judging it to be a Fit of an Apoplexy, which returned upon her a little after nine, and ſhe remained ſpeechleſs, motionleſs, and inſenſible, for about an Hour; ſo that whatever Act of Government was done before ſhe expir'd, muſt be imputed to the Council, who were then aſſembled at the Cock-Pit, near White-Hall, and upon Notice of her Majeſty's Life being in ſo much Danger, they removed immediately to Kenſington, by which time ſhe had recovered her Speech, and was ſenſible.

The Q.'s laſt Sickneſs, and Death.

*A.D.*1714. Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle go to Court.

The Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle, being inform'd of theſe Paſſages, repair'd alſo with ſpeed to Kenſington, and, without being ſummon'd, went into the Council Chamber, as their Graces had a Right to do, being Lords of the Council, tho' the Lords, Oxford and Bolingbroke, had not lately given them Encouragement to appear at that Board; there were then preſent, the Lord Harcourt, Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Duke of Ormond, Viſcount Bolingbroke, Mr William Bromley, and the Earl of Mar, the three Secretaries of State, Dr John Robinſon, Biſhop of London, and ſome others, who were ſurpriz'd at the Appearance of the two Dukes before-mention'd, who acquainted the Board with the Reaſons that brought them thither. The Duke of Shrewsbury, who had not been in the Depths of their dark Counſels, return'd the Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle Thanks for their Readineſs to give the Council their Aſſiſtance in that nice Juncture; upon which theſe Lords took their Places, and thoſe of the Number that had conceiv'd vain Hopes of excluding the Royal Houſe of Hanover from the Succeſſion, found them daſh'd all at once, and that there was nothing left for them to do, but to put the beſt Colour they could on their paſt Actions in Favour of the Pretender, and endeavour to attone for them by an Affectation of extraordinary Zeal for the Security of the Proteſtant Suceſſion. One of the Council repreſenting, how neceſſary it was, in caſe of her Majeſty's Demiſe, that the Place of Lord-Treaſurer ſhould be fill'd; and all the Lords aſſenting to it, another of them propos'd the Duke of Shrewsbury, whom they unanimouſly agreed upon, as the fitteſt Perſon for that high Truſt. It muſt then be confin'd to the Characters of the Lords there preſent, for without deprecaiting the Merit of that noble Peer, it could not be ſo thought of his Grace, had the Lord Halifax, one of the Council, alſo been at that Time with them. The Phyſicians, Sir Richard Blackmore, Dr Shadwell, and Dr Mead, being examin'd, and having aſſur'd the Lords, that the Queen was ſenſible, the Lord-Chancellor, with the Duke of Shrewsberry, and other Members of the Council, were order'd to attend her, and lay before her their unanimous Opinions; which her Majeſty approving, ſhe gave his Grace the Treaſurer's Staff, and by that Gift he became at once Lord High Treaſurer of Great-Britain, Lord Chamberlain of her Majeſty's Houſhold, and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. The Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle having taken their Seats at the Council-Board, mov'd, that all Privy-Counſellors, in and about London, without Diſtinction, ſhould have Summons to attend; which the Lord Somers, and other Lords, entirely in the Intereſt of the Electoral Houſe, did accordingly that very Day: and after their Attendance, the People, moſt anxious for the Hanover Succeſſion, aſſur'd themſelves, it would not be in the Power of the Faction to prevent it. At three in the Afternoon the Queen relaps'd into a like Fit as the firſt, and the Application of Bliſters having no Effect, ſhe was given over by her Phyſicians, and continuing in an apoplectic or lethargic Fit all Saturday, and the Night following, ſhe departed this Life the firſt of Auguſt, a little after ſeven in the Morning,

Duke of Shrewſbury Ld High Treaſurer, &c.

The Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, think it ſafe by the Attendances of Lord Somers, and other Lords.

A.D.1714. Morning, in the Fiftieth Year of her Age, and the Thirteenth of her Reign. She was ſo far from being in a Condition to turn her Thoughts to Matters of State, that ſhe could not diſpoſe herſelf to receive the Sacrament, in which ſhe was very conſtant and devout; nor could ſhe ſign a Draught of a Will, by which ſhe directed her Burial to be in the ſame Manner and Place with her late Conſort Prince George of Denmark.

Her Majeſty's Death, and a Sketch of her Character.

The whole Account of her Majeſty's Diſpoſal of the Staff, given by the Earl of Oxford's Hiſtorian, is ſhamefully falſe. He repreſents her in a State of Serenity and Vigour; and tho' the Council was unanimous in fixing upon the Duke of Shrewsbury to be Treaſurer, he makes one of them ask her Majeſty, If ſhe knew what ſhe did; and that the Queen anſwer'd, languiſhing, and dying as ſhe was, in Terms that very well expreſs'd the juſt Indignation ſhe conceiv'd at the Conduct of St John, Hartcourt, &c. as well as her Reſentment at ſo inſolent a Queſtion. This Tool of the late Treaſurer's has it over and over again, that they kill'd her by their Broils and Brawls. Something which affected her Heart, occaſion'd her Death; the Diſturbance they gave her aſſiſted the Diſtemper, which ſeiz'd her ſo violently, and haſten'd her Death. One has Reaſon enough to conjecture, that the Diſcovery of the Wickedneſs of theſe Men, by whom ſhe had been influenc'd during her four laſt Years, gave her a juſt Notion of their evil and pernicious Counſels, and of the Loſs of that Glory and Felicity which the preceding Years of her Reign had diſtinguiſh'd it from that of all others in the Britiſh Annals.

It is an invidious, dangerous, and difficult Task to enlarge on the Character of this Princeſs, who had doubtleſs many excellent Virtues mix'd with very few Foibles, and thoſe owing to her Eaſineſs of Temper, which gave her too much up to thoſe into whoſe Hands ſhe put herſelf. When they happen'd to be good, as in the Period of her War with France, ſhe was as much belov'd, and even ador'd for her Piety, Conſtancy, her Affection and Zeal for the common Cauſe, her Regard to her Allies, her Love and her Tenderneſs to her Subjects, as ever Prince was. After ſhe was, by ſeveral indirect Steps, led into the Utrecht Peace, and reduc'd to the Neceſſity of doing whatever her new Miniſters would have her to ſupport that Peace, and that againſt the Senſe of all Nations not in league with the French, ſhe ſtill had the Juſtice done her, that no body imputed the Miſgovernment that was complain'd of, to her Majeſty, whoſe Will every body believ'd to be good, but to her Miniſters, whoſe Wills agreed with their Actions, which both publick and private were alike, without Judgment, Honour, or Integrity. It was the Hope of getting rid of theſe Men, by the Acceſſion of a Proteſtant Prince to the Throne, that gave Life to the Stocks in the City of London; for upon News, that her Majeſty had taken ſome Spoonfuls of Broth about one o'Clock a Saturday, Stocks were at a Stand in Exchange-Alley, and ſeem'd rather inclining to fall than to riſe; not out of any Diſreſpect to her Majeſty's Perſon, but out of Jealouſy that the Continuance of thoſe ſhe had then about her in the Adminiſtration, by her Recovery, would be the Ruin of the Conſtitution, Trade, and Kingdom.

While her Majeſty remain'd dozing, and drawing faſter and faſter to her End, the Privy-Council apply'd themſelves diligently to provide for the Safety of the Kingdom; and in their Debates there were ſome Reflections on the late Managers, for having left the Maritime Places, particularly the important Town of Portſmouth, unprovided with Men and Warlike Stores. It was well known, that Sir John Gibſon, the Governor, had ſome time before given them Information of an Armament in France, of Tranſport Ships and Forces that were getting ready there; that it was ſuſpected to be for the Pretender's Uſe; and that in caſe he was attack'd, he ſhould be able to make but a very ill Defence, for want of Men, Stores, and Reparation of the Works; which Advice was neglected as a Trifle, and they were juſtly animadverted upon for it by the Lords of the Council, who immediately diſpatch'd Orders to four Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons, quarter'd in remote Counties, to march to the Villages near London, to keep the Diſaffected in Awe; ſeven of the ten Batallions of Britiſh Forces in Flanders, were order'd for England with all poſſible Speed, and Directions were given for fitting out a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War; by which Precautions, the Publick Tranquillity remain'd undiſturb'd, and no Conſternation appear'd but in the Faces of profeſs'd Jacobites. The Day before the Queen dy'd, the Lords of the Council ſent Orders to the Heralds at Arms, and a Troop of the Life-Guards, to be in a Readineſs to mount, in order to proclaim the Elector of Brunſwick, to whom they caus'd a Letter to be written, July 31, "to acquaint him with the extream Danger the "Queen's Life was in, with the Meaſures they "had taken to ſecure the Crown to him, and "to deſire his Electoral Highneſs to repair "with all convenient Speed to Holland, where "a Britiſh Squadron would attend his Highneſs, "and bring him over to England." This Letter was ſent Expreſs, by James Craggs, Eſq; Jun. who carry'd Orders to the Earl of Strafford, to deſire the States-General to get ready to perform the Guarantee of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, if need ſhould require. A ſtrong Re-inforcement was ſent down to Portſmouth, and Major-General Whetham was order'd to repair to Scotland, to aſſiſt Major-General Wightman, who commanded the Forces in North Britain. The Earl of Berkeley was appointed to command the Fleet, and ſuch due Care was taken to preſerve the Peace of the Kingdom, that the Diſaffected, in deſpair of Succeſs, made no Attempt to diſturb it.

Good Precautions of the Privy-Council.

They prepare for the Proclamation of King George before the Queen was dead.

They ſend Mr Ja. Craggs to Hanover.

Let us now ſee how theſe miſerable Men, whom the late Treaſurer's Advocate calls the Faction, behav'd among themſelves upon his loſing the Staff. One cannot doubt, but the Earl of Oxford himſelf directed and approv'd the Secret Hiſtory of the White-Staff; that no body knew better what paſs'd in their ſecret Cabals than he did; and if his Hiſtorian has bely'd them, it was in concert with him; but probably, it is not all falſe, and the Characters of the Men agree well with the Facts he reports of them.

"It would make up another Volume to give "an Account how ſtruck they (St John, Har-"court, Atterbury, W——, &c.) appear'd at this "ſurprizing Blow. What, give away the Staff? ſaid "they, after they had ſtood looking upon one "another ſpeechleſs and confounded for ſome time, "at a private Aſſembly of all their Confederates, "which was held upon this Occaſion, where "they gave Vent to their Paſſions, and broke "out into all the Extravagancies of Rage and

The Chancellor could not ſay of him, The Queen could never hear him ſpeak, ſuch was the Magic of his Tongue, without being enchanted with his Words. " Give " away the Staff, ſaid the Biſhop, By G—— I " could not have believ'd ſhe durſt have done it! Taken from the Earl of Oxford's Account of it.

Whether do I launch; this is a Scene of ſuch conſequence, fill'd with ſuch a Complication of VILLANY, pray mind what Words the Earl of Oxford, and his Advocate, thought good enough for Bollingbroke, Atterbury, &c. Such a Diſcovery of BLACK Deſigns, that it cannot be enter'd upon here, but muſt be referr'd to another Occaſion. I hope, after this, I ſhall not be accus'd of having ſaid any thing too groſs of theſe Men, whoſe Leader did not think the fouleſt Language too bad for them.

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND,

During the REIGN of King GEORGE I.

CHAP. I.

From his Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne, to the Rebellion in Scotland;

Containing the Space of One Year, One Month.

*A.D.*1714. THE Government of the Kingdom on the Demise of her late Majesty, devolv'd, by the Act of 4° & 5° Annæ, on these seven Persons;

Thomas Tenniſon, Lord Archbiſhop of Cant.
Simon Harcourt, Lord Harcourt, Lord Chancellor.
John Sheffield, Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Lord Preſident.
Charles Talbot, Duke of Shrewsbury, Lord High Treaſurer.
Willliam Legg, Earl of Dartmouth, Lord Privy-Seal.
Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, firſt Lord Commſſioner of the Admiralty.
Sir Thomas Parker, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench.

Great Officers Regents by Act of Parliament.

The Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion were the more in Pain for it's Security, conſidering the Regency was to come into the Hands of the great Officers of State, on the Death of the Queen; and theſe Officers being likely to be ſuch as had given into the Meaſures of the late wicked Miniſters, who had ſo many Years ſhewn their ill Will to the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover; the Well-affected were full of Anxiety for the Conſequences of a Truſt, of which thoſe that were likely to be poſſeſs'd of it, were ſo little worthy; but the Steps that were taken immediately before, and after the Queen dy'd, for ſecuring the Elector of Brunſwick's peaceable Poſſeſſion, very much leſſen'd the Fears of the ſound Part of the Nation; and indeed they were ſoon entirely eaſy when they were inform'd, that his Electoral Highneſs, as he was impower'd by the beforemention'd Act of Parliament, had, by a proper Inſtrument depoſited in the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, and Monſieur Creyenberg, Reſident of Brunſwick, nominated other Lords to be added to the Number of the Regents. It was remarkable, that his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, almoſt worn out with Age and Infirmities, no ſooner heard of her Majeſty's Demiſe, than he repair'd to Court, where he had not been of late, to produce his Inſtrument, and aſſiſt in the procuring it to have it's Effect; and indeed the Preſence of his Grace, and the Marks he gave of his Zeal and Affection for his Electoral Highneſs's Perſon and Intereſt was very exemplary, and of wonderful Advantage to the Cauſe he eſpous'd. The Regents nominated by the Elector, in a Liſt himſelf wrote, were the

A.D.1714.

What Notion can we have of the Honour, Conſcience, or Honeſty of thoſe of this Liſt, who having in this publick voluntary Manner aſſerted his Majeſty King George to be their only rightful, and awful Liege-Lord, and Soveraign, did, in leſs than a Year, enter into treaſonable Plots to deprive him of his Right, and break out into open Rebellion againſt him and the Conſtitution, againſt the Religion, Laws, and Liberties of their Country. There is no need of marking them out from the reſt of the Liſt, we have ſeen their Names among thoſe of the late Miniſters, and ſhall ſee them again in Acts of Attainder, Proclamations, and Commitments for High Treaſon, yet have ſome of them, ſtill living, by the Clemency of the Government they would have deſtroy'd, the Face to ſet up for Patriots, and as ſuch, to endeavour ſtill to impoſe themſelves on factious and weak Minds, as Guardians of the Country Intereſt.

Some of 'em prove Traitors.

His Majeſty King George was proclaim'd, with the uſual Solemnity, in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, as ſoon as it was poſſible to get the Heralds, and others who were to attend the Ceremony, in Readineſs. Great Numbers of the Nobility and Gentry aſſiſted at the Proclamation. The Streets were crowded with vaſt Multitudes of People, and no Diſorder was committed, at leaſt none worſe than the hiſſing and inſulting the Earl of Oxford and the Viſcount Bolingbroke; who had great Reaſon to rejoice, that the People's Reſentment ſtopp'd there. The ſame Day, the Lords Regents made an Order for making Alterations in the Common Prayer; inſtead of Lady Queen Anne, was to be read, Lord King George; inſtead of Her, His; inſtead of the Elector of Brunſwick, his Royal Highneſs the Prince. They alſo appointed the Earl of Dorſet to carry the King the News of his Inauguration, and to attend his Majeſty in his Journey to England. The Earl of Northampton, Conſtable of the Tower, proclaim'd his Majeſty King George in the uſual Places of the Hamlets; and the like Proclamation was made all over England by the proper Officers, the People every where expreſſing their

The Earl of Ilay, Lord-Juſtice-General of North-Britain, then at Edinburgh, having receiv'd a Letter from the Lords Regents, Auguſt the 4th, with Notification of the Queen's Death, and Orders to proclaim the King, went, attended by her late Majeſty's Servants, to the Lodgings of the Duke of Montroſe, one of the Lords of the Regency; with whom they found the Scoth Lords proclaim the King. General Wightman, and many Perſons of Diſtinction, who, together with the Magiſtrates of Edinburgh, and the Officers of State, caus'd his Majeſty to be proclaim'd in that City with extraordinary Pomp and Ceremony; in which the Citizens join'd with the greater Marks of Affection and Joy, for that they believ'd themſelves to be thereby deliver'd from the Dangers the late Managers had brought them into, by the Encouragement they gave the Enemies to the Proteſtant Religion and Liberty in North Britain.

King George proclaimed in Ireland. On the 6th of Auguſt, the Lord-Juſtices of Ireland, Thomas Archbiſhop of Armagh, and Sir Conſtantine Phipps, receiv'd by Expreſs a Letter from the Lords of the Privy-Council in England, with an Account of her Majeſty's Death, and Directions for proclaiming the King at Dublin; which was accordingly done the ſame Day: The Lords-Juſtices, the Privy-Council, and all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, then in that City, aſſiſted by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, proclaim'd his Majeſty at the uſual Places; and Directions were ſent for the like Proclamation to be made throughout the Kingdom. The Lords-Juſtices and Council alſo iſſued a Proclamation, for diſarming Papiſts, and ſeizing their Horſes. The Earl of Angleſey arriv'd in Ireland but a few Days before the Expreſs, which brought News of the Queen's Death, and receiving at the ſame time an Account, that he was appointed one of the Lords-Juſtices of Great-Britain, he ſet out immediately for England; and a few Days after his Return to London, a Perſon was ſo indiſcreet as to publiſh a Letter, with this Paragraph in it;

A ſcandalous Letter about the Earl of An—'s Journeyto Ireland. You cannot be ignorant of a late Journey of a No-Peer to IRELAND, being diſpatch'd thither by the new modell'd Junto of the laſt Miniſtry, part of the Deſign of which, we are aſſur'd was, to new model the Forces there, and particularly, to break no leſs than 70 of the honeſt Officers of the Army, and fill up their Places with the Tools and Creatures of Con. Phipps, and ſuch a Rabble of Cut-Throats as were fit for the Work that they had for them to do.

The Publiſher of this Letter was taken up for it, but it had no other Conſequence, it being difficult to prove, who was intended by the No-Peer; beſides, it was generally believ'd, that a Colonel of the Army, the Viſcount Bolingbroke's Creature, was, about this Time, ſent to Ireland with the Orders for modelling the Forces there. That the Army in both England and Ireland was to be modell'd, is moſt certain. Major-General Davenport ſhew'd myſelf, and others, the next Day after the Queen dy'd, a Liſt of 60 or 70 Officers, moſt of them of the Guards, that were to be caſhier'd, with the Names of thoſe that were to have their Commiſſions, ſome of whom were Iriſh Papiſts. *A.D.*1714.

The Contriver of this modelling Project was, (to uſe the Words of the Annaliſt) chiefly the V—t B——ke. He had not then been attainted for High Treaſon, or deſerv'd the Panegyrics of his hireling Flatterers in Verſe and Proſe, for his Dexterity in eſcaping the Puniſhment the Laws have prepar'd for Traitors, and getting himſelf again into a Condition of doing more Miſchief. The Annaliſt proceeds; "The Army was to be "new modell'd in ſuch a manner, that all the "Troops in Great Britain might be blindly de-"voted to the Miniſtry. One Branch of this "Scheme was, to break Nine of the Battallions "in Ireland; entirely to lay aſide 72 Officers "that were thought unproper Inſtruments for the "Deſigns in hand; and to raiſe 15 other Bat-"tallions, that ſhould be ſure to obey all Com-"mands; one of which was ſaid to be deſign'd "for a Popiſh Lord."

Another Branch of this Scheme was, to remove ſuch Officers of the Guards as were eminently well affected to the moſt Serene Houſe of Hanover, particularly,

The Jacobites were ſo confounded to ſee all their late Hopes blaſted at once, that they had not Courage enough to give the leaſt Diſturbance to the proclaiming the King, except a very fooliſh Attempt at Oxford; where the Mayor receiv'd a Letter, brought by a Perſon in a Batchelor's Gown, requiring him to proclaim the Pretender, with theſe lying, blaſphemous Expreſſions, This is to warn you, if you ſhould receive an Order to proclaim HANOVER, not to comply with it, for the Hand of God is now at work to ſet Things upon a right Foot, and in a few Days you will ſee wonderful Changes; which if you are wiſe enough to foreſee, you will obtain Grace and Favour from the Hands of his Sacred Majeſty King James, &c. The Mayor communicated this Letter to the Vice-Chancellor, and both of them tranſmitted Copies of it to Mr William Bromley, then one of the Secretaries of State, and Repreſentative for the Univerſity of Oxford, who ſent them Letters of Thanks. The Vice-Chancellor alſo offer'd a Reward of 100 l. to the Diſcoverer of the Author or Authors of that Letter; and had the Behaviour of Treaſonable Letter ſent to the Mayor of Oxford.

Duke of Marlborough's Return to England. Mention has been made of the Duke of Marlborough's intended Return to England, and his Detention at Oſtend; from whence he ſail'd at the latter End of July; and, after a ſtormy Paſſage, arriv'd at Dover, with his Ducheſs, on the Firſt of Auguſt. As his Grace cou'd know nothing of the Queen's Death, ſo the Cenſures that were paſs'd upon his Conduct, by his and the Nations Enemies, as if it were a ſort of Inſult on her late Majeſty, were equally falſe and abſurd. He was receiv'd by the Mayor and Jurats of Dover, in their Formalities, with the univerſal Acclamations of the People, and with a Diſcharge of a great Number of Guns from the Plat-form, but none from the Caſtle. His Grace lay that Night at Sir Robert Furneſe's; and on Wedneſday, the 4th of Auguſt, at the Deſire of ſeveral Noblemen and eminent Citizens, the Duke conſented to make a kind of publick Entry. Indeed it was in a manner forc'd upon him, for Sir Charles Cox, Member of Parliament for Southwark, with about 200 ſubſtantial Inhabitants, were prepar'd to meet his Grace on Horſeback, and reſolv'd to attend him thro' their Borough; which being communicated to others, the Number was ſoon increas'd, the Duke's noble Relations and Friends going in ſeveral Coaches to meet him, the whole Company made a gallant Attendance and Appearance, without the formal Preparations for an Entry, which the Duke always avoided, when he yearly brought home freſh Laurels from the Confederate War. The People every where crouded to ſee him, and made joyful loud Acclamations of, Long live King George, Long live the Duke of Marlborough. In the mean time, the Lords of the Regency apply'd themſelves with equal Diligence, Care, and Succeſs to the Diſcharge of their important Truſt. They choſe Joſeph Addiſon, Eſq; who had lately acquir'd immortal Fame by his excellent Tragedy of Cato, to be their Secretary, and ſent Orders to the Poſtmaſter, to ſend to their Secretary all the Letters directed to the Secretaries of State; which reduc'd the haughty Bolingbroke to the Condition of waiting, with a Bag in his Hand, at the Door of the Regencies Room, and receiving Commands from thoſe, whom, a few Days before, he expected to have commanded.

The Parliament meets. The Parliament met at Weſtminſter in the Afternoon of the very Day the Queen dy'd, purſuant to the Act that regulated the Succeſſion. Mr Bromley, Secretary of State, mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, to adjourn to the Wedneſday, and was ſeconded by a Member who had been a Confident of the late Miniſtry. Sir Richard Onſlow, in his Anſwer to them, repreſented, That Time was too precious to trifle away the leaſt Part of it at that nice Juncture; and mov'd, that the Houſe ſhould adjourn to the next Day; which was carry'd: And the Members now only qualify'd themſelves by taking the Oaths, making and ſubſcribing the Declaration, and ſubſcribing the Oath of Abjuration. On the 5th of Auguſt, the Lords-Juſtices came to the Houſe of Peers, and ſent a Meſſage to the Commons by the Uſher of the Black Rod, requiring their Attendance. The Commons went up accordingly to the Houſe of Lords, and the Lord Chancellor, in the Name of his Brethren, the Lords-Juſtices, made a Speech to both Houſes; the Subſtance of which was, (having ſpoken of the Demiſe of her late Majeſty);

Ld Chancellor's Speech to both Houſes.

We hope, that nothing has been omitted which might contribute to the Safety of theſe Realms, and the Preſervation of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties in this great Conjuncture. As theſe invaluable Bleſſings have been ſecur'd to us by thoſe Acts of Parliament which have ſettled the Succeſſion of theſe Kingdoms in the moſt Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, we have regulated our Proceedings, by thoſe Rules, which are therein preſcrib'd. Then ſpeaking of the Inſtruments in which the Regency was nominated, he added; Thoſe, who either by their Offices, or by virtue of theſe Inſtruments, had the Honour of being appointed Lords-Juſtices, did, in Conjunction with the Council, immediately proceed to the proclaiming our lawful and rightful Sovereign King George, taking, at the ſame time, the neceſſary Care to preſerve the publick Peace. In Purſuance of the Acts before-mention'd, this Parliament is now aſſembled, and we are perſuaded, you all bring with you ſo hearty a Diſpoſition for his Majeſty's Service, and the Publick Good, that we cannot doubt of your Aſſiſtance in every Thing which may promote theſe great Ends. Then their Excellencies recommended to them to make Proviſion to ſupport the Honour of the Crown, and the eſtabliſhing and advancing Engliſh Credit. The Cloſe was, We forbear to lay before you any thing that does not require your immediate Conſideration, not having receiv'd his Majeſty's Pleaſure. We ſhall only exhort you, with the greateſt Earneſtneſs, to a perfect Unanimity, and a firm Adherence to our Sovereign's Intereſt, as being the only Means to continue among us our perfect happy Tranquillity. A.D.1714.

The Commons reſolve on an Addreſs to the King. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That an humble "Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to condole "with his Majeſty upon the ſad Occaſion of "the Death of our late moſt gracious Soveraign, "to congratulate his Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to "the Throne, and to aſſure his Majeſty of the "utmoſt Aſſiſtance of this Houſe to ſupport his "Majeſty's undoubted Right to the Imperial "Crowns of theſe Realms, againſt the Pretender, "and all other Perſons whatſoever; and alſo to "expreſs the impatient Deſire of his faithful Com-"mons for his Majeſty's ſafe Arrival and Pre-"ſence in Great-Britain, and the unanimous Re-"ſolution of this Houſe to maintain the Publick "Credit, and effectually make good all Funds "which have been granted by Parliament, for "the Security of any Sums of Money which "have been or ſhall be advanc'd for the Publick "Service, and that they will uſe their utmoſt "Endeavours by all other Means to make his "Majeſty's Reign happy and glorious."

The ſame Day the Houſe of Peers agreed upon the following Addreſs.

Moſt Gracious Soveraign,

Addreſs of the Lords to the King. WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, tho' deeply ſenſible of the great Loſs theſe Nations ſuſtained by the Demiſe of her late Majeſty, of bleſſed Memory, think it our Duty at the ſame time, with thankful Hearts to Almighty God, to congratulate your Majeſty upon your happy and peaceable Acceſſion to the Throne; and we do, with the utmoſt Loyalty and Duty, aſſure your Majeſty of our zealous and firm Reſolutions to ſupport your undoubtedly rightful and lawful Title to the Crown, againſt all Enemies and Pretenders whatſoever. Our Zeal and Affection for your Majeſty's Service, engage us to exert ourſelves with all Vigour and Unanimity for ſecuring the Publick Safety, and we will always, to the utmoſt of our Power, maintain

A.D.1714. tain the Honour and Dignity of your Crown. And we do, with faithful Hearts, beſeech your Majeſty, as ſoon as poſſible, to give us your Royal Preſence, which we are perſuaded will be attended with all other Bleſſings to your Kingdoms.

Theſe Addreſſes very much augmented the Confuſion and Deſpair of the Pretender's Friends, and the Satisfaction and Joy of the Friends to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The Lords-Juſtices having tranſmitted the Lords Addreſs to the King, his Majeſty was pleas'd to return this moſt gracious Anſwer.

GEORGE R.

The K.'s Anſwer to the Lords Addreſs.

I TAKE this firſt Opportunity to return you my hearty Thanks for your Addreſs, and the Aſſurances you have given me therein.

The Zeal and Unanimity you have ſhewn upon my Acceſſion to the Crown, are great Encouragements to me, and I ſhall always eſteem the Continuance of them as one of the greateſt Bleſſings of my Reign.

No one can be more truly ſenſible than I am of the Loſs ſuſtain'd by the Death of the late Queen, whoſe extraordinary Piety and Virtues, ſo much endear'd her to her People, and for whoſe Memory I ſhall always have a particular Regard.

My beſt Endeavours ſhall never be wanting to repair this Loſs to the Nation. I will make it my conſtant Care to preſerve your Religion, Laws, and Liberties inviolable, and to advance the Honour and Proſperity of my Kingdoms.

I am haſtening to you, according to your Deſire, ſo affectionately expreſs'd in your Addreſs.

On the 6th of Auguſt, Secretary Bromley, reported the Addreſs to his Majeſty, which the Committee had drawn up; and being read, was unanimouſly agreed to by the Houſe, as follows.

Moſt Gracious Soveraign,

The Commons Addreſs.

WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Commons of Great-Britain, in Parliament aſſembled, having a juſt Senſe of the great Loſs the Nation has ſuſtain'd by the Death of our late Soveraign Lady Queen ANNE, of Bleſſed Memory, humbly crave Leave to condole with your Majeſty on this ſad Occaſion.

It would but aggravate our Sorrow particularly, to enumerate the Virtues of that pious and moſt excellent Princeſs; The Duty we owe to your Majeſty, and to our Country, oblige us to moderate our Grief, and heartily to congratulate your Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne; whoſe Princely Virtues give us a certain Proſpect of future Happineſs in the Security of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and engage us to aſſure your Majeſty, that we will, to our Utmoſt ſupport your undoubted Right to the Imperial Crown of this Realm againſt the Pretender and all other Perſons whatſoever.

Your Faithful Commons cannot but expreſs their impatient Deſire for your Majeſty's ſafe Arrival and Preſence in Great-Britain.

In the mean time, we humbly lay before your Majeſty the unanimous Reſolution of this Houſe, to maintain the Publick Credit of the Nation, and effectually to make good all Funds which have been granted by Parliament for the Security of any Money which has been, or ſhall be advanc'd for the Publick Service, and to endeavour by every thing in our Power to make your Majeſty's Reign happy and glorious.

Which Addreſs being tranſmitted to the King, they receiv'd his Majeſty's Anſwer the 25th of Auguſt, as is here inſerted.

A.D.1714.

GEORGE R.

The K.'s Anſwer.

YOUR Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs is very acceptable to me. The Unanimity and Affection my Commons have ſhewn upon my Acceſſion to the Crown, are moſt agreeable Inſtances and Pledges of their Fidelity to me. I have had a juſt Senſe of your inexpreſſible Loſs, by the Death of your late Soveraign. You may be aſſur'd of my conſtant Endeavours to ſecure to you the full Enjoyment of your Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and that it will be always my Aim to make you an happy and flouriſhing People; to which your Reſolution to maintain the Publick Credit of the Nation will greatly contribute. I am haſtening to you according to your earneſt Deſire and the juſt Expectations of my People.

Mr Speaker having read this Anſwer to the Houſe, it was reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, That the humble Thanks of this Houſe be return'd to his Majeſty, for his moſt gracious Meſſage in Anſwer to their Addreſs: And order'd, That the ſaid Return of Thanks to his Majeſty, be preſented to the Lords-Juſtices, with the Deſire of this Houſe, that they will tranſmit the ſame to his Majeſty.

Dr Ratcliff refuſes to attend the Queen.

Dr Ratcliff, who was all his Life-time a Stickler for the Principles and Politicks of the Oxford Decree, having been piqu'd on a certain Occaſion againſt the late Queen, when Princeſs of Denmark, carry'd his Reſentment ſo far, that when the Duke of Ormond ſent for him, to attend her Majeſty, in her laſt Sickneſs, he refus'd, or avoided going: An Act of Inhumanity, which deſerv'd the ſevereſt Cenſure from honeſt Minds, but does not ſeem to be within the Cognizance of the Houſe of Commons, though he was a Member. However, this Piece of ill Nature, and ill Manners, was ſo highly reſented by all thoſe whoſe Schemes her late Majeſty's Death left unfiniſh'd, that Sir John Packington complain'd againſt the Doctor to the Houſe, Auguſt the 5th, but it came to nothing. Secretary Bromley mov'd the ſame Day for the Addreſs of Condolence and Congratulation, and dwelt ſo very much on the Loſs the Nation had ſuſtain'd by the Death of the Queen, that it ſeem'd to overbalance the Senſe he had of our Happineſs in his Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne. Mr Robert Walpole mov'd for ſomething more ſubſtantial, to give the King Aſſurances of their making good all Parliamentary Funds, which was the moſt neceſſary Part of the Inſtructions for the Committee: And Thomas Onſlow, Eſq; now Lord Onſlow, obſerv'd very judiciouſly, That the Streſs of the Addreſs ought not to lie upon Condoling, but upon Congratulating, and giving the King Aſſurances of their maintaining both his Majeſty's undoubted Title to the Crown and Publick Credit. A Motion was made, to ſend the Addreſs to his Majeſty by two of their Members, but it dropt, and it was reſolv'd, That the Lords-Juſtices ſhould be deſir'd to tranſmit it to him.

Mr Walpole's Motion for the making good all Funds.

Two Days after, there was a ſmart Debate about the Choice of a Chairman for the Grand Committee of the Subſidy. The Members for the French Commerce Bill, and other ſuch good Bills, inſiſted on the placing Sir William Wyndham in the Chair, which had no promiſing Look for the Intereſt of the new Government; but Robert Walpole, Eſq; who was beſt acquainted with the Men and Things in Queſtion, repreſented, That Mr Conyers had for many Years ſo well diſcharg'd that Office, that it was inconſiſtent with Gratitude, good Manners and Prudence to chooſe another. Upon which Mr Conyers was plac'd in the Chair.

A.D. 1714. Chair. Some of the Members juſt mention'd, to make Amends for their late diſreſpectful and dangerous Conduct, with reſpect to the moſt Serene Houſe of Hanover, propos'd the giving the King a Million Sterling for the Civil Liſt; by which piece of cajoling, they thought two Ends might be gain'd; the one, as before, to attone for their late Obſequiouſneſs in joining with Lord Bolingbroke in the Slur put on the Electoral Family, and a Diſregard of their Intereſts; the other, to lay a Foundation for Clamour againſt the Profuſion of the King's Miniſters in accepting of ſo exorbitant a Supply; but the King's beſt Friends perceiv'd a Snake in the Graſs, and contented themſelves with the more juſt and reaſonable Propoſal for the ſame Sum as had been granted for the ſame Uſe to her late Majeſty; for which an Act was order'd to be brought in, and it paſs'd with great Unanimity and Diſpatch. On the 13th of Auguſt, Horatio Walpole, Eſq; mov'd, That the Committee for that Act ſhould have Power to receive two Clauſes; one for the Payment of the Arrears due to the Hanover Troops in Engliſh Pay, being 65,000 l. the other for 100,000 l. to be paid by the Treaſury to any one that ſhould apprehend the Pretender, if he ſhould land, or attempt to land in any of his Majeſty's Dominions. Sir William Wyndham ſeconded the firſt Clauſe, the deferring of which ſo long, was ſuch a flagrant Act of Injuſtice, that thoſe who were the Occaſion of it might well be aſham'd. Mr Shippen own'd frankly, he had oppos'd that Payment in the late Reign, but that he was for it now. Charles Aldworth, Eſq; ſeem'd, in what he ſaid, to reflect on the two Members above-mention'd. For my part, I was formerly againſt this Payment, becauſe I had been given to underſtand in this very Houſe, that thoſe Troops were Deſerters; but ſince I have been told they were hired to fight, and ſerv'd well as long as there was fighting; and if when they came in ſight of the Enemy, they who had hired them, would not ſuffer them to fight. Referring to the late Queen's Orders to the Duke of Ormond, I do not ſee the Reaſon why they ſhould be call'd Deſerters. As to the 100,000 l. Clauſe for ſeizing the Pretender, Mr C——n, it is a Reproach to the Virtue of a Nation that Truth dares not appear among them bare-fac'd, ſpoke to this Purpoſe, Aug. 14. I was not the Day before in the Houſe, when that Clauſe was mov'd; but if I had been preſent, I would have oppos'd it, becauſe, in my Opinion, the Proteſtant Succeſſion is no longer in Danger, ſince his Majeſty's peaceable Acceſſion to the Throne. Fine Reaſoning! If the Proteſtant Succeſſion was not in Danger, the Pretender would be in no Danger by this Bill. He defy'd all the Houſe to prove the contrary. Two of them, Knights of two Shires, and one of them mention'd but a few Lines above, were, not many Months after, in Hold for High-Treaſon. He was ſeconded by Mr S----n; but William Pultney, Eſq; and after him the Lord Lumley, prov'd, with great Force of Reaſon and Expreſſion, That the Proteſtant Succeſſion was, and would be in Danger as long as there was a Popiſh Pretender, who had many Friends both at Home and Abroad. That the late Queen was ſenſible of that Danger, when ſhe iſſued out her Proclamation againſt him; and that the Caſe was not alter'd by her Majeſty's Demiſe.

Tories propoſe a Million for the Civil Liſt

Mr Aldworth's Speech, reflecting on the Orders ſent to the Duke of Ormond.

William Pultney, Eſq; for 100000 l. to take the Pretender.

The Parliament having before the Queen's Death paſs'd an Act for a 1,400,000 l. Lottery, Publick Credit was in the late Treaſurer's Time ſo low, that not above 60 or 70000 l. was ſubſcrib'd to it. This ſinking Credit was doubtleſs occaſion'd by the Diffidence which Money'd-Men had of the Sincerity of the late Miniſters in their Pretences of Adherence to the Hanover Succeſſion. The Lords of the Regency and Privy-Council, to recover languiſhing, if not dying, Credit, thought of this Remedy in the Caſe of the Lottery, and ſubſcrib'd great Sums themſelves, which was ſuch an Encouragement to others to follow their Example, that above 700,000 l. was ſubſcrib'd in two Days; and the Parliament making afterwards a ſmall Addition to the Intereſt for the blank Tickets, 1 per Cent. only, the Remainder was ſubſcrib'd in a few Days more.

Credit low in the late Treaſurer's Time.

A.D. 1714.

On the 13th of Auguſt, Mr Craggs return'd from Hanover, and brought Letters from the King to the Lords-Juſtices; who went the ſame Day to the Houſe of Lords, and the Lord-Chancellor, in their Name, made the following Speech to both Houſes.

A Letter from the King.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

IT is with great Satisfaction we can now tell you, that we have this Morning receiv'd a Letter from the King, wherein his Majeſty is graciouſly pleas'd to acquaint us, That his Majeſty is haſtening hither, to imploy his utmoſt Care for putting theſe Kingdoms into a happy and flouriſhing Condition.

He has commanded us in the mean time, to continue our Care of every Thing that may conduce to the Peace and Safety of his Dominions. And we are aſſur'd, That if this had requir'd his more immediate Preſence, he would, without the leaſt Delay, have repair'd hither, for the Support of ſo Dutiful and Faithful Subjects: For his Majeſty does very particularly expreſs his great Satisfaction in the Loyalty and Affection which his People have univerſally ſhewn upon his Majeſty's Acceſſion.

Ld Cancellor's Speech to both Houſes.

His Lordſhip then recommended to them, the further Encouragement of Adventurers in the State-Lottery. And the Commons being return'd to the Houſe, and the Speaker having made a Report of the Lords-Juſtices Speech, it was reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to return the humble Thanks of this Houſe for the Satisfaction his Majeſty hath been pleas'd to expreſs in the Loyalty and Affection which his Subjects have univerſally ſhewn upon his Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, and for his gracious Intentions of making his People ſpeedily happy with his Royal Preſence; and alſo to aſſure his Majeſty of the Continuance of the ſame Zeal and Affection to his Majeſty upon all Occaſions; and that this Houſe will contribute their utmoſt Endeavours for preſerving the Publick Peace until his Majeſty ſhall arrive.

The Commons Addreſs of Thanks.

This Addreſs of Thanks, and that of the Lords, were tranſmitted to his Majeſty by the Lords-Juſtices. When their Excellencies came to the Houſe of Peers to paſs the ſeveral Bills that were ready for the Royal Aſſent. The Speaker of the Houſe of Commons made an eloquent Speech upon preſenting the Civil Liſt and Lottery Bills. I ſhall only inſert a Paſſage of it.

The Speaker's Speech on preſenting the Civil Liſt Bill.

Whatſoever is ſuperfluous in that Proviſion, and more than the ordinary Services of his Majeſty ſhall require, will but enable him to exert his higheſt and moſt valuable Prerogative of doing good.

It would have been well if Gentlemen had kept this Saying in their Memory: It might have given a Check to the Envy or Ill-nature of thoſe that have ſince blacken'd this doing of good, with the odious Names of Penſions and Profuſion. The Buſineſs of this Seſſion being finiſh'd, the Lords-Juſtices prorogu'd the Parliament, Aug. 25, to the 3d of September.

A.D.1714.

The French Envoy afraid of Insults.

It is no Wonder that Monsieur d' Ibberville, the French Minister, was struck with a Panick upon the Queen's Death. The honest Part of the People were so justly disgusted with the Measures of Lord Bolingbroke, and the French Faction in England, that now he had lost their Protection, he had Reason to fear he might not be safe from Insults; accordingly he sent to the Duke of Ormond for a Guard, who having communicated it to the Lords-Justices, some Train'd-Bands were order'd to secure his House, which was not in so much Danger as he apprehended, for all Things were quiet, and no Outrage offer'd to any Body.

Guarded by the Train'd-Bands.

The French King owns King George.

One cannot doubt but the French King was enough sensible of the Turn which the Affairs of Great Britain would take to his Disadvantage, by the Demise of the late Queen; but he thought fit to temporize, as his Friends did in England, and to affect a chearful Compliance with the Acts of Settlement by his Declaration to the Lord Peterborough, then in France, and the Conduct of his Envoy at London. He told the Earl of Peterborough, That he would inviolably maintain the Treaties of Peace concluded at Utrecht, particularly with relation to the Settlement of the British Crown in the House of Hanover. Monsieur d' Ibberville, his Envoy, made the same Declaration to the Lords of the Regency, who receiv'd a Letter from the French King himself, wherein, among other Things, he said, "That the Elector of Brunswick "having some Time before the Death of the "Queen signify'd to him, that whenever his "Succession to the Crown of Great Britain "should take Place, he would cultivate a Friend-"ship with his most Christian Majesty. He, on "his Part, assur'd the Lords-Justices, he would "do all that lay in his Power to maintain a good "Intelligence and Amity between the two "Crowns." Monsieur Chateanueuf, the French Ambassador at the Hague, made the Earl of Strafford the first Complement of Condolence upon the Death of the late Queen, and of Congratulation upon his present Majesty's Accession to the Throne. But the Court of France contented themselves with airy Forms; and when any thing substantial was propos'd to them from Great-Britain, they were equally cold and cautious. To the Instances of the Lords-Justices by Mr Prior, the English Minister at Paris, the French King return'd an Answer, which shew'd, he had recover'd himself from the Fright his Defeats and Disgraces at Blenheim, Turin, Ramelies, &c. had thrown him into; and could again make use of the Language, with which he treated Europe, at the Treaties of Cologne and Nimeguen; I have made good my Engagements, in behalf of the Catalans; their Obstinacy is the Occasion of all the Misfortunes that may befal them, and my GLORY, speak, O Blenheim, &c. will not suffer me to recal my Troops from before Barcelona. The Catalans had their Deputies at London; one of whom, the Marquis de Almazq, procur'd an Order from their Excellencies the Lords-Justices to Admiral Wishart, not to molest the Inhabitants of Barcelona, nor hinder any Relief to be brought to them by Sea; in which he had been very officious, in the Time of the late Ministry.

The Lords of the Regency did not so entirely confide in the most Christian King's sincere Declaration to give no manner of Disturbance to the Protestant Succeffior, that they omitted taking the necessary Measures to render any Disturbance ineffectual. They order'd a Draught of 500 Out-Pensioners from Chelsey, under the Command of Colonel Jones, to reinforce Colonel Pocock at Portsmouth; and upon the landing of the seven British Batallions from Ostend in England, a Battallion of the Earl of Orkney's Royal Regiment of Fusileers was sent thither, which made a Strength sufficient for the Defence of that important Place. A.D.1714.

On the 17th of August, the Earl of Berkley, Commander in Chief of the Squadron of Men of War and Yachts, appointed to attend the King and Prince Royal, arriv'd on the Coast of Holland. It was said, his Lordship receiv'd this Command with such an Overflow of Pleasure, as was very visible and remarkable. Monsieur Clingrass, his Britannick Majesty's Resident at the Hague, immediately dispatch'd an Express to the King, to acquaint him with it. On the 24th of August the Queen's Body was interr'd in Westminster Abbey, with all the Decency and Pomp consistent with a private Burial.

Upon Advice from Spain, that King Philip was about to extort a large Donative from the British, and other Merchants, contrary to the Treaties in Force, the general Resentment against Lord Bolingbroke, and those the Annalist calls, the Spanish Treaty-Mongers, was encreas'd to a Degree, that made it very terrible to them; but the vigorous Proceedings of the Lords of the Regency, gave such a Check to the Insolence of the Spaniards, that the Orders for the Donative were recall'd.

Abbot Gualtier leaves the Kingdom.

The Abbot Gualtier staid in England till the latter End of the Month, and then seeing to what a State of Impotence the Viscount Bolingbroke, and other Enemies to the King and Kingdom, were in, he despair'd of doing the Pretender any Service, and set out for France. On the 28th of the Month, Mr Murray arriv'd Express from Hanover, with Advice, that his Majesty had put off his Departure for some Days. He brought several Orders for the Lords-Justices, and Council, particularly, for preparing a Patent for creating the Prince Royal Prince of Wales, and for removing Viscount Bolingbroke from his Office of Secretary of State; which was done, August 31, with due Marks of Displeasure. Three of the Lords-Regents, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Duke of Somerset, and the Lord Cowper, took the Seals from him, and lock'd, and seal'd up all the Doors of his Office. An Incident his Popish Poet has not thought fit to remember among the many glorious Circumstances of his heroic Life and Character.

Lord Bolingbroke turn'd out.

The Union between England and Holland was so close and necessary for their mutual Preservation, that it was one of the first Cares of the Lords-Regents, to notify the late Queen's Death, and his Majesty's peaceable and happy Accession to the Throne, to the States-General; which was done the 4th of August, by the Earl of Strafford, the British Ambassador in Holland, who made a Speech on that Occasion, which little agreed with the Tenor of his Lordship's Speeches at Utrecht and elsewhere, while he was in Dependance on the late Ministers. He gave them to understand, that, by the Act of Succession, all Officers were to continue in Employment six Months after the Demise of the Queen, unless the Successor otherwise dispos'd of the Offices, and that consequently he remain'd still Ambassador of the Crown of Great-Britain; in which Ambassy he was continu'd by Letters from his Majesty before he left Hanover; no Secret Committee having yet sate to inquire into that Minister's Conduct at Utrecht and the Army in Flanders, which was equally mysterious and suspicious. As soon as Monsieur Clingrass, Resident of Hanover, had an Account of her late Majesty's Lord Strafford's Speech to the States.

A.D.1714. Death, which was the Day before the Earl of Strafford's formal Notification, he preſented a Memorial to the States-General, with a Letter from King George, which was lodg'd in his Hands, to be in Readineſs, if there ſhould be Occaſion, requiring their Performance of the Guaranty of his Succeſſion to the Crown of Great-Britain. The States-General aſſembled extraordinarily upon it the ſame Day, and came to a Reſolution to perform the ſaid Guaranty; and the next Day, a Letter conformable to it was deliver'd to the Hanover Reſident, to be tranſmitted to his Majeſty King George.

The K.'s Letter to the States about the Guaranty.

The States agree to it, and anſwer the Letter.

The Declaration of the Lords-Regents, in Favour of Portugal, very much facilitated the Concluſion of the Treaty between that Crown and Spain, which had puzzled our late Peace-makers. Their Excellencies order'd Information to be given Monſieur de Brociado, the Portuguſe Envoy at London, That Spain ſhould be oblig'd to conclude a Peace immediately with the Crown of Portugal; or that, in caſe of Refuſal, his Portugueſe Majeſty might depend on being aſſiſted by the Crown of Great-Britain, conformable to the Treaty of Defenſive Alliance between thoſe two Crowns. The States-General caus'd a like Declaration to be made to the Portugueſe Miniſter in Holland; and there was little Difficulty after this in negotiating the Treaty between Spain and Portugal. The Earl of Strafford having receiv'd a Letter from the King, to return the States-General his Majeſty's Thanks for their Reſolution about the Guaranty, the Earl having Audience of their High-Mightineſſes the 19th of Auguſt, made a ſuitable Speech to them, and among other Things ſaid,

Your High-Mightineſſes have thereby engag'd the Friendſhip of a King, which cannot but be very advantageous to you, as well in regard to the Neighbourhood and Powerfulneſs of his Kingdoms and States, as with reſpect to his Majeſty's perſonal Merit, who, for his many excellent Qualities, will be eſteem'd, and courted by all Europe, as well as lov'd and reſpected by his own Subjects. And as he is known to be a Prince, who is a religious Obſerver of his Word, your High-Mightineſſes may be aſſur'd, that in gaining his Friendſhip, you ſecure to yourſelves a ſafe and laſting Support.

We have mention'd Mr Craggs's Journey to Hanover before the Queen was dead, and muſt add, that he arriv'd there the Thurſday after, Aug. 5. at ſeven o'Clock in the Morning, and went directly to Herenhauſen with the Privy-Council's Letter to his Majeſty. The ſame Night, three other Expreſſes arriv'd at Hanover; two to the King, and one to the Earl of Clarendon, the late Queen's Envoy at that Court, with the News of the Queen's Death; which the Earl communicated to his Majeſty at 2 o'Clock in the Morning. This was confirm'd, four Hours after, by the Arrival of Monſieur Godike, Secretary to the Baron de Bothmar, with the further Account of his Majeſty's being proclaim'd King of Great-Britain, in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, without the leaſt Shew of Oppoſition. His Majeſty receiv'd this News, ſo much to his Glory and Advantage, with that Serenity of Countenance, and Compoſure of Mind, which are peculiar to Heroes.

TeDeum ſung at Hanover. He caus'd Te Deum to be ſung the Sunday following, Auguſt the 8th, in all the Churches of his Electorate, to return the Almighty ſolemn Thanks for having vouchſafed to advance him to the Britiſh Throne, and Prayers to be made for the Proſperity of his Reign.

The Baron de Rhede, his Majeſty's firſt Chamberlain, was immediately diſpatch'd to Berlin, to communicate the News of the Queen's Death, and of his being proclaim'd King of Great-Britain to his Pruſſian Majeſty, who having an Account of what had paſs'd in England, at this Juncture, from the Hague, declar'd his Reſolution, to contribute his Aſſiſtance to the maintaining of the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, of which his own Queen was a Daughter. The Earl of Albemarle came from Holland to Hanover, to give his Majeſty an Invitation, to take his Houſe at Voorſt, in his Way to the Hague, which Favour he obtain'd. In the mean while, the neighbouring Princes and States either went in Perſon, or ſent Envoys and Deputies to congratulate his Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Crown, which occaſion'd a vaſt Concourſe of People, and retarded the King's Departure; the Thoughts of which ſo afflicted the Inhabitants of the City of Hanover, who ſo long enjoy'd the Bleſſings of his Majeſty's moſt wiſe and mild Government, that they were inconſolable. His Majeſty, out of his Fatherly Tenderneſs, caus'd Intimation to be given the Magiſtrates, that they might ask ſome Favour of him, which they did accordingly; and at their Requeſt, a conſiderable Tax on the Citizens was taken off, the Debts of inſolvent Debtors were diſcharg'd, and their Perſons ſet at Liberty. His Majeſty having committed the Government of his German Dominions to a Council, at the Head of which, he plac'd his Brother Prince Erneſt, he took into his Royal Conſideration, what Part of the Royal Family he ſhould carry with him, and what he ſhould leave behind him; and then determin'd, that his Royal Highneſs the Prince ſhould go with him, that the Princeſs his Royal Conſort ſhould follow a few Weeks after, with the two eldeſt Princeſſes, and that the young Prince Frederick-George ſhould remain at Hanover with his youngeſt Siſter. His Majeſty alſo nam'd thoſe of his Houſhold who were to attend him into Great-Britain; as,

His Majeſty appoints thoſe that are to go with him to England.

The Baron de Kelmanſeck, Maſter of the Horſe.
The Baron Bernſdorf, Firſt Miniſter of State.
The Baron de Goritz, Preſident of the Finances, and Miniſter of State.
Monſieur de Robethon, Privy-Counſellor to the King.
Count Platen, Great Chamberlain.
The Baron de Rhede, firſt Chamberlain.
The Marquis de la Foret, Chamberlain.
M ———, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the King.
M ———, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the Prince.
Monſieur Riche, Privy-Counſellor and Secretary to his Majeſty.
The Baron de Hartoff, Counſellor of War.
Monſieur Schraden, Secretary of Embaſſies.
Monſieur Hamerſtein, Gentleman of the King's Bed-Chamber.
Monſieur Kempe, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the Prince.
Dr Steigerthal.
Dr Chappuzeau.
Two Surgeons, and two Valets-de-Chambre.

On Thurſday, the 31ſt of Auguſt, in the Morning, his Majeſty ſet out from Herenhauſen; the Prince Royal follow'd about an hour after, and lay both at Deepnau the firſt Night. The next Morning they proceeded thro' Bohine and Oſnabrug to Ippenbrug. On the ſecond of September, his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, paſs'd thro' Rheeine and Bentheym to Twickel, a Seat

On the 4th of September, the Deputies of the States-General, Meſſieurs Van Welderen, Noerdwycke, Taats-Van Amerongen, and Burmania, receiv'd, and complimented his Majeſty on their Frontiers; and the ſame Day the King paſs'd thro' Zutphen, Appleboon, Voorhuysen, and Amersfort to Utrecht, where having receiv'd the Compliments of the States of the Province, his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs went into a Yacht of the States, and came the ſame Night to Woerden, where they were receiv'd by the Earl of Albemarle, and the other Deputies of the Province of Holland, under ſix Salvo's of nine Pieces of Cannon, anſwering the Numbers of Years of his Majeſty. Here his Majeſty was attended by the Earl of Berkeley and Earl of Strafford. On Sunday, the 5th of September, the King, in the Earl of Albemarle's Coach, and attended by a Detachment of Horſe-Guards, proceeded to Leyden, and about five in the Afternoon arriv'd at the Hague, amidſt the Acclamations of a vaſt Multitude of People. His Majeſty lodg'd at the Old Court, a Houſe belonging to the King of Pruſſia. His Majeſty ſupp'd that Night in private, but the next Day, and moſt of the Time he was in Holland, he eat in Publick, and admitted the Earls of Dorſet, Berkeley, Albemarle, and Strafford, ſeveral of the States-Deputies, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, to his Table. About Noon, the following Deputies of the States-General, the Baron de Lintelo, on the Part of Gelderland, Monſieur Fagel, and Penſionary Heinſius, on the Part of Holland; the Sieurs Velter, on the Part of Zeland; Schonaawen, on the Part of Utrecht; Berum, on the Part of Friezland; Marle, on the Part of Overyſſel; and Joſlinga, on the Part of Groningen, had Audience of the King, whom they complimented on his Acceſſion to the Britiſh Throne, and his happy Arrival at the Hague. The ſame Morning, all the Britiſh Nobility and Gentry then at the Hague, as alſo the Officers of the Green-Cloth, had the Honour to kiſs his Majeſty's Hand, being preſented by the Lords beforemention'd; as did Sir James Abercrombie, Commandant at Dunkirk; and Brigadier Preſton, Governour of Newport. Some of the Foreign Miniſters had private Audience of the King that Day, to compliment him, as the States-Deputies had done. The next Morning, the Marquis de Chateaneuf, Ambaſſador of France, had his Audience for the ſame Purpoſe; and the Report was, that he us'd theſe, among other civil Expreſſions, There are yet a few Difficulties to be remov'd, to put the finiſhing Hand to the Treaties yet depending; but your Majeſty ſhall be the Arbiter of the Peace. To which the King anſwer'd; I will be the Guaranty of it. The Duke de Oſſuna, and the Marquis de Monteleone, Plenipotentiaries of Spain, came from Utrecht to the Hague, to wait on the King, and had a private Audience the 9th of September.

Sir Con. Phipps remov'd.

Before his Majeſty's Arrival in England, the Lords-Regents having taken into Conſideration the Behaviour of Sir Conſtantine Phipps in Ireland, as well ſince, as before the Queen's Death, in Reference to the Choice of the Magiſtrates of the City of Dublin, he having been ſo inſolent as to influence the Council, not to approve of a Lord-Mayor regularly choſen, notwithſtanding Inſtructions had been ſent him from England to the contrary, their Excellencies reſolv'd to remove both him and the Archbiſhop of Armagh from the Station of Lords-Juſtices in that Kingdom, and appointed the Lord Archbiſhop of Dublin, and the Earl of Kildare to be Lords-Juſtices of Ireland. The Privy-Council there had drawn up a Repreſentation containing Reaſons, as they term'd it, for not obeying the Orders of the Lords-Regents, who, upon mature Deliberation, reſolv'd, That the ſame were frivolous and ſcandalous; againſt which, two or three of the Regency, who were ſome time in Friendſhip with the late Miniſters, proteſted, tho' the King had before, by Letter, entirely approv'd their Excellencies Conduct in that Affair, and return'd them his Thanks for it.

On the 15th of September, the Lords of the Regency, (Tho. Cantuar. Harcourt, C. W. Ebor. Shrewsbury, Buckingham, Dartmouth, C. P. S. Somerſet, Bolton, Devonſhire, Argyle, Montroſe, Roxburgh, Kent, Pembroke, Carliſle, Angleſey, Nottingham, Abingdon, Scarborough, Orford, Townſhend, Halifax, Cowper, and Parker) ſign'd a Proclamation for a Reward of 100,000 l. to any Perſon who ſhall ſeize and ſecure the Pretender, whoſe Friends in Scotland, for the moſt part, an indigent, deſperate Crew, ſhew'd an Inclination to give Trouble; upon Information of which, their Excellencies order'd the Half-pay Officers of Colonel Kerr's late Regiment of Dragoons, and of the late Regiments of Brigadier Grant, Colonel Leigh, Colonel Pocock, and the Lord Mark Kerr, to repair forthwith to North Britain, and follow the Orders of Major-General Whetham; but at that Time the Stir they attempted came to nothing more than a few Riots. Sir John Macklean, and Sir Duncan Campbel, appear'd not far from Inverlochy with a numerous Train of Friends and Servants; but hearing the Governour of Fort William had ſent a Detchament of about 100 Men to intercept them, they rode off, and ſoon after went to their ſeveral Homes. Campbel was the Man who procur'd, and preſented the Highland Addreſs in the late Reign. It was levell'd againſt his Grace the Duke of Argyle, and ſo acceptable to Lord Bolingbroke and his Aſſociates, that they got the Highlander knighted. The Jacobites in and about Aberdeen were ſo audacious, that they proclaim'd the Pretender, by the Name of James VIII, the Night before King George was proclaim'd there. Miſerable Wretches! Had they never been told what was the Fate of Perkin Warbeck, whom the Loyal Corniſhmen, as the Lord L—— calls them in his Vindication of Monk, proclaim'd King Richard in Cornwall. Sure, had his Hiſtory come to their Knowledge, they would not have attach'd their Fortunes, whether ſmall or great, to that of a nameleſs Fugitive. The Duke of Gordon was, on a juſt Suſpicion of a like Diſpoſition, confin'd to the Town of Edingburgh on his Parole, and the Lord Huntley, his Son, to his Houſe in the North. Their Excellencies the Lords-Regents, thought proper, for preſerving the Peace of the Country, to forbid the cuſtomary Huntings in the Highlands, where the Chiefs of the Clans were wont to meet with their Vaſſals at certain Seaſons, to ride a hunting; and ſuch a Meeting being now appointed by them, this prudent Caution was taken to prevent the Miſchiefs that might now be intended by it. The Pretender himſelf receiv'd the News of the Queen's Death, in Lorrain, the 3d of Auguſt, and poſted immediately to Verſailles: But the French King, upon Notice of it, diſpatch'd away the Marquis de Torci, to tell him, That his moſt ſailles.

Purſuant to the Orders ſent by the Lords-Regents to Ireland, Sir Conſtantine Phipps, and the Archbiſhop of Armagh, were remov'd from being Lords-Juſtices in that Kingdom; and the Lord Archbiſhop of Dublin, and the Earl of Kilaare were put in their Station, to the univerſal, unſpeakable Joy of the Well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Some of the Populace in Dublin, in the Height of their Reſentment againſt Phipps, went to his Houſe in order to inſult him, but he had wiſely retired to the Caſtle, where he continu'd till their Fury was ſomewhat abated.

On the 17th of September, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend was ſworn one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaties of State; and General Cadogan was appointed Envoy extraordinary in the Netherlands. The King and Prince Royal embark'd the Day before at Orane-Polder, his Majeſty on Board the Peregrine, and his Royal Highneſs on Board the Mary Yacht; which having ſoon after join'd the Squadron of Engliſh and Dutch Men of War, that waited for them, under the Command of the Earl of Berkeley, they all ſail'd for England with a fair Wind; and the next Day, about nine in the Evening, arriv'd ſafe at the Hope, where the Admiral thought fit to drop Anchor. There being a thick Fog the Saturday Morning, the Yacht did not go up the River till the Afternoon. The King and Prince went into a Barge in Long-Reach, and arriv'd at Greenwich about ſix o'Clock in the Evening, being ſaluted by all the Guns on Board all the Ships in the River, and welcom'd by the loud Acclamations of the Multitudes of People that crouded every where the Banks. The Duke of Northumberland, Captain of the Life-Guard, and the Lord-Chancellor, at the Head of the Lords of the Regency, receiv'd his Majeſty at his Landing, and complimented him on his ſafe Arrival. His Majeſty choſe to walk to his Royal Houſe in the Park, accompany'd by moſt of the Nobility, and great Numbers of the principal Gentry, thro' an infinite Crowd of Perſons of all Conditions. Before his Majeſty left his Yacht, he was pleas'd to appoint the Earls of Dorſet and Berkeley to be Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber; and knighted Mr William Saunderſon, Captain of the Peregrine. After the King had undergone the Fatigue of paſſing thro' that joyful Croud, whoſe Joy was expreſs'd in one continu'd loud Acclamation, and of giving his Hand to all who had the Happineſs to approach his Royal Perſon, he retir'd to his Bed-Chamber, and ſent for ſeveral of the Nobility, ſuch as had moſt diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by their Zeal for his Succeſſion. It was obſerv'd, that the Duke of Ormond, the Lord-Chancellor, and the Lord Trevor, were not of that Number, which boded ill to their Continuance in their reſpective Places.

The D. of Ormond, Ld Chancellor, & Ld Trevor neglected;

Indeed, the Duke of Ormond, and the Lord Trevor, by their Conduct in the laſt Reign, ſhew'd themſelves unworthy of either Favour or Truſt in this. And the Lord-Chancellor, ever ſince he abandon'd the Principles of his Presbyterian Education, had been a Stickler againſt thoſe of the Revolution, and an Advocate for High-Church within-doors and without.

As is alſo the Earl of Oxford.

The Earl of Oxford was not at Greenwich that Evening, but was one of the earlieſt there the next Morning, September 19, but had the Misfortune to be undiſtinguiſh'd among the Crowd, and, with much ado, had, at laſt, the bare Honour of kiſſing his Majeſty's Hand, without exchanging a Word with him, which diſabus'd many who had a vain Conceit, that he would be as much favour'd by King George as he had been by Queen Anne. Several other Perſons met with no better Entertainment there; and, in Truth it was thought great Effronterie by modeſt Perſons, that ſome People had the Face to be ſeen in the Court of a Prince whoſe Intereſt they had notoriouſly oppos'd, and whoſe Miniſters they had treated with the utmoſt Contempt. The Duke of Marleborough appear'd there with his wonted Splendor, during the Triumphs of the Confederate War, and even brighter by his late Sufferings, juſtly favour'd by the King, and look'd upon, tho' not yet declar'd as Captain General. The Duke of Shrewsbury, the Duke of Somerſet, the Duke of Bolton, the Duke of Argyle, the Duke of Montroſe, the Duke of Rutland, the Duke of Montague, the Marquis of Dorcheſter, the Earl of Dorſet, the Earl of Bridgwater, the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Carliſle, the Earl of Berkeley, the Earl of Nottingham, the Earl of Portland, the Earl of Orford, the Earl of Wharton, the Earl of Cholmondeley, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, the Lord Oſſulſtone, the Lord Somers, the Lord Halifax, the Biſhop of Salisbury, General Stanhope, Mr Lechmere, and many others, receiv'd particular Marks of his Majeſty's Royal Favour; and his Grace the Duke of Argyle was declar'd Groom of the Stole to his Royal Highneſs; Colonel William Carr, and Colonel Tyrrel, Grooms of the Bed-Chamber; the Earl of Hertford, the Lord Finch, the Lord Lumley, and Colonel Oughton, Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber to the Prince Royal.

Lords promoted.

On Monday, the 20th of September, the King and Prince of Wales made their Entry with ſuch Pomp and Magnificence, as can hardly be parallell'd in any other Nation. There were in the King's Coach his Royal Highneſs and the Duke of Northumberland, Captain of the Life-Guard in waiting; above two hundred Coaches of the Nobility and Gentry, all with ſix Horſes, preceded his Majeſty's. When the King came to St Margaret's Hill in Southwark, he was met by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, and Officers of the City of London; in whoſe Name, Sir Peter King, Recorder, made a congratulatory Speech. The Lord-Mayor deliver'd the Sword to the King; who return'd it to him, and he bore it in the Proceſſion bare-headed before his Majeſty. The Royal Pomp continu'd till his Majeſty's Arrival at his Palace at St James's, and the ſhining Show was ſtill brighten'd by as fair a Day as ever was known in that Seaſon of the Year. The Streets from the Stones End to St James's, as many Miles as they were in Length, were throng'd with joyful Spectators; the Balconies all along adorn'd with Tapeſtries, and fill'd with the brighteſt Beauties in England, who, particularly from Ludgate to Temple-Bar, made an Appearance equally ſurprizing and charming; and it was apparent that, ſo fine a Spectacle was very agreeable to the Princes, for whom it was prepar'd. It was obſervable, that the Duke of Marleborough's Coach, in which was his Grace, with General Cadogan, was attended by great Numbers of the Populace, with Shouts of Acclamations from Greenwich to St James's; and that the Earl of Oxford was hiſs'd in ſeveral Places, and doubtleſs it was great Satisfaction to his Lordſhip, that his Majeſty's Preſence hinder'd them from

The Court was extream numerous the next Day in the Morning, when, beſides the Britiſh Nobility and Gentry, ſeveral Foreign Miniſters made their Appearance particularly thoſe of France, Poland, Pruſſia, and Sicily, took that Occaſion to congratulate his Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, and ſafe Arrival in England. Monſieur d'Ibbeville, the French Envoy, ſaid, "That as "ſoon as his Majeſty's Leiſure would permit, he "would deſire an Audience, to repeat to him "the Aſſurances which the Marquis de Chateau- "neuf had given his Majeſty at the Hague, on "the Part of the moſt Chriſtian King his Maſter." A ſad Accident happen'd this Day, which a little chang'd the gay Humour the Court was in; Charles Aldworth, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Windſor, had imbib'd at St Germans, in France, ſtrong Prejudices againſt the Hanover Succeſſion; which, at his Return to England, he made no Scruple of puбliſhing, and confirm'd them by frequent drinking the Pretender's Health. This could not but endear him to Lord Bolingbroke and his Faction; but it drew upon him ſeveral Quarrels, in which he met with ſome Diſgraces; and in the latter Part of the Queen's Reign, he ſet ſo great a Value on that Merit of his, that he thought himſelf not ſufficiently taken Notice of, which made him a little reſtive. He gave his Tongue a great Liberty in railing at the old Miniſtry; and to ingratiate himſelf with their Succeſſors, charg'd it as a Crime on Colonel Chudleigh, of the Foot-Guards, that he had drunk the Duke of Marlborough's Health. Colonel Chudleigh, the other Colonel's Couſin, meeting, unexpectedly, Mr Aldworth in the Preſence-Chamber at St James's, expoſtulated with him about it, and ſome By-ſtanders, expreſſing their Wonder, that Men who had publickly drunk the Pretender's Health, ſhould dare to appear in that Place. Mr Aldworth came to hard Words with Colonel Chudleigh, and challeng'd him; upon which, they both went out, and fought in Marybone Fields, notwithſtanding Colonel Biſſet's Endeavours to prevent it. Aldworth was kill'd on the Spot, and the King being told it, expreſs'd his Indignation at People's quarrelling in his Palace; but ſaid, As he came to maintain the Laws, he would leave the Matter wholly to their Deciſion.

On the 22d of September, the Privy Council being met, the King was preſent the firſt time; and after taking the Oath relating to the Security of the Church of Scotland, his Majeſty was pleas'd to make the following Declaration.

The ſame Day the Addreſs of the Univerſity of Cambridge was preſented to his Majeſty, by his Grace the Duke of Somerſet, their Chancellor, the Lord Archbiſhop of York, the Marquis of Dorcheſter, the Earl of Mancheſter, their High Steward, the Earl of Angleſey, the Earl of Nottingham, the Biſhop of St Aſaph, and others of the Nobility, together with their Repreſentatives in Parliament, Mr Dixey Windſor, and Dr Paske. This was not a cold, formal Addreſs, the viſible Effects of Conſtraint and Reluctance, but a loyal and affectionate one, worthy the Wiſdom and Honour of that learned Body; having condoled the Death of her late Majeſty, in Terms ſuitable to the Occaſion, they proceed,

A good Addreſs from the Univerſity of Cambridge.

At the ſame time, we cannot but adore the Divine Goodneſs, which has allay'd our Grief, and diſpell'd our Fears, by your Majeſty's peaceable Acceſſion to the Imperial Crown of theſe Kingdoms, and your ſafe Arrival to your People; for which we humbly beg Leave, with the moſt loyal and dutiful Affection, to congratulate your Sacred Majeſty, and, with the moſt ſincere and ardent Devotion, to bleſs Almighty God, who hath adorn'd you with ſuch Royal Virtues, as give us a ſure Proſpect of enjoying the greateſt Bleſſings under your Majeſty's moſt auſpicious Reign.

As his Royal Highneſs the Prince, by the Stile and Title of Duke of Cambridge, hath done us a ſingular Honour, which gives him a peculiar Claim to our Duty, and lays upon us the ſtrongeſt Obligations of a moſt profound Reſpect to his Perſon; ſo we ſhall ever endeavour to render ourſelves worthy of his Favour and Protection, by diſtinguiſhing ourſelves in all proper Inſtances of an extraordinary Zeal for your Majeſty's Service, and the Honour of all your Royal Houſe.

It would be unpardonable Folly, and downright Infatuation, if any of your Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects ſhould turn their Eyes to a Popiſh Pretender, who can never reign over us, but to the certain Loſs of every Thing that ought to be dear to us, either as we are Britons or Proteſtants. But then your Majeſty's moſt loyal Univerſity muſt be utterly uncapable of a Thought, ſo deſtructive to our moſt holy Faith, ſo oppoſite to our happy Conſtitution both in Church and State, ſo full of Ingratitude to GOD, and of Injuſtice to your Majeſty; who, by the Death of our late Soveraign, have now, alone, the rightful and undoubted Title to the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms, which receive a new Luſtre by your Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to it.

Out of a deep Senſe of theſe Things, and in Obedience to the juſt and wholſome Laws of the Realm, and in a conſcientious Regard to our repeated Oaths, we moſt humbly preſume to aſſure your Majeſty, That as our own Studies and Endeavours ſhall always be

His Majeſty return'd this moſt gracious Anſwer.

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer.

I thank you for the very dutiful and affectionate Expreſſions in your Addreſs, eſpecially that, wherein you aſſure me of your Endeavours to cultivate, and particularly to inſtruct the Youth in Principles of Loyalty and Duty to my Government.

You may depend on a ſuitable Return from me, and that I will not fall ſhort of my Predeceſſors in my Zeal for the Church of England, and Protection of your particular Privileges.

Two Days after the Addreſs of the Univerſity of Oxford was preſented to his Majeſty by Dr Gardiner, the Vice-Chancellor, with ſeveral of the Heads of Houſes, and the Proctors, introduced by the Duke of Ormond, their Chancellor, accompanied by the Earl of Rocheſter, their Steward, Mr William Bromley, one of their Repreſentatives in Parliament, with ſeveral Lords and Gentlemen who had formerly been Members of that Univerſity. This Addreſs began very well.

Univerſity of Oxford's Addreſs begins well.

The inexpreſſible Loſs we have ſuſtained by the Death of our late Soveraign of bleſſed Memory, would have been inſupportable, had not God, in his great Goodneſs to this Nation, ſupplied it to us by your Majeſty's happy and quiet Acceſſion to the Throne.

With the Proſpect of this Bleſſing we comforted ourſelves, as often as we apprehended that precious Life to be in Danger, for knowing the Sincerity of our own Hearts, we never ſuſpected that any Perſons would be ſo regardleſs of their Duty and their Intereſt, as not to ſupport, with the utmoſt Zeal, that Succeſſion to which they were bound by the moſt ſolemn Oaths, and on which the Preſervation of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, did next, and under God, ſo manifeſtly depend. Our Expectations, our Wiſhes, and our Prayers, have been anſwered by that Unanimity with which your Subjects have recogniz'd your Majeſty's undoubted Right, that Impatience they have expreſſed to ſee your Royal Perſon in the actual Poſſeſſion of your Throne, and themſelves happy under the influence of your Government, &c.

His Majeſty returned a like gracious Anſwer to this, as to the Cambridge Addreſs; and theſe two Addreſſes were followed by a numerous Train of others from all Counties, Cities, Boroughs, and Corporations, in his Majeſty's Dominions, which cannot be brought into the Compaſs of this Hiſtory; we ſhall therefore only take notice of ſuch as expreſs'd the Senſe of the Well-affected, with relation to the late Managers and their Management, very different from the Votes and Addreſſes, approving both particularly as to the Utrecht Peace, the Negotiation of the Earl of Strafford, and the Biſhop of London.

Other Addreſſes againſt the late Miniſters

Edinburgh.

In the Addreſs from the City of Edinburgh, preſented by Sir James Stewart, their Repreſentative in Parliament, introduc'd by the Earl of Ilay, it is ſaid, The Time, we hope, is now come, when it ſhall appear, whether thoſe, who have been zealous for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in your Majeſty's Royal Family, or the Favourers of the Pretender to your Crown, do moſt deſerve the odious Name of Faction, when the Sacred Terms of Loyalty and Religion ſhall no more be proſtituted for the Concealment of Deſigns for Popery and Arbitrary Power, when Miniſters ſhall no more cover their CRIMES, by ſheltering themſelves under the Name of their Soveraign; when Truth and Integrity ſhall be inſeparable from great Officers, and when, to the Terror of Offenders, Juſtice ſhall take place, 'tis in Compaſſion to the Innocent, that the Laws ordain the guilty to be puniſh'd. A.D.1714.

Upon the preſenting the South-Sea Company's Addreſs, by Sir James Bateman, their Governor, introduced by the Lord Townſhend, his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood on James Dolliffe, Eſq; Harcourt Maſters, Eſq; and William Chapman, Eſq; as alſo upon David Heckſtetter, Eſq; when the Addreſs of the Merchant Adventurers was preſented by Sir John Ward, introduc'd by Mr Secretary Stanhope.

Citizens knighted.

In the Lempſter Addreſs, preſented by the Lord Conningsby, introduc'd by the Earl of Dorſet, are theſe Expreſſions.

Lempſter.

We are ſo ſenſible of the Dangers from which your Majeſty, under God, has reſcu'd us, that we ſhall always reckon that auſpicious Day bleſſed, that brought you on our fortunate Shore, and never forget our late glorious Deliverer King William, ſince to his Wiſdom and Foreſight, we owe not only the preſent Poſſeſſion of the greateſt and beſt of Kings, but a long Proſpect of future Happineſs from your glorious Offſpring.

How black were the Deſigns of theſe wretched Men, [Bolingbroke, Atterbury, &c.] who would have robb'd their native Country of ſuch ineſtimable Bleſſings. And how much indebted are we to the Almighty for diſappointing them. As the firſt is not to be expreſs'd, ſo the ſecond is not to be ſufficiently acknowledg'd by your Majeſty's moſt faithful and obedient Subjects.

In the Addreſs from the High-Sheriff, Juſtices of the Peace, and Grand-Jury of the County of Hereford, preſented by Philip Jackſon, Eſq; High-Sheriff, the Lord Conningsby, Cuſtus Rotulorum, Commodore Cornwall, Herbert Rudhal Weſtfaling, Eſq; and Nicholas Philpot, Eſq; introduced by the Earl of Dorſet, is this Paragraph.

County of Hereford.

Being by your Sacred Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, rais'd from the moſt dreadful Apprehenſions of ſudden RUIN and DESTRUCTION, to the higheſt Pitch of Joy and Satisfaction, from the glorious Proſpect of a laſting Happineſs, we do, with the greateſt Submiſſion, &c.

And we are the more ſenſible of this ineſtimable Bleſſing, becauſe we had very lately ſo much Reaſon to apprehend we were in great Danger of being deprived of it, by the Deſigns of ambitious Men, [the ſame Bolingbroke, &c.] who, if God had not prevented them, to raiſe themſelves to Power and Riches, had ſacrificed their Country to Tyranny and Superſtition.

We preſume therefore to aſſure your Majeſty, that during the whole Courſe of your Reign, which we pray may be very long to us, whenever you ſhall think fit to call a Parliament, we will make it our utmoſt Care to avoid the chuſing any ſuch Men, or Friends of ſuch, but will endeavour to ſend up Repreſentatives that ſhall be ever dutiful and loyal to your Majeſty, firm to the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd, free from that Romiſh Anti-chriſtian Principle of perſecuting for Conſcience ſake, faithful to the true Intereſt of their Country, and zealous againſt a French and Popiſh Pretender.

The King conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Philip Jackſon, Eſq; High-Sheriff, and the County, at the next Election, choſe Richard Hopton, Eſq; and Sir Thomas Morgan, Knights of the Shire.

In

A.D.1714. In the Addreſs from Nottingham, preſented by John Plumtree, Eſq; and Robie Shewin, Eſq; introduc'd by the Marquis of Dorcheſter, we read:

With Pleaſure we now look back upon our paſt Dangers, with Joy we ſee thoſe Intrigues and Stratagems diſappointed, which were ſo artfully contriv'd by ſome ill-deſigning Men to effect our Ruin, and from that dreadful Storm which ſo lately threaten'd us, and which, by divine Providence, and the wiſe Conduct of your Majeſty, is blown over, we cannot but addreſs ourſelves to your Sacred Perſon, as our ſecond Great Deliverer, from a ſlaviſh Yoke, and a POPISH IMPOSTOR.

What Bleſſings can we name, which we may not reaſonably hope for under a Prince of your Majeſty's conſummate Virtue, and diſtinguiſhing Judgment? That our Trade will be RETRIEV'D, that the Faith and Honour of our Nation, ſo notoriouſly violated to our late faithful Allies, will no more be proſtituted, that our Laws and Liberties will be preſerved inviolable, are the leaſt of our Hopes. And that our Senate will no more be filled with ſuch Members as thruſt themſelves into it by moſt open Bribery and Corruption.

The Borough of Bewdley's Addreſs was preſented by the Lord Herbert of Cherbury, introduc'd by the Earl of Sunderland. Among other good things they ſay, Bewdley. We now find our Religion ſecured, and Conſtitution, Laws, and Liberties, preſerved. A good Underſtanding and Friendſhip with our Allies, renew'd and confirm'd, our Credit, Faith, and Commerce reſtor'd and extended, and ourſelves happily freed from all thoſe anxious Fears, that, with too great Reaſon ſurrounded us, Bleſſings that naturally bring to our Remembrances that GREAT BENEFACTOR to Mankind, his late glorious Majeſty King WILLIAM, the Fruit of whoſe prudent Conduct and Foreſight, we are now, under Providence, and your Majeſty's Government, happily enjoying.

The Town of Liverpool, whatever has happen'd there lately, never miſs'd any Occaſion, ſince the Revolution, to ſhew their Steadineſs to it's Principles, and their Reſpect and Affection to the glorious Memory of King William, accordingly they ſay in their Addreſs,

Liverpool. By your Royal Preſence, the Clouds portending our RUIN are diſpers'd, the Attempts of thoſe who IMPIOUSLY endeavour'd to undermine our happy Eſtabliſhment, and to ſacrifice the true Intereſt of their Country to their own Pride and Ambition, meaning him whom the Poet calls the Maſter of Him and his Song, are baffled and defeated, the great Conduct and Wiſdom, and the many noble Actions of our Great Deliverer King WILLIAM, are reviv'd, and ſtand full before our Eyes, and we may now, with Gladneſs, truly ſay we enjoy the good Effects of the late glorious Revolution, in having you, GREAT SIR, to be our King.

What follows, is a Demand of National Juſtice againſt the Popiſh Poet's Hero. Here I am aſham'd to deſcend below the Dignity of Hiſtory in ſo trifling a Subject, but, as both Patron and Poet, are vain enough to think the Flattery in his Poetry will live longer than this Generation, it is not improper to convey a true Picture of the Perſon, in the genuine Senſe of the Nation, expreſs'd thus by the Burgeſſes of Liverpool.

And as your Majeſty hath been graciouſly pleas'd to afford us early Inſtances of your Wiſdom and Juſtice in the Choice of Miniſters, whoſe Zeal and Endeavours have always been employ'd for the Intereſt and Safety of their Country, and the Preſervation of the Succeſſion in your illuſtrious Houſe, A.D.1714. ſo we humbly hope that to THOSE, who, by their Advice or Actions, have endeavour'd to defeat it, and inſtead thereof to introduce a foreign and Popiſh Pretender, who have given up our Trade, betray'd our Arms abroad, or our Councils at home, EXEMPLARY JUSTICE will be done, as the effectual Means to render your Reign quiet, and make your Crown ſit eaſy. For want of which exemplary Juſtice, do not all the Well-affected, even at this Day, labour under a manifeſt Diſquiet and Anxiety, by the ſeditious and inſolent Practices of the chief Perſon here intended, who, ſo unhappily for this Kingdom, eſcaped it.

Among other whimſical Addreſſes, in honour of thoſe againſt whom the Men of Liverpool demanded Juſtice, there was one from Orford in Suffolk, preſented by one of their Repreſentatives, who, doubtleſs, will not think himſelf injur'd by ſinking his Name. Theſe wiſe Men ſay, Orford Addreſs againſt Schiſm. We hope that the univerſal Approbation with which your Majeſty enter'd your Reign, will be an happy Omen of Unanimity among US. All the Inſinuations as if the Proteſtant Succeſſion was in Danger, muſt NOW appear, as they were, groundleſs, and only a Contrivance of deſigning Men to divide us. Here is a bold Stroke in Defiance of Fact and Truth, nay in Defiance of the Earl of Oxford's and his Hiſtorian's Diſcovery, in the ſecret Hiſtory before-mention'd. We can now have no Strife, but who ſhall ſhow the greateſt Zeal for your Sacred Majeſty, for an admirable Church and happy Conſtitution, in Oppoſition to your Majeſty's Enemies, to Popery and Schiſm. They mean here the Church of Scotland, &c. which his Majeſty had juſt taken an Oath to defend. To all Antimonarchical and Republican Principles. They mean here, the Principles of the Revolution, which plac'd Queen Anne upon the Throne, or ſhe had never ſate there.

His Majeſty, like a common Father of his People, received all the Addreſſes that were preſented to him, very graciouſly; but thoſe of the ſame Tenour with that of Orford, muſt needs give him a diſagreeable conception of the Honeſty, Underſtanding, and Modeſty, of the Addreſſors, to tell his Majeſty, that the Proteſtant Succeſſion had not been in Danger, when himſelf knew the contrary ſo well. We ſhall ſee by the Diſtribution of his Royal Favours, to what principlell'd Men his Majeſty moſt inclin'd, and that his Wiſdom, Gratitude, and Steadineſs, are equally to be admir'd in it.

Promotions. Four Days after the Royal Entry, it was publickly declared, that the King had been pleaſed to appoint the Duke of Devonſhire to be Lord Steward of his Houſhold, in the room of Earl Poulet; the Duke of Marlborough to be Captain-General of the Land-Forces, Colonel of the firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, and Maſter-General of the Ordnance; James Stanhope, Eſq; to be one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, in the room of Mr William Bromley; the Duke of Montroſe, to be alſo one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, in the room of the Earl of Mar. Some Days after the King appointed the Duke of Somerſet to be Maſter of the Horſe; the Duke of St Albans to be Captain of the Band of Penſioners; the Duke of Argyle to be General, and Commander in Chief, of his Majeſty's Forces in Scotland; the Earl of Berkeley to be Lord-Lieutenant of Glouceſterſhire; William Pulteney, Eſq; to be Secretary of War, in the room of Mr Gwin, a Confident of the late Treaſurer and Secretary; General Erle to be Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, and Governor of Portſmouth;

William Pulteney, Eſq; made Secretary of War.

A.D.1714 Portsmouth; Robert Walpole, Esq; to be Receiver and Pay-master-General of all the Guards and Garrisons, and of all other his Majesty's Land-Forces of Great Britain, and Pay-master of the Royal Hospital near Chelsea, in the room of John How, Esq. On the 29th of September, the King in Council was pleased to declare his Royal Pleasure to dissolve the Privy-Council, and to direct, that the Lords and others hereafter named, should be of the Privy-Council.

The new Privy-Council.

His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales.
Thomas Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
William Lord Cowper, Lord Chancellor.
William Lord Archbishop of York.
Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, Lord High Treasurer, &c.
Daniel Earl of Nottingham, Lord President of the Council.
Thomas Earl of Wharton, Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal.
William Duke of Devonshire, Lord Steward of his Majesty's Houshold.
Charles Duke of Somerset.
Charles Duke of Bolton.
John Duke of Marlborough, Captain-General, &c.
John Duke of Argyle.
James Duke of Montrose, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
John Duke of Roxburgh.
Henry Duke of Kent.
Robert Marquis of Lindsey, Lord Great Chamberlain.
Thomas Earl of Pembroke.
Henry Earl of Suffolk, Deputy Earl-Marshal.
Charles Earl of Sunderland, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.
Arthur Earl of Anglesey.
Charles Earl of Carlisle.
Mountague Earl of Abingdon.
Richard Earl of Scarborough.
Edward Earl of Orford.
Charles Viscount Townshend, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
John Robinson D D. Ld Bishop of London.
John Lord Somers.
Charles Lord Halifax.
Thomas Coke, Esq; Vice-Chamberlain, &c.
James Stanhope, Esq; one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
Sir Thomas Parker, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.
Thomas Erle, Esq; Lieutenant General of the Ordnance.
Robert Walpole, Esq; Pay-Master-General.

Preferments in Ireland.

His Majesty was pleased to appoint Alan Broderick, Esq; to be Lord Chancellor of Ireland, in the room of Sir Constantine Phipps; William Whitshed, Esq; to be Lord Chief-Justice of the King's-Bench, in the room of Sir Richard Cox; John Forster, Esq; to be Lord Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas, in the room of Robert Doyne, Esq; John Dean, Esq; to be Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, in the room of Robert Rochefort, Esq; and James Maccartney, Esq; to be one of the Justices of the King's-Bench, in the room of Richard Nutly, Esq.

Lord Bolingbrok sent for.

A Message having been sent to the Viscount Bolingbroke, in the Country, for his coming to Town, to be present at the taking off the Seals that had been put on his Office; he excus'd himself, saying, The same might as well be done by one of his Secretaries; but if he could be so happy as to have the Honour to kiss the King's Hand, he would fly to throw himself at his Majesty's Feet.

His Answer.

Citizens made Knights.

When the Lord Mayor and Aldermen presented their Address to his Majesty, they were accompany'd with so great a Number of the principal Citizens, that the King was crowded even up to his Royal Seat: They approached so near his Person, that they left no room for his Majesty to extend his Arm in conferring the Honour of Knighthood, which obliged him to retire into his Bed-Chamber, where he knighted two or three of those Citizens; and with those, who had been knighted before he retired; there were six in all, John Ward, Esq; Robert Child, Esq; Gerard Conyers, Esq; Thomas Scawen, Esq; Peter Delme, Esq; Joseph Lawrence, Esq. A.D. 1-14.

About the same time Joseph Addison, Esq; was made chief Secretary to the Earl of Sunderland, as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; Horatio Walpole, Esq; one of the Secretaries to the Lord Viscount Townshend, Secretary of State; James Taylor, Esq; Secretary to William Pulteney, Esq; as Secretary of War, in the room of Samuel Lynne, Esq; William Sloper, Esq; Deputy to Robert Walpole, Esq; Pay-Master-General.

It will not be expected that the Thread of the History should be interrupted, as often as Promotions and Preferments happen, but that the Order of Chronology may be preserv'd.

Lords of the Treasury.

On the 11th of October it was made publick, that his Majesty had been pleased to appoint Charles Lord Halifax, Sir Richard Onslow, Sir William St Quintin, Edward Wortley Montague, Esq; and Paul Methuen, Esq; to be Commissioners for executing the Office of Treasurer of the Exchequer, and Sir Richard Onslow to be Chancellor of the Exchequer; Edward Earl of Orford, Sir George Byng, George Dodington, Esq; Sir John Jennings, Sir Charles Turner, Abraham Stanyan, and George Bailie, Esqrs. to be Commissioners for executing the Office of High Admiral of Great Britain; and John Aislabie, Esq; to be Treasurer of the Navy: Hugh Earl of Cholmondeley, to be Treasurer, Hugh Boscawen, Esq; to be Comptroller, and Edmund Dunch, Esq; to be Master, of his Majesty's Houshold. His Majesty conferred the Honour of Knighthood on Dr Samuel Garth, who had lately published a Latin Dedication, which he intended to prefix to a fine Edition of Lucretius, published three Years before, but it was not then thought seasonable: 'Tis an elegant Piece, and the Language truly Roman and classical. On the 12th of October, William Marquis of Annandal, Hugh Earl of Cholmondeley, and Sir Richard Onslow, were sworn of his Majesty's Privy Council, as was Heneage Lord Guernsey two Days after; a remarkable Proof of his Majesty's Royal Disposition to over-look what might be exceptionable in a Person's Conduct in former Reigns, as long as he behaved loyally and prudently in this. Lords of the Admiralty.

The Princess of Wales arrives in England.

There wanted something yet to compleat the Satisfaction and Joy of both Court and Country, and that was the Presence of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, of whose divine Qualities the Nation had a just and delightful Idea, which was soon after improv'd by her Royal Highness's Arrival in England, and glorious Appearance at Court.

We have spoken of the Patent for creating his Royal Highness, Prince of Wales, and it was prepared in the late Chancellor's Time, and carried by him to Greenwich; but the Person who had made so slight of his Royal Highness's Demand of a Writ for his Seat in Parliament, as Duke of Cambridge, deserved not the Honour of putting the Seal to his Patent, as Prince of Wales: and his Majesty put off signing it till he had given the Great Seal to the Lord Cowper. It was therefore seven days after the Royal Entry before it was declar'd that his Majesty had been pleas'd to create his Royal Highness George Augustus, Prince of Great Britain, Electoral Prince of Brunswick-Lunenburgh, Duke of Cornwal and Rothsaye,

A.D.1714. faye, Duke and Marquis of Cambridge, Earl of Milford-Haven, Earl of Carrick, Viſcount North-Allerton, Baron of Tewkesbury, and of Renfrew, Lord of the Iſles, and Steward of Scotland, and Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, Prince of Wales, and Earl of Cheſter. The Latin Preamble to the Letters Patents, is as follows, tranſlated into Engliſh.

Preamble of the Prince of Wales's Patent.

It being incumbent on us, not only to procure the preſent Good of the Kingdoms, to the Government whereof it has pleas'd God to call us, but alſo to provide for their future Security; our firſt and principal Care was, to recommend, as much as poſſible, our only Son GEORGE AUGUSTUS, to the Affection of our People, whom he is one Day to govern; our Will is, therefore, that he be honour'd with the Titles peculiar to the eldeſt Son of the King of Great Britain, to evince both our paternal Affection to our moſt dear Son, and the Care we take of our moſt faithful Subjects. Hereupon we congratulate with our Britons, on account of a Prince whoſe eminent filial Piety has always endeared him to us, and who has long ago made himſelf known to them, by his gallant Actions in the Battle of Oudenarde. We beſeech Almighty God, that the Virtues he derives from his Anceſtors, may daily ſhine out in him with additional Splendor; and that he may go on to merit the Honours which we have conferr'd on him. Be it known therefore, &c.

It was with infinite Pleaſure that the Well-affected ſaw the Throne ſo well eſtabliſh'd in the Royal Houſe of Hanover, and ſurrounded with their moſt faithful and zealous Friends. There was at that time, an heroic Expreſſion reported to be ſaid by his Majeſty, or his Royal Highneſs, worthy the Trajans and Antonines of old Rome, not to ſay the Cæſars, who ſacrific'd her Liberty to their Ambition, that 'tis the Rule and Maxim of their Family, TO REWARD THEIR FRIENDS, DO JUSTICE TO THEIR ENEMIES, AND FEAR NONE BUT GOD; which has appear'd in the whole Courſe of their Reign, if we may not except ſome living Inſtances that Juſtice has not been done to their Enemies, who, by their Clemency, have had freſh Opportunities to put their Enmity in Practice.

An heroic Expreſſion of the King or Prince.

On the 9th of October, N. S. the two eldeſt Princeſſes of Great Britain, Anne and Amelia, ſet out from Hanover, to go, by eaſy Journies, to the Hague. The youngeſt Princeſs, Caroline, being left at Hanover, on account of a late Indiſpoſition. Three Days afterwards, her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales ſet out for Holland, attended by the Counteſs of Pickleburgh, a Lady of high Birth, great Fortune, and ſuperior Merit. On the 17th her Royal Highneſs landed at Leidſendam, about a League and a half from the Hague, and was receiv'd by the Earls of Albemarle and Strafford, and their Counteſſes; as alſo by the Deputies of the States of Holland, who attended her Royal Highneſs during her ſtay in that Province. About ſix in the Afternoon, the Princeſs of Wales, with the two eldeſt Princeſſes, her Daughters, arriv'd at the Hague, and the next Morning receiv'd the Complements of the States General, by Deputies nominated for that Purpoſe; and the Weather being fair, her Royal Highneſs appeared in the Afternoon in the Vorhoot, attended by a very numerous Train of Coaches. In the Evening her Royal Highneſs kept a Drawing-Room, at which were all the Ladies, and Perſons of Diſtinction of that Place. The next Day her Royal Highneſs receiv'd Viſits from the French Ambaſſador, and other Foreign Miniſters. The Earl of Berkeley, and Sir John Walter, of the Green-Cloth, were come thither five Days before, having left the Squadron of Men of War, commanded by his Lordſhip, at Helvoetſluys, with Orders for the Yachts to come up to Roterdam. Her Royal Highneſs being inform'd, by the Earl, that the Wind was eaſterly, October 20, N. S. ſhe receiv'd the Compliments of the Duke d'Oſſuna, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, and the other Foreign Ambaſſadors and Envoys, then at the Hague, that Afternoon, and about five o'Clock, went on board a Yacht of the States of Holland, accompany'd by the Earl of Albemarle, and the reſt of the Deputies of that Province, by the Count of Hanaw, and his Counteſs, Siſter to her Hoyal Highneſs, Prince William of Heſſe, and the Prince of Anhalt. The Earl of Strafford accompany'd her alſo part of the way to Rotterdam, where being arriv'd, ſhe embark'd on board the Mary Yacht, and ſail'd next Morning at three o'Clock. On Sunday, about Noon, the Yacht got to Sea, and join'd the Men of War appointed to convoy her Royal Highneſs, who, with the two Princeſſes, and their Retinue, landed at Margate, on Monday Night, the 11th of October, O. S. and the next Evening arriv'd at Rocheſter. The Prince of Wales having early that Day receiv'd the News of his Royal Conſort's Arrival, his Royal Highneſs ſet out about ſeven o'Clock in the Morning, accompany'd by the Dukes of Somerſet and Argyle, and the Earl of Bridgewater, Lord-Chamberlain to their Royal Highneſſes. The Prince met the Princeſs beyond Rocheſter, where her Royal Highneſs was attended by the Counteſs of Dorſet, and the Counteſs of Berkeley, who had been nam'd two of the Ladies of her Bed-Chamber. On Wedneſday Morning, October 13, O. S. the King caus'd Te Deum to be ſung in the Royal Chapel at St James's, for the ſafe Arrival of her Royal Highneſs, who having reſted the Night before at Rocheſter, came with the Prince of Wales to St James's Palace, about four o'Clock in the Afternoon. Their Royal Highneſſes paſs'd through the City of London in a Chariot, follow'd by another, in which were the two young Princeſſes, who appear'd ſo lovely and lively, that the Sight of them wonderfully affected the Hearts of vaſt Numbers of Spectators, and of a great Multitude of People, who attended them as far as St James's, with the loudeſt Acclamations. The next Morning moſt of the Ladies of the firſt Quality and Diſtinction, waited on the Princeſs of Wales, both to pay their Devoirs to her, and congratulate her ſafe Arrival, and return'd home, fill'd with Admiration of her Royal Highneſs's Affability, her gracious and condeſcending Behaviour.

A.D.1714.

The Princeſs of Wales arrives in England.

Her Royal Highneſs and the two eldeſt Princeſſes arrive at S James's.

The Day appointed for his Majeſty's Coronation, October 20, approaching, The King, in Imitation of his Royal Predeceſſors, reſolv'd to add to that great Solemnity, by a New Creation of Peers. Accordingly his Majeſty was pleas'd to direct Letters Patents, October 15, to paſs the Great-Seal, for creating James Lord Chandos, Earl of Caernarvon; Charles Lord Oſſulſton, Earl of Tankerville; Lewis Lord Rockingham, Earl of Rockingham; Charles Lord Halifax, Earl of Halifax; Heneage Lord Geurnſey, Earl of Aylesford; John Lord Harvey, Earl of Briſtol; Thomas Lord Pelham, Earl of Clare; Henry Earl of Thomond, in Ireland, Viſcount Tadcaſter, in the County of York; James Viſcount Caſtleton, in Ireland, Baron Sanderſon, of Saxby, in Lincolnſhire; Bennet Lord Sherrard, in Ireland, Baron of Harborough, in Leiceſterſhire; Jervas Lord Pierrepont, in Ireland, Baron Pierrepont, of Hanſlop, in the County of Bucks; Henry Boyle, Eſq; Baron of Peers created.

A.D.1714. Carleton, in the County of York; Sir Richard Temple, Baron of Cobham, in the County of Kent. The ſame Day the King appointed Lieutenant General Cadogan, to be Colonel of the ſecond Regiment of Foot-Guards, and accepted of the Invitation of the Lord-Mayor of London elect, and the Court of Aldermen, to honour the City with his Royal Preſence, on the Lord-Mayor's Day. The Dukes of Bolton and Rutland, the Earl of Dorſet, and the Earl of Halifax, were made Knights of the Garter. The Lord Cobham was appointed his Majeſty's Envoy at the Court of Vienna, and Henry Lord Paget, who was created Lord Burton, at the Twelve-Creation, was made Earl of Uxbridge. His Majeſty was alſo pleas'd to appoint Hugh Earl of Cholmondeley, to be Governor of Cheſter; Lieutenant General William Seymour, to be Lieutenant of the Band of Penſioners. The Duke of Richmond, the Duke of Grafton, the Duke of Kent, the Earl of Lincoln, the Earl of Dorſet, the Earl of Berkeley, the Earl of Mancheſter, the Earl of Selkirk, the Earl of Stairs, the Lord Carteret, and the Earl of Orrery, to be Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber. The latter, not many Years after, lay under ſtrong Suſpicions of no leſs a Crime than High-Treaſon, and though there was not Proof enough to convict him of that, there was more than enough to charge him with Ingratitude to a Prince who had been ſo gracious to him. The King alſo appointed Mr Howard, Brigadier Dormer, Brigadier Breton, Coloner Kerr, Colonel Tyrrel, Colonel Fielding, and Colonel Cornwal, to be Grooms of the Bed-Chamber, and the Earl of Stairs to be his Miniſter in France.

His Majeſty dines with the new Lord Mayor.

Knights of the Garter.

Lords of the Bed-Chamber.

On the 20th of October, the Ceremony of his Majeſty's Coronation was perform'd at Weſtminſter, with the utmoſt Magnificence and Splendor and Joy, as general and unaffected as ever was known on the like Occaſion. The Forms were much the ſame as in former Coronations; I ſhall therefore omit them, and take notice only of what was particular in this.

His Majeſty's Coronation.

The Proceſſion of the Officers, and then the Peers from Weſtminſter-Hall to the Abbey Church, being clos'd by two Perſons repreſenting the Dukes of Aquitain and Normandy, the Lords who bore the Ragalia, came in turn. The Earl of Salisbury, with St Edward's Staff; the Lord Viſcount Longueville, with the Spurs; the Earl of Dorſet, with the Scepter and Croſs; the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Pembroke, and the Earl of Lincoln, with the three Swords. Then Garter's Deputy, with his Coronet, between the Uſher of the Black Rod, and the Lord Mayor of London; then the Lord Great Chamberlain of England, ſingle; then his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, in his Robes of State of crimſon Velvet, furr'd with Ermine. His Coronet, with precious Stones, and Cap born by the Earl of Hertford, on a crimſon Velvet Cuſhion, and wearing a like Cap of crimſon Velvet turn'd up with Ermine, by his Majeſty's Royal Permiſſion, his Train ſupported by Adolphus Oughton, Eſq; and another Groom of his Royal Highneſs's Bed-Chamber, aſſiſted by Henry Killegrew, Eſq; Gentleman of his Royal Highneſs's Robes. It was remark'd, that the Prince of Wales was as much taken notice of for the Life and Dignity of his Look, and the Firmneſs of his Step, as for his Royal Rank and Appearance. Then the Earl of Derby, with the Sword of State, between the Duke of Montague, Lord High Conſtable for that Day, and the Earl of Suffolk and Bindon, as Earl Marſhal of England; the Duke of Grafton, Lord High Steward on that Occaſion, with the Crown, between the Duke of Argyle, bearing the Scepter, with the Dove, and the Duke of Somerſet with the Orb. The Biſhop of Salisbury with the Bible, and the Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry with the Patten, and the Biſhop of Bangor with the Chalice. Then A.D.1714.

The KING,

in his Royal Robes of crimſon Velvet, furr'd with Ermine, and border'd with a rich broad Gold Lace, wearing the Collar of the Order of St George, and on his Head a cap of State, of crimſon Velvet, turn'd up with Ermine, adorned with a Circle of Gold, enrich'd with Diamonds, ſupported by the Biſhops of Durham, and Bath and Wells, under a Canopy born by the Barons of the Cinque Ports. Being all enter'd the Church, and duly ſeated, the Litany was ſung by the Biſhops of Litchfield and Coventry, and Norwich, and the Sermon was preach'd by the Lord Biſhop of Oxford, Father to the preſent Lord-Chancellor of Great Britain. I ſhall inſert only a Paſſage, which will ſufficiently prove how both God and Men were mock'd in the Addreſſes and Thankſgivings for the late Peace, and the evil Counſels in the laſt four Years of the laſt Reign. Having ſpoken of the eight glorious Campaigns under the Conduct of the Duke of Marlborough, his Lordſhip proceeded thus: "But whether it "was to correct us for ſome Sins, whereby we "had provoked God to anger, or chaſtiſe our "Confidence, which, it may be, we plac'd too "much in the Arm of Fleſh, or to convince "us that his Providence, which alone began, "ſhould alone have the Glory of finiſhing this "great Work, he was pleas'd to ſuffer us to "fall into a Condition, from which nothing elſe "could have reliev'd us: Our Enemy, who had "ſet up a Pretender to this Throne, rais'd from "a State of asking Peace, to a Condition of giving "Peace and Princes too, to Europe; our Allies, "ſome divided from us, others miſerably disjointed, and we ourſelves not only unguarded, but "wretchedly were broken into Parties and Fa"ctions at home.

Paſſages out of the Biſhop of Oxford's Coronation Sermon.

"The Friends of the Pretender thought theſe "Circumſtances ſo encouraging, that they open"ly avow'd his Title in Writing and Diſcourſe, "and his Agents as boldly liſted Soldiers to aſ"ſert it with the Sword: And he muſt have been "very ſanguine, who in this view of things could "have thought, that the Pretender, whom our "Queen's repeated Inſtances could not remove "from a Situation, which her Parliament "thought too near us, would not, upon her "Majeſty's Demiſe, have brought a foreign "Army to join his Friends here, before the *Pro*teſtant* Heir, who was at a much greater Di"ſtance, could have arriv'd, to have maintain'd his "own juſt Right, or defended his faithful Subjects.

"But when that Day was come, that was "to put a Period to that Royal Life, on the "Continuance of which alone, this threatening "Danger ſeem'd ſuſpended; then was God pleas'd "to mix ſo much Mercy with the Stroke, as "by his Providence to order it, that the unſettl'd "Poſture of Affairs abroad, would not permit "the Pretender's foreign Friends, to ſend any "Forces to encourage an Inſurrection, and the "Unreadineſs of his ſurpriz'd Abettors here, "would not permit them to appear in ſuch a "manner, as to invite an Invaſion; but our King "was peaceably proclaim'd, to the univerſal Joy "of his People, &c."

There

A.D.1714. There never was ſo great an Appearance of Lords, Spiritual and Temporal, as on this Occaſion, no leſs than ſeventeen Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and two Sees were then vacant. All the Dukes in or about Town, except the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, ſeventy Earls and Viſcounts, and among them the Earl of Oxford, and the Viſcount Bolingbroke, and as many Barons. The Demonſtrations of Joy throughout the Kingdom on the Coronation Day, was as general as hearty, and in proportion as ſplendid as at London, ſome few places excepted, where the Rabble, purſuing the Leſſons of their Leader Dr Sacheverell, ſhew'd their Hatred to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by Riots and Outrages. Sacheverell himſelf was at that time at Sutton, near Birmingham in Warwickſhire, where he preach'd on the Sunday before the Coronation, and above Two hundred of the Birmingham People trudg'd ſo far to adore their Idol, and the Conſequence of it appear'd a Day or two after, as by the following Accounts from thence. "Se- "veral of the principal Inhabitants of this Town "having reſolv'd, in a ſuitable manner, to expreſs "their Joy on the Day of the Coronation of "his Sacred Majeſty King GEORGE, an "Entertainment was prepar'd for them at the "Caſtle Tavern. When the Night came on, a "tumultuous Rabble got together, broke the Win- "dows of the Houſe, and forc'd the Company "to remove; all the Cry was Sacheverell for "ever, and down with the Whigs. If any one "in the Street cry'd God bleſs King George, he "was in danger of his Life, &c." The like Accounts came from Briſtol, where the Sacheverell-Mob broke the Windows of Mr Whiting, the Under-Sheriff, who had offended them by proſecuting an abandon'd, perjur'd Wretch. They did the ſame by Mr Jeffry's Houſe, but fell in ſtill a more furious brutal manner on Mr Stevens's, which they aſſaulted, enter'd, and plunder'd. One Mr Thomas, who perſwaded them to withdraw, was murder'd, and ſeveral Gentlemen inſulted, hurt, and abus'd. From Chippenham, in Wiltſhire, where the ſame ſort of Villains, arm'd with Guns, Piſtols, and Clubs, march'd, with beat of Drum, and beat and abus'd the Juſtices, Gentlemen, and Freemen, who were ſhewing their Loyalty, in ſolemnizing the King's Coronation. From Norwich, where when the Mayor, Aldermen, and principal Inhabitants, were rejoicing at a Bonfire, with Cockades in their Hats, on which were written, in Letters of Gold, LONG LIVE KING GEORGE. The Diſaffected, inſtead of ſuch joyful Acclamations, cry'd a Berney, a Berney, one of their Members of Parliament, a Stickler for the French-Commerce-Bill, againſt which this trading City petition'd. Some of this High Church Mob had the Impudence to cry, G—d d—n King George, pull off their Knots, of which Information was given upon Oath, by three ſubſtantial Evidences, particularly againſt Thomas P—l. The Cry of the Scoundrels that aſſaulted the Loyal Inhabitants of Reading at their Bonfire, was No Hanover, No Cadogan, but a Calvert, and a Clarges. We have had too much Occaſion to ſpeak of Phipps, one of Sacheverell's Advocates, and late Chancellor of Ireland, from whence he came in good Time, for he had been enough threatened with the Effects of the Reſentment of the Citizens of Dublin, for his tyrannous Proceedings againſt them. And Advice came from Oxford, which was printed in the late Secretary Bolingbroke's News-Paper. That on the Coronation Day, Sir Conſtantine Phipps, late Lord-Chancellor of Ireland, had the Degree of Doctor of the Civil-Law conferr'd upon him, Nemine Contradicente, in as full a Convocation as has been ſeen, with all imaginable Marks of Honour and Eſteem. Theſe things will, it is hop'd, ſufficiently characterize the Champions of High Church, the Schiſm Bill Men, the Men of the Oppoſition to his Majeſty's moſt juſt and wiſe Government, notwithſtanding their affected Pretences to Publick Spirit and Patriotiſm. It muſt be confeſs'd, ſome Affronts were offer'd in other parts of the Kingdom, to thoſe that were in the late Adminiſtration. If Perſons attainted, and impriſon'd for High-Treaſon, can be affronted, as by this Information from North Britain. "The "Scholars of the Univerſity of Glaſgow, having "got the Statues of the Pretender, the Lord Bo- "lingbroke, and Sir W——m W——, cut in "Wood, and finely dreſs'd, the Pretender in a "ſcarlet Cloak, and Gold Lace, the other two "in blue Cloaths, and Silver Lace, and all three "with lac'd Hats and Feathers; they caus'd "them to be plac'd, in the Night-time, in a "Houſe in a neighbouring Village. In the Morn- "ing of the Coronation Day, they brought thoſe "three Statues to Town on Horſeback, at- "tended with Guards, and preceded by Lads, "who cry'd out, they had taken the Pretender, "with two of his Friends. Upon which they "were brought to the Market-Place, where a "Bench and a Bar having been prepar'd, ſome of "of the Scholars ſate upon the firſt as Judges. "The Pretender being already attainted, was or- "der'd to ſtand aſide, with a Guard upon him, "as a Perſon condemn'd. But the other two "were brought to the Bar, where their ſeveral In- "dictments were read, and Council being heard "on both Sides, the Priſoners were found guilty "of treaſonable Practices. The Lord Bolingbroke "for making a Scandalous Peace, the other for "bringing in the Schiſm Bill, and condemn'd to "be burnt. This Sentence was immediately put "in Execution; the Pretender was burnt with "the Scots Toleration Act; Bolingbroke with the "Patronage Act; and Sir W——m W—— "with the Schiſm Act about their Necks. It is "very remarkable, that no Diſturbance happen'd "during the Rejoicings on the Coronation Day, "in any part of Scotland."

Two Days after the Coronation, his Majeſty was pleas'd to appoint the Duke of Kent to be Conſtable of Windſor Caſtle, in the Room of the Duke of Northumberland; the Earl of Stairs, and Paul Methuen, Eſq; were ſworn of the Privy-Council; the latter appointed Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of Spain. His Majeſty, with their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, having been pleas'd to accept an humble Invitation from the City, to dine at Guild-Hall on the Lord-Mayor's Day, Sir William Humphreys being then Lord-Mayor, the King, Prince, and Princeſs came into Cheapſide about two in the Afternoon, attended by the great Officers of the Court, and a numerous Train of Nobility and Gentry in their Coaches. His Majeſty and their Royal Highneſſes, with the two young Princeſſes, ſaw the Cavalcade from the Balcony over-againſt Bow-Church, formerly Waldos, where the Kings and Queens of England were wont to place themſelves on that Occaſion. The King, the Prince, and Princeſs, with the young Princeſſes, being conducted by the Sheriffs, Sir Randolph Knipe, and Sir Robert Breedon, to Guild-Hall, the Lord-Mayor, at the Entrance, kneeled, and preſented the Sword to his Majeſty; who having return'd it to his Lordſhip, he carry'd it before the King up to the Court-Room, and from thence to the Huſtings,

His Majeſty ſaluted all the City Ladies that were preſented to him; and was pleas'd to order 1000*l.* to be paid to the Sheriffs for the Relief and Diſcharge of poor Priſoners. The Committee choſe by the Court of Common Council to make Preparations for the King's Entertainment, was reckon'd a great Oddity, moſt of them, if not all, the Lord-Mayor elect, and the two Sheriffs excepted, being, as the Annaliſt ſays,

It was remark'd, and it deſerves Remembrance, That Heaven ſeem'd in a particular Manner to ſmile on King George, and all his Royal Family, not only granting them favourable Winds, and ſmooth Seas in their Paſſage, but alſo by cauſing the Sun to ſhine with it's brighteſt Rays on his Majeſty and the Prince of Wales's Publick Entry, on the Coronation-Day; which was both preceeded and follow'd by violent Rains, on the Day his Majeſty and the Royal Family went into the City.

We muſt not forget, that ſoon after the King's Arrival in England, the Commiſſioners of the Church of Scotland were introduc'd to his Majeſty by his Grace the Duke of Montroſe, and the Reverend Mr Carſtairs, who, in King James's Reign, had ſuffer'd the Scots Rack, made a handſome Speech in their Name. To which his Maieſty return'd a moſt gracious Anſwer.

The ſame Commiſſioners were introduc'd to his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, by the Duke of Roxburgh; and to her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs, by the Duke of Argyle; and ſuitable Speeches were made to both their Royal Highneſſes. They met with a moſt favourable Reception; and they were both pleas'd to teſtify the Senſe they had of the Zeal of the Church of Scotland, for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in their Family, and told the Commiſſioners, that their Church might aſſure themſelves of their Royal Highneſſes Countenance and Favour. A.D.1714.

On the 10th of October an Expreſs arriv'd at Edinburgh, with three Commiſſions to paſs the Seals; one for the Duke of Montroſe to be Secretary of State, and for the Marquis of Anandale to be Keeper of the Great Seal; a new Office erected there inſtead of that of Lord-Chancellor; and the third for the Earl of Ilay to be Lord-Regiſter.

I ſhall no farther enlarge on the Addreſſes from any other Parts of his Majeſty's Dominions, the Contents of them being much the ſame, and well known, only make room for a Paragraph or two of the Portſmouth Addreſs, preſented by Captain Henry Stanyford and Mr Thomas Blanckley, who were introduc'd by his Grace the Duke Marlborough, and had the Honour to kiſs his Majeſty's Hand.

We heard the Memory of our Great Deliverer revil'd, his glorious Undertaking diſparag'd and reproached, and Principles advanc'd, and countenanc'd by Perſons work'd into Power, that overturn'd your Right to your Dominions. We ſaw the Advantages gain'd by the moſt glorious and ſucceſsful War thrown up at once by an INGLORIOUS PEACE, faithful Allies deſerted, the ſolemn Faith of Nations ridicul'd, and Conquerors made to ſtoop to the Demands of thoſe whom they had overcome. We beheld our Trade in the moſt valuable Branches neglected; the avow'd Enemies of your Title conniv'd at, careſs'd, advanc'd, and the moſt zealous Friends to your Acceſſion reproach'd as Enemies to your immediate Predeceſſor, and remov'd from honourable Poſts and Offices; and violent Proſecutions commenc'd and carry'd on againſt thoſe Members of Corporate Bodies that were moſt hearty in your Intereſts; and the Authority and Treaſure of the Nation abus'd and miſapply'd to cruſh your Friends: But, in the critical Juncture, God was pleas'd to ſend your Majeſty to ſcatter our Fears. Under your juſt and wiſe Adminiſtration, we aſſure ourſelves of the Redreſs of every Grievance, and that the Nation's Honour will be carry'd to it's utmoſt Height. On ſuch a Proſpect, allow us, MIGHTY PRINCE, to confeſs our Joy unutterable. Addreſs from Portſmouth againſt the late Miniſtry.

The Earl of Oxford, the Viſcount Bolingbroke, Mr William Bromley, Sir W—— W——, &c. are the Perſons deſcrib'd in the Lines of this Inſertion, and thoſe that have us'd their vain Endeavours to impoſe other Pictures of them on the Publick, are defy'd to prove a falſe Feature in this.

As to Foreign Affairs; his Majeſty wrote a Letter, dated the 27th of September, O. S. to the States-General of the United Provinces, to notify his Arrival in England; and Mr Prior, the Britiſh Miniſter at Paris, had Orders to preſent a Memorial to the French King, about compleating the Demolition of the Harbour of Dunkirk, purſuant to the Treaty of Utrecht; but that Court delay'd it by trifling Excuſes and Evaſions. In the mean time, the Behaviour of High-Church continu'd to raiſe the Indignation of the Well-affected, and occaſion'd the publiſhing a Proclamation againſt their Rabble, the 2d of November. That the Rioters made uſe of the Church's Name without the leaſt Regard to any religious, virtuous, or even moral Principles, is apparent by their Conduct at this Time. They had made themſelves drunk with hot Liquors and Sedition, during Sacheverell's Trial and Progreſſes, and were become deſperate by the Diſappointment of all the treaſonable and tyrannical Schemes which their Leaders had enflam'd them with.

That

A.D.1714. A Minister of the Church of England insulted by the High-Church Mob.

That they had any well grounded Reſpect for the Clergy of the Church, for whoſe pretended Danger they were ſo clamorous, may be judg'd by the following Inſtance.

A Reverend ſober Divine, one Mr Joſeph Aires, Vicar of Blewberry in Berkſhire, being invited to preach at White-Chapel, on Sunday, October 24, choſe this Text, We will not hide them from their Children; ſhewing to the Generation to come the Praiſes of the Lord and his Strength, and his wonderful Works he hath done. The good Man obſerv'd from hence, how neceſſary it was to perpetuate the Memory of ſignal Deliverances and after a ſhort hiſtorical Account of the Deliverances of this Kingdom ſince the Reformation, he inſiſted upon the happy Revolution, of which King William was the glorious Inſtrument; and the great and imminent Dangers we had ſo lately eſcap'd before the Queen's Death, which honeſt and ſeaſonable Diſcourſe ſo diſpleas'd ſome of the Auditory, who had been corrupted by their Parſon Dr Welton, a factious Jacobite Prieſt, that they mobb'd the Miniſter after he came out of the Pulpit, joſtled him, and threw Rubbiſh at him, and, in all likelihood, would have done him greater Miſchief, had he not been reſcu'd out of their Hands by Conſtables, and others, who carry'd him to a Tavern, whence he was oblig'd to make his Eſcape in a Lay Habit; ſuch is the Piety, Charity, Moderation, and Honeſty of High-Church. This Miniſter was of the Church of England; and never was Miniſter of that Church in ſo much Danger of being maſſacred by thoſe againſt whom they were about to raiſe a Perſecution, under the Name of a Schiſm-Bill. At the ſame Time, Welton, their ſwearing, non-ſwearing Doctor was ſo impious as to cauſe the Likeneſs of a learned and pious Prelate, Dr Kennet, Biſhop of Peterborough, to appear in that of Judas, in a Picture of the Lord's Supper, over the Communion-Table; by which, in a manner, he oblig'd all his Communicants to proſtitute that holy Sacrament to their Malice and Hatred.

Promotions.

On the 5th of November it was declar'd, that his Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint David Earl of Portmore, to be Governour of Gibraltar; George Earl of Cardigan, to be Maſter of the Buckhounds; Brigadier Honeywood, to be one of the Grooms of his Majeſty's Bed-chamber; Matthew Aylmer, Eſq; to be Admiral, and Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's Fleet, Governour of Greenwich Hoſpital, &c. Henry Newton, L. L. D. to be Judge of the High Court of Admiralty; and the following Perſons to be principal Officers and Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Navy; Sir Richard Haddock, Comptroller, Daniel Furzer, Eſq; Surveyor; Charles Sargiſon, Eſq; Clerk of the Acts; Dennys Lyddel, Eſq; Comptroller of the Treaſurer's Accounts; Charles Cornwal, Eſq; Comptroller of the Stores; John Fowler, Eſq; Commiſſioner at large; Richard Burton, Eſq; Comptroller of the Victualling Accounts. Out-Ports, Iſaac Townſhend, Eſq; James Littleton, Eſq; and Sir William Jumper.

Baronets made.

Four Days after it was alſo made publick, that the King had been pleas'd to appoint Thomas-Holles Pelham, Earl of Clare, to be Keeper of his Majeſty's Foreſt of Sherwood; Charles Lord Tyrawley to be Commander in Chief of the Forces in Ireland, and to direct Letters-Patents to paſs the Seals for granting the Dignity of Baronet to Sir William Humfreys, John Auſtin, Eſq; Francis Eyles, Eſq; Juſtus Beck, Eſq; Gregory Page of Greenwich, Eſq; William Lowther of Swillington, in Yorkſhire, Eſq; and John Fryer of London, Eſq; and to appoint John Lord De-la-War, Baſil Earl of Denbigh, and John Smith, Eſq; to be Tellers of the Exchequer; Major-General Sabine to be Colonel of the Welſh Fuſileers; George Townſhend, Eſq; Philip Riley, Eſq; Sir Marmaduke Wyvel, Chriſtopher Montague, Eſq; Whitlocke Bulſtrode, Eſq; James Vernon, Eſq; John Whetham, Eſq; and William Carr, to be Commiſſioners of the Exciſe.

A.D.1714. Commiſſioners of the Exciſe.

It appears by the bare Relation of Facts, that his Majeſty had given the Enemies to his Government no manner of Occaſion for their Enmity; that he had us'd his Royal Endeavours to reconcile the Minds of all his Subjects to it; and that the Behaviour of the High-Church Faction was equally without Cauſe or Conſcience; yet did they continue, with great Induſtry, to diſperſe ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels and Pamphlets, to infuſe Jealouſies into the Minds of the weak, and unthinking Multitude, and to revive the groundleſs impudent Clamour of the Danger of the Church; ſuch were their Standfaſt to the Church; where are our Biſhops now? The Religion of King George. No Presbyterian Government. The State-Gameſter; or, The Church of England's ſorrowful Lamentation. Æſop in mourning; the Duke of Ormond's Vindication. The Lord Bolingbroke's Vindication. No Lord-Protector, or the Duke of M——h's Deſign defeated, &c. Their Ballad-ſingers at every Corner of a Street roar'd out ſenſeleſs, brutal Scandal and Falſhood, and had the Ears of the ſtupid, giddy-headed Rabble, that had been in Motion ever ſince Sacheverell's Trial. Sir William Humphreys, Lord-Mayor of London, exerted his Authority, and caus'd the Hawkers that cry'd theſe Libels, and ſung ſuch Ballads, to be committed to the Houſe of Correction, and had his Majeſty's Royal Approbation in a Letter from the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, Secretary of State.

Inſolent and ſcandalous Libels.

Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms, and of Trade and Plantations.

About the latter End of November, it was publickly declar'd, that his Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint Sir Walter Young, Sir Matthew Dudley, Sir John Stanley, Sir Charles Peers, Robert Williamſon, Eſq; John Pulteney, Eſq; and Thomas Walker, Eſq; to be Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms; William Lord Berkeley of Stratton, Sir Jacob Aſtley, Robert Moleſworth, Eſq; John Cockburn, Eſq; Archibald Hutcheſon, Eſq; John Chetwynde, Eſq; Charles Cooke, Eſq; and Paul Doeminque, Eſq; to be Commiſſioners for Trade and Plantations.

On the 13th of November, the Dukes of Marlborough, Shrewsbury, and Argyle; the Earls of Nottingham and Sunderland; the Lord Viſcount Townſhend; The Marquis de Monteleone, Ambaſſador of Spain; the Count de Noſtiz, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, receiv'd by the Mail from France, Copies of a Paper, printed in Engliſh, French, and Latin, ſign'd at the Top James R. and dated at Plombieus the 29th of Auguſt, 1714; which being a kind of Manifeſto or Declaration of the Pretender aſſerting his chimerical Right to the Crown of Great Britain; moſt of the Perſons who receiv'd this Paper, thought it their Duty to deliver it into the Hands either of his Majeſty, or of the Secretaries of State. This infamous Libel was at firſt diſown'd by the Jacobites and Tories, as a Contrivance of the Whigs, to aſperſe the late Miniſtry, and influence future Elections for Parliament Men; and truly the Contents of it reflected ſo much not only on thoſe Miniſters, but on the late Queen herſelf, that if High-Church had really had ſo much Reſpect for her Memory as ſome pretended, in their late Addreſſes,

The Pretender's Manifeſto.

A.D.1714. they would have deteſted the very Name of the Pretender, who ſo foully abus'd her ſacred Character, as in this Paragraph, he is ſpeaking of his ſitting ſtill for ſome Time. Contrary to our Expectations, upon the Death of the Princeſs our Siſter, of whoſe good Intentions towards us, we could not, for ſome Time paſt, well doubt; and this was the Reaſon we then ſate ſtill, expecting the good Effects thereof, which were unfortunately prevented by her deplorable Death; we found our People had immediately proclaim'd for their King a Foreign Prince.

He boaſts of the late Queen's good Intentions towards him.

Dr Tyndal, Author of the Rights of the Chriſtian Church, and ſeveral Tracts of great Currency, ſays, in his Remarks on this Paſſage,

" What can be a higher Reflection on the Me-
" mory of the late Queen, who, upon all Occa-
" ſions, and after the moſt ſolemn Manner, de-
" clar'd, She had nothing more at Heart, than the " Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover, and to in-
" fuſe into her People an utter Averſion to the " Pretender. All who have the leaſt Regard for " her Memory, will, no doubt, be highly pro-
" vok'd at the Inſolence of the Pretender, ſince
" what he ſays of her, and in his Declaration,
" publiſh'd in French, the Words are fuller,
" amounts to no leſs than charging her with hor-
" rid Hypocriſy, and ſuch a wicked Deſign upon
" her good Subjects, as muſt, if it had taken
" Place, irrecoverably have loſt, as herſelf ac-

" there is no denying this Declaration to be genuine,
" ſince Advices from all Parts confirm it to be
" publiſh'd by the Pretender's Agents in different
" Languages, and deliver'd by them to the ſeveral
" Courts of Europe. All that therefore can be

Dr Tyndal's Remarks upon it.

One of them, Viſcount Bolingbroke, who pretended to adore her and her Memory, above all Divinities, enter'd, not long after, into the Service of this Poppet Prince, became his Tool and Flatterer, and betray'd his King and his Country to the viſionary Intereſt of that Vagabond piece of Chivalry, who, in another Part of his doughty Declaration, tells his loving Subjects, as he whimſically calls the People of England, who are ready to lay hold of him as ſoon as they can come at him, the Elector is a Foreigner, ignorant of their Laws, Cuſtoms, Manners, and Language: But, as for himſelf, We are the only born Engliſhman left of the Royal Family. To this, Doctor Tyndal ſays, Dr Tyndal upon the Warming-Pan.

" Tho' the Prtender was born in England, yet
" ſince he was carry'd into France in his Cradle,
" this no more qualifies him to underſtand our " Laws, Cuſtoms, and Manners, than his being
" convey'd in a Warming-Pan to the Royal Bed,
" makes him a-kin to the Royal Family; and he
" who ſeems to underſtand nothing but the ridi-
" culous Trumperies of the Romiſh Church,

" a Notion of any Conſtitution, but one as arbi-
" trary as that of France."

Salaries of the Judges advanc'd.

About the latter End of November, his Majeſty was pleas'd to advance the Salaries of the Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, and of the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, to the ſame Sum as was allow'd the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, being 2000*l.* a Year; and to advance the Salaries of the other Judges to 1500*l.* a Year each. The King had, ſome Weeks before, appointed Sir Peter King, Recorder of London, to be Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, in the Room of the Lord Trevor; who, tho' he ow'd his Advancement in the Law to the Favour of King William, and the late Queen, when ſhe had able and faithful Miniſters about her, accepted of a Peerage at the Twelve-Creation. The famous Exchequer Lawyer, Samuel Dodd, Eſq; was made Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; for tho' he was fee'd by Dr Sacheverell, he was far from being principl'd like him, as were that Incendiary's other Advocates. Sir James Montague was made a Baron of the Exchequer, in the Room of Serjeant Baniſter; and Serjeant Pratt a Judge of the King's Bench, in the Room of Sir Thomas Powis, one of the Council againſt the Seven Biſhops. Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; was appointed Sollicitor-General, in the Room of Sir Robert Raymond, whoſe future Behaviour acquir'd him the general good Opinion of both Court and Country. Spencer Cowper, Eſq; was appointed Attorney-General; and Mr Forteſcue, Sollicitor-General to his Royal Highneſs. About the ſame Time, it was made publick, that the Ducheſs of Bolton, the Ducheſs of St Albans, the Ducheſs of Montague, the Counteſs of Dorſet, the Counteſs of Berkeley, and the Lady Cowper, were made Ladies of the Bed-chamber to the Princeſs of Wales; and Mrs Selwyn, Mrs Pollexfen, Mrs Howard, and Mrs Clayton, Bed-chamber Women to her Royal Highneſs.

Several eminent Lawyers made Judges.

Ladies & Women of the Bed-chamber.

It was generally reported and believ'd, that Robert Price, Eſq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer, would be laid aſide upon the Demiſe of the Queen, he having been always very cold and indifferent in whatever concern'd the Proteſtant Succeſſion; but he was continu'd, and the Report was, he ow'd his Continuance to his Readineſs to go down to Briſtol, and try the Rioters there, who were all of High-Church, as himſelf appear'd to be on all Occaſions. The other two Judges who went to Briſtol were, Sir Littleton Powis, and Robert Tracy, Eſq;. Some Particulars of that Riot have been related elſewhere. The Cry of the Rioters was, Sacheverell and Ormond; D——n all Foreign Governments. Their Deſign was to have demoliſh'd Mr Gough's Meeting-Houſe in Tucker-ſtreet; but the Villains being told, there were Perſons in it with Arms, they left it, and fell upon Mr Stephens's Houſe, a Baker in that Neighbourhood, one of Mr Gough's Congregation. Notice having been taken of the Ringleaders, the Mayor and Aldermen iſſu'd out their Warrants for apprehending them. The chief of them who were concern'd in the Burglary and Felony at Mr Stephens's, and the Murder of Mr Thomas the Quaker, ran away; the following were taken;

All of them leud, raſcally Fellows, the very Scum of the Rabble; but the High-Church Party thought fit to take them into their Protection. One of them, Chriſtopher Gay, threaten'd, after the above-mention'd Rioters were taken, and committed to Goal, That he would break Newgate open but he would releaſe them. Of which the Magiſtrates having Notice, he was apprehended, and ſent to the ſame Goal, by Robert Yate, Eſq; and Sir William Daines, two of the Aldermen, who had ſeveral times repreſented the City in Parliament. And indeed, the Magiſtrates of Briſtol behav'd ſo well on this Occaſion, that it would be unjuſt and ungrateful not to mention them with Honour; as Loyal Magiſtrates of Briſtol.

A.D. 1714. as Henry Whitehead, Esq; Mayor; Francis Whitchurch, Esq; Alderman; Abraham Elton, Esq; Alderman; Samuel Wallis, Esq; Alderman; Sir John Hawkins, Alderman, George Stephens, Esq; Alderman, Nathaniel Day, Esq; Alderman; and had those who were sent from London to try the Criminals, been as hearty and diligent in what belong'd to them, as the Aldermen and principal Inhabitants of Bristol were, in apprehending and imprisoning them, they would not have escap'd the Gallows so easily as they did; the Burglary, Felony, and Murder, being prov'd upon them by a Cloud of Witnesses. The Faction before-mention'd, set about serving them effectually, and rais'd Money to bribe as many of the Witnesses as would be brib'd. Two of them, Jacob Briton, and Joel Croker, staunch Men for Sacheverell, were inform'd against for bribing the King's Evidence, and Oath being made of it before Sir William Daines, he committed them to Newgate.

The Mayor and Aldermen of Bristol offer'd, by publick Notice, a Reward of 50 l. to be paid by the Chamberlain of the City, to any one that should discover the Murderer of Mr Thomas, the Quaker. The Judges appointed to try the Rioters, arriv'd at Bristol the 25th of November. The next Day Mr Coopy, Minister of Wraxhall in Somersetshire, whose Conversation with Mr Trenchard, the modern Cato, had by no means tainted him with Antimonarchical Principles, preach'd before them, and very justly distinguish'd between the true Church of England, and that of which Sacheverell and his Mob, had declar'd themselves Champions. He us'd not those Terms, but he said, The Church of England could never be guilty of any such Enormities as were committed, under Pretence of her Interest. That those who call'd themselves her Sons, and practis'd Disobedience to Rulers, Violence and Injustice to their Neighbours, who wanted Charity and Virtue, were not worthy the Name they had usurp'd, but were at best rotten Members of our pure and peaceable Church. Here the Faction of High-Church is so exactly delineated, that there is not one of them, who will dare to disown the likeness of the Picture; and by this Draught of an orthodox Divine, who knew better what Schism really is, and abhor'd it more than his Shire Knight, who brought in the Bill, let all Readers judge what incorrigible Hypocrites, or rather what abandon'd Cheats, these Men are, from the highest to the lowest, that are possest by a Spirit of Opposition to that of Christian Liberty, Charity, and Moderation.

Mr Coopy preaches before the Judges there.

Sir Littleton Powis, the senior Judge, gave a just and bold Charge to the Jury, which so touch'd the Audience, that, as the Annalist tells us, "some of the Tories who heard it, "were so conscious of their Guilt and Folly, "that they blush'd. Others, on whom Fear "wrought strongly, turn'd pale; but some "harden'd Wretches of the pretended LOYAL "SOCIETY, and others, had the Impudence "to laugh, affecting to make a Jest of the "Punishment they knew they deserv'd." The next Day seven of the Rioters were brought to their Trials, and among them one John Pine, who, during the Harleian Administration, had distinguish'd himself by his Insolence to Protestant Dissenters. While he was upon Trial, one Hart, a Tobacco Merchant, and a Member of the Loyal Society, thrusting himself forward near the Judges, to give Countenance to the Prisoners at the Bar, Colonel Earl told him he was one of the Ringleaders of the Mob, and ought not to be where he stood. Hart had the Front to stand it, upon which the Colonel, who was one of the Members of Parliament for that City, complain'd of his Impudence to the Court. Some of his Fellows cry'd, He was a Justice of Peace, one of the late Chancellor's making, but that did not keep him at his Stand, for the Court order'd him down, to the great Mortification of himself and his Faction, who were extreamly mutinous, and boasted they would turn the Riot on the Whigs, which they endeavour'd to do. They muster'd together twenty or thirty Fellows to swear things against the Evidence for the Crown, and in the Evening rais'd their Mob; above a thousand desperate Rogues, who crouded about the Assize-Hall Door, and when their Fellow-Villains were carrying back to Newgate, they attended them with their usual Cry, a Cheverell, Cheverell, down with the Roundheads. Their Dr Cheverell heard all this, and much more of the riotous and bloody Doings of his Rabble, yet with an Insensibility that one would hardly think the poorest Portion of Understanding and Honesty, could be susceptible of, he rather glory'd in, than was abash'd, rather rejoic'd in, than lamented, the Mischiefs they did in his Name, and following his Lessons and Example. I speak from my own Knowledge, and therefore with the more Confidence. They cry'd also, hang up the Murderer, meaning by it Captain Stephens, who fir'd upon the Rioters, and one Gonning dropt, for which they got Stephens to be try'd. But the Prosecution was so shameless and groundless, that it only serv'd to increase the Indignation of good Men against such a wicked Crew. Six of the Prisoners were found guilty of the Riot; and one of them, very clamorous about the Church's Danger, on whom some of Mr Stephens's wearing Apparel had been found, was convicted of Felony and Burglary, to the value of ten Pence only. All the Criminals convicted of the Riot, were fin'd each twenty Nobles only, to be imprison'd three Months, and give Security for a twelve Month to be of the good Behaviour. Francis Painter was whipp'd for his Ten-penny Felony, and the rest got off with the Payment of their Fees. The Proof against these Villains being plain, a House being plunder'd, and a Man murder'd by them, 'twas surprizing that not one of them suffer'd capitally for this Villainy. As busy as the Faction had been in suborning and bribing Witnesses, the Evidence remain'd strong against the Rioters, and Theft and Murder being blended with the Riot, it cannot be accounted for, that not one of the Criminals was made an Example, though indeed the sending those Judges, Powis, Tracy, and Price, with that Commission, was thought no bad omen for the Prisoners, the Annalist says, Those three Judges being zealous Members of that Church, whose Cause the Rioters had pretended to defend. We shall close this Matter with a Passage of the Grand-Jury's Address to the King, which will be a farther Explanation of it, and of the factious turbulent Conduct of the LOYAL SOCIETY. We do, with all Humility and Acknowledgment, return our unfeigned Thanks to your Majesty, for your great Goodness in sending a special Commission to this City, not only to protect your good Subjects, but to prevent, for the future, such riotous Assemblies, which, for these four last Years, the miserable Period of English History, this before happy Place has been expos'd to. We are sorry to say they have been encourag'd by some of our own Fellow-Citizens, who have from time to time notoriously espoused their Cause, and, as far as in them lay, SKREENED them from Justice.

I omit

*A.D.*1714. I omit the Endeavours that were now us'd in Scotland, to get a general Remonſtrance and Petition againſt the Union, becauſe they were ineffectual, as alſo the Formalities of the Earl of Strafford's taking leave of the States-General, and that Miniſter's Speech at his Departure from Holland, as containing chiefly Ceremonials and Harangues, in which the Reader will not much concern himſelf. But we muſt not forget the Marquis de Lamberti's being forbidden the Court; he was Miniſter for the Duke of Lorrain, and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend intimated to him, "That it was in-"conſiſtent with his Majeſty's Honour and Dig-"nity, as well as Intereſt, to admit to an Au-"dience the Miniſter of a Prince, who, at that "very Juncture, gave Shelter and Protection to "a Pretender, and an open Enemy to his Do-"minions." The Marquis de Lamberti tranſmitted this Letter to the Duke his Maſter, who return'd the following Anſwer. After ſame Compliments, the Duke ſays, As to the Chevalier de St George, the World knows by what means he came into this Country. Every one is inform'd of the Situation of my Territories, which are ſurrounded, and cut thro' on all Sides by France. 'Tis known how I had no Share in his coming into this Country, that I neither invited him to come thither, nor could I force him to go away. That lately, upon the Death of the Queen, I knew nothing of his leaving Bar, twelve Hours after he was gone from thence, and that I knew nothing of his Return to Bar, 'till after he was come back, as a Traveller that goes backward and forward in an open Country as mine is. As to the Manifeſto dated at Plombieres, which the Chevalier de St George had got printed, I knew nothing more of it, than that he gave me one after it had been publiſh'd. I am really much concern'd to hear that it has been reported, that the ſame Manifeſtoes have been ſpread abroad by you, or thoſe of your Retinue. I own to you, I am extreamly concern'd at this, it ſeems to be a Deſign to make me uneaſy, to give out that either I, or my Servants, meddled in ſuch an Affair. This Anſwer, and the Marquis de Lamberti's Excuſes to the Lord Townſhend, not being ſatisfactory, he took leave and left London, the 13*th of* December.

His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Lieutenancy's Addreſs, was,

I thank you for this Addreſs, in which you expreſs ſo much Duty and Loyalty to me, and ſo juſt a Concern for the Honour and Intereſt of your Country.

One would have thought that theſe, and other Expreſſions in this Addreſs, being the Senſe of the wealthieſt and worthieſt Citizens of London, ſhould have diſpirited the Faction, form'd by the late Miniſtry, but Deſpair is ſometimes as dauntleſs as Courage, and depending on the Breath of the Rabble, they continu'd their inſolent and ſeditious Oppoſition to the Government; the Viſcount Bolingbroke, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter, were the moſt buſy in their Devices to enflame the Minds of People, which were too hot before, and keep up a Spirit among the Tories. It was ſaid, that the Viſcount, and Biſhop, the Duke of Ormond, the Lord Harcourt, the Earl of S—d, and Arthur Moor, had ſeveral Meetings and Conferences, how to weather the impending Storm, but their Friends took a wrong Way to reconcile the Nation to them, in publiſhing a villainous Pamphlet intitul'd, Engliſh Advice to the Freeholders, which was a Compoſition of malicious Slanders, notorious Forgeries, and treaſonable Suggeſtions, written in a Stile which had the Pertneſs and Fluency of Lord Bolingbroke's. The Contrivers of this Libel knew where it would be welcome, and Bundles of it were intercepted at Exeter, directed to Sir John Coriton, Sir Nicholas Morrice, Jonathan Elford, Eſq; Philip Raſhleigh, Eſq; Francis Scobell, Eſq; John Williams, Eſq; Mr Granville Piper, Mr Welſhman, Mr William Cary, Mr Prowſe, Mr Philips, Mr Tonkin, Mr Cannock Kendal, in Cornwall, and to the following Reverends in that Country; the Reverend Mr Hughes, the Reverend Mr Collyer, the Reverend Mr Shute, and the Reverend Mr Bedford. This diſcovers plainly enough what were the real Sentiments of the Tories, with reſpect to the preſent Government, and the Libel ſet them in their true Light, as Enemies to the Royal Houſe of Hanover, and Friends to the Pretender. Their Enmity wrought them up to Madneſs, when they declaim'd upon the Danger of the Church, from the Princes of that Houſe being Lutherans, and her Royal Highneſs a rigid Calviniſt. His late and preſent Majeſty, and his Royal Conſort, having given the beſt Proof of the Falſhood of this horrid Slander, by a continual Communion with the Church of England near twenty Years, and being as zealous for it's Preſervation and Proſperity as even were Queen Elizabeth, or King William of glorious Memory. And as for other Princes ſince the Reformation, the Proteſtant Church of England has no great Reaſon to boaſt of their Friendſhip.

As

A.D.1715. As much as we have ſaid of the treacherous and diſgraceful Management of the late Miniſtry in the Utrecht Peace, we have ſtill a farther and more convincing Evidence of it, from the Confeſſion of their Friends the French, in a Speech of the Biſhop of Rennes, in the Name of the States of Bretagne, to Lewis XIV, the 10th of January, wherein he complimented him on the preſent flouriſhing Condition of his Affairs, to ſet which in a fairer Light he deſcribed the extream Diſtreſs the Kingdom was reduc'd to, about the end of the War, from whence the King, by the Superiority of his Genius, had found means to extricate it, by creating Diviſions among his Enemies, when France was on the very Brink of Ruin, which had enabled him to ſave Spain, and keep it in the Hands of his Grandſon, and alſo to give Peace to Europe, on Terms perfectly glorious and advantageous to his Kingdom, and conſequently inglorious and diſadvantagious to the Britiſh Nation and their Allies, of whom four or five Years before, he ſent his Agents to beg Peace.

On the 15th of January, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for calling a new Parliament, and it contain'd ſuch Reaſons for it, as could not but have a great Effect on the ſound part of the Kingdom.

It having pleas'd Almighty God, by moſt remarkable Steps of his Providence, to bring us ſafe to the Crown of this Kingdom, notwithſtanding the DESIGNS of EVIL MEN, who ſhew'd themſelves diſaffected to our Succeſſion, and who have ſince, with the utmoſt Degree of Malice, miſrepreſented our firm Reſolutions, and uniform Endeavours, to preſerve and defend our moſt excellent Conſtitution, both in Church and State, and attempted, by many falſe Suggeſtions, to render us ſuſpected to our People. We cannot omit, on this Occaſion, of firſt ſummoning our Parliament of Great Britain, in Juſtice to ourſelves, and that the MISCARAGES of others may not be imputed to us, at a time when falſe Impreſſions may do the greateſt and irrecoverable Hurt, before they can be cleared up, to ſignify to our whole Kingdom, that we were very much concern'd, at our Acceſſion to the Crown, to find the Publick Affairs of our Kingdom under the greateſt Difficulties, as well in reſpect of our Trade, and Interruption of our Navigation, as of the great Debts of our Nation, which we were ſurpriz'd to obſerve, had been very much increas'd ſince the Concluſion of the laſt War. We do not therefore doubt, that if the enſuing Elections ſhall be made by our loving Subjects, with that Safety and Freedom, which by Law they are entituled to, and we are firmly reſolv'd to maintain to them, they will ſend up to Parliament the fitteſt Perſons to redreſs the preſent Diſorders, and to provide for the Peace and Happineſs of our Kingdom, and the Eaſe of our People for the future, and therein will have a particular Regard to ſuch as ſhew'd a firmneſs to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, when it was in Danger: We therefore, &c.

On the 20th of January, the Day appointed for a General Thankſgiving to Almighty God for the King's happy and peaceable Acceſſion to the Throne, his Majeſty, and their Royal Highneſſes, went to St Paul's Cathedral, when, after divine Service, an elegant Sermon was preach'd by the Right Reverend Dr Richard Willis, Lord Biſhop of Glouceſter, who ſet forth the Reaſons this Nation had to be thankful to Almighty God for bringing his Majeſty to a peaceable and quiet Poſſeſſion of the Throne, and thereby diſappointing the Deſigns of the Pretender, and all his Adherents. Speaking of Political and Religious Wiſdom, the Biſhop diſtinguiſhes between true Wiſdom and State Craft, and the late Lord Treaſurer being known to be a Trickſter, a Craftſman, in the worſt Acceptation of the Word, why may we not think that this holy Man, in abhorrence of ſuch a Character, did thus expoſe it; not ſuch Wiſdom which is built upon Fraud and Deceit, and Diſguiſe, which applies itſelf chiefly to the weak Side of human Nature, by deceiving as many as it can, and corrupting thoſe whom it cannot. But his Lordſhip's Deſcription of falſe Zeal, of fiery Bigottry, the Schiſm-Bill Men, the Men that aſſert there never will be a proper time to give Eaſe to our Proteſtant Brethren, the T—pps, the Ber—ans, the Web—rs, &c. is the moſt juſt, natural, lively Picture, that ever was drawn for the Pulpit. How apt People have been in all Ages of the Church, to deceive both themſelves and others with this falſe Zeal, to glory in it themſelves, and to be admir'd for it by others; whatever fair Appearance this bitter Zeal may carry with it of a Concern for God's Truth and Religion, it is indeed nothing but a Pretence to cover other Deſigns. However, this may be thought a wiſe Method to promote a Party, it is ſuch Wiſdom as does not proceed from the Holy Spirit of God, &c.

The late Ld Treaſurer's Character.

The Character of the Schiſm-Bill Men.

On Thurſday, the 13th of January, between four and five o'Clock in the Afternoon, the Boy of one Mr Walker, who kept a little Gun-Powder Shop near Bear-Key, in Thames ſtreet, between the Cuſtom-Houſe and Billingſgate, being in an upper Room with a Light, and making Rockets and Squibs, either, as ſome pretend, for Mr Whiſton's Experiments, or for other Uſes, unfortunately ſet Fire to the Gun-Powder, upon which the Houſe blew up. The Wind happening to blow very hard all that Night, at South, and South-weſt, the Fire ſoon ſpread from that Houſe, to others towards Billingſgate, and backwards towards the Ware-Houſes on the Keys, did incredible Damage there, croſs'd the way to the North ſide of Thames-ſtreet, and, notwithſtanding the playing of Engines, and blowing up of Houſes, burnt up Water-lane, and the back part of Harp-lane, to Tower-ſtreet, taking Baker's-Hall, and Trinity-Houſe, in it's deſtructive Career, which, on Friday about five o'Clock in the Afternoon, ſtopp'd in Tower-ſtreet, over-againſt Mark-lane. About a Hundred and twenty Houſes were either burnt or blown up, and great Quantities of Sugar, Oil, Wine, and other rich Goods, were deſtroy'd. The whole Loſs ſuſtain'd by it, amounted to Five hundred thouſand Pounds. Above fifty Perſons were either burnt in the Flames, or were buried in the Ruins of Houſes. This dreadful Calamity made ſo little Impreſſion on the Minds of High-Church, that one of their Prieſts, in a Sermon on the Thankſgiving Day, blaſphemouſly aſſerted it was a Judgment of God, and a Mark of his Diſpleaſure at the late Proceedings.

A great Fire in Thames-ſtreet.

A High Church Prieſt blaſphemes it as a judgment on late Proceedings.

A Day or two before this, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, was ſent with a Meſſage to the Earl of Strafford's Houſe, to demand the Papers relating to his publick Negotiations, and the Earl having made ſome Difficulty to comply, without he had an expreſs Order from the Council in writing, ſuch an Order was made, and the Lord Townſhend, and James Stanhope, Eſq; Principal Secretaries of State, went immediately to the Earl of Strafford's Houſe, and receiv'd from him two Trunks, ſaid, by him, to contain what was requir'd. At the ſame time Orders were ſent for ſealing up the Earl's Papers that were yet on Shipboard, or at the Cuſtom-Houſe, coming from Holland. About this time the Lord Forfar was appointed his Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Pruſſia. When he came to Farringdon, in Berkshire, in his Way to the Welsh Borders, he sent for a Gentleman who liv'd a little Way from thence, at which the Gentleman was the more surpriz'd, because, being a Dissenter, the Earl had dropt his Acquaintance, ever since he dropt the Religion he was educated in, though before they had been very intimate. The Gentleman seeing those arm'd Men, seem'd to wonder at it, and the good Earl, in as great Wonderment, said, Sure, Sir, you do not know what a strange World we live in, and that the Country is every where so corrupted, that a Whig cannot travel in Safety.

Earl of Oxford and Viscount Bolingbroke leave London.

Earl of Oxford's Dissimulation.

In the mean while the Elections for Members of Parliament, were carrying on all over the Kingdom. The Faction of the late Ministers, spirited by their Priests and Libellers, were so presumptuous as to set up four Members for London, in Opposition to the Gentlemen propos'd by the Well-affected, four of the most eminent Merchants in that City, Sir John Ward, Sir Thomas Scawen, Robert Heysham, Esq; Peter Godfrey, Esq; The others were, Sir William Withers, Sir John Cass, Sir William Stewart, and Sir George Mertins. I knew the latter, when he was Journey-Man to a Presbyterian Banker, Mr Tassel, in Lombard-street; and had not the Warmth of his Zeal made amends for the Weakness of his Capacity, he could never have work'd his Way to the Chair. It was astonishing to me, to see such a Name in the List of Candidates, and no one could imagine there would ever be a meaner in the Magistracy of London, but we have since found that such a thing was possible. As busy as the Tories were to carry their Point at the City Election,

The Poll for London Members

The Poll stood thus :

Sir John Ward	3475	Sir W. Withers	2879
Sir Tho. Scawen	3489	Sir John Cass	2884
R. Heysham, Esq;	3499	Sir W. Stewart	2828
P. Godfrey, Esq;	3471	Sir Geo. Mertins	2774

It is remarkable, that Cass, at whose House the Traitor Freind was conceal'd and taken, about the time of the Assassination and Invasion Plots, had the most Votes of these four shining Ornaments of the City of London. To prevent the Charge of Partiality, I shall make use of the Words of the Annalist, in the following Paragraph. Pag. 18.

" in favour of the Whigs. The Tories being
" enrag'd at the Progress of their Antagonists,

" and accordingly having got a great Mob on
" their Side at Brentford, where the Election
" for the County of Middlesex came on, Janua-

" were so deterr'd by the Insults of the rude un-
" ruly Multitude, who were encourag'd and set
" on by several Clergymen, that great Numbers
" of them went away without giving their Votes,
" by which means the High Church Candidates,
" James Bertie, Esq; and Hugh Smithson, Esq;
" carried the Day.

The 30th of January being kept, as the Act of Parliament directs, Dr Newton, Principal of Hart-Hall, Oxon, preach'd in the Royal Chapel at St James's, before the Court; and Dr Sacheverell had a Sermon ready for the Day, in which his Wisdom and Moderation were equally conspicuous. One Malone, a Popish Lawyer, being behind the Organ in St Andrew's Church, where the Doctor preach'd, and taking Notes, it was observ'd by that sober Divine's sober Mob, who, supposing he was a Whig, got about him, and were going to lay violent Hands on him, but the Irish Lawyer declaring himself to be a Papist, Dr Sacheverell sent his Servants, who convey'd him safe through their Master's House, or 'tis thought he had been torn to pieces.

The Tories outragious at the Elections.

The Elections for the approaching Parliament, were ſtill carrying on with Vigour, and, in ſome places, with Rage, by the Tories, and with Diligence and Warmth by the Whigs, whoſe Succeſs, perhaps, pretty much contributed to the Regularity of their Conduct. High Church ſeeing how the Affair was like to turn, after they had been boaſting in their Examiners, and other ſeditious Libels, of being the nine in ten, acted in many places, like Men whom Deſpair had made mad; as in Leiceſterſhire, Hertfordſhire, Banbury, Pontefract, Shaftsbury, and Minehead. They were a little calmer in Kent, and the want of Senſe was more remarkable, than the want of Temper.

The Electors in ſome Counties and Cities drew up Inſtructions for the Gentlemen they had elected to repreſent them, of which we have already given ſome Hints. The Gentlemen and Freeholders of Buckinghamſhire, deſired their Repreſentatives to bring thoſe to Juſtice who had deceiv'd and abus'd the late Queen, and betray'd and ſold the Nation. I ſhall inſert but one Paſſage of the Inſtructions the Citizens of London gave their new Members, for want of room; tho' the whole are well worth remembering: We deſire and expect, that you will enquire by whoſe Counſels it was, that after God had bleſſed the Arms of her late Majeſty and her Allies, with a Train of unparallell'd Succeſſes, ſhe was prevail'd upon, contrary to the Grand ALLIANCE, and her REPEATED PROMISES from the Throne, to both Houſes, to ſend to, or receive Managers from, France, to treat, ſeparately, of a Peace, without the Knowledge or Conſent of our Allies.

On the 19th of March, the Heers Van Duyvenvoorde, and Van Borſele, Ambaſſadors Extraordinary from the States-General, made their publick Entry, which was very magnificent, and at the Audiences of his Majeſty, and their Royal Highneſſes, they made Speeches equally reſpectful, affectionate, and eloquent. A.D.1715.

On the 17th of March, the new Parliament met, and the Commons proceeding to the Choice of a Speaker; the Earl of Hertford, Son and Heir Apparent to his Grace the Duke of Somerſet, ſaid, " That, according to his Majeſty's Plea- " ſure, they were immediately to proceed to the " Choice of a Speaker: That in order thereto, " they ought, in the firſt place, to conſider, " that ſcarce any Parliament ever met in a " more critical Juncture than this, when Matters " of the higheſt Importance were like to be laid " before the Houſe; that therefore they ought " to fix their Choice upon a Perſon of known " Parts and Abilities, and that, in his Opinion, " none was ever better qualify'd for ſo great an " Office, than Mr Spencer Compton." His Lordſhip was ſeconded by the Lord Finch, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Nottingham, who enlarg'd on Mr Compton's Abilities, upon which Mr Compton ſtood up, and modeſtly excus'd himſelf; but theſe Excuſes were not admitted, and upon a general Cry, to the Chair, Mr Compton was led to it, by the Earl of Hertford, and the Lord Finch. His Majeſty approv'd him, March 21, and then was graciouſly pleas'd to declare, from the Throne, that he had order'd the Lord-Chancellor to ſhew the Cauſes of calling this Parliament, in his Majeſty's Name and Words. Accordingly the Lord-Chancellor read to both Houſes, the following Speech, which his Majeſty deliver'd into his Hands.

Earl of Hertford's Speech for Mr Spencer Compton to be Speaker.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The K's Speech to the new Parliament.

" THIS being the firſt Opportunity that I " have had of meeting my People in Parlia- " ment, ſince it pleas'd Almighty God, of his " good Providence, to call me to the Throne of " my Anceſtors, I moſt gladly make uſe of " it, to thank my faithful and loving Subjects, " for that Zeal and Firmneſs that hath been " ſhewn in Defence of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, " againſt all the open and ſecret Practices that " have been us'd to defeat it; and I ſhall never " forget the Obligations I have to thoſe who " have diſtinguiſh'd themſelves upon this Occa- " ſion. It were to be wiſh'd that the unparal- " lell'd Succeſſes of a War, which was ſo wiſely " and chearfully ſupported by this Nation, in " order to procure a good Race, had been attend- " ed with a ſuitable Concluſion: But it is with " Concern I muſt tell you, that ſome Condi- " tions, even of this Peace, eſſential to the Se- " curity of Great-Britain, are not yet duly exe- " cuted, and the Performance of the whole may " be look'd upon as precarious, till we ſhall have " form'd defenſive Alliances to guaranty the pre- " ſent Treaties.

" The Pretender, who ſtill reſides in Lor- " rain, threatens to diſturb us, and boaſts of " the Aſſiſtance, which he ſtill expects here, to " repair his former Diſappointments.

" A great part of our Trade is render'd im- " practicable; this, if not retriev'd, muſt de- " ſtroy our Manufactures, and ruin our Naviga- " tion.

" The publick Debts are very great, and ſur- " prizingly increas'd, ſince the fatal Ceſſation of " Arms. My firſt Care was to prevent a farther " Encreaſe of theſe Debts, by paying off forth- " with, a great Number of Ships, which had been

A.D.1715. " kept in Pay, when there was no Occaſion " for continuing ſuch an Expence.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I rely upon you for ſuch Supplies as the pre- " ſent Circumſtances of our Affairs require for " this Year's Service, and for the Support of the " Public Faith. The Eſtimates ſhall be laid before " you, that you may conſider of them, and what " you ſhall judge neceſſary for your Safety, " I ſhall think ſufficient for mine.

" I doubt not but you will concur with me in " Opinion, that nothing can contribute more to " the Support of the Credit of the Nation, than " a ſtrict Obſervance of all Parliamentary En- " gagements.

" The Branches of the Revenue, formerly " granted for the Support of the Civil Govern- " ment, are ſo far incumber'd and alienated, that " the Produce of the Funds which remain, and " have been granted to me, will fall much ſhort " of what was at firſt deſign'd for maintaining the " Honour and Dignity of the Crown: And ſince it " is my Happineſs (as I am confident you think it " yours) to ſee a Prince of Wales, who may, in due " time, ſucceed me on the Throne, and to ſee " him bleſs'd with many Children, the beſt and " moſt valuable Pledges of our Care and Concern " for your Proſperity; this muſt occaſion an Ex- " pence to which the Nation has not, of many " Years, been accuſtom'd, but ſuch as ſurely no " Man will grudge; and therefore I do not " doubt but you will think of it with that Af- " fection, which I have reaſon to hope from you.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" The Eyes of all Europe are upon you, wait- " ing the Iſſue of this firſt Seſſion, let no unhap- " py Diviſions of Parties here at home, divert " you from purſuing the common Intereſt of " your Country. Let no wicked Inſinuations diſ- " quiet the Minds of my Subjects. The eſta- " bliſh'd Conſtitution in Church and State, ſhall " be the Rule of my Government; the Happi- " neſs, Eaſe, and Proſperity, of my People, ſhall " be the chief Care of my Life. Thoſe who " aſſiſt me in carrying on theſe Meaſures, I " ſhall always eſteem my beſt Friends; and I " doubt not but I ſhall be able, with your Aſ- " ſiſtance, to diſappoint the Deſigns of thoſe " who would deprive me of that Bleſſing, which " I moſt value, the Affection of my People."

The Houſe of Lords reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs of Thanks to his Majeſty, for his moſt gracious Speech, which was reported to the Houſe by their Committee, March 22, as follows:

Moſt gracious Sovereign,

The Lords Addreſs.

WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, beg leave to preſent to your Majeſty our moſt humble and hearty Thanks, for your Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech to both Houſes of Parliament, and to aſſure your Majeſty, that although we met together with Hearts deeply ſenſible of the Goodneſs of divine Providence to us, in bringing your Majeſty with Safety, and at ſo critical a Conjuncture, to the Throne of your Anceſtors; yet we could not but become more affected with that ineſtimable Bleſſing, when we heard ſo very affectionate Expreſſions from your Majeſty towards your People; ſo clear and full Aſſurances from a Prince of ſuch known Honour and Juſtice, that the Eſtabliſh'd Conſtitution in Church and State, ſhall be the Rule of your Government; and ſo juſt and tender a Concern for our not having obtain'd theſe Advantages by the Peace, which would have been but a ſuitable Concluſion to ſo glorious and ſucceſsful a War, nor as yet a due Execution of ſome Conditions even of that Peace, eſſential to the Security and Trade of this Kingdom.

We are affected with Wonder, as well as with a juſt Reſentment, that a Pretender to your Majeſty's Crown ſhould be yet permitted to reſide ſo near your Dominions, eſpecially after his publick boaſting of an Aſſiſtance he expects here, and his avowing a Deſign to invade this your Majeſty's Kingdom.

We are but too ſenſible that our Trade is render'd impracticable, in the moſt valuable Branches of it, and of the ill Effects that muſt have upon our Manufactures and Navigation: But your Majeſty may be aſſured, nothing ſhall be wanting on our Part, that may any way conduce to the retrieving it.

Theſe and other Difficulties, your Majeſty met with, on your Acceſſion to the Crown, (and which we muſt obſerve, in Juſtice to your Wiſdom and Foreſight, would have been prevented, had your Opinion been follow'd) we muſt confeſs are very great and diſcouraging; however we do not doubt, but that your Majeſty, aſſiſted by this Parliament, zealous for your Government, and the Safety and Honour of their Country, may be able to take ſuch further Meaſures, as will ſecure what is due to us by Treaties, eaſe our Debts, preſerve the publick Credit, reſtore our Trade, extinguiſh the very Hopes of the Pretender, and recover the Reputation of this Kingdom in foreign Parts; the Loſs of which, we hope to convince the World by our Actions, is by no means to be imputed to the Nation in general.

And theſe good Ends cannot fail of being obtain'd, by your Majeſty's purſuing with Steadineſs, as you have begun, the true Intereſt of this your obedient and affectionate People: And your Majeſty may, by God's Bleſſing, depend, that in Conjunction with ſo loyal a Parliament, you may be able to lay Foundations that can never be mov'd, not only of the Security and Glory, but even of the Eaſe and Tranquillity of your Government, and that of your Majeſty's Poſterity; for which we offer up our moſt ardent Prayers, that it may for ever continue to reign after your Majeſty on the Throne of

A.D.1715. of these Kingdoms, and in the Hearts of a People truly happy, and fully sensible of their benig so.

After the reading this Address, there are arose a great Debate in the House, chiefly about these Expressions; And recover the Reputation of this Kingdom in Foreign Parts; the Loss of which, we hope to convince the World by our Actions, is by no means to be imputed to the Nation in general. The Lord Trevor, the Viscount Bolingbroke, the Duke of Buckinghamshire, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Earl of An———, the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of London and Bristol, and some other Peers, protested against that Clause, alledging, "That the same was injurious to the late Queen's "Memory, and even clashing with that Part of "his Majesty's Speech which recommended the "avoiding the unhappy Divisions of Parliament."

Peers except against part of it.

The Lord Bolingbroke vindicates the late Queen & Ministers.

The Viscount Bolingbroke, on whom that horrid Imputation lay, most heartily labour'd, with all the Power of his Eloquence and Genius, to make his Concern for the Memory of the late Queen attone for the Loss of the Reputation of the Kingdom. The Question seems to turn upon this, Whether the Assertion was true or not; if the Reputation of the Kingdom was lost, one cannot see what Delicacy requir'd that august Assembly to forbear declaring it to be so, let it fall upon whom it would, if the late Queen's Ministers would not take it upon themselves. They were those who shew'd Disrespect to the Memory of the late Queen, whom they betray'd, and abus'd in it. He said, "He would do all in his Power to vindicate the "late Queen's Memory. That he had the Ho-"nour to be one of her Servants; and if he had "done any thing ill, he would be contented to "be punish'd for it." But he ran away, when the Punishment hung over his Head. He mov'd, that the Words Recover, &c. might be soften'd into, maintain the Reputation of this Kingdom; and that the rest of that Paragraph might be left out. The Earl of St—— also excepted against that Clause, because it would expose the Honour of the Nation abroad, which he was sure had suffer'd no Diminution during his Negotiations, no, not even by the Journey to the Army, nor by the Duke of Ormond's deserting the Confederate Army, nor by, the dreadful Consequence of it, the Massacre at Denain. These, and other Arguments urg'd on that Side, were answer'd by the Marquis of Wharton, the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Nottingham, the Earl of Aylesford, the Duke of Devonshire, and other Peers; the Lord Chancellor particularly confuted the Objections rais'd by Viscount Bolingbroke, saying, "The Ad-"dress did not condemn any particular Persons, "but only the Peace in general, because they felt "the ill Consequences of it. That they who ad-"vis'd, and made such a Peace, deserv'd indeed "to be censur'd; but that the Words in the Ad-"dress being general, no private Person was af-"fected by them; and the altering of the Word "Recover into that of Maintain, would signify "no more towards the Justification of the Guilty, "than the Word Recover, towards the Condemna-"tion of the Innocent." The Question for re-committing the Address being put, it pass'd in the Negative by a Majority of 66 Voices against 33. The next Day the House of Lords, in a Body, presented it to the King, who return'd the following most gracious Answer.

His Majesty's Answer to the Lords Address.

I thank you heartily for this Address: Your Duty and Loyalty to me can never be better express'd than by shewing a just Concern for the Reputation and Interest of the Nation, since I have no other Thought or View but to promote the Prosperity and Happiness of my People. A.D.1715.

Mr Speaker having reported his Majesty's Speech to the House of Commons, March 21, Robert Walpole, Esq; stood up, and made a very eloquent Speech, in which he set forth, in very lively Colours, the great Happiness of these Nations, by his Majesty's seasonable Accession to the Crown; ran thro' the mismanagements of the four last preceding Years, and mov'd for an Address of Thanks to the King, conformable to the several Heads of his Majesty's Speech. He was seconded by the Lord Hinchinbroke, and none but Sir W— W—— rais'd any Objection to it. A Committee was appointed to draw it up, and Mr Walpole reported it, March 24, as follows.

R. Walpole, Esq; his Speech.

Sir W. W.'s Objections.

Most Gracious Soveraign,

The Commons Address.

WE your Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Commons of Great-Britain in Parliament assembled, return your Majesty our most unfeigned Thanks for your most gracious Speech from the Throne.

'Tis with inexpressible Joy, THAT WE APPROACH your Majesty peaceably seated on the Throne of your Royal Ancestors; and being thoroughly sensible of the many open and secret Practices that have of late Years been used to defeat the Protestant Succession, we cannot sufficiently adore the Divine Providence that so seasonably interpos'd and sav'd this Nation by your Majesty's happy Accession to the Crown.

Your faithful Commons receive with the highest Gratitude your most gracious Assurances, that the establish'd Constitution in Church and State, shall be the Rule of your Government; and the Safety and Prosperity of your People, the chief Care of your Life.

We are sensibly touch'd not only with the Disappointment, but with the Reproach brought upon the Nation by the unsuitable Conclusion of a War, which was carry'd on at so vast an Expence, and was attended with such unparallell'd Success: But as that Dishonour cannot be imputed to the whole Nation, so we humbly hope and believe, that thro' your Majesty's great Wisdom and the faithful Endeavours of your Commons, the Reputation of these your Kingdoms will, in due Time, be vindicated and restor'd.

We are under Astonishment to find, that any Conditions of the late Peace, essential to the Security and Trade of Great-Britain, should not yet be duly executed; and that Care was not taken to form Alliances, as might have render'd that Peace not precarious. And as no Care shall be wanting in your loyal Commons, to enquire into the fatal Miscarriages, so we entirely rely on your Majesty's Wisdom to make good all such Engagements.

It is with just Resentment we observe, that the Pretender still resides in Lorrain, and that he has the Presumption, by Declarations from thence, to stir up your Majesty's Subjects to Rebellion: But that which raises the utmost Indignation of your Commons is, That it appears therein, that his Hopes were built upon the Measures that had been taken for some Time past in Great-Britain. It shall be our Business to trace out those Measures whereon he places his Hopes, and to bring the Authors of them to condign Punishment.

Your Commons are under the deepest Concern, that a great Part of our Trade is render'd impracticable; which, if not retriev'd, must destroy our Manufactures, and ruin our Navigation: But tho' we are too sensible of those fatal Consequences, we

A.D.1715. are not without hopes, that your Majesty's great Wisdom, by the Assistance of your Commons, may find Means to extricate your People from their present Difficulties.

The Blessings deriv'd to these Nations from your Majesty's auspicious Reign, are not confin'd to the present Times; we have a Prospect of future and lasting Happiness, entail'd upon your People by a long Succession of your Royal Progeny. And as this is a Blessing which these Kingdoms have a long time wanted, so they could never hope to have seen it so well supply'd as in a Person of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and his Issue. Your faithful Commons shall therefore think it their Duty to enable your Majesty to support the Dignity of the Crown, and to make an honourable Provision for the Royal Family.

The surprizing Encrease of the Public Debts, even since all Thoughts of carrying on the War were laid aside, shall not discourage us from granting such Supplies as shall be necessary for the Service of this Year, and for the Support of the Public Faith: And we do entirely concur with your Majesty in Opinion, that nothing can contribute more towards preserving the Credit of the Nation, than a strict Observance of all Parliamentary Engagements, which we are firmly resolv'd, upon all Occasions, inviolably to maintain.

Speeches against the Address.

Upon the reading of this Address, there arose a warm Debate in the House; Mr William Bromley, Sir William Wyndham, General Ross, Mr Cæsar, Mr Ward, Sir William Whitlocke, Mr Hungerford, Mr Shippen, and some others, most of them dipt in the Guilt of the late Ministers, rais'd several Objections to it; which were answer'd with great Solidity by Mr Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, Sir Gilbert Heathcoate, and Mr Pulteney. General Ross insisted much on the Threadbare Speech; For it. "That the condemning the Peace, and censuring "the late Ministers, was a Reflexion on the "Queen, whose Act and Deed the Peace was." He was answer'd by Mr Walpole and General Stanhope, "That they rather design'd to vindicate "the Queen's Memory, by exposing and punish- "ing those evil Counsellors, who deluded her into "pernicious Measures; whereas, the opposite Par- "ty endeavour'd to screen and justify those Coun- "sellors, by throwing on that good and well- P. 218. "meaning Princess, all the Blame and Odium "of their evil Counsels." I must now make use of the Words of the Annalist, to avoid the Charge of Partiality. "Sir William Wyndham, in his "consummate Wisdom and Experience, endea- "vour'd to prove, that the Peace had been very "beneficial to the Kingdom, and offer'd to pro- "duce a List of Goods, by which it appear'd, "that the Customs had increased near 100000 l. "per Annum; but Sir Gilbert Heathcoate, who "readily own'd, that Sir William might indeed "produce such a List of vast Imports from "France, defy'd him to shew, that our Ex- "ports thither, particularly of our Woollen Ma- "nufactures, had increas'd since the Peace." What follows in the Annalist, is a melancholy Instance of the Confusion Gentlemen expose themselves to by going beyond their Depth, and meddling with Things they do not understand, a sure Effect of false Zeal, whether religious or civil. The Annalist proceeds. "Sir W—— W—— "was silenc'd, nor far'd it better with Sir William "Whitlocke, who having suggested, that the Whigs "design'd to involve the Nation in a new War, "and lay six Shillings in the Pound, was an- "swer'd by Mr Walpole, That none in the pre- "sent Ministry were for a War, if the same A.D.1715. "could any ways be avoided; and that he doubted "not but two Shillings in the Pound would be "sufficient towards this Year's Service." The Address was carry'd by a Majority of 244 Votes against 138. His Majesty's Answer to it was.

Gentlemen,

His Majesty's Answer.

I Thank you for the many kind Assurances you have given me in your Dutiful and Loyal Address.

No Endeavours shall be wanting on my Part, to promote your true Interest, and endear myself to all my People: And I will depend on your Zeal and Affection to defeat all evil Designs that may tend to disquiet the Minds of my People, and disturb the Tranquillity of my Government.

As yet Viscount Bolingbroke had not made his Escape, but continu'd in Town, and put on an Air of Firmness and Resolution which was not very natural to him, when he was apprehensive P. 225. of Peril of any kind. 'Twas said to be owing to the Advice of the Lord Trevor; who, to use the Words of the Annalist, had been embark'd in the same Cabal with him, and represented to him, "how much their Cause would suffer, if he, whose "chief Interest it was to support it to the "last, should meanly throw it up, by absenting "himself. He assur'd him, no Hold could be "taken on his Person till he was impeach'd; "which could not be neither, till the Papers re- "lating to the Part of the Administration in "which he was concern'd, were examin'd." Upon this Encouragement he appear'd publickly, and took his Seat in the House of Pears; but his Heart fail'd him, as soon as he heard Prior was landed at Dover, and had promis'd to reveal all he knew; which however he did not make good, tho' he was favourably receiv'd by his Majesty, to whom he was introduc'd by the Earl of Dorset; and the same Day, March 26, was entertain'd at Dinner by the Lord Townshend, together with the Duke of Roxburgh, Mr Secretary Stanhope, the Earl of Dorset, and the Lord Lumley: And that Evening, Lord Bolingbroke went Post Who flies to Dover, in order to embark for Calais, having in Disguise. taken all imaginary Precautions both to cover his Flight, and to be undiscover'd at Dover. From whence he wrote a Letter; some said, to the Lord L——n; others said, to the Lord Harcourt, and others, to the Earl of St——d; but the first is most likely, from the known Intimacy there was between them: But some on the contrary said, the Letter was not genuine, tho' by the Stile and Spirit it seems to have been his own.

Lord Trevor's Advice to Lord Bolingbroke

My Lord, Dover, March 27.

I LEFT the Town so abruptly, that I had no time to take Leave of you, or any of my Friends: You will excuse me when you know that I had certain and repeated Informations from some who are in the Secret of Affairs, That a Resolution was taken, by those who have Power to execute, to pursue me to the Scaffold. My Blood was to have been the Cement of a new Alliance; nor could my Innocence be any Security, after it been once demanded from Abroad, and resolv'd on at Home, that it was necessary to cut me off. Had there been the least Reason to hope for a fair and open Trial, after having been already prejudg'd, unheard, by two Houses of Parliament. I should not have declin'd the strictest Examination I challenge the most inveterate of my Enemies to produce any one Instance of criminal Correspondence, or the least Corruption in any Part of the Administration in which I was concern'd. If my Zeal for the Honour

A.D.1715. Honour and Dignity of my Royal Miſtreſs, and the true Intereſt of my Country, has any where tranſported me, to let ſlip a warm or unguarded Expreſſion, I hope the moſt favourable Interpretation will be put upon it. It is a Comfort that will remain with me in all Misfortunes, That I ſerv'd her Majeſty faithfully, and dutifully, in that eſpecially which ſhe had moſt at Heart, relieving her People from a bloody and expenſive War: And that I have always been too much an Engliſhman to ſacrifice the Intereſt of my Country to any Foreign Ally whatſoever; and 'tis for this Crime only, that I am now driven from thence. You will hear more at large from me ſhortly.

Yours, &c.

The Earl of Oxford goes to the Welſh Borders. P. 224.

The Earl of Oxford and Mortimer, in the mean time, after having liv'd ſome Weeks incognito, and, as the Annaliſt writes, skulking in London, went to his Houſe, near Wales, under Pretence of making Intereſt for his Son, now call'd Lord Harley, and his Brother Edward, and his Couſin Thomas. His Son and Couſin, who both voted for the French Commerce-Bill, were thrown out every where, but his Brother Edward, who was the laſt of the Family that left the Conventicle, had better Luck at Lempſter in Herefordſhire. The laſt mention'd Author, ſpeaking of the quondam Treaſurer's skulking, adds, "Various Reports "were ſpread about him; ſome ſaid, he ſtill con- "tinu'd in Wales; others, that he had been ſeen "at Burton upon Trent, travelling Northwards; "others, that he had embark'd either at Milford "Haven, or ſome other Port or Creek in the "Weſt, on Board a Ship bound for Genoa; "and others again, who ſpoke the Truth, that "he would be in Town in a few Days." Theſe Reports are a true Image of his paſt Life and Conduct: But as he was not in the treaſonable Deſign againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion, with Bolingbroke, Atterbury, and their Cabal, 'tis probable, he aſſur'd himſelf, that whatever other Miſchief he had been guilty of, it would not reach his Head; and that what he had done for the Duke of Marlborough, would be of Service to him in Time of Need.

Having inſerted Paragraphs of ſome honeſt and reaſonable Addreſſes, we will, for the Pleaſure of the Contraſt, take one out of the Addreſs from Wigan, from the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeſſes of that Corporation, becauſe it is of a kind that comes not a whit ſhort of the wiſeſt Counſels of Gotham; that it contradicts the King's Speech, as the Annaliſt writes, is the leaſt Foible in it; that it praiſes the Utrecht Peace, and gives the Lie to Truth, to Fact, to Experience, and common Senſe, is a Trifle, in Compariſon of the Exhortation to his Majeſty, to reduce all Proteſtant Churches, both at Home and Abroad, to the Government of Biſhops; which the good Men of Wigan aſſerted to be only legal and ſacred.

We take this Opportunity to return our Thanks for your Majeſty's moſt gracious Aſſurance of protecting the Epiſcopal Church of England: This, with your being in full Communion with that Church, muſt make you dear to all the Members thereof. We cannot but pleaſe ourſelves with the Hopes, that, by the Eſtabliſhment of your Family amongſt us, the favourable Conjuncture (which has been ſo long wiſh'd for) is now come to extend the Epiſcopal Government to the reform'd Churches Abroad; which, as we believe, is, the only Foundation poſſible to unite the Chriſtian World, (if ever it muſt be ſo happy) ſo it muſt render you, above all Things glorious to the whole Reformation, by being the happy Inſtrument of ſo univerſal a Benefit.

A.D.1715. The Publiſher of it was ſo aſham'd of the Thing, that he mentions it thus; "On the "27th of March, Sir Roger Bradſhaigh, who alſo voted for the French Commerce-Bill, introduc'd "by the Lord of the Bed-Chamber in waiting, "without naming him, as uſual, preſented, &c." About this Time dy'd Dr Gilbert Burnet, Biſhop of Salisbury, which See he enjoy'd 26 Years within a few Days. His Character is too well known by his excellent Writings to need our enlarging upon it. Whatever Enemies he had, were ſuch only for his Zeal for the Principles of the Reformation and Revolution. Two or three wretched Scribblers of the Jacobite and High-Church Factions have, ſince his Death, attempted to decry his laſt Hiſtory, that of his own Time, which, with all it's Failings, will live when the Works, I will not ſay of thoſe Scribblers, for they are dead already, but the Works of Conſiſtories and Convocations ſhall be no more. His Majeſty was pleas'd to nominate Dr William Talbot, a Relation of the Duke of Shrewsbury, Lord Biſhop of Oxon, to ſucceed him in the Biſhopric of Sarum; and Dr John Potter, Regius Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxford to be Biſhop of that See. The Ducheſs of Portſmouth in England.

On the 13th of March the Ducheſs of Portſmouth arriv'd from France, with a great Retinue. She alighted at the Duke of Richmond her Son's Houſe in the Privy-Garden near White-hall, and three Days after was preſented to her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, by her Grand-Daughter the Counteſs of Berkeley, one of the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber. The next Day the King ſupp'd with the Duke of Richmond, the Ducheſs of Portſmouth, the Earl and Counteſs of Berkeley, the Earl of Halifax, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, being preſent. While the Ducheſs was in England, ſhe had a Converſation with Anthony Henley, Eſq; a Man of Wit and Honour, and told him, King Charles II was poiſon'd, as we read in Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times, who had it from Mr Henley. Since the publiſhing that Hiſtory, a noble Lord informs us, in a Treatiſe of his, that the Ducheſs of Portſmouth being ask'd in France, Whether ſhe ever ſaid ſo to Mr Henley? The Ducheſs diſown'd any Acquaintance with him, and gave a very unworthy Character of Dr Burnet. Of which, in anſwer to Lord L——, I wrote,——

See Reflec. Hiſt. & Pol. pag. 7.

"I have been credibly inform'd, ſince his "Lordſhip's Diſcourſe was publiſh'd, that the "Biſhop not only told the Story often, as from "Mr Henley, while he was alive, but that this "Lord Sunderland's Father, told it to the late "King, and his Grandfather made it no Secret, "that he had it originally from the Ducheſs herſelf: "For the Truth of which I dare appeal to that "noble Family, and to thoſe who convers'd with "his Lordſhip's Father and Grandfather. The Fact "is notorious and too well known to be conteſted "by any one, that had ever ſo little Acquaintance "with thoſe noble Perſons." But what quite deſtroys the Credit of the Perſon, the Lord L——n ſent to the Ducheſs of Portſmouth about it, is a Paſſage in Francia the Jew's Letter of the $\frac{7}{18}$ April, 1715, to Mr d'Aulmay, at Paris, produc'd at Francia's Trial; wherein he ſays, The Ducheſs of Portſmouth, who is, at preſent, here, gives great Offence, as I am inform'd, by pretending to prove, that the late King James had poiſon'd his Brother Charles II. It was not expected, that after ſo many Years Retirement in France, ſhe ſhould come hither to revive that vulgar Report, which at ſo critical a Juncture cannot be for any good Purpoſe. Thus it is plain, beyond all manner of Doubt, that the Ducheſs of Portſmouth not only told Mr Henley, that Annals, pag. 62.

A.D. 1715. that King Charles II was poiſon'd, but that ſhe told many others, that he was poiſon'd by his Brother, the abdicated King. What then can be ſaid in Excuſe of the Lord L——n's Meſſenger making the Ducheſs deny it; and of his Lordſhip's hard Cenſure on me for inſerting it in my Reflections Hiſtorical and Critical? But ſuch is the fair Treatment I have all along met with from High-Church and the Jacobites, if they are diviſible.

General Echlin remov'd.

About the latter End of March, General Echlin was remov'd from the Command of a Regiment of Dragoons, which was given to the Earl of Stair, and Echlin, as well as Bolingbroke, enter'd into the Service of the Pretender.

General Cadogan's favourable Audience of the Emperor.

The Affair of the Dutch Barrier being left in great Confuſion by the late Miniſters, and thoſe now employ'd in Conjunction with the Dutch at Antwerp, to adjuſt that Matter with the Imperial Miniſters, meeting ſtill with Objections, his Britannic Majeſty ſent General Cadogan to Vienna, in order to remove them. Upon his Arrival there, 22 Feb. he went immediately to viſit Prince Eugene of Savoy, and Count Zinzendorff, Chancellor of the Court. The next Day he was admitted to an Audience of the Emperor, having been conducted to Court by the Lord Cobham, the Britiſh Envoy. He was ſo well receiv'd by his Imperial Majeſty, that it was viſible, the Imperial Court were ſenſible of the Weight his Majeſty of Great Britain's Interpoſition was like to have in the Counſels of Europe, the Emperor ſaid, That though a Reſolution was already taken upon what related to the Barrier, yet he would ſee if ſome Means could be found out to make the States-General eaſy, and that he would do all he could in that Matter, in Conſideration of the King of Great Britain.

April 6, People were ſurpriz'd with an extraordinary Motion made in the Houſe of Commons, by a Gentleman much in Love with the late Managers and Management, That the Houſe would appoint a Day to take into Conſideration, not his Majeſty's Speech, but his Majeſty's Proclamation. It was ſuppos'd the thing would have dropt, had not, (I muſt now turn to the Annaliſt again) "Sir William Wyndham taken up the Cudgels, and even "carried the Matter farther, by advancing, that "the ſaid Proclamation was not only unprecedented "and unwarrantable, but even of dangerous Conſequence to the very Being of Parliaments." This worthy Member had alſo had his Education at Oxford, and it is no Wonder therefore that he chim'd in ſo well with the Repreſentatives of that famous Univerſity. Notice was taken of ſo home a Reflexion, and Sir William Wyndham was call'd upon to juſtify his Charge; "who, ſays my Author, "rightly judging he could not defend the Particu- "lars, without giving farther Offence, and ſink- "ing deeper in the Mire, declin'd explaining him- "ſelf, though at the ſame time he reſolutely main- "tain'd the firſt Aſſertion, ſaying, that as he thought ſome Expreſſions in the ſaid Proclamation of dangerous Conſequence, ſo he believ'd every Member was free to ſpeak his Thoughts. Though this was contrary to the Practice of the late ill Miniſters, with which no body could be better acquainted, yet it was true, taken in the Senſe the noble Lord took it, who anſwer'd him, No doubt but every Member has that Liberty, Freedom of Speech being one of the eſſential Privileges of that Houſe. But the Houſe has at the ſame time, both the Liberty and Power to cenſure and puniſh ſuch Members, as tranſgreſs the Rules of Decency, treſpaſs upon the Reſpect due to the Crown, and ſo to abuſe the Privilege of the Houſe within Doors, as to render it contemptible without. It would have been well if the Offender had made a good Uſe of ſuch good Reproof. "Sir William Wyndham be- "ing call'd upon again to explain himſelf, and "ſtill perſiſting in his Refuſal, ſome Members "cry'd, the Tower, the Tower," which Cry I myſelf heard in the Lobby, then full of Perſons, whom the Report of this Affair had drawn thither; and I muſt needs own, their Opinion, and their Wiſh, for the generality, did not agree with the Moderation of the Majority within the Houſe, for the Tower was the Word without Doors, as well as within, and there was ſo much Preſumption in the Offence, that a leſs Puniſhment, and even that, did not ſeem proportion'd to it. Robert Walpole, Eſq; knew Men and Things too well, not to perceive the Drift of this Member's Obſtinacy, and ſaid to this Effect, Mr Speaker, I am not for gratifying the Deſire which the Member, who occaſions this great Debate, ſhews of being ſent to the Tower. It would make him too conſiderable, but as he is a young Man of good Parts, who ſets up for a warm Champion of the late Miniſtry, and one who was in all their Secrets, I would have him be in the Houſe, when we come to enquire into the Conduct of his Friends; both that he may have an Opportunity to defend them, and be a Witneſs of the Fairneſs with which we ſhall proceed againſt thoſe Gentlemen, and that it may not be ſaid we take any Advantage againſt them. After this, Mr Walpole ſaid many other things with great Force of Reaſon and Eloquence, and the whole met with general Applauſe; and the Members who were not in the Secrets of the late Miniſtry, inſiſting that Sir William Wyndham ſhould juſtify his Charge, Sir William, ſays my Author, obſtinately declin'd to do it, ſaying, he was ready to undergo whatever a Majority would inflict upon him, as if a Majority was not the Parliament, as if it had not been a Majority, ſuch a one as it was, that confirm'd the Utrecht Peace, and did whatever the late Miniſtry would have them, two or three Inſtances only excepted, wherein there was ſome Hazard like to attend their future Elections, if they had comply'd. The Queſtion being put, that Sir William Wyndham ſhould withdraw, it was carry'd in the Affirmative, by 208 Voices againſt 129; upon which Sir William withdrew, and with him, to a Man, all the 129 Members, a Liſt of which, for the Rarity of the thing, would probably be acceptable, but their Names will be found among thoſe that voted for Sacheverell, for the Schiſm-Bill, for the French-Commerce-Bill, and other notable Bills, that either never was paſs'd into Laws, or being ſo paſs'd, are now repeal'd, and no longer a Scandal to Men of Conſcience, Underſtanding, and Virtue; Sir William Wyndham receiv'd the following Reprimand from the Speaker, by Order of the Houſe.

Sir William Wyndham,

I Am to acquaint you, that the Houſe has come to this Reſolution, that you be reprimanded in your Place by me.

Sir W. W. reprimanded by the Speaker.

You have preſumed to reflect on his Majeſty's Proclamation, and made an unwarrantable Uſe of the Freedom of Speech, granted by his Majeſty.

This Houſe has made their Moderation appear, and ſhewn their Lenity, by laying the mildeſt Cenſure, your Offence was capable of; I am order'd to reprimand you, and do reprimand you accordingly.

Sir William Wyndham anſwer'd:

SIR,

"I Return you my Thanks for what you have "done, by the Duty of your Office, in ſo can- "did and Gentleman-like a manner: As I am a "Member

His Anſwer.

Lord F——h anſwers him.

A.D.1715. " Member of this Houſe, I very well know I " muſt acquieſce in the Determination of this " Houſe. But I am not conſcious of any Indig- " nity to his Majeſty, or any Breach of the " Privilege of this Houſe, and therefore I have " no Thanks to give thoſe Gentlemen, who, " under Pretence of Lenity, have brought this " Cenſure upon me."

Such Speeches ſeem to flow from a high Idea of one's own Merit and Conſideration. This Gentleman might not know that thoſe Members who brought this Cenſure upon him, deſir'd his Thanks as little as he thought they deſerv'd them. The Annaliſt writes: " The contrary Party, meaning " the High Church, took Advantage of this Mo- " deration, and ſome of their Writers printed, " and ſecretly diſpers'd, not many Days after, " a Libel, intitul'd, The Honour and Partiality of " the Houſe of Commons, ſet forth in the Caſe of " Sir William Wyndham, containing moſt bitter " Invectives againſt the Well affected, &c."

The Faction libel the Houſe of Commons.

Mr Secretary Stanhope lays the Papers relating to the late Miniſters before the Houſe.

The Papers relating to the Peace and Commerce, being laid before the Houſe, April 9, by Mr Secretary Stanhope, he took that Occaſion to tell them, " That nothing had been omitted, " that might either anſwer the Deſire they had " expreſs'd of being thoroughly inform'd of what " had paſs'd in thoſe important Negotiations, or " ſatisfy the whole World, that the preſent Mi- " niſtry acted with the utmoſt Fairneſs and Can- " dour, and deſign'd to take no manner of Ad- " vantage over the late Managers, in their in- " tended Enquiries; concluding, that the Papers " laid before the Houſe, being too many and too " voluminous, to be perus'd and examin'd by " all the Members, he thought it more conveni- " ent, and therefore mov'd that the ſaid Books " and Papers be referr'd to a ſelect Committee " of twenty Perſons, who ſhould digeſt the Sub- " ſtance of them under proper Heads, and report " the ſame, with their Obſervations thereupon, " to the Houſe." Mr Ward, a Lawyer, tho' he had always born his Teſtimony againſt Revolution Principles, and been a Stickler for the Queen's Peace, &c. ſaid, nothing could be airer, that for his Part, though his Principle was that Kings can do no Wrong, yet he was of Opinion, that Miniſters are accountable for their Male-Adminiſtration.

By this time the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer was come to Town, and his Brother, Mr Edward Harley, ſaid, " It was eaſy to ſee that one " of his neareſt Relations was principally aim'd " at, in the intended Enquiries; but he might " aſſure the Houſe, that the ſaid Perſon, notwith- " ſtanding the various Reports that had been ſpread " concerning him, would neither fly his Country, " nor conceal himſelf, but be forth-coming, when- " ever he ſhould be call'd upon to juſtify his " Conduct; that he would be able, upon the " ſevereſt Trial, to make his Innocence appear " to all the World. But if he ſhould have been " ſo unhappy as to have been guilty of the Crimes " that were laid to his Charge, he would think " all the Blood in his Veins too ſmall a Sacrifice " to attone for them." It being reſolv'd that the Papers ſhould be referr'd to a Committee of Secrecy, the Number to be Twenty one, upon a Motion of Mr Hungerford, the following Members were choſen.

Committee of Secrecy.

Sir Richard Onſlow.
Robert Walpole, Eſq;
Spencer Cowper, Eſq;
James Stanhope, Eſq;
Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq;
William Pulteney, Eſq;
Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq;
Daniel Lord Finch.
John Aiſlabie, Eſq;
Thomas Vernon, of Worceſterſhire, Eſq;
Algernoon Earl of Hertford.
Edward-Wortley Montague, Eſq;
Sir David Dalrymple.
George Bailie, Eſq;
Sir Joſeph Jekyl.
Thomas Erle, Eſq;
Richard Hampden, Eſq;
Sir Robert Marſham.
Alexander Denton, Eſq;
Thomas Pitt, ſen. Eſq;
Thomas Lord Coningſby.

A.D.1715.

This Committee choſe Robert Walpole, Eſq; for their Chairman, but that Gentleman being the very next Day, April 14, afflicted with a violent Fit of the Stone Cholic, they choſe Mr Secretary Stanhope to ſupply his Place. As ſoon as the King was inform'd of Mr Walpole's Indiſpoſition, his Majeſty ſhew'd a great Concern for the Health of a Perſon of his Abilities and Merit, and ſent his Phyſician to viſit him.

Mr R. Walpole taken ill, the King ſends his Phyſician to viſit him.

On Monday, the 11th of April, the Earl of Oxford went to the Parliament, and took his Seat in the Houſe of Peers. About this time the Earl of Peterborough ſuddenly return'd from his late Travels to Italy and France, having met with the Viſcount Bolingbroke, on the Road between Paris and Calais, but 'twas ſaid he did not ſpeak to him. The next Day after his Arrival, the Earl appear'd at St James's, but whatever was the Occaſion, two Days after the Lord Townſhend ſignify'd to him an Order forbidding him the Court. On the 12th of April, Thomas Marquis of Wharton, Lord Privy-Seal, died at his Houſe in Dover-ſtreet, after an Indiſpoſition of twelve Days, in the Seventy ſixth Year of his Age: It was generally believ'd, that the indiſcreet Marriage of his Son, with a Daughter of Major-General Holmes, afflicted him ſo much, that it haſtened his Death. The Marquis of Wharton was indiſputably one of the greateſt Genius's of his Age, in the Conduct of Political Affairs. He had as many Friends as the Conſtitution, and only it's Enemies were his. He made no Market of his Zeal for his Country, and expended above Four ſcore thouſand Pounds for it's Service at Elections, and otherwiſe. Many have wiſh'd that he had been the laſt of his Line; the Behaviour of his Son having render'd that Name odious and contemptible, which, in his time, was ſo glorious and amiable.

Earl of Peterborough forbidden the Court.

Death of the Marquis of Wharton.

On the 22d of April, was the famous Eclipſe of the Sun, to obſerve which the Chevalier de Louville, and Monſ. de Montmaur, two French Mathematicians, came from Paris, by Direction of the Royal Academy of Sciences. Their Notion was in France, that the Place for the trueſt Obſervation, would be Daventry in Northamptonſhire, but they were better inform'd in London, by ſome Members of the Royal Society, at whoſe Houſe they ſtood, and having been well entertain'd by Sir Hans Sloane, and other Gentlemen of that learned Body, return'd home with great Satisfaction.

The Eclipſe.

The 29th of April, being the Birth-day of the Duke of Ormond, ſeveral Noblemen and Gentlemen affected to ſhew a more than ordinary Zeal for that Duke's Character and Intereſt, by complementing him upon it at his Houſe, from whence ſome of them went to the Devil Tavern, near Temple-bar, and had a Dinner to celebrate the Day with the more Jollitry and Noiſe, which being underſtood by the Rabble, who, ſince Sacheverell's Trial, had been ready to take hold of all

The Duke of Ormond's Birth-day celebrated

They had been very riotous on the 23d of April, the Anniverſary of Queen Anne's Coronation, as alſo of King James's, and St George's Day, whoſe Name the Pretender took for his Title in his Knight Errantry. The Prints gave this Account of the Riot:

The Rabble mutinous upon it.

" The chief Place of the Rendezvous of this " raſcally Mob, was at the Conduit on Snow-hill, where they hung up a Flag, and, with " the Money they had pick'd up, got Wine and " a Bonfire. Upon the Conduit they fix'd the " Queen's Picture, with a proper Inſcription " under it. As ſoon as they were well heated, " they detach'd ſeveral Parties, to diſturb the " Peace of the City and Suburbs, commanding " every Body to illuminate their Windows, and " contribute to their Bonfires. All ſuch Windows as were not illuminated, they not only " threw Stones at, but at ſuch Perſons as were " ſetting up Candles, to prevent their Windows " being broke, and threw Flint ſtones of ſuch a " Weight and Size, as were enough to have kill'd " any Perſon they hit. They likewiſe ſtopp'd " Coaches, and extorted Money from thoſe that " were in them, inſulted ſuch as were paſſing " the Streets, about their lawful Occaſions, robb'd " them of their Hats, Wigs, &c. buffeted them, " and threatened greater Miſchiefs, if they would " not Huzza, God bleſs the Queen and High Church. They vented their Spite particularly " upon the Houſes and Perſons of the Diſſenters."

P. 327. The Writer of this Hiſtory was a Witneſs of theſe things, and many more of the like villainous Nature, and it was to ingratiate themſelves with the Rabble, or in hope of being ſupported, and aſſiſted by them, that the Schiſm-Bill Men ſhew'd, in other Places, the ſame Spirit, and not much better Underſtanding.

Two Preſbyterian Miniſters in Scotland ſuſpended for Diſloyalty

The General Aſſembly of Scotland met the 4th of May, the Earl of Rothes, Lord High-Admiral of Scotland, being his Majeſty's Commiſſioner; and the moſt remarkable of their Acts was, the confirming the Suſpenſion of two Miniſters, Mr James Maitland, of Inverkethie, and Mr John Maitland, of Fergus, who had been ſuſpended by the Synod of Aberdeen, for not obſerving the 20th of January laſt, the Thankſgiving Day for his Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Crown, and not praying for King GEORGE by Name.

Mr Hampden made a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, May 3, for continuing the Act in favour of the Quakers, that their Affirmation may be taken inſtead of an Oath, and a Bill was order'd to be brought in for that Purpoſe. Sir David Dalrymple alſo mov'd for a Bill to repeal the Act about Yule Vacance in Scotland, which paſs'd in the time of the late Miniſters, contrary to the Tenor of the Union, and a Bill was order'd accordingly; as alſo another for continuing the Impriſonment of Robert Blackbourn, and others, for their horrid Conſpiracy to aſſaſſinate King William. Theſe Aſſaſſins had been ſo bold as to petition the Parliament for a Diſcharge out of Goal, and, ſays the Debates about the Civil-Liſt.

The Committee of the Houſe taking the Civil Liſt into Conſideration, May 13, ſeveral Papers relating to former Eſtabliſhments, were read, and then the Queſtion was offer'd: " That it appears to this " Committee, that the Sum of 700000 l. per Ann. " was ſettled upon his late Majeſty King William, " during his Life, for the Support of his Majeſty's " Houſhold, and other his neceſſary Occaſions, " and, at the time of his Majeſty's Demiſe, after " the Deduction of 3700 l. a Week, that was " apply'd to the public Uſes, was the Produce of " the Civil-Liſt Revenues, that were continu'd " and ſettl'd upon her late Majeſty Queen Anne, " during her Life." They who propos'd this Queſtion, had two things principally in View; to vindicate the preſent Miniſtry from the Aſperſions caſt upon them by the Emiſſaries of Bolingbroke, &c. that the Whigs deſign'd to give the King a larger Revenue than his Majeſty's Predeceſſors had enjoy'd, and alſo to make good the Branches of the Revenue aſſign'd for the Support of the Civil-Liſt, which had been alienated or abridg'd, ſo that the whole neat Produce might amount to the Sum of 700000 l. per Annum. The Annaliſt ſays upon this, " The leading Men P. 494. " among the Tories, being ſenſible of the firſt " Deſign, and pretending to be ignorant of the " Conſequences of this Preliminary Queſtion, in- " ſiſted a long while, That it was enſnaring; that what HAD BEEN DONE in former Parliaments, ought not to be a ſtanding Rule for the ſubſequent; that ſuppoſing the Parliament had given King William a Revenue of 700000 l. per Annum, for the Civil-Liſt, they ought to conſider that he was to pay out of it, 50000 l. per Annum, to the late Queen, then Princeſs of Denmark, 15 or 20000 l. per Ann. to the late Duke of Glouceſter, and 40000 l. for the Dowry of King James's Queen. That after the late Queen's Acceſſion to the Throne, the Parliament, taking notice that the Produce of the Civil-Liſt Revenues exceeded what they had given for it, the Sum of 3700 l. per Week (that is 192400 l. per Annum*) was taken out of them, and apply'd to other Uſes; and notwithſtanding ſuch Deduction, the late Queen had honourably maintain'd her Family, and ſupported the Dignity of the Crown. However, if the preſent Revenues of the* Civil-Liſt were not ſufficient, they were ready to conſent to an Addition. It was anſwer'd, " That the Queſtion " before them was founded upon Facts, which, if " deny'd, would be prov'd by the Records of the " Houſe. But, continues that Writer, Sir W—m " W—— ſtill urging that the Queſtion was en- " ſnaring, Mr Secretary Stanhope reply'd, That he would be very plain with them, and own that as it was notorious that great Endeavours had been us'd to alienate the Affections of the People from the King, and his Government, by falſe Suggeſtions, that they deſign'd to plunge the Nation in extraordinary Expences, they thought it highly neceſſary to clear his Majeſty and his Miniſters, from that ſcandalous Aſperſion. The Lord G——ey reply'd, That the Diſaffection of the People, if any, did not proceed from his Majeſty, but from the Hardſhips his Miniſters put on the Tory Party. To which it was ſmartly return'd: " That as ſoon as it " would be made known to the World, how the " late Miniſters had us'd not only the Whigs, but " the whole Nation; nothing that could be done " againſt them, could be thought a Hardſhip: " but, however, that neither that noble Lord, " nor any of his Family, had reaſon to complain " of Hardſhips, the Queſtion was carried by a " Majority of near two to one, 250 to 150, " and 700000 l. clear yearly was granted, for 700000 l. " Life, to his Majeſty, for the Civil-Liſt." In Civil- the Debate upon it, according to the Annaliſt, Liſt. " Sir William Wyndham ſaid he had the Honour " to ſerve her late Majeſty, and had the Oppor- " tunity to look both into the Revenue and Ex-

" pences,

"pences, and he could aſſure the Houſe, that a- "bout 500000 l. per Annum were ſufficient for "the Support of her Family and Civil-Liſt, tho' "ſhe reſerv'd about 50000 l. a Year for the late "King's Conſort." The Courtiers were glad of this laſt Conſeſſion, and Mr Secretary Stanhope deſir'd the Committee to take notice of what that Gentleman had advanc'd.

Sir W. Wyndham owns 50000 l. reſerv'd by Queen Anne, for the late K. James's Queen.

There was another warm Debate, May 18, upon a Motion for an Addreſs againſt Penſions: The Tories were in this, join'd by ſome diſguſted Whigs, diſguſted, perhaps, that they had no ſhare in them. Mr Robert Walpole ſhew'd, "That "they ought not to ſtint the King's Benevo- "lence, nor debar his Majeſty from the Exerciſe "of the moſt glorious Branch of his Royal Pre- "rogative, which is to beſtow his Favours on "ſuch as diſtinguiſh themſelves in his Service." He was ſeconded by Mr Hampden, who obſerv'd, that all the Penſions, about which ſo much Noiſe was made, did not amount to above 25000 l. per Annum.

The Penſions but 25000 l. a Year.

On the 30th of May, there wa a Clauſe offer'd in the Houſe of Peers, to be inſerted in the Bill for regulating the Land Forces, for confining the ſeveral Regiments in thoſe Parts of his Majeſty's Dominions, for which they were allotted. The Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord Trevor, the Lord North and Grey, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and others, ſpoke for the Clauſe. The fatal Conſequences of which, in caſe of an Invaſion, or Inſurrection, was ſet forth by the Duke of Marlborough, and others, who urg'd, "That "his Majeſty, having truſted his Royal Perſon "and Family entirely in the Hands of the Na- "tion, and, at the opening of the Seſſions, told "the Parliament, that what they ſhould judge ne- "neſſary for their Safety, he ſhould think ſufficient "for his own, the leaſt they can do for his Ma- "jeſty, was to leave to his great Wiſdom and "Direction, the Diſpoſal of the few Troops that "were kept on Foot." My Informer adds, ſome Tory Lords mov'd, that the foreign Officers might be excluded: The Duke of Marlborough reply'd, "that to exclude Officers, who, like "the French Refugees, had for above Five and "twenty Years, ſerv'd England with diſintereſt- "ed Zeal and untainted Fidelity, would be a "piece of Injuſtice, unprecedented in the moſt "barbarous Nations." Thus we ſee that a Motion for ſomething more barbarous than ever was known among Barbarians, came from the ſame Quarter, that all perſecuting Acts and Schemes have come from, ſince the Reformation. The truly learn'd and pious Sons of the Church, were aſham'd of the tumultuous Behaviour of this Party; great Vulgar and ſmall Vulgar, as the Poet phraſes it, and Dr Chetwood, Dean of Glouceſter, in a Speech in the Convocation, put the Mutineers in a juſt Light, and delineated the Folly and Frenzy of High Church, and Ormond for ever; the Cry that of late brought the Rabble together.

Dr Chetwood's Speech againſt the High Church Rabble.

Such Speculations, ſays that learned Divine, ſpeaking of paſſive and unlimited Obedience, are, at leaſt at this Time, needleſs and impertinent, the preſſing upon our People the Duty of Obedience to Superiors, is an indiſpenſible Duty upon us of the Clergy: And there are thoſe who blame us for not poing it with more than ordinary Diligence and Application, at this time. More Riots have been committed, without any the ſlighteſt Colour of Reaſon, in a ſhort time, than perhaps any Perſon in this Aſſembly can remember. The giddy Populace riſes like a Spring-Tide (and both ſeem to be influenc'd by the ſame Planet) to a ſtrange Height, threatens and overflows Cities, and ſome Countries, commits a thouſand Inſolences. Nor ſhould I ſpeak of this here, were it not that I hear, whilſt they do this, that they pretend to be the Friends of the Religion by Law eſtabliſh'd. Thoſe who diſſent from us diſclaim them, I dare ſay none of our Communion will in the leaſt Degree countenance them. They ſay they are our Friends, but I fear theſe miſtaken poor People are ſecretly ſet on by our implacable Adverſaries. We have a King of our own Communion, he has given us ſuch ſtrong Aſſurances, ſo convincing Proofs of his Favour, that if any of us ſhould diſtruſt, he deſerves to forfeit them. We have no need of theſe Auxiliaries; if we had, it is directly againſt our Principles to make uſe of ſuch unlawful Methods. A.D.1715.

Death of the Earl of Halifax.

The Earl of Halifax dying, May the 19th, the Treaſury was put into a new Commiſſion, and Charles Earl of Carliſle, Sir Richard Onſlow, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir William St Quintin, Edward Wortley, Eſq; and Paul Methuen, Eſq; were appointed Commiſſioners. The Earl of Halifax had ſome time before his Death reſign'd his Place of Auditor of the Exchequer to his Nephew George Montagu, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Northampton; whom his Majeſty, a few Days after, created Viſcount Sunbury in Middleſex, and Earl of Halifax. The late Earl had, in the latter Part of his Life, ſlacken'd much in his Zeal againſt thoſe call'd Tories, who more regretted the Loſs of him than the Whigs themſelves, either upon a Suppoſition, that he was entring into Meaſures with the late Managers, or, which is not ſo well grounded, becauſe he was thought the propereſt to qualify the preſent Heats and Animoſities.

On the 24th of May, the Princeſs Carolina, their Royal Highneſſes youngeſt Daughter, arriv'd at St James's, having been receiv'd at Greenwich by his Grace the Duke of Somerſet, a Detachment of the Guards attending on that Occaſion. Three Days after, the Archbiſhop of York preſented to his Majeſty an Addreſs from the Commiſſioners appointed for building the 50 New Churches; of which I ſhall inſert only two or three Lines without Comment.

His Majesty receiv'd this Address very favourably, and return'd a most gracious Answer.

The Remembrance of these tumultuous riotous Times cannot but be ungrateful to all true Lovers of their Country, and therefore is a Subject that is not to be dwelt upon. At a Session of the Peace for the City of Westminster, where were present, Sir John Bennet, Serjeant at Law; Philip Howard, Esq; Robert Cecil, Esq; Sir Edmond Prideaux; Sir Henry-Dutton Colt; Charles Medlicot, Esq; John Ellis, Esq; John Chamberlayne, Esq; Edward Hawke, Esq; Galfred Saunders, Esq; Peter Lavigne, Esq; Roger Mallart, Esq; William Tatton, Esq; William Stone, Esq; Welliam Cony, Esq; John Tully, Esq; Lawrence St Lo, Esq; Richard Bealing, Esq; and Michael Creake, Esq; Justices of the Peace, an excellent Order was made to prevent the Disorders committed by the High-Church Rabble; on whom, however, it had so little Effect, that on his Majesty's Birth-Day, May 28, which was solemniz'd at Court with the utmost Magnificence, they did not forbear insulting the honest Citizens, who shew'd their Joy by Bonfires and Illuminations. The Care of the Magistrates in both London and Westminster, and the Orders that had been given the Life-Guards and Horse-Granadier Guards, to be ready to mount upon Occasion, kept them in some Awe on the Birth-Day: But the next Day, being the Anniversary of King Charles II, and his Brother King James II, who wanted again to be restor'd before he dy'd, they made greater Illuminations, and more Bonfires than were seen the Day before, especially in the City of London, where they broke the Windows of such Houses as were not illuminated, and amongst them those of the Lord-Mayor. They insulted four Life-Guards who were patrolling, and oblig'd them to cry out, as they did, HIGH CHURCH and ORMOND. We learnt from Dr Chetwood, what rare Sons the Church had in them; yet it was they who kept up the Spirit of the Disaffected within Doors as well as without, and whom the High-Church Libellers pretended to be the People. These have ever since been the Support of Faction, and the same Libellers, for the same wicked Purposes, have continu'd ever since to provide leud scandalous Pamphlets and lying Journals for those that can read, and Ballads for those that can only hear, to the great Scandal of the Nation, that never before could endure such Riots, Sedition, and Impudence. The Faction would feign have made something of a Clamour among the Foot-Guards, about the Coarseness of their Shirts; and truly that Clamour was not without some Cause, occasion'd by the Negligence, or rather Avarice of the Contractors; the chief of whom, Mr William Churchill, being the Duke of Marlborough's Namesake and Creature, his Enemies laid hold on this Occasion to reflect on his Grace, who caus'd this Advertisement to be made publick in the News Papers.

Lord Mayor's Windows broke by the Mob.

The Clamour about the Soldiers Shirts.

His Grace, the Duke of Marlborough, being inform'd, that the Undertakers for cloathing the first Regiment of Foot-Guards, had deliver'd to the several Companies their Cloathing, no ways answerable to the Pattern agreed for; his Grace thereupon order'd the said Cloathing to be visited; and finding the Soldiers very much abus'd in their Shirting, his Grace immediately directed the Shirts to be burnt, as well to punish, as to deter such Undertakers from committing the like Abuses for the future; which was done accordingly: and the rest of the Cloathing has been compar'd with the Pattern, that the Soldiers might have Justice done in all other Paticulars. In the mean time, his Grace order'd two Shirts to be made of good Linnen Cloth for each Soldier, in lieu of one; as likewise two Wastcoats, made by the Undertakers, of their old Coats, and the old Cloathing to remain to each Soldier's own Use. A.D.1713.

And when the Duke review'd the first Regiment of Guards, of which he was Colonel, June the 4th, he spoke to this Effect:

GENTLEMEN,

I AM much concern'd to find your Complaints so just about the ill State of your Cloaths. I take this Opportunity to tell you, that I am wholly innocent of this Grievance; and, depend upon it, no Application shall be wanting on my Part, to trace out the Measures that have been taken to abuse you and me. I have order'd you a new Suit of Cloathing, as will be every way becoming his Majesty's first Regiment of Foot-Guards. I desire you will return those, and take your old till such time as the new can be compleated, which, I give you my Word, shall be as soon as possible. I have had the Honour to serve with you a grat many Campaigns, and believe you will do me the Justice to tell the World, that I never willingly wrong'd any of you; and if I can be serviceable to any of you, you may very readily command it, and shall be glad of an Opportunity for that Purpose. I hope I shall now leave you good Subjects to the best of Kings, and every way entirely satisfy'd.

The Duke of Marlborough's Speech to them.

Upon which, the Soldiers, with great Acclamation express'd their Satisfaction and Joy.

One Captain Wight, a reform'd Officer of Windsor's Regiment, having written a Letter to a Friend in Ireland, it was, by a Mistake, carry'd to a wrong Person, tho' of the same Name; and being open'd, these traiterous Expressions were found in it: The Duke of Ormond has got the Better of all his Enemies; and I hope we shall be able, in a little Time, to send George home to his own Country again. Upon Information of this Letter, a Warrant was issu'd from the Secretary's Office, for apprehending Wight, who absconded. A Reward of 50 l. was offer'd for discovering him; and, not many Days after, one George Jeffrey was seiz'd at Dublin, just upon his Arrival from England; and being examin'd by the Lords-Justices, a Packet was found about him, directed to Dr Jonathan Swift, Dean of St Patrick's, Dublin. Jeffrey own'd he had it from the Duke of Ormond's Chaplain; and several treasonable Papers being found in it, they were transmitted to the Government. Let us now turn to the Annals. P. 456.

We have mention'd the Bill for regulating the Forces; which the Lords having sent down to the Commons, with some Amendments, they were severally read, and agreed to by the House. Mr Sh——, Son of Mr Sh——, a Parson and practising Physician in Lancashire, and at that Time a Burgess for Newton in that County, who had been a Commissioner of Publick Accounts, reflected, says the Annalist, on the present Administration, as if they design'd to set up a Standing Army;

A.D.1715. Army; the Abſurdity, or rather the Stupidity of this Reflexion is equally amazing and provoking. This ſort of Men have, ever ſince King William's Time, made uſe of the very ſame Topicks, to argue againſt keeping up a few Proteſtant Forces for the Defence of a Proteſtant King, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Conſtitution of our Country, as honeſt Men made uſe of in King James II's Time, againſt 30,000 Soldiers, Iriſh Men and Papiſts, kept up to deſtroy our Religion and Conſtitution; and they think they have done the Buſineſs, if they nickname ſuch a Handful of Forces a Standing Army. Mr Boſcawen, the late Lord Viſcount Falmouth, took up——Shippen, Eſq; very ſmartly. He had inſinuated alſo, "That "after all the great Clamour that had been rais'd, "their Secret Committee would end in Smoke; And Mr Boſcawen ſaid, "He could not forbear "taking Notice of the Inſolence of a certain Set "of Men, who having committed the BLACKEST "Crimes, had yet the Aſſurance to dare the Juſtice of the Nation: But that he hop'd, thoſe "Crimes would not go unpuniſh'd. That the "Committee of Secrecy were ready to make their "Report, and had directed their Chairman to "move the Houſe the very next Day, that a "Day might be appointed for receiving the ſaid "Report; and that, in the mean time, he "might venture to aſſure the Houſe, that they "had found ſufficient Matter to impeach of High "Treaſon ſeveral Lords, and ſome Commoners." We read farther, in the Annaliſt, Mr Robert Walpole ſaid to the ſame Purpoſe; "That he "wanted Words to expreſs the Villainy of the laſt "Frenchify'd Miniſtry." And General Stanhope added, "He wonder'd Men who were guilty of "ſuch enormous Crimes, had ſtill the Audaciouſneſs to appear in the publick Streets."

The Lord North and Grey, who left his Country not long after, offer'd a Petition to the Houſe of Peers in Behalf of the Aſſaſſins in Charnock's Conſpiracy, who were ſtill in Hold. He alſo mov'd, that a Day might be appointed to conſider it. And King William's Attorney-General, made Lord Trevor, as has been before related, ſeconded him. The Lord Vſcount Townſhend ſaid, "He wonder'd, any Member of that auguſt "Aſſembly would ſpeak in Favour of ſuch execrable Wretches, who deſign'd to have embrew'd their Hands in the Blood of their Sovereign, and mov'd that the Petition be rejected." The Lord De-la-War repreſented, "That after the Death of King William, the "Parliament had left to the Diſcretion of the "late Queen, either the continuing in Priſon, "or enlarging of theſe Criminals. That no body "doubted her late Majeſty's being a Princeſs of "great Clemency, but that, at the ſame Time, "ſhe had ſuch a Reſpect for the Memory of King "William, ſuch a Regard to the Safety of "Crown'd-Heads, and ſuch an Abhorrence for "the Crimes with which theſe Priſoners ſtood "charg'd, that ſhe did not think fit to releaſe "them from their Confinement. That all theſe "Reaſons and Conſiderations were now enforc'd "by the open Diſaffection which ſome People "ſhew'd to his Majeſty's Perſon and Government; and that they ought to be ſo tender of "the Preſervation of ſo precious a Life as his Majeſty's, that, in his Opinion, it were neceſſary "to make the Act in queſtion abſolute, and not "leave the Confinement of the Criminals to his "Majeſty's Diſcretion, leſt his natural Clemency "ſhould make him overlook his own Safety." Theſe, and the like Reaſons, were ſo ſatisfactory to the Houſe, that the Aſſaſſins Petition, for which the Lords, North and Grey, and Trevor, had appear'd ſo unaccountably, was rejected.

On the 3d of June his Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Malt-Bill, and the Act for regulating the Forces; and ſix Days after, Robert Walpole, Eſq; from the Committee of Secrecy, acquainted the Houſe, That he had a Report to preſent, according to their Order, but that he had the Commands of the Committee to make a Motion to the Houſe before he read the Report. That there are in the Report Matters of the higheſt Importance. That altho' the Committee had Power to ſend for Perſons, Papers, and Records, they did not think fit to make uſe thereof, believing it to be neceſſary, in order to bring Offenders to Juſtice, that ſome Perſons ſhould be ſecur'd before 'tis poſſible that they ſhould know what they are to be examin'd to, and leſt they ſhould have Notice from what ſhould be read in the Report, to make their Eſcape. He was commanded by the Committee, according to former Precedents, to move, that a Warrant may be iſſu'd by Mr Speaker, to apprehend certain Perſons who ſhall be nam'd to him by the Chairman of the Committee, and that no Members be permitted to go out of the Houſe: Which being ſo order'd, and executed, ſeveral Perſons were nam'd to Mr Speaker by Mr Walpole; and Mr Matthew Prior, and Mr Thomas Harley were taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. Then Mr Walpole read the Report in his Place; the reading of which laſted from one o'Clock till about ſix in the Afternoon. I am too much circumſcrib'd in my Compaſs to give the Report at large, which being moſt Peoples Hands, the Reader will here be contented with an Idea of it reduc'd to ten Heads:

Warrants to ſeize Mr T. Harley and Mr Prior.

1. The clandeſtine Negotiations with Meſnager the French Agent, which produ'cd two Sets of Preliminary Articles; the one private, for Great-Britain only; the other general, for all the Allies.

2. The extraordinary Meaſures purſu'd to form the Congreſs at Utretcht.

3. The trifling, and Amuſements of the French Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, by the Connivance of the Britiſh Miniſters.

4. The Negotiations about the Renunciation of the Spaniſh Monarchy.

5. The fatal Suſpenſion of Arms.

6. The Seizure of Ghent and Bruges, in order to diſtreſs the Allies and favour the French.

7. The Duke of Ormond's acting in Concert with the French General.

8. The Lord Bolingbroke's Journey to France to negotiate a ſeparate Peace.

9. Mr Prior and the Duke of Shrewsbury's Negotiations in France.

10. The precipitate Concluſion of the Peace at Utrecht.

Mr Walpole reads the Report of the Secret Committee.

The Committee alſo offer'd to the Houſe what they found material in the Papers referr'd to them concerning the Catalans and the Pretender, and a Letter from the Earl of Oxford to the Queen, together, with an Account of publick Affairs from Auguſt the 8*th*, 1710, to June the 9*th*, 1714; and conclude with taking Notice of ſeveral glaring Inconſiſtencies, that are obvious to every body, by comparing the late Queen's Declarations with the Meaſures her Miniſters preſum'd to take in carrying on thoſe important Negotiations. This Report is digeſted into a clear, eaſy Method, written in a plain, but nervous and manly Stile, and with the Dignity becoming a ſelect Number of Men choſen out of the Commons of Great-Britain. There remains no Doubt, after having read the Particulars and Proofs of the general

A.D.1715. Heads, that the late Miniſters were by the firſt, fifth, ſixth, ſeventh, and eighth Articles guilty of as much Treachery to the Allies, and Treaſon to their Country, as ever were Criminals that underwent National Juſtice, and the Infamy and Puniſhment of Traitors.

The reading of this Report by the Clerk of the Houſe of Commons, took up the Remainder of that Day, and all the next, till about four o'Clock in the Afternoon, when Sir Thomas Hanmer mov'd, that the Conſideration of it be adjourn'd till Monday ſe'ennight; and, ſays the Annaliſt, he was ſeconded by the leading Men among the Tories. Upon which, Mr Robert Walpole ſaid, "He could "not but wonder, that thoſe Gentlemen who had "ſhew'd ſo great Impatience to have the Report "laid before the Houſe, ſhould now preſs for ad- "journing the Conſideration of it. That as for "the Committee of Secrecy, as they had not yet "gone through all the Branches of their Enquiry, "they could have wiſh'd ſome longer Time had "been allow'd them to peruſe and digeſt ſeveral "important Papers. That, in order to that, they "would have deferr'd three Weeks or one Month, "the laying their Report before the Houſe, but "that ſome Gentlemen having reflected on the pre- "tended Slowneſs of the Committee; ſince the ſaid "Report was now before them, they muſt e'en "go through with it." General Stanhope added, "That, for his own part, he would readily agree "to give thoſe Gentlemen all the Time they "could deſire to conſider of the Report; but "ſince they themſelves had precipitated this Affair, "he was of Opinion, they ought to proſecute it "with Vigour, leſt by ſtopping on a ſudden, they "ſhould fortify the Notion which the Friends of "the late Miniſtry had, with great Induſtry, "propagated among the People, that the Report "of the Committee of Secrecy would vaniſh "into Smoke, becauſe theſe malicious Inſinuations "had rais'd the Spirits and Inſolence of the Diſ- "affected, and were the principal Cauſe of the "preſent Ferment among the giddy Multitude. "And that he agreed with the Member, who "had mov'd for the printing of the Report, that "not only the Houſe, but the whole World "might be convinc'd of the Fairneſs and Im- "partiality of their Proceedings; but that the "Crimes of ſome Perſons nam'd in the Report, "were ſo obvious to every body, that they ought, "in his Opinion, immediately to proceed to the "impeaching of them." The Annaliſt adds, the "Tories ſtill endeavour'd to put off the evil "Day, and ſome propos'd the adjourning of the "Debate till that Day ſe'ennight; but the Re- "port had made ſuch an Impreſſion of the Trea- "ſons of the late Miniſters on the Minds of the "Majority, that Sir Thomas Hanmer's Motion "for adjourning was carry'd in the Negative by "280 Voices againſt 160; and then Robert Wal- "pole, Eſq; ſaid, He made no Queſtion, that "after the Report had been twice read, the whole "Houſe was fully convinc'd, that Henry Lord "Viſcount Bolingbroke was guilty of High-Treaſon, "and other high Crimes and Miſdemeanours, that "therefore he impeach'd him of thoſe Crimes; "but if any Member had any thing to ſay in "his Behalf, he doubted not but the Houſe "was ready to hear him." The ſame Author again. "Hereupon the Tories look'd one another "in the Face, and there was, for ſome Minutes, "a deep Silence; but Mr Hungerford, who had "formerly been expell'd for Bribery, broke it, "with ſaying, That, in his Opinion, nothing "was mention'd in the Report in relation to the "Lord Bolingbroke, that amounted to High- "Treaſon." And General Roſs ſaid, "He won- "der'd no body ſpoke in Favour of my Lord "Bolingbroke; that, for his own part, he had "nothing to ſay at preſent, but reſerv'd to him- "ſelf to ſpeak in a proper Time." Then the Lord Coningsby, the late Treaſurer's Coun- tryman, ſtood up, and ſaid, "The worthy "Chairman of the Committee has impeach'd the "Hand, but I do impeach the Head; he has "impeach'd the Clerk, and I the Juſtice; he has "impeach'd the Scholar, and I the Maſter; I "impeach Robert Earl of Oxford and Earl Mor- "timer of High-Treaſon, and other high Crimes "and Miſdemeanours." Mr Edward Harley, the Auditor, Brother to the Impeach'd, made a long Speech, wherein he endeavour'd to juſtify him, as having done nothing but by the immediate Com- mands of the late Queen. A good Topick for a Perſon of a ſmall Genius. But thoſe that could go deeper into the Argument, muſt needs have Pity on the Man that us'd it; for if Kings and Queens can do no Wrong, it is in a Sup- poſition, that what is done, is the doing of their Miniſtry's, who certainly can do wrong, and ought to ſuffer for it; but, in this Caſe, no Man of common Knowledge made a Queſtion of the Miniſtries doing every thing, and that their Miſ- treſs neither could nor would have done as ſhe did, had not they impos'd upon her by Miſrepreſenta- tions, falſe Lights, and falſe Reports. A Brother- in-Law of the Earl of Oxford's, Mr Foley, another Auditor, complain'd of the Hardſhips put upon the Earl, in charging him with High-Treaſon before they had examin'd the Report. Sir Joſeph Jekyl, one of the Committee of Secrecy, declar'd, "That "as to the Lord Bolingbroke, they had more than "ſufficient Evidence to convict him of High- "Treaſon, upon the Statute 25 Edw. III. But as "to the Earl of Oxford, he doubted whether they "had either ſufficient Matter or Evidence to im- "peach him of High-Treaſon". But an honour- able Member of the Committee of Secrecy, having aſſur'd the Houſe, that beſides what had appear'd before them, and was mention'd in the Report, they had other Evidence, viva voce. It was reſolv'd to impeach him without dividing.

A.D.1715.

Sir Tho. Hanmer for ad- journing.

Anſwer'd by Mr R. Walpole.

Lord Bo- lingbroke impeach'd of High- Treaſon.

Earl of Oxford impeach'd of High- Treaſon.

Two Au- ditors ſpeak for him.

The Duke of Ormond's Behaviour had been ſuch in the Time of the impeach'd Miniſtry, that he had taken on himſelf a very large Portion of their Guilt. Whether the Fault was in the Head or in the Heart, came not within the Con- ſideration of the Houſe, who could not but be convinc'd that a Fault there was, and that the Juſtice of the Nation could not let it paſs with- out Satisfaction. The Conduct of his pretended Friends on this Occaſion, ſeem'd to aggravate rather than extenuate his own. His Name was ſet up as a Signal for Riots and Tumults, and he was as far from diſowning them as was Sache- verell; nay, that his Family fondly indulg'd his Popularity, and contributed to make him the Darling of the Populace, might be conjectur'd by the following very extravagant Advertiſment, which was diſpers'd with great Induſtry.

On Tueſday, the 7th of this Month, her Grace the Ducheſs of Ormond, in her Return from Rich- mond, was ſtopp'd in her Coach by three Perſons well mounted, and well arm'd, in Diguiſe, who enquir'd, if the Duke was in the Coach, and ſeem'd to have a Deſign upon his Life, if he had been there. It has been obſerv'd, many Perſons, arm'd and diſguis'd in the like manner, have been watch- ing Day and Night upon that Road, on each Side of the Water, and, it is not to be doubted, with a Deſign

An extra- vagant Adver- tiſement about him.

A.D.1715. Deſign to aſſaſſinate his Grace. For what! out of Envy to his being the Idol of the Mob, or out of Fear of his bringing all the Army over to him, and ſetting up himſelf or the Pretender. Of all the Men in England, one would have leaſt thought of an Aſſaſſination Plot againſt the Duke of Ormond, who, on the 21ſt of June, was impeach'd by General Stanhope, in Words to this effect: "I wiſh I were not oblig'd to break Si- "lence on this Occaſion, but as a Member of the "Secret Committee, and of this great Aſſembly, "which ought to do the Nation Juſtice, I think "it my Duty to impeach James Duke of Or- "mond, of High-Treaſon, and other High Crimes "and Miſdemeanours." He was ſeconded by Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq; but Archibald Hutcheſon, Eſq; a Commiſſioner of Trade, the ſame who afterwards diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by Oppoſition to the Adminiſtration, ſpoke much of the Duke's Birth and Qualifications, and the great Services which both he and his Grandfather, who alſo had been impeach'd in Parliament, had perform'd to the Crown and Nation. Every body knew that the Duke of Ormond had behav'd very gallantly, during all King William's Wars, that he join'd him early, before the Revolution, and was equally in his, and his Country's Favour; but what did all that ſignify to clear him of deſerting the Confederate Army, of the fatal Suſpenſion of Arms, of ſeizing of Ghent and Bruges, of acting in Concert with the French General, and of ready Obedience to all the traiterous Injunctions of the impeach'd Miniſters. Several Members, as General Roſs, Sir William Wyndham, Mr Ward, and Mr Hungerford, ſpoke in Behalf of the Duke, as did alſo, which was much more favourable to him, General Lumley, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Thomas Onſlow, Eſq; But Thomas Lyddel, Eſq; a young Gentleman of bright Parts, who ſpoke this firſt time with great Deliberation and Applauſe, Mr Hampden, and Mr Thompſon, Recorder of London, ſtrongly ſupported General Stanhope's Motion, anſwered all that had been alledg'd in the Duke's Favour, and, among other things, repreſented, "That "he ever affected Popularity, that he could not "be ignorant of the Tumults and Riots, of which "his Name was the Signal, and that ſince he did "not publickly diſown them, who made uſe of "his Name, his Silence was a tacit Approbation "of their Proceedings, and ſeemed to ſummon "the People to a general Inſurrection."

The Duke of Ormond impeach'd of High-Treaſon.

Sir Edward Northey, Attorney-General, who had been very acquieſcing in the Meaſures of the impeach'd ones, could not help owning, that in the Report of the Committee of Secrecy, there were ſome Matters on which an Impeachment of High-Treaſon againſt the Duke of ORMOND, might be grounded; but he did not explain himſelf as Mr Lechmere, Sollicitor-General did, and mention'd a Caſe parallel with the Duke's, which had been adjudg'd Treaſon. The Debate laſted till near eleven o'Clock at Night, and then the Queſtion being put, it was Reſolv'd, by a Majority of 234 Voices againſt 187, that this Houſe will impeach James Duke of Ormond of High-Treaſon, and other High Crimes and Miſdemeaners.

It was the general Opinion, that the raſh unadvis'd Behaviour of the Duke's pretended Friends, of whom Dr Atterbury was chief, very much forwarded the paſſing of this Vote. It was ſaid, that a Relation of the Duke's, had ſo far prevail'd on the Obſtinacy of his Temper at that time, though he was himſelf an Iriſh Papiſt, that the Duke wrote a ſubmiſſive Letter to his Majeſty, deſiring a favourable Interpretation of his former Actions, and imploring his Majeſty's Clemency; which had ſo good Effect, that he was to have been admitted to his Majeſty's Preſence in his Cloſet, to confirm further what he had written, and, at his own Requeſt, it was to have been very private, and late in the Evening. But before the time came, Biſhop Atterbury had been with him, and the Conſequence of it was, that he left the Town abruptly, and never return'd to it ſince.

The Houſe reſuming the Conſideration of the Report, June 22, John Aiſlabie, Eſq; Treaſurer of the Navy, who ſpoke firſt, took notice, "of "the general Concern that appear'd the Day be- "fore in the Houſe, for the noble Perſon that "had been impeach'd, becauſe they were per- "ſuaded it was rather through Weakneſs than "Malice, that he had follow'd pernicious Coun- "ſels. But that, in his Opinion, few, if any, "would ſpeak in behalf of another Lord, whom "he was to impeach; that the Perſon he meant "was Thomas Earl of Strafford, one of the Ple- "nipotentiaries of Great Britain, at the Congreſs "at Utrecht, whoſe Conduct had been vaſtly dif- "ferent from that of his Colleague, the preſent "Biſhop of London. That this good and pious "Prelate ſeem'd to have been put at the Head of "that Negotiation, only to palliate the Iniquity "of it under the Sacredneſs of his Character, "that he was little more than a Cypher in the "Abſence of the Earl of Strafford. That the "Biſhop not being in the Secret, had acted with "Reſerve and Caution, and would do nothing "without the Queen's ſpecial Command; where- "as the Earl of Strafford not only was forward "to venture, and undertake any thing, as he "expreſs'd himſelf in one of his Letters, to be "the TOOL of a FRENCHIFY'D Miniſtry, but "in many Inſtances had gone beyond his Inſtru- "ctions, and adviſ'd the moſt pernicious Mea- "ſures: That having impartially weigh'd the dif- "ferent Conduct of theſe two Miniſters, he was "glad that nothing could be charg'd upon the "Biſhop, which gave them an Opportunity to "convince the World, that the Church is not in "Danger, but mov'd, that Thomas Earl of Straf- "ford, be impeach'd of High Crimes and Miſde- "meanors. Mr Aiſlabie enlarg'd upon this Charge, "and he reduc'd it to three principal Heads: 1. The "Earl of Strafford's adviſing the fatal Suſpenſion of "Arms, which was ſoon after attended with ſeve- "ral Misfortunes which befel the Allies, and, at "laſt, reduc'd them to the Neceſſity of ſubmit- "ting to the Terms of an unſafe, diſhonourable "Peace. 2*dly*. Adviſing the ſeizing of Ghent and "Bruges, in order to diſtreſs the Allies, and fa- "vour the Enemy. And, 3*dly*. The Inſolence "and Contempt, with which he had treated the "moſt Serene Houſe of Hanover, and their Ge- "nerals and Miniſters." Theſe Heads, eſpecially the laſt, are of that kind, that they will not bear Reflexion, while the Perſon is living, and in a Condition to be troubleſome to any one that ſay a Word of him without Warrant. Poſterity may ask how that came about? Let Poſterity anſwer themſelves from the Facts that will be tranſmitted to them in future Hiſtories. George Bailie, Eſq; a Gentleman of great Abilities and Worth, having ſeconded Mr Aiſlabie, Sir William Wyndham endeavour'd to juſtify the Earl of Straf-ford, by ſaying, "That the Peace, the Sequel "and neceſſary Conſequence of the Suſpenſion of "Arms, had been approv'd as ſuch, by two ſuc- "ceſſive Parliaments, and declar'd Advantageous, "Safe, and Honourable." It is aſtoniſhing that ſuch Words ſhould be repeated by a Perſon that had

Mr Aiſlabie's Speech when he impeach'd the Earl of Strafford.

The Charge againſt the Earl.

A.D.1715. had juſt heard the Report read, and after there had been ſo many Declarations and Remonſtrances to the contrary, and in a Caſe where the Clemency of the preſent Age to the Criminals, will be the only Proof of their Innocence to the Ages to come. Mr Shippen, and Mr Ward, a Lawyer, and Mr Snell, ſpoke alſo in Favour of the Earl of Strafford; and Mr Hungerford, among other things, ſaid, That though the Biſhop of London had an equal Share with the Earl of Strafford in the Negotiations of Peace, he was, it ſeems, to have the Benefit of his Clergy. General Roſs having ſaid ſomething to excuſe the Suſpenſion of Arms, a fine Subject for a Soldier's Harangue, General Cadogan anſwer'd him with great Vivacity, That, conſidering the Situation of both Armies, the Confederates loſt the faireſt Opportunity they ever had in Flanders, to deſtroy the Enemy's Army, and to penetrate into the very Heart of France; but added, that nothing leſs could be expected from a Princeſs, and a Miniſtry, who had entirely deliver'd themſelves into the Hands of France. Sir James Campbel ſpoke alſo for the Impeachment, and Sir David Dalrimple, with equal Clearneſs and Solidity, ſumm'd up what had been ſaid on both Sides. He then illuſtrated the preſent Caſe, by parallel Inſtances, and proper Obſervations, and ſhew'd, that by both the Civil and Statute Laws, the Earl of Strafford was, at leaſt, guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, which Queſtion being put, it was carried in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 268 Voices, againſt 100, and accordingly he was impeach'd.

General Cadogan anſwers General Roſs.

Earl of Strafford impeach'd

On the 7th of July, Mr Robert Walpole, from the Committee of Secrecy, acquainted the Houſe, that the Committee had, in obedience to their Commands, prepar'd Articles of High-Treaſon, and other High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, againſt Robert Earl of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer, which were read by him, in his Place, and the next Day by the Clerk of the Houſe, and the firſt ten Articles were, upon the Queſtion, ſeverally agreed to. They are too long for this Place, they relate chiefly to the Negotiation of Peace, and the eleventh Article being voted High-Treaſon, I give it at large.

The Article of High-Treaſon againſt the Earl of Oxford.

" That whereas the States-General of the " United Provinces, were, in or about the Month " of September, or October, in the Year of our " Lord 1712, in Poſſeſſion of the ſtrong and im- " portant Town and Fortreſs of Tournay, and " whereas the French King had, during the Courſe " of the ſaid private, ſeparate, and traiterous Ne- " gotiation, between him, the ſaid Robert Earl of " Oxford, and Earl Mortimer, and others, and " the Miniſters of France, ſignify'd his Conſent to " the Miniſters of Great Britain, that the ſaid " Town and Fortreſs of Tournay, ſhould remain " to the ſaid States-General, as part of their " Barrier: And whereas her Majeſty, in her " Inſtruction of December 23, 1711, to her Ple- " nipotentiaries at Utrecht, had expreſsly directed " them to inſiſt with the Plenipotentiaries of " France, in the General Congreſs, that towards " forming a ſufficient Barrier for the States-Ge- " neral, Tournay ſhould remain to their High " Mightineſſes; and did afterwards declare her- " ſelf conformably thereto, in her Speech to both " Houſes of Parliament, on the 6th of June, " 1712, in which ſhe communicated to them the " Terms, whereon a Peace might be made. " And whereas for ſeveral Years before, and till " the ſaid Months of September and October, in " the Year of our Lord 1711, there was open " War between her late Majeſty and the French " King, and the ſaid War continuing for all the " ſaid time, and afterwards, the ſaid French King " and his Subjects, were Enemies to her Majeſty; " he, the ſaid Robert Earl of Oxford, and Earl " Mortimer, then Lord-High-Treaſurer of Great " Britain, and a Subject of her Majeſty's, not " conſidering the Duty of his Allegiance, but ha- " ving altogether withdrawn, &c." A.D.1715.

Sir Robert Raymond, formerly Sollicitor-General, Mr William Bromley, Eſq; Sir William Wyndham, Edward Harley, Eſq; ——— Foley, Eſq; Mr Ward, and Mr Hungerford, maintain'd the Negative, as did Sir Joſeph Jekyl, one of the Committee of Secrecy, for what Reaſon we know not. The Annaliſt indeed tells us, the latter ſaid, That it was ever his Principle to do Juſtice to every Body, from the higheſt to the loweſt, being perſuaded that it was the Duty of an honeſt Man, never to act by a Spirit of Party. After this Rate, there never was a Conſtitution in the World, but it was a Party, becauſe there never was one, but it had Oppoſers; there never was a Government, Monarchical or Republican, but was, for the ſame Reaſon, a Party. It was well known to this Gentleman, and the whole Kingdom, that the two laſt Parliaments, mention'd by Sir W— W— and others, were choſen in Times when High Church, and it's Rabble, the worſt Party that ever was ſince the Reformation, were in the hotteſt of their Ferment; and how Elections were influenc'd by them, has been remember'd more than once. The impeach'd Members made that Rabble their Tools, and they, and all that adher'd to them, might conſequently be very juſtly term'd a Party, or rather, as the Earl of Oxford's Hiſtorian calls them, a Faction. But there was no ſuch Complaint as to the preſent Parliament, if there was ſtill a High Church Rabble, they were ſpirited againſt them almoſt to Madneſs. There was a King on the Throne, renown'd and rever'd for Wiſdom, Equity, and Juſtice: He was ſurrounded by Miniſters who had endear'd themſelves to their Country, by a long Series of Publick Services, and could it be ſaid, that to act by ſuch a Spirit, was the Spirit of Party. The Annaliſt ſays the ſame Member added, " That he hop'd he might pre- " tend to have ſome Knowledge of the Laws of " the Kingdom, and as in the Committee of Secrecy, " he had taken the Liberty to differ from his " Colleagues, he would not ſcruple now to declare " to the whole Houſe, that, in his Judgment, " the Charge in queſtion did not amount to High- " Treaſon." I take from the Annals ſtill. " Moſt " of the other Members of the Committee of Secrecy " were offended at this Speech, which both reveal'd " and cenſur'd their Proceedings." And thereupon Mr. Walpole anſwer'd with ſome Warmth, That there were both in and out of the Committee of Secrecy ſeveral Perſons who did not in the leaſt yield to the Member who ſpoke laſt, in point of Honeſty, and who, without derogating from his Merit, were ſuperior to him in the Knowledge of the Laws, but who, at the ſame time, were ſatisfy'd, that the Charge ſpecify'd in the XIth Article, amounted to Treaſon. Mr Walpole was back'd by General Stanhope, the Lord Coningsby, General Cadogan, Mr Boſcawen, and Mr Aiſlabie, Names of ſo much Weight, that the contrary moves Pity in generous Minds. Edward Harley, Eſq; Brother to the Criminal, endeavour'd to juſtify him; firſt, by the ſtale Topic of his acting always by the Queen's poſitive Commands; and ſecondly, by a very wild one, the Neceſſity of making a Peace. And having, upon this Occaſion, advanc'd, That the Dutch prolong'd the War, and that their Deputies in the

A.D.1715. the Army had often prevented the giving the Enemy a deciſive Blow. General Cadogan could not hear a Man, who knew ſo little of War and Battles, ſpeak in ſuch a deciſive Tone of Matters beyond his Reach, without decent Annimadverſion: "He ſhew'd, that the Dutch were more con- "cern'd than any Prince or State in the Grand "Alliance, to put an End to the War, and un- "dertook to prove, that there had not been any "Campaign in Flanders, except that in which the "Duke of Ormond commanded, that was not "mark'd, and famous to all Poſterity for ſome "ſignal and glorious Event, to the Advantage of "the common Cauſe." All the Articles againſt the Earl of Oxford being agreed to, the Lord Coningsby, according to the Order of the Houſe, attended by moſt of the Members, who voted for the Impeachment, went up to the Houſe of Lords, and at their Bar, impeach'd Robert Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer of High-Treaſon, &c. The Commons, at the End of the Articles, pray'd and demanded, that he may be ſequeſtred from Parliament, and forthwith committed to ſafe Cuſtody. As ſoon as the Lord Coningsby, and the Members that accompany'd him, were withdrawn, the Annaliſt writes, a Tory Lord mov'd for adjourning the Conſideration of the Articles, and was back'd by ſeveral Peers of the ſame Side. Dr Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter, urg'd, "That the Accuſa- "tion was of ſo extraordinary a Nature, and ſo "very important, both in itſelf and it's Conſe- "quences, that the Houſe ought to proceed in it "with the utmoſt Caution." But he was ſmartly anſwer'd by a Scotch Duke of bright Parts, who, among other Things, ſaid, It was well known, the Prelate who ſpoke laſt, had, of late, ſtudy'd more Politics than Divinity, and was thoroughly acquainted with the ſubject Matter of the Articles that lay before them, and therefore he did not doubt but the Biſhop was as ready to ſpeak to them as he could ever be if he had more Time to conſider of them. The Articles of Impeachment were voted to be then read by a Majority of 86 Voices againſt 54. Then a Motion was made for conſulting the Judges, whether the Charge amounted to Treaſon. The Lord Trevor, the Lord Harcourt, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Duke of Leeds, the Lord North and Grey, and Biſhop Atterbury were for the Affirmative to conſult the Judges. The Lord Cowper, Lord High-Chancellor, the Duke of Argyle, the Duke of Montroſe, the Earl of Nottingham, the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Dorſet, the Earl of Iſlay, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and other Lords, ſpoke for the Negative. The Lord Trevor having gone ſo far as to declare his Opinion, That none of the Articles amounted to High-Treaſon, the Lord-Chancellor ſhew'd the contrary, and challeng'd all the Lawyers in England to diſprove his Arguments. The other Side inſiſting ſtill upon conſulting the Judges, the Earl of Nottingham repreſented to them, "That inſtead of favouring thereby the "noble Perſon who had the Misfortune to be "impeach'd, as undoubtedly they meant it, they "might, on the contrary, do him a great Pre- "judice; for if upon conſulting the Judges, they "declar'd the Charge to amount to Treaſon, the "ſaid Lord would ſtand prejudg'd before he was "brought to his Tryal." This Queſtion being carry'd in the Negative by a great Majority, a Motion was made, that the Earl of Oxford be committed to ſafe Cuſtody, which occaſion'd a freſh Debate, and the Earl of Oxford himſelf made a Speech, wherein he took Notice of his having had the Honour to be plac'd at the Head of the late Miniſtry, and muſt now, it ſeems, be made accountable for all the Meaſures that were then purſu'd, but it was a very great Comfort to him, that he had the Honour to be a Member of that auguſt Aſſembly, which always ſquares their Proceedings and Judgments by the Rules of Juſtice and Equity, and is not to be biaſs'd by a Spirit of Party. He added, The whole Accuſation might be reduc'd to the Negotiation and Concluſion of the Peace. That the Nation wanted a Peace, no body will deny; and, I hope, it will be as eaſily made out, that the Conditions of this Peace are as good as could be expected, conſidering the Circumſtances whereon it was made, and the Backwardneſs and Reluctancy which ſome of the Allies ſhew'd to come into the Queen's Meaſures. There is no occaſion for the reſt of it, here is enough to ſatisfy the Reader, that he could ſay nothing for which there was not a ready Anſwer. That the Nation wanted a Peace, no body doth deny. That all Nations do, at all Times, want Peace, when they can preſerve themſelves, to their Content, without War, no body will deny; but that this Nation wanted ſuch a Peace as he impos'd upon them, an unſafe, diſhonourable Peace, as we find it was call'd in Parliament, every body who knows any thing of the Nation's Wants, did deny, and will deny for ever. As to the Queen's Meaſures, no body will deny, that they were the Meaſures of a Frenchify'd Miniſtry; and the XIth Article charging him with a Conſpiracy to deliver up Tournay into the Hands of the French, was his own Meaſure, and none of his Advocates dar'd to ſay, it was a Meaſure of the Queen's, behind whom he flies to ſhelter himſelf againſt the Impeachment. I always acted by the immediate Directions and Commands of the late Queen, and never offended againſt any known Law. I am juſtify'd in my own Conſcience, and am unconcern'd for the Life of our inſignificant old Man; but I cannot, without the higheſt Ingratitude, be unconcern'd for the beſt of Queens. Who he would have us to underſtand was attack'd thro' his Sides. A Queen, who heap'd upon me Honours and Preferments, tho' I never ask'd them. The Sincerity of his Heart is here triumphant! and therefore I think myſelf under an Obligation to vindicate her Memory and the Meaſures ſhe purſu'd. The glaring Inconſiſtencies ſpoken of in the Report; the abandoning the common Cauſe, the poor Catalans, and all the evil Counſels which prevail'd in the laſt Years of her Reign. He ſaid farther; I hope, in the Proſecution of this Enquiry, it will appear, that he had merited not only the Indulgence, but likewiſe the Favour of the Government.

Before the Queſtion for committing him was put the Duke of Shrewsbury acquainted the Houſe, that the Earl was at preſent very much indiſpos'd with the Gravel, and therefore he hop'd they would not immediately ſend him to the Tower, but ſuffer him to be two or three Days in Cuſtody of the Black-Rod; which met with no Oppoſition. When the Earl of Oxford went Home, he was attended by a Mob that cry'd out, High-Church, Ormond, and Oxford for ever. However, of 20 Biſhops, who were in the Houſe that Day, ſix only were for him; Sir William Dawes, Baronet, Archbiſhop of York; Dr John Robinſon, Biſhop of London; Dr Francis Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter; Dr George Smalridge, Biſhop of Briſtol; Dr Francis Gaſtrel, Biſhop of Cheſter; and Dr Nathanael Crew, Biſhop of Durham. The Earl of Oxford afterwards deſir'd to be longer in Cuſtody of the Black-Rod, on account of the ſame Indiſpoſition; and the Annaliſt writes, Dr Mead, one of his Lordſhip's Phyſicians, made a kind of Affidavit, that his Life would be in Danger; but

His Majeſty's Meſſage to the Commons, about Maintenance for the Miniſters of the fifty new Churches, the Addreſs of the Houſe upon it, and his Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer, had very little Effect on the Minds of the High-Church Populace, who continu'd their Riots and Tumults throughout the Kingdom. The Day before the Earl of Oxford was ſent to Priſon, the Houſe of Commons receiv'd Information from one Mr Bayly, of their villainous Doings in Staffordſhire, and Parts adjacent. Being ask'd at their Examination, Who "ſet them to work? When the "Rabble pull'd down the Meeting-houſe at Wol- "verhampton, one of their Leaders getting on "the Top of it, flouriſh'd his Hat round his "Head, and cry'd, G——d d—n K—G—ge "and the Duke of Marlborough. The Houſe of Commons Addreſs upon it.

GENTLEMEN,

I THANK you heartily for your Addreſs, and the many Marks of Zeal and Affection which you expreſs for my Honour and Safety, and the Security of the Kingdom.

I will give immediate Directions for putting in Execution the ſeveral Matters which you ſo juſtly recommend to me; and as I am reſolv'd, on all Occaſions, to follow the Advice of my Parliament, ſo I have no Doubt but that, by the Bleſſing of Almighty God, and your ſeaſonable and vigorous Aſſiſtance, I ſhall ſoon be enabled effectually to ſuppreſs the Spirit of Rebellion, which is ſo induſtriouſly fomented among us, and to eſtabliſh the Peace and Proſperity of my People.

On

A.D.1715. On the 20th of July, his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for the Quakers Affirmation; for continuing the Impriſonment of Robert Blackbourn, and the other Aſſaſſins; for preventing Tumults and riotous Aſſemblies, &c. The latter is now commonly known by the Appellation of the Proclamation Act, and is a great Grievance to the Enemies to the Conſtitution, the tumultuous Meetings of the Rabble being made a capital Crime; and it is too apparent, that there was abſolute Neceſſity of ſuch a Law, to reſtrain the Fury of the Mob, whom the Trumpets of Rebellion, the High-Church Prieſthood, had been working up to this Frenzy ever ſince the Revolution; and, in truth, all this while were their Leaders all over the Nation, from the Rebel Forſter in the North, to the Wildfire Gentry in the Weſt, ſecretly caballing to get to a Head, and declare for the Pretender. Bolingbroke had liſted himſelf in the noble Service of that nameleſs Piece of Chivalry, and a Friend of Bolingbroke's, who ſtill has him neareſt at Heart, if he had had no more Senſe, and as much Courage even as Forſter, would doubtleſs have been as forward, there ſeeming nothing to be wanting but his Name, a Drum, and a Flag, to put the Weſt Saxons in Arms. After the King had paſs'd the above-mention'd, and other Acts, he deliver'd a Speech into the Hands of the Lord-Chancellor, who read it to both Houſes; the Contents of which will be explain'd in the Commons Addreſs of Thanks; who being return'd to their Houſe, reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That an humble "Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to re- "turn the moſt humble and dutiful Thanks of "this Houſe to his Majeſty; for communicating "to his Parliament the Advices he has receiv'd "of an Attempt preparing to be made upon the "Nation from abroad, abetted and encourag'd "by treaſonable Practices at Home, in Favour of a "Popiſh Pretender; and to aſſure his Majeſty, "that this Houſe will, with their Lives and For- "tunes, ſtand by and ſupport his Majeſty againſt "all his open and ſecret Enemies; and to de- "ſire his Majeſty, that he will immediately "give Directions for fitting out ſuch a Num- "ber of Ships as may effectually guard the "Coaſts; and to iſſue out Commiſſions for "augmenting his Forces by Land; aſſuring his "Majeſty, that this Houſe will, without "Loſs of Time, effectually enable him to raiſe "and maintain ſuch a Number of Forces by "Sea and Land, as ſhall be neceſſary for the "Defence of his ſacred Perſon, and for the "Security of his Kingdoms." After this Ralph Freeman, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for Hertfordſhire, ſtood up and repreſented, That in ſo important a Juncture they ought to loſe no Time in drawing up an Addreſs; and mov'd, that the ſaid Reſolutions be forthwith laid before his Majeſty by the whole Houſe. He was ſeconded by the Lord Guernſey, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Ayleſford, who ſaid, It was well known he had, on ſeveral Occaſions, differ'd from ſome Members in that Houſe, but being now convinc'd, that our Liberty, Religion, and all that is dear to Engliſhmen, were aim'd at, he would (laying his Hand on his Sword) rather die with his Sword in his Hand, than ſurvive the Pretender's Coming, though he was to enjoy the greateſt Honours and Preferments. Mr Freeman's Motion paſs'd Nemine Contradicente; and accordingly Mr Speaker, with the whole Houſe went to St James's, to lay their Reſolutions before his Majeſty; who was pleas'd to anſwer;

A.D.1715. The K.'s Anſwer to the Commons.

GENTLEMEN,

I THANK you heartily for this Addreſs; the Zeal and Vigour you ſhew upon this Occaſion will, I truſt in God, enable me to defeat the evil Deſigns of our Enemies. I will immediately give Directions for ſuch an Increaſe of our Forces by Sea and Land, as I ſhall judge neceſſary for your Security; and will order Eſtimates of the Charge to be laid before you.

Hebeas Corpus Act ſuſpended.

The Lords loyal and hearty Addreſs, and that from the Convocation, met with the like gracious Reception. The Parliament paſs'd an Act to impower his Majeſty to ſecure ſuſpected Perſons, and to ſuſpend the Habeas Corpus Act in this Time of Danger. A Clauſe was added to a Money-Bill for the 100000 l. Reward to ſuch as ſhall apprehend the Pretender, dead or alive. And upon a Motion of Mr Robert Walpole, the Houſe of Commons order'd an Addreſs, for giving the full Pay to the Half pay Officers, who were to be imploy'd in the preſent Service. On the 22d of July, Sir George Byng ſet out for the Downs, to take upon him the Command of the Fleet; and General Erle went to his Government of Portſmouth, to put that important Place in a Poſture of Defence. General Cadogan mark'd out a Camp for the Foot-Guards in Hyde-Park. The Lord Irwin was made Governour of Hull in the Room Brigadier Sutton; who, together with General Roſs, General Webb, General Stewart, the Lord Windſor, Colonel Deſcanay, and other Officers, were either diſmiſs'd the Service, or order'd to ſell their reſpective Regiments. One of theſe Officers, and not the leaſt of them in Title and Poſt, who ow'd his Preferments and Honours to King William, and with whom I happen'd to be in Company not many Days after the never-enough lamented Death of that King of glorious Memory, having heard ſeveral beſides myſelf pay juſt Homage to it, cry'd, What did he do for you, that you grieve ſo much for him? After ſuch a ſhocking Inſtance of Ingratitude, it was not at all ſurprizing that he immers'd himſelf, as far as he could, in all the Meaſures of the late Miniſters, and was accordingly diſtinguiſh'd by them, when they were giving Diſtinctions, in the moſt extraordinary manner.

Generals order'd to ſell.

The King, in Council, having reſolv'd to raiſe 13 Regiments of Dragoons, and 8 of Foot, he was pleas'd to leave the Nomination of the Officers to the Duke of Marlborough, the Duke of Argyle, General Stanhope, General Cadogan, who met for that Purpoſe at the Office of William Pulteney, Eſq; Secretary at War, who then little thought he ſhould live long enough to declaim in Parliament againſt thoſe very Forces as a Standing Army. Addreſſes to the K. againſt the Pretender. P. 107.

The Lords and Commons having preſented ſuch loyal and hearty Addreſſes to his Majeſty, their good Example was follow'd by moſt Corporations in the Kingdom, expreſſing their Abhorrence of any Attempt in Favour of the Pretender; but that from the Common-Council of London, has ſomething in it ſo much below common Senſe, and Men in Soberneſs of Mind, that one would have been puzzled to think, how a Body of Men, choſen out of ſo vaſt and flouriſhing a City, could fall into ſo much Poverty of Spirit. It was preſented by a few of the Aldermen; and, as we read in the Annals, "being drawn up by the Tory Party, "was lukewarm, and therefore not very acceptable." They tell his Majeſty, They fear the intended Invaſion hath been too much encourag'd by Perſons of Antimonarchical and Republican Principles. The moſt impudent of the Faction, not even B—— himſelf, one of the Addreſſors, dares deny, that they mean, by Republican and Antimonarchical, Revolution Principles. And what a Compliment was that to a great and wiſe King, who knew that his own Title, and all the Titles to the Crown ſince the Abdication, had no ſtronger Foundation than the Revolution. The Lord-Mayor was oblig'd by his Office to go with the few Aldermen and the Tories who went with this Addreſs, but his Heart was far from being with them. And the next Day, July 29, his Lordſhip, with a Train of above 50 Coaches, went to St James's, and preſented to his Majeſty an Addreſs, which ſpeaks the Senſe of all true Britons. The Lord-Mayor and Lieutenancy of London, another ſort of Body than the Common-Council-Men ſay,

A poor Addreſs from London.

We are not ſurpriz'd to hear that the Pretender is FORMING a Deſign to invade your Majeſty's Dominions; it is as eaſy to preſage, that the wicked Bargain that was lately made by the Betrayers of their Country, was intended to pave the Way for him, and to inſpire him with new Hopes and Encouragements; and it was natural to expect that thoſe who had bought us, would lay hold of the firſt Opportunity to ſend over that IMPOSTOR to take Poſſeſſion of us for himſelf, and to govern us by Popiſh Maxims and Arbitrary Principles.

What Monſters they complain of.

As the Mask of FACTION is taken off, we ſee that which was before even too groſs to be believ'd; we ſee NONRESISTING REBELS, PASSIVE-OBEDIENCE RIOTERS, Abjuring Jacobites, and Frenchify'd Engliſhmen, MONSTERS which no Age or Country produc'd till now.

It is Matter of Shame as well as Grief, to ſee a Prince who left peaceful Dominions and faithful Subjects, that he might make us happy, ſo ill requited by an ungrateful FACTION; but we do aſſure your Majeſty, that the conſiderate and honeſt amongſt your Subjects, which are a great Majority, know how to value the Bleſſing of a good King. His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer.

His Majeſty's Anſwer.

The ſeaſonable Zeal you expreſs in this dutiful Addreſs is moſt grateful to me, and you may depend upon my conſtant Endeavours to ſecure to you, and to all my People, the Enjoyment of their Religion, Liberty and Property. And as a Mark of his Favour, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood on William Thompſon, Eſq; Recorder of London; Peter Eaton, Eſq; and —— Houblon, Eſq;.

Citizens knighted.

The Addreſs from the Lieutenancy of Middleſex was preſented the ſame Day by the Earl of Clare, Lord-Lieutenant and Cuſtos Rotulorum of that County.

The following Paragraph is Bolingbroke's Caſe.

Middleſex Addreſs againſt Lord Bolingbroke.

It is with the utmoſt Abhorrence we obſerve ſome of your Majeſty's Subjects flying for Protection to Foreign Powers, to avoid the Puniſhment due to their paſt Crimes, and to have an Opportunity of putting in Execution, by an open Rebellion, what they have been long contriving by private Treachery.

On the 16th of Auguſt, an Addreſs was preſented to his Majeſty by Mr Nathaniel Hodges, and the Proteſtant Diſſenting Miniſters of all Denominations, introduc'd by his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, wherein they ſay, Diſſenters Addreſs.

We your Majeſty's moſt loyal Subjects, think our ſelves oblig'd in Duty and Gratitude, humbly to acknowledge that ſeaſonable Protection which your Majeſty has been pleas'd to give to thoſe of our Perſuaſion, from the late rebellious Tumults; and for the gracious Anſwer to the Addreſs of your faithful Commons; wherein they deſire, that a full Compenſation be made to thoſe whoſe Sufferings they ſo juſtly impute to their Zeal and firm Adherence to your Majeſty and your Government.

We can aſſure your Majeſty, that no juſt Occaſion has been given by us to our fellow Subjects for any ſuch Treatment; nor can the Principles which

A.D.1715. oblige us to diſſent from the Church of England be a reaſonable Provocation to any who have the leaſt Regard to the common Rights of Mankind, or the Rules of the Chriſtian Religion.

We deſire nothing more than to enjoy our Civil Rights, with a full Liberty to profeſs our own religious Sentiments, which we take to be a Privilege due to all Men. We have been always ready to aſſiſt the Church of England in Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, when in real and imminent Danger, being agreed with them, and all Proteſtant Churches, in thoſe Principles that began the Reformation, and which alone can juſtify and ſupport it.

When there has been a Deſign to introduce Popery and arbitrary Power, the Proteſtant Diſſenters have generally been firſt attack'd; nor know we any other Reaſon, why we have now ſuffer'd the Outrage of Papiſts, Nonjurors, and other diſaffected Perſons, but that they were ſure we were a Body of Men fixed in our Duty to your Majeſty, and lay moſt expos'd to popular Inſults; againſt which your Majeſty, and your two Houſes of Parliament, in your great Wiſdom and Goodneſs, have given us a ſeaſonable, and we hope effectual, Security, for Time to come, &c.

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer;

His Majeſty's Anſwer. I AM very much concern'd at the unchriſtian and barbarous Treatment which thoſe of your Perſuaſion have met with in ſeveral Parts of my Kingdom; and Care ſhall be taken, that a full Compenſation be made to them for their Sufferings. I thank you for this Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs, and you may be aſſur'd of my Protection.

I ſhall mention but one Addreſs more on this Occaſion, which is that from the Lieutenancy of the Tower-Hamlets, preſented by Lieutenant-General Hatton Compton, Lieutenant of the Tower and Hamlets; and I do it for the ſake of the firſt Paragraph.

Addreſs of the Tower-Hamlets againſt the Peace. With the utmoſt Reſentment we obſerve the fatal Conſequences of that PEACE, which after a long and uninterrupted Courſe of Victories, brings us again thus ſoon into the Danger of an Invaſion from the Pretender—. This is the Peace, for which, we can hardly ſpeak it without trembling, there was a ſolemn Day of Thankſgiving to Almighty God. This is the Peace which the Adherents of the late ill Miniſters boaſted to be ſafe and honourable. This is the Peace for which thoſe Betrayers of their Country twice procur'd a Parliamentary Sanction, when the Numbers were with them.

More Articles againſt the Earl of Oxford. On the 30th of July, Mr R. Walpole read further Articles againſt the Earl of Oxford.

Article XVII. Relates to the dangerous and deſtructive Expedition to Canada.

Article XVIII. To his procuring a Warrant for 13,000 l. to his own Uſe.

Article XIX. To his procuring a Warrant for 5560 l. to Thomas Harley, Eſq; his near Relation and Emiſſary.

Article XX. To his paying a large Sum of Money to the Pretender's pretended Mother.

Article XXI. To his receiving Patrick Lawleſs, an Iriſh Papiſt, as a Foreign Miniſter, and cauſing ſeveral Sums of Money to be paid him.

This Article alone ſeems to be ſufficient to have brought any other Man to the Scaffold or Gallows. By an Act made in the 13th and 14th Years of King William, it was enacted, "That "if any of the Subjects of the Crown of Eng- "land ſhould hold any Correſpondence with the "pretended Prince of Wales, or with any Perſon "or Perſons employ'd by him; or ſhould pay "any Sum of Money for the Uſe of the Preten- "der, it ſhould be deemed High-Treaſon, &c."

Patrick Lawleſs, the Pretender's Agent, deſcrib'd.

This Iriſh Papiſt call'd himſelf Patrick Lawleſs, and is thus deſcrib'd in the 21ſt Article. "He had "ſerv'd with the late King James the Second "in the late Wars in Ireland, againſt the late "King William, had follow'd the ſaid King "James into France, and continu'd in the moſt "open and avow'd Manner in his Intereſt and "Service, and in Rebellion againſt the ſaid King "William; had been in open Arms againſt her "late Majeſty Queen Anne." And this Traytor and Rebel, did the Earl of Oxford adviſe the ſaid Queen to receive, and to be treated with by her Miniſters, unde rthe diſguis'd Name of Don Carlo Moro, knowing him to have been an Agent for the Pretender in Spain, and elſewhere.

Article XXII. Relates to the abandoning the Catalans to the Fury of an enrag'd, revengeful Prince, againſt whom the late Queen had engag'd them to take Arms.

The Articles againſt Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke were ſtill more deeply tainted with Treaſon than thoſe againſt the Earl of Oxford; and he was ſo conſcious of his Guilt, and the Puniſhment due to it, that he run away from Juſtice.

The Duke of Ormond flies.

The Duke of Ormond ſtaid not much longer, we read in the Annals, "either thro' his own Obſti- "nacy, or the ſiniſter Suggeſtions of a Fiery "Prelate, Atterbury, he rejected the wiſe Coun- "ſel of his true Friends; which was, to "make his Submiſſion to the King, and avoid "a Shew to ſtand the Proſecution; but as ſoon "as he ſaw the Hands of the Goverment like "to be ſtrengthen'd, not only with new Levies, "but alſo with an Act for ſuſpending the Habeas "Corpus, his Courage began to fail him; and the "Night, between the 20th and 21ſt of July, he "went from his Houſe at Richmond, accompany'd "only by one Renald, a French Papiſt, his Con- "fectioner, and making privately to the Coaſt of "Kent, he embark'd there on Board a ſmall Veſ- "ſel, and a few Days after landed in France, which "caſt a general Damp on the Spirits of his "Party, but did not quite put a Stop to the "Cry of High-Church and Ormond for ever."

The Speech of a new Convert to the Whigs. P. 153.

After Mr Walpole had read the Articles againſt him, prepar'd by the Secret Committee, there was a warm Debate in the Houſe of Commons. The Annaliſt writes, "Among the reſt, a Member of a "conſiderable Eſtate, and who had all along voted "with the Tories, ſaid, That the Report of the "Committee of Secrecy had begun to open his "Eyes, and that the Duke of Ormond's Flight "had fully convinc'd him, that the Heads of the "Tory Party were a Set of Knaves and Villains, "who deſign'd to have ruin'd their Country, and "made it a Province of France." The Lord Stanhope, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Cheſterfield, and a Member of the Houſe, who ſpoke, for the firſt Time, on this Occaſion, ſaid, He never "wiſhed to ſpill the Blood of any of his Country- "men, much leſs the Blood of any Nobleman, but "that he was perſuaded, that the Safety of his "Country requir'd that Examples ſhould be made of "thoſe who had betray'd it in ſo infamous a Man- ner." The Lord Finch, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Nottingham, ſpoke alſo on the ſame Side; and the Queſtion being put, the Houſe agreed to the Articles, and to the firſt in particular, by a Majority of 177 Voices againſt 78. This Article charg'd him with correſponding with Mareſchal Villars,

The Lord Stanhope for impeaching the Duke of Ormond.

And Lord Finch.

Article II. That he wickedly promis'd and engag'd, that he would not attack the French Army, nor engage in any Siege againſt France. Article III. That he did falſly, maliciouſly, wickedly, and traiterouſly adhere to the French King, and in Purſuance of a wicked Promiſe he had ſecretly made the Mareſchal de Villars, General of the French Army, he endeavour'd to perſuade the Generals of the Confederate Army to raiſe the Siege of Queſnoy; and when he could not prevail, he march'd off with the Queen's Troops, and gave the Enemy's General Advice of it, &c. The other Articles are in Effect. His Conduct in Flanders reduc'd into a Charge, and both he and Bolingbroke having fled from Juſtice, Bills were brought in to ſummon them to render themſelves by a certain Day; and in Default thereof, to attaint them of High-Treaſon. Which paſs'd both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent.

The Act for the Attainder of Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke.

The Act to attaint Henry St John, late Viſcount Bolingbroke

" Whereas Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke has been " impeach'd by the Commons in Parliament aſ- " ſembled, in the Name of themſelves, and all " the Commons of Great Britain, of High- " Treaſon, and other high Crimes and Miſde- " meanours; to which ſaid Impeachment, now " remaining upon Record in the Houſe of Peers, " the ſaid Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke has not " conform'd, but has withdrawn himſelf from " Juſtice without abiding his Trial. Be it en- " acted, &c. That if the ſaid Henry Viſcount " Bolingbroke ſhall not render himſelf to the " Uſher of the Black Rod, attending the Houſe " of Peers, or the Conſtable or Lieutenant of " the Tower of London, for the Time being, " who are hereby requir'd to receive and keep " him in ſafe Cuſtody, in order to his Trial in " Parliament, at, or before the 10th Day of " September next enſuing; and alſo abide his " legal Trial for the Treaſons, high Crimes and " Miſdemeanours, whereof he ſtands impeach'd by " the Commons of Great-Britain; that the ſaid " Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke not ſo rendering " himſelf, or not abiding his legal Trial, as " aforeſaid, ſhall, from, and after, the ſaid tenth " Day of September, ſtand, and be ADJUDG'D, " attainted of High-Treaſon, to all Intents and " Purpoſes whatſoever, and ſhall ſuffer and for- " feit as a Perſon attainted of High-Treaſon, by " the Laws of the Land, ought to ſuffer and " forfeit." This is the very Perſon whom a late virulent Satiriſt, or rather Libeller, has choſen for his Patron, and made the top Subject of his Flattery, painting him as a Pattern of Virtue and Patriotiſm, in full Belief, that his Rhimes will live as long, and be held as authentic as the Records that attaint him.

Made a Hero by a modern Poet.

Mr Tho. Harley ſent to Priſon.

The Act for attainting the late Duke of Ormond, differs only in the Name. The Day before his Flight, Mr Thomas Harley was committed to the Priſon of the Gatehouſe, for prevaricating with the Secret Committee in his Examination, which he did with equal Sullenneſs and Indiſcretion.

Members order'd into Cuſtody.

Upon the Call of the Houſe, ſeveral Members who were abſent were excus'd; and others, whoſe Excuſes were not ſo ſatisfactory, were order'd into Cuſtody; as Sir Michael Wharton, Corbet Kynaſton, Eſq; and Lewis Price, Eſquire. The Names of other Defaulters were in the Votes, as John Snell, Eſq; Thomas Maſter, Eſq; Richard Shuttleworth, Eſq; Charles Parker, Eſq; Sir William Blackett, Doddington Greville, Eſq; Sir Robert Furneſe, and John Carnegy, Eſq; Several of theſe Members had given too much Reaſon to ſuſpect, that they abſented themſelves more out of Diſaffection than Neceſſity. A.D.1715.

As Mr Thomas Harley was a very unwilling Witneſs againſt his Employers, the late ill Miniſters, ſo was Mr Matthew Prior, who was long in Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe of Commons; and it was evident, the Spirits of the whole Faction were kept up by the Tumults and Cries of the Rabble, not without ſome ſecret Intelligence of the Deſigns that were forming for an open Rebellion. Would ſuch Men, as Tho. Harley, and Matt. Prior, have otherwiſe ſtood out againſt the Enquiry of the Repreſentatives of Great-Britain? And ſuch Men as S— and W—— have kept the ſame Countenance in Parliament, as when they were amidſt their Triumphs, with the Major Vote on their Side?

On the 31ſt of Auguſt, Mr Walpole, from the Committee of Secrecy, deliver'd Articles of Impeachment of high Crimes and Miſdemeanours againſt Thomas Earl of Strafford, which were read, and agreed to by the Commons, who order'd them to be carry'd to the Houſe of Lords, by Mr Aiſlabie; which he did accordingly, accompany'd with many Members. I omit inſerting thoſe Articles at large, for want of Room. The laſt Paragraph of the firſt Article, is,

By which wicked and treacherous Practices, he, the ſaid Earl, proſtituted the Honour of her Majeſty and the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms, and groſly violated his Power and Inſtructions. The many Treaties which her Majeſty then ſtood engag'd in to her Allies; and the repeated Aſſurances which the ſaid Earl had by her Majeſty's Order, and in her Name, given to the ſaid Allies, to act in perfect Concert with them, throughout the whole Negotiations of Peace; thereby rendering the Deſign of the Confederacy, and the mutual Support expected from the ſame, altogether uſeleſs, and giving up the Affairs of Europe into the Hands of France.

The Articles being read in the Houſe of Lords, the Earl of Strafford complain'd of the Hardſhip that had been put upon him by ſeizing his Papers. The Lord Viſcount Townſhend ſaid, " The Complaint was groundleſs and unjuſt. " That infinite Inſtances of the like Proceed- " ing might be produced. That no State could " be ſafe without it; and, in ſhort, that extra- " ordinary Caſes juſtify extraordinary Methods." The Duke of Devonſhire, and the Lord-Chancellor back'd the Lord Townſhend; but the Lord Harcourt and Biſhop Atterbury ſpoke for the Earl of Strafford, as did the Earl of Ilay, ſo far as to agree in his Deſire, to have Copies of his Papers.

On the 3d of September, the Earl of Oxford caus'd his Anſwer to the Commons Impeachment to be deliver'd to the Houſe of Lords: It conſiſted of a Denial of the Subſtance of every Article, expreſs'd in Law Terms, and throwing the Matter upon Proof, which no body could think was wanting that liv'd in thoſe Days.

The Names & Coats of Arms of the Duke of Ormond, & Lord Bolingbroke order'd to be razed.

The Time for the late Duke of Ormond, and the late Viſcount Bolingbroke, to render themſelves, being expired, the Lords order'd the Earl-Marſhal to raze out of the Liſt of Peers the Names and Coats of Arms of James Duke of Ormond, &c. and of Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke. Inventories were order'd to be taken of their Perſonal Eſtates; and the Atchievement of the Duke of Ormond, as Knight of the Garter, to be taken down from St George's Chapel at Windſor.

The Houſe of Commons proceeding to the Choice of Commiſſioners for ſtating the Debts due to the Army, the Choice fell upon Thomas Smith of Glaſgow, Eſq; Thomas Pelham, Eſq; Grey Nevil, Eſq; John Plumtree, Eſq; Leonard Smelt, Eſq; Sir William Gordon; Sir Thomas Palmer. On the 8th of September, the Bill for ſettling an Annuity of 100,000 l. per Ann. clear of all Taxes and other Charges, on his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, was order'd to be engroſs'd, and paſs'd the next Day, Nemine Contradicente. The controverted Election for Minehead in Somerſetſhire; for which Borough, Sir William Wyndham and Sir John Trevelian were Petitioners, appear'd ſo diſorderly, that not only the Petitioners but the Sitting Members were voted not duly elected; and it was order'd, that no Warrant do iſſue for a Writ for Minehead, during this Seſſion. THE

ENGLAND, &c.

During the REIGN of King GEORGE I.

CHAP. II.

From the Rebellion in Scotland, to the End of it;

Containing the Space of Five Months.

*A.D.*1715. BY this Time the Court had undoubted Information, that an open Rebellion was broke out in Scotland, which was to be ſupported by a great Conſpiracy in England. The Earl of Marr, one of the Secretaries of State, when Mr St John was at the Head of them, who had moſt ſolemnly abjur'd the Pretender, and had written a very ſubmiſſive Letter to the King, dated Auguſt 30, 1714, full of Pretences to Zeal and Affection to his Majeſty's Perſon and Government, was the firſt, that, forſwearing himſelf in the moſt flagrant manner, added Treaſon to Perjury, broke his bounden Allegiance to King George, and traiterouſly ſet up the Standard of the Pretender. About the beginning of Auguſt, 1715, this Earl, with another perjur'd Traitor, George Hamilton, Major-General, embark'd in the River of Thames, on Board a Collier, bound for Newcaſtle, where he arriv'd in two or three Days, embark'd on a Veſſel for Scotland, and was landed at Creil in Fife. He was there ſoon attended by ſome of his Accomplices, and went from thence to his Houſe in Braemarr, where, in a few Days, came to him the Marquiſſes of Huntley and Tullibardine; the Earls of Nithiſdale, Linlithgow, Traquhar, Southesk, Mareſchal, and Carnwarth; the Viſcounts Kilſythe, Kenmure, Kingſton, and Stourmount; the Lords Drummond and Rollo. Upon News of his being in the Highlands, and having got together 4 or 5000 Men, Orders were ſent to Edinburgh for apprehending ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons, as the Earls of Hume, Wigtown and Kinnoul; the Lord Deskford, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Findlater and Seafield; Mr Lockhart of Carnwath, and Mr Hume of Whitfield, &c. who were committed Priſoners to the Caſtle. Lockhart had been for many Years as forward as any of them in Speeches againſt the Revolution and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and in caballing with the Friends of the Pretender, to promote his Intereſt; but when it came to a Trial, it was obſerv'd, that pretty much of his Jacobite Fury had evaporated in Words, and 'tis thought, he was well enough pleas'd with being ſhut up in Edinburgh Caſtle. The Conſpirators had laden four or five Veſſels with Arms and Ammunition at Haver-de-Grace in France, and notwithſtanding all due Precautions were taken to hinder the Rebels having any ſuch Supplies, ſome of thoſe Veſſels got to Scotland, and brought ſeveral Officers, who immediately join'd Marr, and gave him and his Company Aſſurances, that the Pretender would be ſoon with them in Perſon. This Arch-Rebel having ſet up the Standard of that Impoſtor at Braemarr, caus'd him to be proclaim'd King there; as he was afterwards at Perth, by Colonel Balfour;

Rebel Lords join him.

The Pretender proclaim'd King by ſeveral Traitors.

A.D.1715. Balfour, at Aberdeen, by the Earl Mareſchal, both perjur'd Traitors, at Dundee, by Viſcount Dundee; at Montroſe, by the Earl of Southesk; at Forreſs, by Sir William Gordon; and at other Places, by other Rebels. Marr took upon him the Title of Lieutenant-General of the Pretender's Forces, whom he call'd King James the VIIIth, and publiſh'd a Declaration, which was follow'd by a Manifeſto, in the Name of all the Traitors and Rebels, to invite the Scots to come in, and be Inſtruments of the Happineſs they had cut out for a Proteſtant Kingdom, by ſetting up a Popiſh King.

While the Rebels were thus openly carrying on their wicked Purpoſes in Scotland, their Confederates were, as yet, quiet and ſecret in England; however not ſo ſecret, but a Diſcovery was made of their treaſonable Deſigns. On the 2d of September, Colonel Paul, of the firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, was ſecur'd, and the next Day committed to the Gate-houſe, being charg'd with liſting Men for the Pretender's Service. Two Days after, the titular Duke of Powis was taken into Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, and ten Days after committed to the Tower for High-Treaſon. On the 21ſt of September, Mr Secretary Stanhope acquainted the Houſe of Commons, that he was commanded by the King to communicate to them, that his Majeſty having juſt Cauſe to ſuſpect, that Sir William Wyndham, Sir John Packington, Mr Edward Harvey, ſenior, of Combe; Mr Thomas Forſter, Mr John Anſtis, and Mr Corbet Kynaſton, are engag'd in a Deſign to ſupport the intended Invaſion, hath given Orders for apprehending them, and deſires the Conſent of this Houſe to his cauſing them to be committed and detain'd, if he ſhall judge neceſſary ſo to do, for which Communication, the Houſe voted an Addreſs of Thanks. Only two of theſe ſuſpected Perſons, Mr Harvey of Combe, and Mr Anſtis, were then in Town, and ſecur'd. The Lord Landſdowne, and the Lord Duplin, Son-in-Law to the late Lord Treaſurer, were taken into Cuſtody of Meſſengers, and a Warrant was iſſu'd to apprehend the Earl of Jerſey. On the 21ſt of September, the Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, to acquaint them, that they had addreſs'd his Majeſty, to cauſe Directions to be given for preparing a Scaffold in Weſtminſter-Hall for the Trial of the Earl of Oxford. The ſame Day the King came to the Houſe of Peers, and the Speaker, with the Commons attending. The former, upon preſenting the ſeveral Money-Bills, made an admirable Speech, with a Roman Spirit and Eloquence, and a Heart as truly Engliſh. We muſt make room for part of it.

And Lord Duplin.

The Speaker's excellent Speech.

Your Commons could not ſee, without the utmoſt Indignation, the Glories of her late Majeſty's Reign tarniſh'd by a treacherous Ceſſation of Arms; the Faith of Treaties violated; that ancient Probity, for which the Engliſh Nation had been juſtly renown'd throughout all Ages, expos'd to Scorn and Contempt, and the Trade of the Kingdom given up by inſidious and precarious Treaties of Commerce, whilſt the People amus'd with new Worlds explored, were contented to ſee the moſt advantageous Branches of their Commerce in Europe loſt or betray'd.

Such was the Condition of this Kingdom, when it pleas'd the Divine Providence to call your Majeſty to the Throne of your Anceſtors, under whoſe auſpicious Reign, your Commons, with Pleaſure, behold the Glory of the PLANTAGENETS, your Majeſty's Royal Anceſtors, revive, and have an unbounded Proſpect of the Continuance of this Happineſs even to the lateſt Poſterity, in a Race of Princes lineally deſcended from your Majeſty. A.D.1715.

And that nothing may be wanting on the Part of your Commons, to eſtabliſh your Majeſty's Throne on ſolid and laſting Foundations, they have apply'd themſelves with unwearied Diligence, to vindicate the Honour of the Britiſh Nation, and to reſtore a mutual Confidence between this Kingdom and it's ancient and faithful Allies, by detecting the Authors of thoſe pernicious Counſels, and the Actors in thoſe treacherous Deſigns, in order to bring them to Juſtice, by the Judgment of their Peers, according to the Law of the Land, and the Uſage of Parliament, &c.

I am ſenſible, that all judicious Readers will excuſe me for making uſe of the Prints and Pamphlets verbatim, and believe that it is not out of Choice, or that I am enamour'd with the Stile and Method: But treating of Perſons that are living, and in a Situation to oppreſs thoſe that are not upon their Guard, againſt their Diſpleaſure, I deſire my Readers to content themſelves with the Words of others on certain Occaſions. What follows is from the Political State. P. 330, &ſeq.

" All this while, ſeveral of his Majeſty's Meſ-
" ſengers were abroad to ſeize ſuſpected Perſons,
" and in particular ſuch Members of the Houſe
" of Commons as had been nam'd in his Maje-
" ſty's Meſſage of the 21ſt of September. That " very Day, Colonel Huske, a Captain in the " Foot-Guards, being ſent down with one of his
" Majeſty's Meſſengers, to apprehend Sir William
" Wyndham, at his Houſe call'd Orchard-Wynd-
" ham, in Somerſetſhire, arriv'd there between " four and five in the Morning. The Door
" being open'd to them, they appear'd to be in
" haſte to ſee Sir William; but the Porter told " them, he was in Bed, and could not yet be
" ſpoke with. The Colonel told him, he came
" expreſs, and the Perſon with him had a Packet
" of Letters of ſuch Conſequence, his Maſter
" muſt needs be immediately told of it. This
" convinc'd the Man, and Sir William Wyndham
" preſently leap'd out of Bed, and came in his
" Gown to the Colonel; who told him, he was Sir W.
" his Priſoner, the Meſſenger at the ſame time Wynd-
" ſhewing the Badge of his Office. Sir William ham
" ſaid, he readily ſubmitted, but deſir'd no Noiſe ſeiz'd.
" might be made to frighten his Lady, who was " with Child. Then they enter'd a Chamber,
" where the Colonel ſeeing Sir William's Coat
" and Waſtecoat lie, told him, he had Orders to
" ſeize all his Papers, and that he muſt take leave
" to ſearch his Pockets; wherein he found a " Bundle of Papers, which he ſecur'd. Sir Wil- " liam would have diverted him, by offering him
" very frankly the Keys of his Eſcrutore, to
" ſearch; but the Colonel happen'd to have ſe-
" cured the main Chance, finding nothing in the " Eſcrutore, as he had ſome Reaſon to gueſs,
" by the great Diſorder and Confuſion that he " could perceive in Sir William's Looks, when
" he took the Bundle out of his Waſtecoat Pocket.
" Sir William then deſir'd the Colonel, that he " would ſtay ſtill 7 o'Clock, and he would or" der his own Coach and ſix Horſes to be got " ready, which would carry them all; telling
" the Colonel, he would only go in and put
" on his Cloaths, and take Leave of his Lady,
" and then he would wait on him." Out of Deference to that Lady's noble Relations, who, beſides their high Rank, had deſerv'd it, by their Zeal and Affection for the preſent Government. " The Co" lonel had particular Directions to uſe him with

*A.D.*1715. " Decorum, and readily comply'd with this Re-
" queſt, looking on it as his Parole to return; but
" he ſoon found himſelf miſtaken in the Perſon,
" whoſe Honour he had truſted to; for tho' the
" Colonel had caus'd two Doors of Sir William's Makes his Eſcape. " Bed-chamber to be ſecur'd, yet there being a
" third, he made his Eſcape thro' it. The Colo" nel having directed the Meſſenger to ſtay at the
" Houſe till further Orders, return'd with Speed
" to London, to acquaint the Government with
" what had paſs'd; whereupon the King, in " Council, thought fit to ſign the following Pro-
" clamation, for apprehending Sir William Wynd-
" ham, Baronet." It was dated two Days after his Eſcape.

GEORGE R.

A Proclamation for taking him. WHereas Sir William Wyndham, Baronet, has been lately apprehended and ſeiz'd by virtue of a Warrant of one of our Principal Secretaries of State, on Suſpicion of HIGH-TREASON; and on the peruſal of a Paper found in the Cuſtody of the ſaid Sir William Wyndham, at the Time he was apprehended, it manifeſtly appears, that he has enter'd into a moſt HORRID and TRAITEROUS Conſpiracy, not only for the Encouragement of the Rebellion, now carrying on in our Kingdoms, in Favour of the Pretender, but alſo for abetting and promoting an intended Invaſion of our Kingdoms. And whereas the ſaid Sir William Wyndham has made his Eſcape, &c. whoſoever ſhall apprehend or diſcover the ſaid Sir William Wyndham, and bring him before a Juſtice of Peace, or chief Magiſtrate, ſhall receive for Reward the Sum of one thouſand Pounds.

What Country Faction and Folly maydo in Oppoſition to the Government, by adhering to it's declar'd Enemy, is not ſurprizing; but if ever ſuch an Enemy ſhould have any Truſt from that Government, and ſuch a Truſt as enables him to be troubleſome, if not miſchievous to it's Friends. That would ſurprize indeed——! Let us turn again to the Political State.

Papers found in his Pockets. " One of the Papers found in Sir William Wynd-
" ham's Waſtecoat-pocket, was ſaid to be a Liſt
" of the principal Perſons, who had join'd in an
" Aſſociation to favour an Invaſion, and to ad-
" vance the Pretender to the Throne." Good God! to advance a Perſon to the Throne, who, for what they knew, or had ſure Grounds to believe, was no better born than one of their Poſtillions. " Which Aſſociation was tranſmitted to " him by the Lord Landſdowne.

" Be that as it will, 'tis certain that a great " many notorious Jacobites, who by this time had " got together at Bath, in order to head the in" tended Inſurrection in Somerſetſhire, were ex-
" treamly alarm'd at the coming down of the " King's Meſſengers, and left that Place with " great Precipitation, in a very rainy and ſtormy
" Night.

" Sir William Wyndham being purſu'd by the " Proclamation, and ſeveral Meſſengers, he thought
" the beſt Diſguiſe he could put on to prevent
P. 334. " his being diſcover'd, was a Clergyman's Habit;
" and in truth it was very fit for a Leader of a
" Faction, who under the Pretence of the Church's
" Danger, had, ſays the Annaliſt, all along car" ried on their villainous and treaſonable Deſigns:
" It was natural, I ſay, for ſuch Men to make
" uſe of the Church, as far as that Sham would " go. But by this time, the Eyes of moſt People
" began to ſee through that unhallow'd Cheat;
" and Sir William Wyndham not thinking himſelf
" ſecure under his Diſguiſe, order'd one of his *A.D.*1715.
" Servants to write a Letter to a Gentleman
" in Surrey, begging of him to give his Maſter Re- Mr N—s
" fuge in his Houſe; or if he would not venture
" ſo far to ſerve him, to get him a Lodging in the
" Parſon's Houſe, where he would come in a Habit Sir W.
" that would beſpeak him Reſpect from a Clergy- Wynd-
" man. This Letter being brought to the Gentle- ham diſ-
" man's Houſe while he was abroad, his Lady guis'd in
" open'd, and read it; and being frighten'd with a Par-
" the Thought of the Danger her Husband might ſon's Ha-
" incur in harbouring a Perſon charg'd with bit.
" Treaſon, ſhe thought fit immediately to ſend it
" to a Nobleman of her Acquaintance, who fail'd The Earl
" not immediately to communicate the ſame to of A—d.
" the Government. Sir William Wyndham rightly
" judging by the Miſcarriage of that Letter, that " he was hunted now upon a ſtrong Scent, and muſt
" inevitably fall into the Hands of his Purſuers,
" thought it Prudence to make Virtue of Neceſſity,
" and ſurrender'd himſelf to the Government.
" Accordingly he put himſelf into the Hands of " the Earl of Hertford, his Lady's Brother, Cap" tain of one of his Majeſty's Troop of Life-
" Guards; who having given Notice of it to Mr
" Stanhope, the latter ſent one of his Clerks
" with a Meſſenger to take Sir William Wynd-
" ham into Cuſtody. When he was examin'd at He is
" the Council-Board, he flatly deny'd, he knew taken into
" any thing of a Plot, and behav'd himſelf in Cuſtody
" ſuch a Manner, as if he fondly preſum'd, that by a Meſ-
" out of Regard to his Lady's noble Family, ſenger,
" the Government would be cautious how they
" meddled with him:" So writes our Author; but one can hardly conceive, that any Man could flatter himſelf with the Hopes of eſcaping Juſtice, becauſe his Wife had Kindred of the firſt Rank. The Council were juſtly offended at Sir William Wyndham's pretending to know nothing of the intended Rebellion, when the Letters found in his Pocket ſufficiently evinc'd the contrary; ſo and ſent an Order was made for his Commitment to the to the Tower. Tower.

Meſſengers were ſent into the Country to apprehend Mr Corbet Kynaſton, Mr Thomas Forſter, and Sir John Packington, three other Members of Parliament. The firſt made his Eſcape. Forſter broke out into open Rebellion; but Sir John Packington coming to Town with a Meſſenger, behav'd ſo decently at his Examination, that he was honourably diſcharg'd, nothing appearing againſt him, but that his Name was in a Liſt of Perſons who were thought to favour the intended Inſurrection.

The King having purchas'd the large Collection of Books, made by Dr Moore, late Biſhop of Ely, with great Judgment, Labour, and Expence, his Majeſty was pleas'd to beſtow it upon the Univerſity of Cambridge; and they preſented a very dutiful and loyal Addreſs of Thanks upon His Ma- that Occaſion. The Behaviour of the Univerſity jeſty gives of Oxford was ſo very different, that when their Biſhop Deputies came with their Addreſs, ſome Time Moore's before this, they were given to underſtand, " that Library to " as they had ſhewn a manifeſt Diſreſpect to Cam-
" his Majeſty's Perſon and Government in all bridge.
" their late Proceedings, ſo his Majeſty expected
" they ſhould convince him of their Loyalty by " their Actions, and not by Words. The An-
" naliſt ſays, nor was this ſharp Rebuke unde-
" ſerved, for beſides the former undutiful Be" haviour of ſome Members of that Body, it is " to be obſerv'd, that at this very Juncture, ſome
" Officers, who rais'd Men for the new Regi-
" ments, were inſulted by ſome Scholars." And as if

if they had been under as much Infatuation as when their famous Decree was made. No ſooner was the late Duke of Ormond attainted for High-Treaſon, than they choſe his Brother, the Earl of Arran, for their Chancellor; and 'twas obſervable, that the Lord Arran had a vaſt Majority over the Earl of Pembroke, who was put up in Competition with him; which every body believ'd would not have been, had not the Vacancy been made by the late Duke of Ormond's Attainder. About the ſame Time they conferr'd the Degrees of Doctors in the Laws on Sir John Everard a Non-juror, and on Sir William Gifford, the diſcarded Governour of Greenwich Hoſpital. The Government was not without Information of all that paſs'd among them, and in particular, that they harbour'd Colonel Owen, with ſeveral other broken Officers, Iriſh Papiſts, and notorious Jacobites, who fomented and propagated a Spirit of Rebellion, drinking publickly and uncontroul'd the Pretender's Health; and it being juſtly ſuſpected, that they meditated an Inſurrection in Conjunction with the Diſaffected at Briſtol and Bath, with whom they held Intelligence, it was reſolv'd, to ſend ſome Troops thither to ſecure the Perſons of the chief of 'em. Accordingly Major-General Pepper, with his own Regiment of Dragoons, and a Detachment of Tyrrel's, enter'd the City about five in the Morning, as ſoon as the Gates were open'd, October the 5th. Having caus'd his Men to alight, and put their Bayonets in the Muzzles of their Fuſees, he immediately ſecur'd all the Avenues and the Gates of every Inn. He then ſent an Officer to the Vice-Chancellor and the Mayor, to deſire to ſpeak to them. They readily obey'd his Summons, and he deliver'd them a Letter from Mr Secretary Stanhope, and, in few Words, acquainted them with his Orders to ſeize 16 or 18 ſuſpected Perſons. I muſt now make uſe of the Political State, to defend myſelf againſt the Charge of Partiality with which the Oxonians have loaded me without Regard to Modeſty or Conſcience; and in that Pamphlet 'tis written,

Major-General Pepper ſent to Oxford.

" Which was not accepted, becauſe their Stay was " to be very ſhort. The Vice-Chancellor, in par-" ticular, who ſome Days before deliver'd, with " a bold Countenance and ſteddy Voice, a long " Oration, in Praiſe of a Nobleman attainted by " Act of Parliament, now trembling with a " down-caſt Look, in a broken Speech, made " long Profeſſions of Loyalty and Affection to " his Majeſty. General Pepper told him, The " only Proof of them which he deſir'd of him at " preſent was, that he ſhould keep the Fellows " and Scholars of the Univerſity quiet in their " Colleges, declaring to him at the ſame time, " that if any Diſturbance happen'd, or if any " Perſons aſſembled in the Streets, above the Num-" ber allow'd by the Act of Parliament againſt " Riots, he would cauſe his Men to fire upon " them. The Vice-Chancellor promis'd all, " and even more than was deſir'd of him. The " General order'd his Officers to ſearch; but " the Chief of the ſuſpected Perſons, Colonel " Owen, who lay that Night at the Grey-" hound-Inn, being timely advertis'd by the " Oſtler of the Arrival of the King's Troops, " made his Eſcape by leaping over a Wall in " his Night-Gown, and getting into Magdalen " College." Ten of the other ſuſpected Perſons were taken, as Mr Gordon, Mr Kerr, Mr Dorrell, Mr Wilſon, Mr Spelman of Norfolk, Lloyd the Jacobite Coffee-man, near White-hall, remov'd from Dublin, in whoſe Lodgings were found Letters which he was bringing from the Conſpirators at Briſtol and Bath. The Officers ſeiz'd two Horſes, and fine Furniture, belonging to Colonel Owen, which were ſaid to have formerly been the Duke of Ormond's. General Pepper having executed his Commiſſion at Oxford, march'd off with his Priſoners towards Abingdon; but before he left the Town, ſeveral eminent Perſons of the Univerſity, and ſubſtantial Townſmen, went to thank him and his Officers for their Civility, and for clearing that City of thoſe peſtilent Fellows. I muſt again make uſe of the Author's own Words in the above-mention'd Pamphlet. " It might " have been reaſonably expected, that the Uni-" verſity of Oxford would have taken Warning " from this ſhort military Viſit, but it ſoon appear'd " that this Seminary of Learning, and Fountain " of Loyalty was turn'd, (ſays the Annaliſt) into a " Sink of Debauchery and School of Sedition." I have no where been ſo partial as in this Place, for I reject what the Annaliſt ſays further as too groſs to be ſaid of a Body of Men among whom are many Perſons of great Honour and Merit. " Upon Information " that the Diſaffected here perſiſted in their undu-" tiful and diſreſpectful Behaviour towards his Ma-" jeſty's Perſon and Government, and even that a " traiterous Deſign was carrying on to ſeize that " City for the Pretender; for which Purpoſe a Re-" giment was to be form'd of the young Students " under proper Officers, who ſecretly rendezvouz'd " at Oxford, it was thought fit to order Brigadier " Handaſyde's Regiment of Foot to be quarter'd " there; where they arriv'd the 28th of October; " and their Arrival was the more ſeaſonable, in " that the very Night before the diſloyal Rabble " had the Inſolence to proclaim the Pretender at " Briſtol: Several Perſons under Pretence of being " of the Loyal Society, a Set of Rake-hells, who " had kept up a drunken Club ever ſince the Lord " Ruſſel, Colonel Sidney, and Alderman Corniſh " were murder'd, carry'd on treaſonable Deſigns, " and ſome of them were ſecur'd, particularly " Mr Hart a Merchant, who was charg'd with " having gather'd a great Quantity of warlike " Stores for the Uſe of the Diſaffected." The Earl of Berkeley, Lord-Lieutenant of that City and County, repair'd thither, and with unwearied Application, took all the neceſſary Precautions for the Security of that important Town, which the Rebels intended to make a Place of Arms; but there were loyal Men enough in it to have beaten the little Brains out of their addled Heads, if the Villains had been as well known as their Villainy was apparent. To ſupport the Loyal Citizens, the Lord Lumley's Regiment of Horſe, and Stanwix, and Pocock's Batallions of Foot were order'd thither, and ſoon after follow'd by Colonel Chudleigh's Regiment of Foot. It muſt be remember'd, that the Well-affected in this City and Somerſetſhire, who had long obſerv'd how buſy the moſt furious Jacobites were; how frequently they met under various Pretences; and what ſuſpicious Words they dropp'd, eſpecially in their Cups, which were not ſpar'd amongſt them, had carefully provided themſelves with Arms, ſome for 10 and 20 Men each, to be ready to join the firſt Troops that ſhould be ſent to their Aſſiſtance. Theſe were ſober, honeſt Men, ſpirited by a Zeal for their King,

A Deſign to ſeize Briſtol, prevented.

A.D.1715. King, their Country, Religion, and Liberty; whereas the Jacobite, or High-Church Faction, was, for the moſt part, compos'd of noiſy, riotous, thoughtleſs, ſenſeleſs Blockheads, ſpirited by a falſe Zeal for the Church, to which their Morals were a Diſgrace, and an inveterate Hatred to Proteſtant Diſſenters, whoſe Sobriety and Induſtry, and the uſual Effects of them, Trade and Subſtance, gave them the like Offence, as Light gives weak Eyes. The Lord Windſor's Regiment of Horſe, and Sir Robert Rich's Dragoons, under the Command of General Wade, march'd to Bath, which Place was both the Rendezvous, and one of the Arſenals of the Conſpirators; who having recover'd their firſt Alarm, return'd thither, and were ſecur'd, with about 200 Horſes, 11 Cheſts of Fire-Arms, a Hogſhead of Basket-hilt Swords, another of Cartouches, 3 Pieces of Canon, one Mortar, and Moulds to caſt Cannon, which had been bury'd in the Ground. At this very Time Dr M—, Biſhop of Waterford in Ireland, being at Bath, was ſo deficient in both Underſtanding and Modeſty, as, in one of his Sermons, not only bitterly to inveigh againſt the Presbyterians, but impiouſly to aſſert, that their Baptiſms being invalid, they were all in a State of Damnation, which moſt certainly his Want of Chriſtian Charity plac'd himſelf in without Repentance. There is ſo much Ignorance and Stupidity, as well as Impiety, in this falſe Charge, that it requires a more than common Stock of Patience to keep within the Rules of Decency, while this bold Preacher was ſo groſsly offending them. He charg'd the Diſſenters with pulling down their own Meeting-houſes, and concealing Arms and Ammunition at Bath, and other Places, to throw the Odium of it on the Churchmen. This Scandal to the true Church of England, who, as the Annaliſt writes, advanc'd ſuch horrid Falſhoods, was the ſame Man who ſoon after the happy Revolution, being then in the Univerſity of Oxford, wrote a Book in defence of the Opinions of Mr Dodwell, and other Nonjurors from the Church of England. How this High-Church Prieſt, with all theſe wonderful Qualifications, got into Lawn-ſleeves, is worth the Enquiry of the Curious in Politics. 'Tis probably as true as any thing he ſaid in his Sermons, what was then reported, that the Jacobite Conſpirators deſign'd to have robb'd all the Perſons of Quality at Bath, who were there in the latter Seaſon, of their Money and Jewels, which would have amounted to a very conſiderable Sum; and that High-Church were Thieves as well as Rioters, appear'd at Briſtol, where one of the Rioters was taken with a Coat on his Back, or ſome other Apparel of Mr Stevens's, whoſe Houſe they plunder'd.

The Jacobites Deſign on Plymouth.

Their Deſign upon Briſtol being diſappointed, they laid a Project to ſeize on Plymouth, but they were happily prevented, by the timely ſecuring ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons. Sir Richard Vivian was brought up to London in Cuſtody of a Meſſenger. He was Knight of the Shire for Cornwal, in one of the late Miniſtry's Parliaments. Sir William Wyndham was Knight of the Shire for Somerſet, and Thomas Forſter for Northumberland. We ſhall ſoon find the latter in open Rebellion againſt the King, to whom he had ſworn Allegiance; and for the Impoſtor, whom he had again and again abjur'd. Such were the Conſciences, ſuch the Honour of theſe Men, whom the deluded Freeholders choſe to repreſent them. It was credibly reported, and generally believ'd, that the late Duke of Ormond now abandon'd as to all Senſe of Duty to his King, and Love to his Country, was at this Time hovering on the Weſtern Coaſt. Nay, that he ſent a Perſon a-ſhoar to the Houſe of a Roman Catholic Gentleman in Devonſhire, a Man of Virtue and Worth, who abhorr'd the intended Rebellion, of which he could not avoid of having ſome Notice, and expecting ſuch a ſort of a Viſit, he told his Lady of it, adding, to avoid all manner of Trouble about a Thing in which he would not engage, he would be gone, and that ſhe might ſpeak the Truth, when ſhe anſwer'd any one that ask'd for him, She knew not where he was, ſhe ſhould only know he would be within two or three Hours ride of her, and give her preſent Notice if any thing extraordinary happen'd to him. He had not been gone long before a Boat came a-ſhore, and in it a Perſon, who went directly to his Houſe, expecting a hearty Welcome from a Papiſt, himſelf being a High-Churchman. The Lady, upon his enquiring for her Husband, anſwer'd him as directed, That he was gone ſhe knew not where; that he expected, indeed, ſome ſuch Viſit, but all Attempts for an Inſurrection in thoſe Parts would be in vain; that the Government had full Information of their Deſigns, and no body would ſtir; that beſides, their Friends were disjointed, and could not get to a Body, now the Troops were every where in Motion; and her Husband could ſee nothing but Ruin and Deſtruction if they went on; to avoid which, he was reſolv'd to keep out of the way. The Stranger ſaying, the Duke of Ormond would be there preſently in Perſon, the Lady deſir'd him, for God's ſake, not to come to her Houſe, for ſhe could not receive him; and ſhe was ſo ſurrounded by People, that had an Eye upon her, that it was not poſſible for him to eſcape Diſcovery. Whether the late Duke of Ormond was there, or not, tho' my Information is in the affirmative, 'tis certain, that a ſmall Officer of the Cuſtoms, a Fellow, whoſe Father would have been hang'd for the Duke of Monmouth's Buſineſs, had he been caught, went from Minehead, near Orchard-Wyndham, and put to Sea; whether to carry News to the late Duke of Ormond, or bring News from him, or both, is not known; but that it was a treaſonable Errand he went upon, no body denies, and the rather, becauſe he was made much of by the Jacobite Gentry, and often one of their Company, tho' a mean, obſcure Creature, both as to Condition and Capacity. The Jacobites in the North were more ſucceſsful. The Court having Information, that the Popiſh and High-Church Conſpirators in Northumberland and Cumberland, and the Biſhoprick of Durham, had reſolv'd to favour the Rebellion in Scotland, ſeveral Meſſengers were ſent down with Warrants from the Secretaries of State, to apprehend the Earl of Derwentwater, the Lord Widdrington, the Lord Dunbar, Sir Marmaduke Conſtable, all Papiſts, and Sir William Blacket, a High-Church Baronet, Member of Parliament for Newcaſtle upon Tyne; which Town the Conſpirators had a Deſign upon. They had alſo a Warrant to ſeize Mr Thomas Foſter, Knight of the Shire for Nothumberland, another High-Church Champion of ſmall Parts, either natural or acquir'd, and conſequently the fitter for his Faction. The Lord Dunbar, and Sir Marmaduke Conſtable, had the good Luck to fall into the Meſſengers Hands. The Earl ſtood out againſt them, and about the beginning of October aſſembled between Alnwick and Warkworth, 300 of the Conſpirators, intending to poſſeſs themſelves of Newcaſtle; of which the Magiſtrates having Notice, they rais'd the Train'd-Bands, ſeiz'd the Papiſts, ſhut their Gates, and took ſuch prudent Meaſures

A.D.1715. Meaſures for their Security, that with the Help of the Earl of Scarborough, and the neighbouring Gentry, who mounted their Friends and Tenants, the Place was ſoon in a Condition to bid the Rebels Defiance. Above 700 of the loyal Inhabitants provided themſelves with Arms to act as Voluntiers, and on the 9th of October, a Detachment of Sir Charles Hotham's Regiment of Foot enter'd the Place, as did the reſt of that Battalion, and the Lord Cobham's Regiment of Dragoons a few Days after. The Rebels in the mean time continu'd aſſembling at Plainfield, and finding the ſeizing of Newcaſtle impracticable, they march'd to the Sea-ſide. Being at Warkworth on Sunday the 9th of October, the irreligious Rebels would not let the Parſon of the Pariſh preach, unleſs he perjur'd himſelf, and pray'd for the Pretender by the Name of James III. If there had been no Miſchief done by theſe Wretches, one would have pitied their Stupidity and Baſeneſs, to ſet up for their King a Perſon not worthy to be their Companion, had they behav'd like Men of common Senſe and Honeſty. Forſter ſent one Errington to ſurprize the Caſtle of Holy-Iſland; which all who knew what Condition the Caſtles in England uſually are for Defence, believ'd it was no hard Matter for him to accompliſh. He kept it not long, for the very next Day 30 of the Garriſon of Berwick, with about 50 of the Inhabitants of the Iſland retook it, and made Errington and his Crew Priſoners. Then the Rebels march'd to Hexham, to keep a Communication with Lancaſhire, well ſtock'd with Papiſts, and the Borders of Scotland. From whence they expected great Numbers would come to join them. They had not been long in Motion before the following Liſt of their Chiefs was handed about.

A rare Parcel of Names to make a Conqueſt of three Kingdoms, and beat the Troops that had beat the French from one End of Europe to the other! Againſt this rebellious Rout was ſent General Carpenter, with Hotham's Regiment of Foot, Cobham's, Moleſworth's, and Churchill's Dragoons. He arriv'd at Newcaſtle the 18th of October; Upon News of which, the Rebels march'd to Kelſo in Scotland, where they were join'd by a Body of Scots Rebels under Mackintoſh, who had been an Officer in Holland, and in King James's Guards. A.D.1715.

His Majeſty having given the Command of his Forces in North-Britain to the Duke of Argyle, his Grace arriv'd at Edinburgh on the 4th of September, with the Duke of Roxburgh, and ſome other Perſons of Diſtinction, having been but five Days in his Journey from London thither. His Grace found a great Number of the Scots Nobility and Gentry ready to give him all the Aſſiſtance that lay in their Power; as the Earl of Ilay, the Duke's Brother, who, on this Occaſion, ſhew'd himſelf as expert in the Practice of Arms, as he had always been in that of the Arts, and to be inſpir'd with the hereditary Spirit of his noble Houſe, in Defence of the Conſtitution and Liberty of his Country. The Duke of Roxburgh, the Duke of Douglas, the Marquis of Annandale, the Marquis of Tweedale, the Earl of Selkirk, the Earl of Loudon, the Earl of Rothes, the Earl of Haddington, the Earl of Forfar, the Lord Torpichen, the Lord Belhaven, and other Perſons of Quality, readily embrac'd this Opportunity to ſhew their Loyalty to King George, and Zeal for the Preſervation of our happy Conſtitution. On the other Hand, a great Number of Scots Nobility either declar'd for Marr, or ſhew'd a ſtrong Diſpoſition ſo to do. Theſe were ſummon'd, according to Law, to make their Appearance, which many of them refus'd to do; Lockhart of Carnwarth, wrote a Letter to the Duke of Argyle, and gave his Grace full Aſſurances of his dutiful and peaceable Behaviour. He was the Son of Sir George Lockhart, by a Daughter of Philip Lord Wharton, who being a Presbyterian, gave him, doubtleſs, the ſame Education as had the Harleys, the Harcourts, the St Johns, &c. his Submiſſion had ſo good Effect with his Grace, that he was admitted to Bail, as was the Lord Deskford, the Earl of Findlater's Son, Sir Alexander Areskin Lord Lyon, King at Arms, ſurrender'd himſelf, according to Citations and ſuch as did not follow his Example in due Time, were denounc'd REBELS.

A Camp at Sterling.

Before the Arrival of the Duke of Argyle in Scotland, General Whetham had drawn the regular Troops together, and form'd a Camp at Sterling, whither upon Advice of Balfour's having ſeiz'd Perth with a Party of Rebels, his Grace repair'd, but found the Forces there very thin; and after they were join'd by Carpenter's and Kerr's Dragoons, they did not make 2000 effective Men; whereas Marr, by the Middle of October, had got 8 or 9000 Men with him. Morriſon's, Clayton's, Egerton's, and Wightman's Regiments of

A.D.1715. Foot, and Evans's Dragoons were immediately order'd from Ireland to the Camp at Sterling. It was the General's Opinion, that the ſudden Death of the French King, Lewis the XIVth, who had encourag'd this Rebellion contrary to his late Oath at ratifying the Utrecht Peace, would have diſhearten'd the Rebels, and have diſpos'd them to return to their Homes, and make their Peace with the Government. But the Hopes of riſing in ſeveral Counties of England, and of the Pretender's ſpeedy coming amongſt them, added to the Deſpair which generally attends ſo much Guilt, made them ſtand out to their utter Deſtruction. Beſides Perth, they had poſſeſs'd themſelves of Aberdeen, Dundee, Montroſe, and other Places; but Sir Thomas Bruce being about to proclaim the Pretender at Kinroſe, was prevented by the Earl of Rothes, who came unexpectedly into the Town with a Troop of Dragoons and ſome Volunteers, took that Rebel, and others, Priſoners, and carry'd them to the Camp at Sterling.

In the mean time, the brave and loyal Earl of Sutherland embark'd on Board the Queenborough Man of War, in the River of Thames, and paſs'd to the North of Scotland, where his Intereſt lay, to watch the Earl of Seaforth's Motions; which he did ſo effectually, with the Aſſiſtance of the Lord Rea, Mr Monroe of Foulis, the Graunts and Roſſes of Calraick, and ſome of the Fraſers; that tho' the Earl of Seaforth, with the Mackenzies, Macleods, and other Clans of Rebels, had got together 2 or 3000 Men, yet he durſt not venture to leave his Country, in order to join Marr, which Arch-Traytor had the Impudence to publiſh a Declaration in his own hated Name, forbidding all Miniſters of the Goſpel to acknowledge the Elector of Brunſwick as King, or to pray for him as ſuch in their Churches and Congregations, commanding all Officers, Civil and Military, to ſhut up the Church Doors, where the Miniſters acted in Contempt of his Orders, to apprehend their Perſons, and bring them Priſoners to the King's Camp, forſooth, as he was pleas'd to call his Rout of Rebels, a Party, of which about 1500, under Mackintoſh, ſtole over the Firth of Edinburgh, and came within a Mile of that City. The Duke of Argyle having Intelligence of their Irruption on the South of the Firth, haſten'd from Sterling to Edinburgh, from whence the Rebels were retir'd, and had thrown themſelves into Leith; which they deſerted, on Advice that his Grace was providing Artillery to attack them in Form, and he would have given a very good Account of them had they ſtaid there a few Hours longer. They pretended to defend Seaton Houſe, belonging to the Earl of Wigtown, but abandon'd it on the Approach of a ſmall Party of Evans's Dragoons, and Militia. Theſe Villains committed great Ravages before they paſs'd the Firth on Fife Side. Being come to Leſley, the chief Seat of the Earl of Rothes, they not only plunder'd it, but broke open the Church Doors, dug up the Ground of the burial Place of that noble Family, and tore open the Coffins in a moſt barbarous Manner.

For the more ſpeedy and effectual putting a Stop to this Rebellion, it was thought neceſſary to require of the States-General of the United Provinces their Performances of the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Succeſſion; for which they had by Treaty oblig'd themſelves to furniſh 6000 Men. Horatio Walpole, Eſq; was ſent to Holland for that purpoſe; and the States expreſs'd themſelves not only ready to furniſh the ſame, but even to aſſiſt his Britannic Majeſty with a greater Number of Forces, if they were neceſſary. The Troops appointed by them for this Service, were the Dutch Regiments of Palant, Welderen, Cromſtrom, Rantzau and Jacob, Slippenbach's Dragoons; and five Swiſs Batallions; two of Stuzier, two of Smidts, and one of Chambrier, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Vander Beth. General Cadogan, then his Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the States, made all poſſible Diſpatch in getting Tranſports ready at Oſtend; and preſented a Memorial to their High-Mightineſſes, that they would be pleas'd to give Order to their Governours of Places, to examine all Strangers, and to ſtop all the Subjects of his Britannic Majeſty; as alſo to forbid their Captains and Maſters of Ships to take any of them on Board, who were not provided with Paſſports. The Memorial begins thus; The Underwritten having receiv'd News, that the Pretender, James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, Henry St John, late Viſcount Bolingbroke, and other TRAYTORS, Enemies to their Country, have form'd a Deſign to paſs, &c. The States iſſu'd out Orders purſuant to this Memorial. The Lord North and Grey was ſeiz'd at Bruſſels but a few Days after ſet at Liberty. In the mean time Pitt's Regiment of Horſe, and Sabine's, Preſton's and Fane's Regiments of Foot were ſent from Ireland to England, as was Seymour's Regiment from Guernſey and Jerſey; and the Well-affected thoughout the Kingdom began to be under no other Apprehenſions of Danger from the Rebels than what might be expected from a Rabble of Rioters and Thieves, which was their true Character, tho' they diſguis'd themſelves with the Title of High-Church. Harvey of Combe in Surrey, who had been apprehended, with other Members of the Houſe of Commons, being examin'd by a Committee of Council, with a ſteady Look flatly deny'd the Charge againſt him; but every Word he ſaid being prov'd to be falſe, he was confounded; and the Meſſenger taking him home with him again, he ſtabb'd himſelf with a Knife as he lay in Bed, being conſcious both of his Guilt, and the Puniſhment that was annex'd to it. He lay weltring in his Blood till five o'Clock in the Morning, when the Maid entering his Room, and hearing him groan, found him in that dangerous Condition. Mr Buſſiere, the Surgeon, being ſent for, dreſs'd his Wounds, and in about three Weeks made a perfect Cure. The next Day after Harvey of Combe ſtabb'd himſelf, the Lord Landſdowne was committed to the Tower. The Behaviour of the Perſons then queſtion'd for this Conſpiracy, from that time to this, has not only confirm'd the Suſpicion of their Guilt, but caus'd Matter of Complaint againſt the too great Lenity of the Government, of which it has ſince felt the Effects in more Caſes than one. The Lord Duplin, Son-in-Law to the Earl of Oxford, made Lord Hay at the Twelve-Creation, and the Earl of Scarſdale, were alſo committed to the Tower; but the Earl of Jerſey having been examin'd by a Committee of Council at the Cockpit, was remanded to the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger. On the 18th of October, a Party of Horſe brought up to London the Priſoners taken at Oxford, by General Pepper; and the ſame Evening, eight Perſons ſeiz'd at Bath, were brought up Priſoners by a Detachment of Bowles's Dragoons; as Colonel Lanſdon, Captain Doyle, Captain Sinkler, Sir George Browne, Mr Mackarty, Mr Dun, Mr Macdonald, and William Hibbert.

Yet notwithſtanding the Solemnity of this Trial, and the many clear and poſitive Proofs of their Guilt, the Faction exclaim'd againſt the Proceſs and Execution as an unexampled piece of Barbarity and Injuſtice. They were hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd, October the 25th, and Sullivan's Head fix'd to a Pole on Temple-Bar. We read in the Annals, Sullivan, and two other Traytors condemn'd.

" It is very remarkable, that Whitty, who had " profeſs'd himſelf to be of the Church of England, " not a LOW-CHURCHMAN, but one of the " HIGH-CHURCH, did, at the Place of Execu- " tion, declare himſelf to be of the ROMISH " RELIGION, thereby openly avowing, with " his dying Breath, that POPERY and HIGH- " CHUHCH are interchangeable Terms for one " and the ſame thing."

R. Walpole, Eſq; made firſt Lord of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The moſt conſiderable Preferments conferr'd by his Majeſty about this Time was, the appointing Robert Walpole, Eſq; to be firſt Lord-Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer; Poſts to which he had been before advanc'd by the univerſal Judgment and Voice of the Well-affected, having beſides a long Experience in Affairs, an exquiſite Skill in the Knowledge of the Finances, which made that great Critic, Arthur Manwaring, Eſq; ſay, He was the beſt Figureman in the Kingdom, of which he could himſelf judge as well as any one. The Lord Finch, and Thomas Newport, Eſq; were alſo made Lords-Commiſſioners of the Treaſury.

The Friends to the Government were not wanting in this critical Juncture, to give Proofs of their Loyalty and Zeal, which appear'd by the many voluntary Aſſociations which were enter'd into in moſt Parts of the Kingdom. The Middleſex Aſſociation was ſign'd by the Duke of Newcaſtle, the Duke of Montague, the Earl of Tankerville, ſeveral other Noblemen, and many thouſands of Gentlemen, and other Inhabitants. The Aſſociation of the Tower Hamlets was ſign'd by Lieutenant-General Hatton Compton, Lord-Lieutenant of the Hamlets, Sir Daniel Dolins, Sir Harcourt Maſters, William Benſon, Eſq; Ambroſe Page, Eſq; Sir Iſaac Newton, &c. (the laſt, the greateſt Name in the World for Science), with the reſt of the Deputy-Lieutenants, and near 4000 Hands. In the Aſſociation ſign'd by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council, Citizens, and Inhabitants of London, there's a Paragraph which juſtifies every Word I have ſaid in this Hiſtory of High-Church, Tories, and the Harleian Miniſtry; let therefore all thoſe that pretend to cenſure me for Partiality, prove firſt, that this Paragraph has not more of that ſort of Partiality than they will dare to charge me with, or they will ſhew their profound Ignorance as well as inveterate Malice, and that really they do not know the Meaning of the Word Partial. The Wound which the City of London receiv'd in it's beſt Branches of Commerce, is but one of the leſs Evils and Calamities brought upon us by the Perfidy of the late execrable Conſpirators againſt the Kingdom's true Intereſt; traiterouſly giving up to the Enemy all the glorious Succeſſes of our Arms, which had coſt this Nation ſo much Blood and Treaſure; the raiſing and promoting falſe and inconſiſtent Diſtinctions of HIGH and LOW-CHURCH, of landed and money'd Intereſt among us, and their encouraging and employing ſuch as were moſt affected to the Pretender's Intereſt, has, at laſt, rais'd a moſt unnatural Rebellion in the Bowels of our Country, prompted, and carried on by ſome of the LATE MINISTRY, the Papiſts, Nonjurors, and others, their more wicked and PERJUR'D Adherents, to deſtroy the beſt of Kings, the beſt of Churches, and the beſt Conſtitution in the World. It muſt be obſerv'd, that not only Marr, and Mareſchal, and Ormond, and Bolingbroke, who were avow'd and declar'd Traitors, but all Adherents of theirs, who lay under Suſpicion of the ſame Treaſons, who were apprehended, or had made their Eſcape, ſome of whom are now living, in a Diſpoſition and Capacity to act the ſame wicked Part over again, were all PERJUR'D, and ought to be mark'd by every one in his Mind with the Infamy of Perjury. What follows, is taken out of the Declaration of the Archbiſhop of CANTERURY, and the Biſhops in and near London.

Let us now take a ſhort View of Affairs in Ireland, after the Arrival of the new Lords Juſtices,

A.D. 1715. ces, his Grace the Duke of Grafton, and the Earl of Galway, who then held the Parliament of that Kingdom, November the 12th; and the Commons having choſen William Conolly, Eſq; their Speaker, their Excellencies made a very handſome Speech to them, which both Houſes anſwer'd with very dutiful and affectionate Addreſſes. On the 15th of November, Mr Tighe, Mr Southwell, the Attorney and Sollicitor-General, Mr St John Broderic, and Mr Trevor Hill, were order'd to prepare and bring in a Bill for attainting James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, of High Treaſon, with a Clauſe of Reward to any Perſon who ſhall apprehend the ſaid James Butler, in caſe he attempt to land in any Part of this Kingdom. It was no difficult Matter for the Faction to find out the weak-ſide of that attainted Perſon, who had waſted immenſe Sums in the Purſuit of Popularity, and was then much cried up by them for Liberality, which every one knew was ſupported by the hard Uſage his Creditors met with; as if it was to be liberal, to throw away that Money in Profuſion and Vanity which was owing to Tradeſmen and Servants: And whereas it was always pretended, that he was belov'd beyond Meaſure by the People of Ireland, that Pretence had really no better Foundation than the other groundleſs and viſionary Notions of the deluded Populace; for the Houſe of Commons, the Repreſentatives of that Kingdom, in their Addreſs to the King, ſay, When we conſider the Juſtice and Mildneſs of your Majeſty's Reign, and your ſteady Reſolution to maintain the Conſtitution in Church and State, it is with the utmoſt Concern we find this Country has been ſo unfortunate as to give Birth to James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, who, in deſpite of his Allegiance, and the Obligations of repeated Oaths, has been one of the chief Authors and Fomentors of this wicked and unnatural Rebellion. On the 22d of November, Mr Forth, Mr Secretary Bladen, Mr Parnel, Mr Jephſon, and Alderman Burton, were order'd to prepare and bring in a Bill to attaint the Pretender, and for a Reward of 50,000 l. to any one that ſhould take him. Five Days after, the Houſe voted, that Sir Richard Cox, late Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench; Thomas Coote, Eſq; late one of the Juſtices of that Court; and Richard Nutley, Eſq; another of the ſaid Juſtices, acted partially, arbitrarily, illegally, and contrary to their Oaths and Duty, in making a Rule of Court, for the Clerk of the Crown to ſtrike off a Jury in the Caſe of Dudley More, Eſq; whom Phipps, and the other wicked Miniſters in Ireland, caus'd to be maliciouſly perſecuted for Words ſpoken againſt their execrable Proceedings. And having mention'd that vile Advocate of Sacheverell's, Con. Phipps, one muſt add, that the Houſe of Commons conceiving a juſt Indignation againſt thoſe thoughtleſs Addreſſors, who had ſign'd Papers in Oppoſition to the Addreſs of the Houſe, for removing Sir Conſtantine Phipps, appointed a Committee to enquire, if they were Members of that Houſe that had ſign'd counter Addreſſes to that of the Parliament; and upon the Report of that Committee, it was reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, "That the Addreſs of the "Houſe of Commons to her late Majeſty, for "removing Sir Conſtantine Phipps from his Place "of Lord-Chancellor, was, at that Time, ne-"ceſſary to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion and "Intereſt of this Kingdom, to both which he "was an inveterate Enemy." A comfortable Conſideration for thoſe Oxonians, who have not renounc'd Proteſtantiſm, that their Univerſity had juſt conferr'd the higheſt Civil Dignity they had amongſt them, on a Perſon declar'd by the Repreſentatives of our neighbour Kingdom, an inveterate Enemy to the Proteſtant Religion. The Members of this Houſe, who were call'd to account for appearing in behalf of ſo notorious an Offender as Phipps, were, Mr Beauſcamp, who preſented the Addreſs for the County of Catherlogh; Mr Hans Hamilton, that for the County of Lowth; Mr Stanton, that for the Borough of Galway; Colonel Henry Edgworth, that for the County of Longford; Mr Ludlow, the Articles of Lowth; Mr Henry Bingham, that for the Shire of Mayo; Mr Houghton, that for the County of Wexford; Mr Lehunt, that for the City of Wexford, who all ſeverally declar'd, They were heartily ſorry for their Faults, and humbly begg'd Pardon of the Houſe; and it was ſeverally reſolved, That their Submiſſion be accepted as Satisfaction to the Houſe, who order'd the following Members to attend on the ſame account.

Let us now return to the Engliſh and Scots Rebels; the former, under the Command of Forſter, were moſt of them Horſe, and made a good Appearance, but the Riders having only hunting Saddles, with Swords by their Sides and Whips in their Hands, Mackintoſh, an old Soldier, ſhook his Head, and ſaid, This will never do; and, indeed, it would have been as great a Miracle as ever was wrought, if a parcel of North Country Jockeys and Foxhunters, and a Rabble of Scotch Highlanders, could have ſeated a homeleſs Fugitive on the Throne of Great-Britain, ſurrounded by the braveſt and moſt experienc'd Officers then in the World, and ſupported by Troops, few in Number, but victorious and faithful, and as numerous as the Rebels could bring into a Body, Mackintoſh might have ſaid of Forſter, the General of the Rebels, what he ſaid of his Horſemen, This will never do; that Traytor, being an illiterate, half-witted Country 'Squire, in the worſt Acceptation of the Word; and the Earl of Derwentwater, when he was in the Tower, being ask'd by Mr Serjeant, Gentleman-Porter, how they came to pitch upon ſo ignorant and worthleſs a Perſon as Forſter to be their General? What could we do better, reply'd Lord Derwentwater, we knew him to be what you ſay, and he prov'd ſo; but the Catholics were not to appear at the Head of the Buſineſs, High-Church was to do it, and the Catholics only to be Auxiliaries? and who could we pick out to pleaſe High-Church better, in Northumberland, than Mr Forſter, Knight of the Shire, who repreſented all of them? We mention'd the Junction of the Engliſh and Scotch Rebels at Kelſo in Scotland, from whence they march'd to Jedburgh, and being about to proceed to Hawick, there aroſe a Diſpute between their Horſe, Engliſh and Scots, and the Highland Foot; the latter being drawn out of Jedburgh firſt, and underſtanding they were to go to England, mutter'd; that they were gone too far from home already, and would not ſtir a ſtep further without their Pay; miſerable Wretches! the Impoſtor, whoſe Service they were enter'd into, was an Almſman himſelf, and their Leaders, when they abandon'd their Homes to go upon this deſperate Enterprize, abandon'd what Fortune they had, except the Pittance in their Pockets, out of which, with much ado, they rais'd the

Sum

A.D.1715. Sum of 500 l. which Mackintoſh diſtributed to his Men, and that with a Promiſe of 6 d. a Day for the future, to be given them when they could catch it, prevail'd with moſt of them to go forward to England; but 300 of them, who had a little more Wit than the reſt, ſeparated from them, ſold their Arms, and afterwards ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners at Lamington. At Hawick, the chiefs of the Rebels conſulted what they ſhould do upon the Approach of General Carpenter, who had with him of Cobham's, Moleſworth's, and Churchill's, about 1000 Dragoons and 600 Foot, Hotham's Regiment. Mackintoſh, who ſaw nothing before him but ſtarving or hanging, was for ſhortning the Work by fighting; but Forſter was againſt it, till they had got more Horſe; the Earl of Wintoun was for going back, ſaying, They had full Buſineſs enough in Scotland, and that the beſt Service they could do was, to aſſiſt the Earl of Marr in reducing the Duke of Argyle, after which all Scotland would be their own: But the Lord Widdrington propos'd to march into Lancaſhire, where they were ſure to be join'd by all the Roman Catholics and High-Church, and it would forward the Motions of their Confederate in the Weſt, who was no better qualify'd, by Courage or Experience, for the Batoon than Forſter. Upon this, the Rebels march'd to Langham, and early the next Day, Brigadier Stanwix, Governour of Carliſle, with 60 of the Militia Horſe, went out from thence to get Intelligence of the Rebels; and being advanc'd to Langton, was inform'd, that they march'd the Day before toward Dumfreis, but that 'twas uncertain whether they deſign'd to proceed thither, or turn toward Moſſat. In the mean time, the Duke of Argyle was wiſely upon his Guard, and ſent a Detachment of Dragoons, and a Batallion of Foot, to Kilſyth, and 200 Dragoons to Falkorke, to prevent their paſſing by the Head of the Firth, if, in retiring before General Carpenter, they endeavour'd to get back to the Earl of Marr. But General Carpenter, who arriv'd at Jedburgh the 30th of October, in the Morning, having Information, Novemb. 2, at 10 o'Clock, that the Rebels were gone from Langton towards Brampton, and being apprehenſive that they might have a Deſign to ſurprize Newcaſtle, he march'd immediately over the Moors, got to Elleſden late that Night, and on the 4th in the Morning, came to Newcaſtle with his three Regiments of Dragoons, having order'd Hotham's Foot to come after him by the way of Wooller. At Newcaſtle he heard, that the Rebels had, two Days before, proceeded from Brampton to Penrith, in full March towards Lancaſhire, which may be call'd, the Church-yard of the Scots, as Milan is of the French, La Cimitiere des François. That General reſolv'd to follow them with the Dragoons only, for the greater Expedition, not doubting but by the Time he could come up with them, he ſhould be reinforc'd by the King's Troops. Accordingly General Wills, who was at Cheſter, having receiv'd Advice, that the Rebels were marching to Lancaſhire, immediately diſpatched Orders for Pitt's Regiment of Horſe, Wynn's, Honeywood's, Dormer's, Newton's, and Stanhope's Regiments of Dragoons, Sabine's, Preſton's, and Fane's Foot, which were all in thoſe Parts to draw towards Warrington, on the Borders of Lancaſhire, reſolving to march againſt the Rebels, without giving them any Reſpite or Time either to gather Strength, or to fortify themſelves in any In-land or Sea-port Town. On the 3d of November the Rebels came from Penrith to Appelby. Here it was expected that the Poſſe Comitatus, and the Militia of Cumberland and Weſtmorland, which by the Care and Vigilance of the Earl of Carliſle and the Lord Viſcount Lonſdale, had been gather'd together to the Number of 3 or 4000, would have made a Stand; but notwithſtanding the Encouragement they receiv'd from thoſe two noble Lords, and of the Half-pay Officers, who offer'd to head them, they all betook themſelves to their Heels upon the Approach of the Rebels; by which it plainly appear'd, how little Country Militia are to be depended upon, ſince near double the Number ran away before them, who were themſelves little better than Militia, and who themſelves fled before General Carpenter, tho' they were double the Number to his Forces; when the pretended Patriots are declaiming againſt Regular Forces out of Pique to the Adminiſtration, or Friendſhip to the Pretender, it will be very proper to remind them of the Behaviour of the Train'd-Bands of Cumberland and Weſtmorland in this Rebellion, when they are crying up the Uſefulneſs of the Militia. The Rebels robb'd the Inhabitants of Penrith to the Value of 500 l. in Money; they plunder'd the Lord Lonſdale's Houſe, and the Houſes of ſeveral Noblemen and Gentlemen. When they march'd from Appleby, they carry'd away with them one of the Magiſtrates of that Town, whom they would have bullied out of 2 or 300 l. which they ſaid he had by him; but the honeſt Man was not intimidated by them; and even when he was among them, refus'd to drink their villainous Healths, telling them frequently what their Rebellion would come to; at which Forſter and his Comrades laugh'd and made themſelves merry. After a Day or two's Detention, they let the Man of Appleby go where he would. They came to Kendal on the 4th of November, and on the 6th and 7th to Lancaſter, extremely fatigu'd with their precipitate Marches. The firſt thing they did here, was to proclaim the Pretender; which Farce was play'd by them wherever they came, with more or leſs Ceremony. They ſeiz'd 7 or 8 Cannon, and fitted them with Carriages, and then propos'd to march the next Day to make themſelves Maſters of Liverpoole; the Plunder of which wealthy Town was, probably, what they had chiefly in View; for there that beggarly Crew, Generals and Soldiers, might have enrich'd themſelves with Booty, and afterwards have got off to Ireland, or the Iſle of Man, and from thence to other Places, for greater Safety; but the Inhabitants of Liverpoole, with the Aſſiſtance of the People of the neighbouring Country, and the Seamen in the Town, took all neceſſary Precautions for their Defence, planting 70 Pieces of Cannon at the moſt convenient Places, laying part of the Avenues under Water, and throwing up a Line where the Water could not reach. At the ſame time Stanhope's Regiment of Dragoons having no better Support than part of Sir Henry Houghton's Regiment of Militia, quitted Preſton, on Advice that the Rebels were bending their March thither, where they arriv'd the next Day, November the 8th, fondly believing that the King's Troops durſt not look them in the Face, and knowing little or nothing of the Meaſures taken by General Wills to cruſh them. In truth they ſeem'd not to know what Country they were in; and becauſe their Fellow-Rabble in London, and elſewhere, had made a Noiſe with High-Church, Ormond, and Oxford for ever, and their Libeller, the Examiner, had cry'd up the Faction, as the Nine in Ten, they vainly imagin'd they ſhould find the Country every where ſwarming in to them; whereas, after the firſt Effort in Northumberland, the few that join'd them in

A.D.1715. England, might be ſaid to encreaſe their Number, rather than their Strength, being of the Dregs of the Counties. On the other Hand, the Well-affected not only in the Weſt, where the Wild-fire Men made a great Buſtle, but in London, and the Midland Counties, provided themſelves with Horſes and Arms, to join the Regular Forces, had the Rebels made a greater Progreſs. I knew a private Perſon in London, Miniſter of a Congregation of Proteſtant Diſſenters, who bought a very good Horſe, and engaged between twenty and thirty of his Auditory to do the ſame. They alſo furniſhed themſelves with Arms in the beſt manner, and kept themſelves and their Horſes to be in a Readineſs to march at the firſt Warning. The Arrival of the Rebels at Preſton was this Warning, and the Captain of them told me, they were to mount and march the next Day, with many others, under the like Engagement, but before the Time appointed came, the News of the Action at Preſton, put a ſtop to their Proceedings.

General Wills ſet out early from Warrington, on the 8th of November, and the ſame Day arriv'd at Mancheſter, where receiving Advice that General Carpenter march'd from Durham the Day before, towards Lancaſter, he diſpatch'd an Expreſs to that General, to acquaint him with his own Motions, that they might act in Concert againſt the Rebels; and being inform'd that the Lord Widdrington, and other Jacobites, had been at Mancheſter, to engage the Diſaffected there to join the Rebels, he not only ſecur'd ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons, and caus'd others to be diſarm'd, but alſo ſent an Expreſs to the Earl of Cholmondeley, Lord Lieutenant of Cheſher, to acquaint him, "That having Intelligence that "the Rebels were advanc'd to Preſton, he de- "ſign'd to march on the 10th or 11th at furtheſt, "in order to attack them, and therefore he de- "ſir'd his Lordſhip to cauſe the Militia of Che- "ſter to march to Warrington and Mancheſter, "to ſecure thoſe Towns in his Majeſty's Intereſt, "which was done by his Lordſhip with great "Diligence and Succeſs." The Earl of Scarborough, and Lord Lumley, exerted their Zeal for the King's Service in Northumberland, as did in a moſt ſignal Manner the Earl of Burlington in Yorkſhire; and a greater Spirit of Loyalty ſcarce ever appear'd in any Reign.

The Loyalty and Obedience of the Earls of Cholmondeley, Scarborough, and Burlington.

As General Wills wrote to the Lord Cholmondeley, he march'd towards Preſton, November 11, and came to Wigan with Wynn's, Honeywood's, Munden's and Dormer's Dragoons, and Preſton's Foot. He left Orders for Newton's Regiment of Dragoons, which were marching from Worceſter, to remain at Mancheſter, to prevent any Riſing by the Diſaffected in that populous Town. Pitt's Horſe, and Stanhope's Dragoons, were then in Quarters at Wigan, where General Wills receiv'd Advice that the Rebels were ſtill at Preſton, like Fowl gather'd together for the Net of the Fowler, and it was here that the Duke of Marlborough ſaid, we ſhall find them. The Order of the Diſpoſition of the Troops, was of his Grace's own forming in the Main; but the Alterations in the Execution, were made by General Wills, and General Carpenter, according to the Motions of the Rebels. Next Morning, November 12, General Wills form'd the Horſe and Dragoons into three Brigades, Wynn's and Honeywood's, under the Command of Brigadier Honeywood; Munden's and Stanhope's, under the Command of Brigadier Munden; Pitt's and Dormer's, under the Command of Brigadier Dormer. The Troops began their March by break of Day, in the following Order: Preſton's Regiment of Foot in the Front, with a Captain, and fifty of that Regiment for the Vanguard, ſuſtain'd by a Detachment of a Captain, and fifty Dragoons. Brigadier Honeywood's Brigade follow'd the Foot, Dormer's after Honeywood's, Munden's in the Rear, and the Baggage in the Rear of all. About one in the Afternnon they arriv'd at the Bridge of Ribble, a ſmall Mile from Preſton, where there was a Body of Rebels, Horſe and Foot, which, upon the Approach of his Majeſty's Forces, retir'd into the Town, without diſputing the Paſſage. Having gain'd the riſing ground near the Town, the Troops drew up till the General had reconnoitred the Avenues of the Place, which he found to be ſtrongly barricaded, and two pieces of Cannon planted at each Barricade. This done the General order'd the Attacks as follows: Preſton's Regiment of Foot, commanded by Lord Forreſter, a Captain, and fifty Dragoons of each of the five Regiments, with a Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Major, to command them, to diſmount and ſuſtain Preſton's Foot, and Brigadier Honeywood's Regiment to ſuſtain them on Horſeback; the whole to be commanded by Brigadier Honeywood, for the Attack of the Avenue that leads to Wigan. For the Attack of the Avenue that leads to Lancaſter, the oppoſite ſide of the Town to that of Wigan, the Regiments of Wynn's and Dormer's, and a Squadron of Stanhope's, were order'd to diſmount, under the Command of Brigadier Dormer, and Brigadier Munden, while the Regiment of Pitts, Munden's, and a Squadron of Stanhope's, remain'd on Horſe-back, to ſuſtain Brigadier Dormer Thus the whole Troops were employ'd in the two Attacks. All things being ready, the General gave Orders to the Brigadiers, who commanded the Attacks, to gain the Ends of the Town, and ſet the Houſes on Fire to diſlodge the Rebels by that Means, and make ſuch Lodgments for their own Men, as might prevent their ſallying out upon them, or making their eſcape.

General Wills's Motion.

Duke of Marlborough fixes the Rebels to Preſton.

Brigadier Honeywood, with the Troops under his Command, march'd and attack'd the firſt Barrier, which the Rebels immediately abandon'd, and retir'd to the ſecond Barricade, very ſtrong both by Nature and Art, having two pieces of Cannon planted upon it. Brigadier Honeywood finding the taking of that Barricade would coſt a great many Men, thought it proper to take Poſſeſſion of two great Houſes within fifty yards of it, by which he ſecured his Men from the Fire of the Rebels, which was very great, and annoy'd them very much from the Windows. In this Situation he remain'd till Night, and then threw up Breaſtworks to ſecure himſelf from their Sallies, and poſted his Men ſo advantageouſly, that it was not poſſible for them to make their eſcape at that part of the Town. As ſoon he had got his Men under Cover, he order'd the Houſes between him and the Barricade, to be ſet on Fire, which was done accordingly, though not without the Loſs of ſome Men. Brigadier Dormer, with the Troops under his Command, gain'd the end of the Town, but ſuſtain'd a great Fire in their Approach, and ſet the Houſes on Fire, which burnt up to their Barricade. The Brigadier receiv'd a Shot in his Leg in this Attack.

The Attack at Preſton.

A little before Day, General Wills view'd all the Poſts, and gave Orders for making a Communication between the two Attacks, in order to ſuſtain each other, in caſe they were puſh'd. On Sunday, November 13, General Carpenter arriv'd about twelve o'Clock, with the Regiments of Cobham,

A.D.1715. Cobham, Churchil, and Moleſworth, by which Junction the Royal Troops made a Body of 2500 Horſe and Dragoons, as good at leaſt as the beſt in Europe; and what had the Rebels to do after the Junction of theſe two Generals, but to offer their Necks to that Halter which they had ſo richly deſerv'd. At two in the Afternoon they ſent out one of their Officers to capitulate, upon which General Wills ſent Lieutenant-Colonel Cotton, his Aid de Camp, into the Town to acquaint them, That he would give them no other Terms, than of Priſoners at Diſcretion, and that they muſt ſubmit to the King's Mercy. By which it appears, that all their Pretences to Life, upon Surrender, were falſe and groundleſs. The Heads of the Rebels told Colonel Cotton, there were Diſputes between the Engliſh and Scots, but they hop'd, if the General would grant them a Ceſſation of Arms till the next Morning at break of Day, they ſhould be able to ſettle the whole Affair as he commanded. After Colonel Cotton had carried ſeveral Meſſages, the General agreed to what they deſir'd, provided they made no Works in the Town, nor ſuffer'd any of their People to eſcape. Then Colonel Cotton brought out Lord Derwentwater for the Engliſh, and Mackintoſh for the Scots, as Hoſtages that what was demanded ſhould be comply'd with. At break of Day next Morning, November 14, the Rebels ſubmitted to the King's Mercy, and Colonel Cotton was ſent back to take Poſſeſſion of the Town, and to order the King's Troops to march in and diſarm the Rebels. which was done accordingly. Brigadier Honeywood receiv'd a Contuſion in the Shoulder by a Musket ſhot, and Major Bland a ſlight one on the Arm, and the Horſe he was on was ſhot through the neck. At his Attack were killed two Captains, one Enſign, twenty eight Soldiers; wounded Lord Forreſter, Major Lawſon, two Captains, one Lieutenant, four Enſigns. At Brigadier Dormer's Attack were killed nine Men, wounded the Brigadier, one Captain, one Lieutenant, one Cornet, and thirty nine Men; in all killed and wounded one hundred and thirty. The Day before the Surrender, ſix or ſeven of the Rebels, well arm'd and mounted, endeavour'd to make their Eſcape, fearing to fall into the Hands of Juſtice, but ſome of Pitts's Horſe intercepted them, and cut them to pieces. It was ſaid they were Perſons of Quality, rare ones doubtleſs, to liſt themſelves in the Service of a Perſon of no Quality, but that of an attainted Pretender. One of them was Cornet Shuttleworth, who had abjur'd the Mock King, and was guilty of Perjury to qualify himſelf for being guilty of Treaſon. I find his Name in moſt of the High-Church Liſts, and take him to be of a Family that make ſome Figure in the County: In his Pocket was found a Treaſure, the Pretender's Standard of green Taffety, with a Buff-colour Silk Fringe round it; the Device a Pelican feeding her Young, with this Motto.

The Rebels capitulate.

King's Soldiers kill'd and wounded.

The Pretender's Standard

Tantum valet Amor Regis & Patriæ.

So dear to us are Popery and Slavery.

It will bear no other Verſion with common Senſe; we read in the Annals, "Among the Priſoners "were three or four Parſons, the Reaſon of which "being asked by a great Lady of a certain Pre-"late, the latter endeavour'd to excuſe the High-"Church Prieſts by ſaying, 'Tis probable they at-"tended the Rebel Lords as Chaplains. A Noble-"man who ſtood by, reply'd, 'Tis more probable "it was the Parſons that brought their Lords thi-"ther." We have mention'd the coming up of Lieutenant-General Carpenter before Preſton, upon which Major-General Wills gave him an Account of what he had done, ſhew'd him the Diſpoſitions he had made, and then offer'd to reſign the Command to him, as his ſuperior Officer: But Lieutenant-General Carpenter generouſly refus'd it, telling General Wills, he had begun the Affair ſo well, that he ought to have the Glory of finiſhing it, which uncommon piece of Generoſity was univerſally applauded. His Majeſty advanc'd Major-General Wills to the Poſt of Lieutenant-General, and made Lieutenant-General Carpenter, a Peer of Ireland. Both of theſe Generals having deſerv'd well of their King and Country, in purſuing, attacking, and reducing the Rebels. Colonel Naſſau brought the News of their ſurrendering the 16th of November, and was diſpatch'd the next Day, with orders concerning the Diſpoſal of the Priſoners. There went along with him a Deputy from the Judge-Advocate, with a Commiſſion for holding a Court-Martial, to try ſix of them that had been Officers, who, contrary to their repeated Oaths of Allegiance and Abjuration, being in actual Pay, had deſerted his Majeſty's Service. Theſe are the Faction's Men of Honour, and they had no Men of more Honour amongſt them. I am loth to leave theſe Priſoners till their Chiefs are hous'd in London, that we may not interrupt the Story of the other Part of the Rebellion under Marr.

A.D.1715.

General Carpenter's generous Saying to General Wills.

The principal Priſoners were ſent under a ſtrong Guard to Coventry, where Brigadier Panten, Lieutenant-Colonel of Lumley's Horſe receiv'd them, and guarded them to Barnet, with a Detachment of a hundred of his Troopers. He there conſign'd them into the Hands of Major-General Tatton, Lieutenant-Colonel of the firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, who was come to receive them at the Head of a Detachment of about three hundred Foot-Guards, and a hundred and twenty Horſe-Granadiers. As far as Barnet, the Rebel Priſoners had been conducted looſe and untied on Horſeback; but as well for preventing their Eſcape, as to mortify themſelves and their Adherents, who ſtill kept up a dangerous Spirit, it was thought proper to pinion them at Highgate with Cords, and moſt of their Horſes were led, either by Foot-Soldiers or by Country Fellows who own'd the Horſes. This Figure put the moſt reſolute of them out of Countenance, and Forſter, their General, as ſoon as he ſaw the Cord with which he was to be pinion'd, trembled as if the Hangman was going to put it about his Neck, which he had all the Reaſon in the World to expect would ſoon be his Fate. They were ranged into four Diviſions, to be carried to four different Priſons; the Lords to the Tower, Forſter and Mackintoſh, with the moſt Criminal, to Newgate; others to the Marſhalſea, and others to the Fleet. Each Diviſion was placed between a Party of Horſe-Granadiers, and a Platoon of Foot-Guards; in this manner General Tatton ſet out from Highgate about Noon, the Drums beating a triumphant March, and a kind of Triumph it was, which, ſays the Annaliſt, "bating ſome Circumſtances of Pomp and Mag-"nificence, reviv'd the Idea of thoſe in ancient "Rome." All the Road from beyond Highgate to London, was on both ſides crowded with Multitudes of Spectators of all Ages, Sexes, and Conditions, on Foot, on Horſeback, and in Coaches, who gave moſt remarkable Demonſtrations of their Abhorrence of this Rebellion, and of their Loyalty to his Majeſty, crying out, No Popiſh Pretender, down Forſter* was the principal Object of the Odium and Deriſion of the People, and when this diſmal Cavalcade entered Holbourn, they were met by a parcel of merry Fellows with Warming Pans, on which they made a Noiſe about Forſter's Ears, their Cry being No Warming-Pan Pretender. Perhaps there was never ſeen in London ſo vaſt a Concourſe of People, as were all the way through which the pinion'd Priſoners paſs'd; ſome of them, eſpecially Forſter, look'd as if they were going to the Gallows; others ſeem'd little concern'd, as Baſil Hamilton of Baldoon, a young Gentleman, whoſe young and perſonable Figure, recommended him to the good Will of the Spectators. A.D.1715.

Having diſpatch'd the Rebellion in England, we muſt do the like by that in Scotland, where the Arch-Rebel Marr continued to uſe his Endeavours to put the People in Arms againſt his and their Sovereign; and tho' the King's Troops did not arrive at the Camp of Sterling as timely as was wiſh'd, yet his Grace, the Duke of Argyle, with the few Forces he had, maintain'd his Ground, and hinder'd Marr's getting any upon him. Having Notice, that a Party of Rebels, conſiſting of 200 Foot and 100 Horſe, was marching towards Dumfermling, he immediately ſent off a detachment of Dragoons under the Command of Colonel Cathcart, who came up with the Rebels, October the 24th, and having kill'd and wounded ſeveral of of them, took 17 Priſoners, among whom were the following Gentlemen; Mr Murray, Brother to the Laird of Aberkernie; Mr Hay, Son to Arbath; Mr Patrick Gordon, Aberlou's eldeſt Son; Alexander Forbes, Son to Buſlie; William Robertſon, Brother to Donſhils; Dr Kenloch; Alexander Smith, of the Family of Mackintoſh; Mr Alexander Gordon; Francis Gordon of Craig; and George Gordon of Kincardin. A few Days after, a Detachment ſent by the Earl of Ilay into Lorne, intercepted about 400 of the Earl of Brodalbin's Men, who were in Motion to join the Rebels, ſurrounded them, and obliged them to ſeparate. In the mean time Marr being join'd by two other principal Rebels, the Earl of Seaforth, and Sir Donald Macdonald, very welcome at Court in the laſt Reign, with their reſpective Clans, was preparing to march from Perth to join General Gordon with the Weſtern Jacobite Clans at Auchterarder, in order to attempt the paſſing at the Head of the River. Marr had certainly above 8,000 Men with him, and the Duke of Argyle had not 4,000: However, upon Intelligence of this Deſign, his Grace ſent for a Train of Field Artillery from Edinburgh, and reſolv'd to march againſt the Rebels: Accordingly he left the Camp at Sterling, and march'd the 12th of November towards Dunblaine; which Place the Enemy intended to poſſeſs themſelves of. My Lord Duke encamp'd with his Left at Dumblain, and his Right at Sheriff-Mure. The Rebels ſtopp'd that Night within two Miles of Dumblain,

Scots Rebels taken Priſoners

A.D.1715. and the Duke being next Morning inform'd by his advanc'd Guard that they were forming, he rode to a rising Ground, where he view'd the Enemy distinctly, and found, as they pointed their March, they design'd streight upon his Flank. The Account of the Battle of Dumblain was brought by Colonel Harrison, whom the Duke of Argyle sent express to his Majesty; and I use the Colonel's own Words; "The Moor to our "Right was, the preceding Night impassible, and "so guarded us from being flank'd on that Side, "but by the Frost was become passable; his Grace "therefore order'd his Troops to stretch to the "Right in the following Order; three Squadrons "upon the Right and Left of the Front Line, "and six Battalions of Foot in the Center. The "second Line was compos'd of two Battalions "in the Center, one Squadron on the Right, and "another on the Left, and one Squadron of "Dragoons behind each Wing of Horse in the "first Line. As the Right of our Army came "over-against the Left of the Rebels, which they "put to a Morass, his Grace finding they were "not quite form'd, gave Orders immediately to "fall on, and charg'd both their Horse and Foot. "They receiv'd us very briskly, but after some "Resistance they were broke through, and were "pursu'd above two Miles by five Squadrons "of Dragoons, the Squadron of Volunteers, and "five Battalions of Foot. When we came near "the River Allan, by the vast Number of Rebels "we drove before us, we concluded it an entire "Rout, and resolv'd to pursue as long as we had "Day-light. The pursuing to the River Allan "had taken up a long Time, by reason of the "frequent Attempts they had made to form in "different Places, which oblig'd us as oft to "attack, and break them. When they were in "part pass'd, and others passing the Allan, Major-"General Wightman, who commanded the five "Battalions of Foot, sent to acquaint the Duke "of Argyle, that he could not discover what was "become of the Troops on the Left, and that "a considerable Body of the Rebels Horse and "Foot stood behind us. Upon that his Grace "halted, form'd his Troops in order, and march'd "towards the Hill, on which the Rebels had "posted themselves. His Grace then extended "his Right towards Dumblain, to give his Left "an Opportunity of joining him. There we "continu'd until it was late, and not finding "our Left come up, his Grace march'd slowly "towards the Ground, on which he had form'd "in the Morning. So soon as it was dark, the "Rebels, who continu'd undispers'd at the Top of "the Hill, mov'd to Ardoch. About an hour "after, our Troops, which had been separated "from the Duke of Argyle, join'd his Grace. "Our Dragoons on the Left, in the beginning "of the Action, charg'd some of the Horse on "the Right, and carry'd off a Standard; but, at "the same time, the Rebels press'd so hard on "our Battalions on the Left, that they were dis-"order'd, and oblig'd to fall in amongst the "Horse. The Rebels, by this Means, cut off "the Communication between our Left and the "other Body; and they being inform'd, a Body "of the Rebels were endeavouring to get to Ster-"ling, the Troops of our Left retir'd beyond "Dumblain, to possess themselves of the Passes "leading there." The Rebels had about 800 Men kill'd, among whom were several Persons of Distinction, as the Viscount Strathallan, and his Brother Mr Thomas Drummond, Logice Drum-mond, Mr John Ross, Son to the Archbishop of St Andrew's, Mr Nairne, of Baldwals. The King's Troops carry'd off 14 Colours and Standards, 4 Pieces of Cannon, and all the Bread-Waggons. Some brave Men among them fell in the Battle, or dy'd of their Wounds, as did the Earl of Forfar, whom the bloody Villains cut almost to pieces after Quarter given. Colonel Hamar and Captain Armstrong, Aid-de-Camp to the Duke of Argyle, were kill'd, and the Earl of Ilay, who came half an hour before the Action, receiv'd two Wounds, the one in his Arm, the other in his Side; but the Bullet being cut out of his Side, he was soon out of Danger. The Courage of the King's Forces was never keener than on this Occasion, who tho' the Rebels were three times their Number, yet attack'd, broke, and pursu'd them with all Resolution imaginable. The Troop of Horse-Volunteers, consisting of Noblemen and Gentlmen, commanded by the Earl of Rothes, shew'd their Quality by the Gallantry of their Behaviour, particularly the Duke of Roxburgh, the Duke of Douglas, who brought with him several Gentlemen well mounted; the the Earl of Haddington, and the Lord Binny, his eldest Son; the Earl of Lauderdale; the Earl of Loudon; the Lord Belhaven; Mr Lindsay, Uncle to the Earl of Crawford; Sir John Shaw; Sir John Anstruther; Mr Hadden; Mr Cockburn, Son to the Lord-Justice Clerk, who was wounded; Mr Dalrymple. The Rebels behav'd better than was expected, considering they were most of them raw and undisciplin'd; but Numbers have so much Advantage in such Actions, that it seems ridiculous to boast of Courage, when tho' three to one, they were forc'd to quit the Ground they engag'd upon. Marr publish'd an impudent false Account of the Battle, and assum'd the Airs of a Conquerour; tho', at first View, it appears, that half of his Army ran away before the Duke of Argyle; and if half kept the Field, 'twas owing to Accidents, which could not be foreseen, nor consequently prevented. That the Duke of Argyle had an indisputable Title to the Victory, must be allow'd by all candid, impartial Judges, upon these Tokens, Colours, Standards, Cannon, cover'd Waggons, and other Trophies, which he brought away with him, together with a far greater Number of Prisoners, and his remaining Master of the Field, tho' Marr had the Face to give out, That he remain'd possess'd of the Field of Battle, and his Artillery, and stood upon the Ground all Sunday: But a greater Token of Victory than all these, and which gave the Lie to all Marr's Speeches, was his Grace's carrying his principal Point, and breaking the Rebels main Design, which was to pass the Firth, and obliging them to retire to Perth with Discontent and Despair. The Earl of Sutherland, about the same Time, possess'd himself of Inverness, which was abandon'd by Sir John Mackenzie, whom the Earl of Seaforth had left Governour there. Marr, after his Retreat to Perth, canton'd his Forces in that Neighbourhood, and the Duke of Argyle did the same by his at Sterling, where he waited for the coming up of the Dutch Auxiliaries, who were on their Way to join him; 3000 of them marching from the River of Thames, where the Transports brought them, and others from the Northern Coasts. General Cadogan was sent to Scotland, to be assisting to the Duke of Argyle in what remain'd of the Service in that Part of the Kingdom. It will be no strange thing to the Reader, to find that the Pretender had no Heads about him better than his own. He well might have seen it in their Counsels and Actions; and that Knight Errant's coming to Scotland, now his

A.D.1715. his Protector, the French King was dead, and his Friends there were reduc'd to the laſt Extremity, is no more than might be expected from Men in their deſperate Condition. He arriv'd at Peterhead about a Week after the Battle of Dumblain, in a Dunkirk Privateer of eight Guns. Among the reſt of his Followers was the Marquis of Tinmouth, the Duke of Berwick's Son. As ſoon as Marr had Notice that his Maſter was got a-ſhore, he went to pay his Compliments to him, as did the Earl Mareſchal, General Hamilton, and others. From Peterhead the Pretender went to Feteroſſe, the Earl of Mareſchal's chief Seat, where he was ſeiz'd with an aguiſh Diſtemper, of which he was ſo ill, that he could not take a Step farther in his way to Marr's Camp: But he publiſh'd his Declaration, ſtuff'd with Inſolence and Lies, and drawn up in the Stile of Alexander Bendo, the witty Earl of Rocheſter's Quack-Doctor. He took upon him to write a Letter to the States-General, counter-ſign'd Higgons. There were two of that Name in the Proclamation for apprehending the Aſſaſſination Plotters in King William's Reign. He was ſo vain as to tell their High Mightineſſes, "he was preparing to go and take "Poſſeſſion of his Kingdoms; that he deſign'd to "maintain the ancient Treaties and Alliances be-"tween his Royal Predeceſſors and them; and "therefore deſir'd them at leaſt to ſtand neuter be-"tween him and his Competitor." But the States deſpis'd him and his Paper too much to take the leaſt Notice of it.

His Declaration and Letter to the States.

Let us leave that Rambler to his Fortune in Scotland, and reſume the Affairs of England, where we left the Preſton Rebels in Pinions to be lodg'd in the ſeveral Priſons appointed for them. Two of them, Mr Richard Gaſcoign, a noted Gameſter, and Mr Thomas Butler, one of the Duke of Ormond's natural Sons, were examin'd before a Committee of the Privy-Council; and the next Day, Decemb. 10, the Lord Kenmure, Mr Forſter, and Brigadier Mackintoſh were alſo examin'd. Two Days after, the Earl of Derwentwater, the Earl of Nithiſdale, the Earl of Carnwarth, and the Earl of Wintoun, the Lord Widdrington,, and ſome other Chiefs of the Rebels were alſo ſeverally examin'd, and all of them recommitted to their ſeveral Priſons. They had nothing to ſay for themſelves, but only in general, that they acted upon Principles of Conſcience. Monſtrous Impudence! Did Marr, did Forſter, did Mareſchal? did all who had ſolemnly ſworn Allegiance to King George, and as ſolemnly abjur'd the Pretender? did they act upon ſuch Principles? did others, and the moſt of them Men of profligate Lives and Manners, guilty of all Vices and Immoralities, act upon Principles? They ſaid, with an Air that ſhew'd they were not much afraid of it, Whatever is allotted for us we are ready to undergo. In Ireland the Parliament continu'd to proceed againſt thoſe that had ſign'd Addreſſes in Oppoſition to the Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons, to remove Sir Conſtantine Phipps from his Office of Chancellor. They order'd a Bill to attaint JAMES BUTLER, late Duke of Ormond, and veſt his Eſtate in the Crown, and behav'd with exemplary Unanimity and Zeal in diſpatching the publick Buſineſs, to the Satisfaction of both King and Country.

Parliament in Ireland.

Mention has been made of the late Conſpirators ſhelter'd at Oxford; three of whom, Captain John Gordon, Captain William Kerr, and John Dorrel, were try'd, convicted, and condemn'd for High-Treaſon; and, on the 28th of November, they were hang'd drawn and quarter'd at Tyburn. They had all three been Officers in the Army in the Reign of King William and Queen Anne, and muſt conſequently be guilty of Perjury as well as Treaſon, in ſerving the Pretender; yet the dying Words of theſe harden'd Wretches were, They had no Pardon to ask for what they knew was no Sin. About the ſame Time, one Captain Dalziel was hang'd at Execution-Dock, for Robberies committed on the Seas. He had been with Avery the Pyrate at Madagaſcar; had committed ſeveral Murders; had ſerv'd the French King againſt his own Country, for which he had been once before taken and condemn'd; but Marr was ſo much his Friend, as to get a Pardon for him. Being again in the French Service, he run away with a Ship, turn'd Pyrate, murder'd a Man on Board a Ship on the Coaſt of Normandy; went to Scotland, was there taken, and ſent Priſoner to London, where he made his Exit on the Gallows. He was Brother to Captain Dalziel, formerly an Enſign in the Earl of Orkney's Regiment, one of the ſix half-pay Officers who were try'd at Preſton for Deſertion by a Court-Martial; but tho' he was Brother to that execrable Villain the Pyrate, he had more Honour than his fellow Priſoners, who were try'd for the ſame Crime; for he prov'd, he had thrown up his Commiſſion before he engag'd in the Rebellion. The other five were, the Lord Charles Murray, a younger Son of the Duke of Athol; Major Nairne, and Captain Lockhart, of Lord Mark Kerr's Regiment; Captain Shaftoe of Franks, and Enſign Areskine of Preſton's. Theſe five were all found guilty, and condemn'd to be ſhot to Death. The Lord Charles Murray was reſpited on Account of his Youth. The other four, Major Nairne, Captain Lockhart, Captain Shaftoe, Enſign Areskine were executed. They had all in the moſt ſolemn manner abjur'd the Pretender; they had eat King George's Bread ever ſince his Acceſſion to the Throne, but yet theſe pious Saints were ſo much concern'd for the Safety of the Church, that they broke their Faith, their Oaths, and their Allegiance to preſerve her, as they declar'd themſelves, having been made to believe ſhe was in Danger. A.D.1715.

The inferiour Country Clergy were the moſt forward in infuſing ſuch fanatical Notions in Minds as weak as their own, and, as has been hinted, were as inſtrumental as any in raiſing the Sacheverell Ferment into a Rebellion. One of them, —— Paul, a benefic'd Parſon, in or near Leiceſterſhire, made a treaſonable Diſcourſe to his Pariſhioners, got on Horſeback, and rode away to the Rebels, whom he ſerv'd as a Spy, when General Wills was marching againſt them; he was apprehended in London by a Juſtice of Peace, his Countryman; examin'd by a Secretary of State, and committed to Newgate.

As to foreign Affairs, the People of England gave little Attention to them while there was a Rebellion at home. The Engliſh Miniſters, the Earl of Stairs, George Bubb, Eſq; and Lieutenant-General Codogan, executed their Commiſſions in France, Spain, and the Netherlands, with great Wiſdom, Diligence, and Succeſs. The Earl of Stairs, in France, hinder'd the exporting of Arms from Havre de Grace to Scotland for the Uſe of the Rebels. General Cadogan ſaw the Barrier Treaty between the Emperor, his Britannic Majeſty, and the States-General, which was left in Doubt and Confuſion by the late Miniſters, brought to a happy Concluſion; and George Bubb, now George Doddington, Eſq; his Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary in Spain, concluded a new Treaty of Commerce between Great-Britain and

A.D.1715. that Crown. The laſt Article of this Treaty confirms, with the Conſent of the Spaniards themſelves, what has been ſaid of the late Miniſters ruinous Treaty of Commerce in this Hiſtory.

The Articles of the Treaty of Utrecht, which ſhall be found contrary to what is this Day concluded, ſhall be aboliſh'd, and of no Force, and eſpecially the three Articles, commonly call'd Explanatory.

About the beginning of December, the Publick was ſurpriz'd to hear, that Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; had reſign'd his Office of Sollicitor-General. It was the greateſt Matter of Concern to all the Well-affected, becauſe he was known to be ſo in an eminent Degree, and was juſtly look'd upon as one of the fitteſt Perſons to carry on the great Affairs of the Nation in Parliament. The Publick had not the ſame Opinion of the Attorney-General, Sir Edward Northey, whoſe Jarrings with Mr Lechmere were ſuppos'd to be the Occaſion of the latter's reſigning. However, he did not do as ſome later Reſigners have done, who with their Places, parted with their Affection and Zeal for the preſent Government; he ſunk not his publick Spirit, but exerted it with as much Vigour as while he was in Office. Some imagin'd that this Difference aroſe from the different Opinion of the Attorney and Sollicitor-General about the Auditor's Office. The two Auditors were Edward Harley and Richard Foley, Eſquires, redoubted Names in the late Times; and the Annaliſt writes, "The Government having found "the two preſent Auditors of the Impreſs faulty "in the Diſcharge of their Office, it was propos'd "to create a third Auditor, who ſhould audit "the Account of the New Duties, till ſuch time, "at leaſt, as the two other Auditors might, "after Proſecution and Conviction of Miſdemea- "nours, be legally remov'd." This Affair not taking the Turn as was expected, but remaining as it was found, we ſhall drop it.

Archbiſhop Tenniſon's Death.

On the 14th of December dy'd the moſt Reverend the truly pious and learned Dr Thomas Tenniſon, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was not more eminent for Learning, Piety, and high Station in the Church, than for his Steadineſs in Revolution Principles, his Zeal for the Proteſtant Cauſe, and firm Adherence to the Succeſſion in the Royal Houſe of Hanover. We read in the Annals, "He was tranſported with ſuch Joy, "when that wiſe Settlement took Place, that, "notwithſtanding his great Infirmities, he craul'd, "if I may ſo ſpeak, from Lambeth to St James's, "to ſet his Hand to the Order of the Regency, for "proclaiming King George." The ſame Writer tells us, He ever ſhew'd a tender and paternal Indulgence to the Diſſenters. Dr Gibſon, Editor of Cambden's Britannia in Engliſh, was then Archdeacon of Surrey, and having frequent Acceſs to his Grace the Archbiſhop, it was ſaid, he did the Biſhop of Lincoln, Dr Wake, ſuch good Offices with him, that his Grace recommended his Lordſhip to be his Succeſſor. Whether that be ſo or not, 'tis certain, the publick Voice nam'd that Right Reverend Prelate to ſucceed in the Archiepiſcopal See, of which no Man was more worthy: and the Voice of the Publick was a good Omen of his Majeſty's Royal Favour; for three Days after, my Lord of Lincoln kiſs'd the King's Hand upon his being nominated Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Dr Gibſon was promoted to the Biſhoprick of Lincoln; Dr Evans, Biſhop of Bangor being tranſlated to the Biſhoprick of Meath in Ireland, His Majeſty, to the general Joy of all Lovers of our happy Conſtitution, nominated

Dr Wake made Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

it's great Defender, the Reverend and learned Mr Benjamin Hoadely, to the See of Bangor; about the ſame time, I take it from the Annals, "Mr "Trapp, the Poetical Lecturer at Oxford, a ſtre- "nuous Aſſertor of Hereditary Right and Paſſive "Obedience Principles, a ſteddy Stickler for Dr "Sacheverell and the High-Church Party, and "formerly Chaplain to Henry St John, late "Lord Bolingbroke, was, by a ſelect Veſtry, cho- "ſen Lecturer of the Pariſh of St Martin's in the "Fields;" where preaching on the 5th of Nov. he had the following, or the like Expreſſions in the Cloſe of his Sermon; "The Church of Eng- "land has all along been undermin'd by the Pa- "piſts and Fanatics." We may ſee by this Cant of his, that the Preacher was as miſerable a Logician as Poet or Divine, and that either he knew not the Meaning of the Word Fanatic, or that he applied it to thoſe of whom, rather than of any other Perſons in the Kingdom, he ought to have learned Sobriety of Thought and Expreſſion. "What the former attempted, ſays he, the latter "have always effected." Nothing more falſe was ever utter'd out of a Pulpit, and much leſs in one. The Papiſts, continues this hot-headed Declaimer, endeavour'd to blow up the Church, but the Fanatics actually pull'd it down. He had no more Senſe than to ſay it, when his Faction throughout England were pulling down the Synagogues of Proteſtant Diſſenters. His Application of theſe Scandals and Falſhoods was, It is therefore the Part of all thoſe who profeſs the eſtabliſh'd Church of England, to unite themſelves together and oppoſe them. And not long after, November the 30th, there was ſeiz'd at Oxford, on Board a Barge from London, twelve Dozen of Swords, and about the like Number of Bayonets, directed on the out-ſide of the Caſe to one Mrs Greenway. Henry Earl of Lincoln having in the late, the worſt of Times, diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Zeal and Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, his Majeſty was pleas'd to ſhew his Acceptance of his Services, by appointing him Receiver and Paymaſter-General of all his Majeſty's Land Forces, in the room of the Earl of Carnavon. Some time after, Robert Hales, Eſq; Brother to Sir Thomas Hales, was made one of the Clerks of the Council in the room of Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave. But for the other Removals and Promotions, we muſt refer to larger hiſtorical Collections.

A.D.1715. Dr Hoadely made Biſhop of Bangor.

1716. It is hardly worth while to follow the Fortunes of ſo mean a Perſon as the Pretender and his miſerable Adherents; but they have given themſelves ſome Importance in Hiſtory by their Rebellion, which makes it neceſſary to remember them.

The Loyal Addreſſes in England to his Majeſty King George being ſtill carrying on, the Rebels in Scotland thought to put ſome Life into the Pretender, by mimicking them in the Places where they prevail'd. Accordingly we find an humble Addreſs to him from the Epiſcopal Clergy of the Dioceſe of Aberdeen, preſented to that Impoſtor by Dr James Gordon, Dr George Gordon, Dr Burnet, Mr Dunbreck, Mr Blaire, and Mr Maitland, while he was at Fetteroſſe, introduc'd by thoſe two Arch-Traitors, Marr and Mareſchal; wherein they compar'd him to Moſes, Joſeph, and David, and blaſphemouſly ſay, They adore the Goodneſs of God, in preſerving that irreconcileable Enemy to the Proteſtant Religion; and call the Law, for apprehending and bringing him to Juſtice, a helliſh Contrivance for encouraging Aſſaſſins to murder the ſacred Perſon of his attainted Majeſty. The Magiſtrates, Town Council, and other Citizens,

An Addreſs to the Pretender.

A.D.1716. Citizens of Aberdeen, preſented him with an Addreſs alſo, wherein they are more merry than they were aware of, and not ſo falſe as they intended. They tell him, his Arrival, after his ragged Army were flying before the Duke of Argyle, was as ſurprizing as it was ſeaſonable; that they were happy, and knew it not; that they were bleſs'd, but were inſenſible of it, till his mock Majeſty was pleas'd to let them know, they were the happieſt of Mortals. The Pretender anſwer'd them as formally as they addreſs'd him; and, when his Ague would permit, remov'd from Feteroſſe to Brechin, thence to Kinnard Glames, and on the 6th of January came to Dundee; from thence he went to Scoone, and in theſe Parts was entertain'd and lodg'd by Stuart of Glenrully, the Earl of Strathmore and Sir David Triplin. Some of his Adherents were ſo incomparably fooliſh as to expect he would go to Church with the Aberdeen Doctors and other Epiſcopalians, but he diſappointed them, and not to be behind them in Fooliſhneſs, he perform'd all his Devotions according to the Romiſh Idolatry; and as we read in the Annals, "to gratify the "Epiſcopalians, perſecuted the Miniſters of the "Church of Scotland, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, "cauſing ſome to be turn'd out of their Churches, "and others to be thrown into Pri-"ſon." In Proſecution of the Farce he was playing, he made ſeveral Lords, Knights, and Biſhops; one of the latter was ſaid to be Leſley, the Libeller, whoſe Seditions and treaſonable Practices had driven him out of England from the Purſuits of Juſtice.

He makes Lords, &c.

At Scoone he imitated the Methods of Government in the Reigns of his pretended Grandfather and Uncle, the two Charles's, and publiſh'd ſeveral Proclamations, which was perfect Boy's Play, conſidering he had no body to obey him, but the poor Wretches that were within the Reach of his Run-away Troops. One was for a general Thankſgiving, to mock God as well as Man. Another, to order Proteſtant Prayers for his Popiſh Tyranny; a third, for the Currency of all foreign Coins, when he could get any; a fourth for ſummoning a Convention of Eſtates, which even his deſperate Counſellors had not the Confidence to call a Parliament; a fifth, for all Men, from ſixteen to ſixty, to repair to his Royal Standard; a ſixth, for his Coronation at Scoone, the 23d of January. But though his pretended Uncle Charles II was crown'd there with a gilt Crown, 'tis probable the Expence of it was more than his Treaſury could ſupply; however it be, we hear no more of it, excepting that it was put off, on account of his refuſing to take the Coronation Oath, which as little as it had of Proteſtantiſm in it in North-Britain, had too much for his Romiſh Zeal, with which the Order he publiſh'd the 17th of January, agreed much better: It was to burn and deſtroy the Town of Auchterarder, and all the Houſes, Corn, and Forage, within the ſaid Town, ſo as they may be render'd entirely uſeleſs. This Order was directed to Colonel Patrick Graham, or the Commanding Officer for the Time of our Garriſon of Tullibardine.

He burns the Country.

Before we return to the Proceedings of the Parliament in England, we muſt take a ſhort View of thoſe of the Parliament in Ireland, which met the 16th of January, when the Lord Viſcount Dillon being come into the Houſe of Peers, deliver'd his Writ, and took the Oath of Allegiance; but being ask'd, Whether he could take the other Oaths? he ſaid, He would conſider of it, and then withdrew; upon which their Lordſhips reſolved, That no Peer ſhould have Parliamentary Privilege till he had taken and ſubſcrib'd the other Oaths in the Act, to prevent the further Growth of Popery, and made, and ſubſcrib'd the Declaration therein mention'd. This done, it was reſolv'd; That the Houſe do enter into an Aſſociation to defend and aſſiſt his Sacred Majeſty and the Proteſtant Succeſſion in his Royal Houſe, with their Lives and Fortunes, againſt the Pretender, and all his open and ſecret Abettors. The Commons, Nemine Contradicente, reſolv'd to enter into the like Aſſociation. As alſo, "That whatever "Forces his Majeſty ſhall think fit to raiſe, or "whatever Expences his Majeſty ſhall think ne-"ceſſary for the Defence of the Kingdom, this "Houſe will enable his Majeſty to make good "the ſame." They then proceeded to the Conſideration of the Addreſſes to the late Queen, in Oppoſition to their Addreſs for removing Sir Conſtantine Phipps from his Employment, and order'd the Attendance of Nath. Jones, Eſq; late Sheriff of the County of Down; Dennis Kelly, Eſq; late Sheriff of the County of Galway; Peter Ludlow, Eſq; late Sheriff of the County of Louth, and others, whoſe Submiſſions were accepted of, in which this Houſe ſhew'd their Moderation, as they did their Wiſdom in all their Reſolutions. It was ſtrongly reported, that the Day the Aſſociation was brought into the Houſe of Peers, two Lords, one of which a Peer of England, had, by his Majeſty's ſpecial Favour, been appointed one of the Regency upon the Death of the Queen, embark'd in a Ship for England, to avoid ſigning it. The Archbiſhop of Armagh, and the Biſhop of Cork refus'd to ſign it. Theſe two Prelates had made themſelves odious to all good Proteſtants; the former, by his Tory Addreſs, when Biſhop of Killaloe; the latter, for the ridiculous Sermons, already mention'd, wherein he aſſerted it to be Blaſphemy to drink to the glorious Memory of King William. What the Annaliſt adds to this is fit to be repeated. He ſuggeſted, "That the drinking to the Memory of "a dead Perſon bears ſo near a Reſemblance to "the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper, that it is a "ſide-Wind Reflection on the bleſſed Euchariſt; "which, in his way of conceiving Things, is "but drinking to the Memory of our Saviour." A horrid Notion, I am ſure, more blaſphemous than the drinking to the Memory of the great Deliverer of theſe Nations from Popery and arbitrary Power."

Affairs in Ireland.

A.D.1716.

On the 20th of January, the Houſe of Commons reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, "That "whoever adviſ'd the disbanding or breaking a "great part of the Army of this Kingdom, im-"mediately after the unſeaſonable Prorogation of "the late Parliament, when a Bill to attaint the "Pretender was under Conſideration of the then "Houſe of Commons, were Enemies to the Pro-"teſtant Succeſſion, and deſign'd to bring in the "Pretender and Popery." Then the Queſtion being propos'd, "That it is the Opinion of this "Houſe, that Arthur Earl of Angleſey was one "of the principal Adviſers of her Majeſty to break "the Army, and prorogue the late Parliament of "this Kingdom, and therein gave pernicious "Council to her Majeſty, and is an Enemy to "the King and Kingdom;" it was carried in the Affirmative by a great Majority, and an Addreſs voted, That for the Security of his Government, and the Proteſtant Intereſt of Ireland, his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed to remove the ſaid Earl of Angleſey from his Council and Service in this Kingdom, which was done accordingly, and purſuant to it he was remov'd, to the great Satisfaction of the Addreſſors. On the 28th of January, the Lords

The Parliament votes againſt the Earl of Angleſey.

He is remov'd from the Council.

A.D.1716. The Pretender attainted.

Juſtices of that Kingdom, gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills, particularly to an Act to attaint the Perſon, who, during the Life of the late King James, took upon him the Stile and Title of Prince of Wales, and ſince the Deceaſe of the ſaid King James, hath aſſumed the Name and Stile of James the Third, King of England, &c. commonly called the Chevalier de St George, or the Pretender, and all his Adherents, and to give a Reward of 50,000 l. to any Perſon who ſhall ſeize or ſecure the ſaid Pretender, if he lands, or attempts to land, in this Kingdom. The Lords Juſtices thought fit, at this critical Juncture, to ſecure ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons, as the Earl of Antrim, the Earl of Weſtmeath, the Lord Nutterville, the Lord Cahir, the Lord Dillon, Edward Malone, a Counſellor, Richard Nutley, Eſq; Cæſar Colclough, Eſq; Mr Fleming, and Mr Rice, the laſt Son to Sir Stephen Rice, and the vigorous Reſolutions of this wiſe and loyal Parliament, contributed very much to the Security and Peace of that Kingdom.

The Parliament met in England on the 9th of January, and his Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech was read to both Houſes, by the Lord-Chancellor.

The following Paragraphs are not to be omitted.

The K.'s Speech.

" I did hope that the detecting and preventing " the deſign'd Inſurrections in ſome parts of the " Kingdom, and the defeating in others, thoſe " who had taken up Arms againſt me, would " have put an end to this Rebellion; but it is " plain that our Enemies, animated by ſome ſe- " cret Hopes of Aſſiſtance, are ſtill endeavouring " to ſupport this deſperate Undertaking, and the " Pretender, as we have Reaſon to believe, is now " landed in Scotland; it is however, with Plea- " ſure, I can acquaint you, that, notwithſtand- " ing the inteſtine Commotions, Great-Britain " has, in ſome Meaſure, recover'd it's Influence " and Reputation abroad. The Treaty for ſet- " tling the Barrier for the Netherlands is now ful- " ly concluded, between the Emperor and the " States-General under my Guaranty. The " King of Spain has agreed to a Treaty, by " which that valuable Branch of our Commerce " will be deliver'd from the new Impoſitions and " Hardſhips to which it was ſubjected by the late " Treaties, and will ſtand ſettled for the future " on a Foot more advantageous and certain than " it ever did, in the moſt flouriſhing Time of " any of my Predeceſſors, and the Treaty for re- " newing all former Alliances between the Crown " of Great-Britain and the States-General, is " brought very near to it's Concluſion.

It is cloſed thus:

" Let thoſe whoſe fatal Counſels laid the " Foundation of all theſe Miſchiefs, and thoſe " whoſe private Diſcontents and Diſappointments, " diſguis'd under falſe Pretences, have betray'd " great Numbers of deluded People into their " own Deſtruction, anſwer for the Miſeries in " which they have involv'd their Fellow-Sub- " jects".

George Doddington, Eſq; concludes an advantageous Treaty with Spain.

That the late Miniſters and their Agents of the High-Church Faction, are here referr'd to, will be explain'd, when we come to the Articles of Impeachment againſt the Earl of Derwentwater, and the other Rebel Lords exhibited by the Houſe of Commons. This new Treaty of Commerce with Spain was the Effect of the Negotiation of George Bubb, Eſq; now George Doddington, Eſq; his Majeſty's Miniſter at Madrid, with the Marquis de Bedmar, one of the wiſeſt Miniſters that ever ſerv'd the Catholic King. By this Treaty, the explanatory Articles concluded at Madrid by the Lord Bingley, after the Ratification of the Treaty of Utrecht between Great-Britain and Spain, were aboliſh'd, and the Houſe of Commons thus expreſs'd their great Satisfaction in the Accompliſhment of this good Work, the delivering that valuable Branch of our Commerce with Spain from thoſe grievous Impoſitions and Hardſhips to which it was ſubjected by the Treachery of the late male Adminiſtration. Henry St John, late Viſcount Bolingbroke, was the deepeſt in this Guilt, and has not yet had the Reward due to ſuch treacherous Miniſters. The Lords and Commons preſented ſeverally very dutiful and loyal Addreſſes of Thanks to his Majeſty for his moſt gracious Speech, and were moſt graciouſly anſwer'd. The Commons expell'd the Rebel Forſter their Houſe; and after a very remarkable Speech made by Mr Lechmere, to ſhew the Neceſſity of proceeding againſt the Rebel Lords, by way of Impeachment, he impeach'd James Earl of Derwentwater of High-Treaſon; which Impeachment he undertook to make good. Mr Pulteney impeach'd William Lord Widdrington. Mr Boſcawen impeach'd William Earl of Nithiſdale. Mr Hampden impeach'd George Earl of Wintoun. The Lord Finch impeach'd Robert Earl of Carnwarth. The Earl of Hertford impeach'd William Viſcount Kenmure; and Mr Wortley impeach'd William Lord Nairn. Then Mr Lechmere, and the reſt of the impeaching Members were ſeverally order'd to carry up their ſeveral Impeachments to the Lords; which being done, and their Report made, Mr Lechmere mov'd, That a Committee be appointed to draw up Articles of Impeachment, and prepare Evidence againſt the ſaid ſeven Lords. A Committee was appointed accordingly, and directed immediately to withdraw into the Speaker's Chamber, where Mr Lechmere, their Chairman, again diſplay'd his great Abilities, and in leſs than two Hours reported, That they had drawn up Articles of Impeachment of the ſaid Lords; which he read in his place; and the Houſe agreed to them, Nemine Contradicente. The Preamble to thoſe Articles, ſet the dark and pernicious Deſigns of the late wicked Miniſters, and their Faction, in a fair and full Light; which being the Foundation of the preſent Undertaking, as well as the former, in the Reigns of the Stuarts, I can by no means forbear repeating it.

A.D.1716. The Nation deliver'd by Queen Anne's Death.

We ſhall find the Earl of Strafford, who, with Dr Robinſon, Biſhop of London,, made that ignominious Treaty; taking it very ill in the Houſe of Peers, that it ſhould be call'd ſcandalous, and vindicating it by the Approbation of the Parliament in thoſe laſt Years of the Queen; whereas in this Preamble it is call'd by the Parliament Ignominious; and let all that were concern'd in the making it, take their Share of the Term.

The next Day, the ſeven impeach'd Lords were brought from the Tower to the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, where the Articles of Impeachment againſt them were read; and their Lordſhips were pleas'd to let them know, that not only their Council, but alſo ſuch other Perſons, either Peers or Commoners, whom they would name to aſſiſt them, ſhould have leave of their Houſe for free Egreſs and Regreſs to and from them. The Earl of Derwentwater named his two Uncles; the Dukes of St Albans and Richmond, the Lord Longueville, and the Lord Lumley; and the other impeach'd Lords choſe others.

As ſoon as his Majeſty was gone from the Houſe of Peers, at the opening of the Seſſion, his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, made his firſt Speech in that auguſt Aſſembly; which was not ſo much taken notice of for being his firſt, as for it's good Senſe and Eloquence. He clos'd it with a Motion for the Addreſs of Thanks before-mention'd. He was ſeconded by the Earl of Dorſet, who then, and at all Times, ſo well imitates the Politeneſs and publick Spirit of his noble Father.

Duke of Newcaſtle's firſt Speech.

On the 13th of January, Mr Sh—— ſpoke againſt committing the Bill for further ſuſpending the Habeas Corpus Act, and ſuggeſted thoſe Reaſons that have been beſt anſwered by the Facts which happened upon the like Suſpenſion by Parliament, ever ſince the Revolution. He ſaid, as others had ſaid before him, That it invaded the moſt valuable Right of Engliſhmen, that it encouraged malicious Informations, and gave a Handle to thoſe in Power, to oppreſs innocent Perſons. Whereas one may believe with pretty good Certainty, that there was not one Perſon innocent, even in his own Opinion, that thoſe in Power took hold off by Virtue of this Act, unleſs he thought a Man might plot the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution, under the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, and that of the Royal Family, and yet be an innocent Perſon. Mr Secretary Stanhope appeal'd to the whole Houſe, whether his Majeſty, or his Miniſtry, had made an ill or wanton Uſe of the Power with which the Parliament had thought fit to entruſt his Majeſty. Mr Hungerford, tho' one, as we have ſeen, who generally ſpoke on the ſame ſide with Mr Sh——, own'd, the Government had us'd that Power with great Moderation. After which the Bill paſs'd both Houſes. It was three Days after reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, that a Bill be brought in to attaint John Earl of Marr, William Murray, Eſq; commonly call'd Marquis of Tullibardine, James Earl of Linlithgow, and John Drummond, Eſq; commonly called Lord Drummond. It was prepar'd by Mr Smith, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Lord Conningsby, and Mr Lechmere, and had an eaſy Paſſage thro' both Houſes. The Earl of Derwentwater, the Lord Widdrington, the Earl of Nithiſdale, the Earl of Carnwarth, Viſcount Kenmure, and Lord Nairne, pleading guilty, had Sentence, as in caſe of High-Treaſon, pronounced againſt them by the Earl of Marr, and other Rebels, attainted.

A.D.1716. the Lord Cowper, Lord High-Steward on that Occaſion, in preſence of the Lords and Commons in the Court erected for that Purpoſe in Weſtminſter-Hall; but the Earl of Wintoun pleading not guilty, was try'd there a Month after, March 15. I will be cautious of meddling further in this Matter, having at that time been put to too much Vexation and Expence, for only putting it into the Head of a Bookſeller to get the Account of it, as it was printed in the Leyden Gazette, literally tranſlated into Engliſh by another Hand.

I know very well that the Complaint came from a certain Bookſeller, purely out of Apprehenſion that this Extract would prejudice his Market for the printed Trial, but I could by no means reconcile that Vexation and Expence, to the Uſage I might have expected for Services done and acknowledged, in the fatal four laſt Years of Queen Anne. This one Egotiſm is, I hope, excuſable, among ſo many thouſand generals. Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Counſel for the Earl of Wintoun, having given the Lords Offence by his Behaviour at that Trial, the Lord High-Steward ſaid, I am likewiſe ordered by the Lords, to reprimand you, Sir Conſtantine Phipps, for having, in a Proceeding of this Nature, preſum'd to be ſo forward, contrary to his own Knowledge of the Matter, but his Zeal for the Cauſe, doubtleſs tranſported him ſo far, as to make him guilty of ſuch Raſhneſs. The Lords found the Earl guilty, Nemine Contradicente. There were preſent, particularly the Lords Bingley, Bathurſt, Manſel, Boyle, Orrery, Gower, Bruce, Compton; the Earls of Aylesford, Carnarvon, Strafford, Rocheſter, Nottingham, Angleſey, Clarendon, Northampton, Pembroke; Dukes of Buckinghamſhire, Shrewsbury, &c.

Con. Phipps reprimanded.

His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for continuing the Suſpenſion of the Habeas Corpus, January 21, when the Lord-Chancellor read his Majeſty's Speech to both Houſes, which began thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Had reaſon to believe, when I ſpoke laſt to you, that the Pretender was landed in Scotland, the Accounts I have receiv'd ſince, do put it beyond all Doubt that he is heading the Rebellion there, and does aſſume the Title and Stile of KING of theſe Realms; his Adherents do likewiſe confidently affirm, that Aſſurances are given them of Support from abroad. This Parliament hath, on all Occaſions, expreſs'd ſo much Duty to me, and ſo true Regard for the Religious and Civil Rights of my People, that I am perſuaded this daring Preſumption of our Enemies, will heighten your juſt Indignation againſt them, and beget ſuch further Reſolutions, as, with the Bleſſing of God, will enable me to defeat their Attempts, &c.

Both Houſes ſeverally preſented to his Majeſty Addreſſes on this Occaſion, full of Expreſſions of Duty, Loyalty, and Affection, and the moſt hearty Aſſurances of their Aſſiſtance againſt this daring Preſumption of the Impoſtor and his deſperate Adherents, and, as the Lords ſay, not only in ſubduing the preſent Rebellion, but in deſtroying the Seeds and Cauſes of it, that the like Diſturbances may never ariſe again, to impair the Bleſſings of his Majeſty's Reign. On the 27th of January, a Petition of Joſeph Quilter, John Elliſon, &c. in Behalf of themſelves, and great Numbers of other Perſons concerned in the Lotteries, was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, containing Complaints againſt Mr Edward Harley, and Mr Thomas Foley, Auditors of the Impreſt, for taking ſeveral Fees for Matters done in their Office, contrary to ſeveral Acts of Parliament relating to the ſaid Lotteries, and it was generally wiſh'd without Doors, that thoſe two Auditors had gone through a more exemplary Proſecution. A Negative being put upon the Queſtion for referring the Petition to a Committee, we read in the Annals, it was to the great Surprize of abundance of People. And it was thought the Auditors would not have come off ſo eaſily, if ſome People had not been apprehenſive that their Places, when vacant, would be filled by Perſons, againſt whom they had been pleas'd to take Offence. Notwithſtanding the abovemention'd Negative, the Annaliſt tells us, "The Houſe being ſenſible, that for "their Honour they ought to do ſomething in "relation to the Petition againſt the Auditors, "Mr Edward Harley, and Mr Thomas Foley." They voted an Addreſs, Nemine Contradicente, That his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed to give the ſtricteſt Orders to all Perſons, in all Offices whatſoever, claiming Fees, to ſet up in ſome public Place of the ſaid Office, an exact Table of all Fees due to them, and that no Perſon ſhall take any more than their ancient, juſt, and legal Fees, upon pain of being removed from their Office, and proſecuted with the utmoſt Severity, which conſequently ſhould have been the Fate of the two Auditors, if the Matter of the Petition againſt them were true, and well prov'd: But it ſeems it was not ſuffered to be carry'd ſo far as Proof. There happened the ſame Day an Incident in the Houſe of Commons, which ſhew'd the Negligence, if not worſe, of the late vile Miniſtry, in what concerned the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. An Eſtimate of the Charge of the 6000 Dutch Troops then in Scotland, being taken into Conſideration, ſome Tory Members excepted againſt this Charge, alledging, by the Treaty of Barrier and Guaranty, the States-General had engag'd to ſend over the like Number of Forces, whenever the Crown of England ſhould require it. To this General Stanhope reply'd, "That the States-Ge- "neral thought themſelves diſengag'd from the "Obligations of that Article, becauſe the Treaty "being reciprocal, the laſt Miniſtry had not only "left unperform'd the Stipulation therein concern- "ing the Barrier of the United Provinces, but "render'd the Performance of the ſame impracti- "cable, by the late Treaty of Utrecht." We muſt remember what Praiſes the Earl of St——d, and others concerned in that Treaty, beſtow'd upon it.

A.D.1716. The Auditors Foley and Harley complained againſt

"And that thereupon his Majeſty had been "obliged to ſend over General Cadogan, to "make a Treaty for thoſe 6000 Men with the "States." This appear'd ſo reaſonable to the Commons, that they allow'd 126,033 l. for the ſaid Auxiliaries, who did very good Service in North Britain, and were more terrible to the Rebels, than the Native Britons in the King's Army; not that they were ſo ignorant as to give the Preference to thoſe Troops, in point of Valour and Military Skill, but through a vain Imagination that the Britiſh Soldiers were in a Diſpoſition to come over to them, when Opportunity offer'd.

In the beginning of January, there was a General Council of War held at Sterling, wherein the March of the King's Army was fully concerted, as is ſet forth in the following Scheme.

The Rebels, while the Froſt and ill Weather render'd the Ways impracticable for the March of the King's Troops, kept themſelves in Heart with Brandy, but as ſoon as they had receiv'd certain Intelligence that his Grace the Duke of Argyle, had ſent General Cadogan to reconnoitre the Roads leading to Perth, in order for his March to diſlodge the Rebels in thoſe Parts, and drive the Pretender, and his Followers, to the Mountains, or into the Sea. Lieutenant General Hamilton, who had deſerted King George's Service, and accompany'd the Traytor Marr to Scotland, hearing that General Cadogan was on the Reconnoitre to make way for his Grace the Duke of Argyle, with the Royal Army, thought it was time for him to think where he might beſt eſcape the Puniſhment due to his execrable Treaſon, and to that end deſir'd the Pretender that he might ſerve him in a Civil Capacity, upon which he was appointed to be that Impoſtor's Envoy at the Court of France, where the Figure he made, conſidering whom he came from, could not be more honourable than if he had been in a Sledge in his way to Tyburn. His Grace the Duke of Argyle, began his March from Sterling, towards Perth, the imperial Seat of the Pretender, January the 29th, of which the Rebels having Information, they abandon'd the Place two Days after, and the Pretender fled with the reſt; the Tears trickling down his Cheeks, perhaps not ſo much for Grief that he was quitting the Stage where he had acted the part of a King, as for fear he ſhould fall into the Hands of his Enemies, who moſt ſurely would make him act another Part, which would turn the Farce into Tragedy by an ignobler Hand even than his own. The next Day his Grace and General Cadogan, arriv'd at Perth, with the Dragoons of the Army, and the Foot reach'd the Place in the Evening: Some of the foremoſt of them overtook ſome Highlanders who had ſtopp'd at Perth ſome time, to plunder and get drunk with ſtrong Liquors. The Duke of Argyle purſuing the Pretender and his Runaways, came to Errol, and the next Day, February 3, to Dundee, where the Army arriv'd the 4th. The Roads being very bad, the Troops could make no greater Speed than the Rebels, who got to Montroſe, where the Pretender, receiving Advice that part of the King's Army were come to Aberbrothick, within eighteen Miles of him, He and Marr thought it was high time for them to get aboard Ship as faſt as they could, though, to put the beſt Face he could upon his Flight, he order'd the Clans who had remain'd with him, to be ready to march about eight at Night, February 5, towards Aberdeen, where he aſſur'd them a conſiderable Force would ſoon come to them from France, which he knew to be as falſe as all his other Pretences. At the Hour appointed for their March, he order'd his Horſes to be brought before the Door of the Houſe in which he lodg'd, and the Guard which uſually attended him to mount, as if he deſign'd to go on with the Clans to Aberdeen. But at the ſame time he ſlipp'd privately out on Foot, accompany'd only by one of his Domeſtics, went to the Earl of Marr's Lodgings, and from thence by a bye Way to the Water-ſide, where a Boat waited and carry'd him and Marr on board a French Ship of about ninety Tons. A quarter of an Hour after, two other Boats carry'd the Earl of Melfort, the Lord Drummond, Lieutenant-General Sheldon, and ten other Gentlemen, on board the ſame Ship, and then they hoiſted Sail and put to Sea. Sir John Jennings, who was then on the Coaſt of Scotland, with a Squadron of Men of War, had made the proper Diſpoſitions to intercept any of the Rebels Ships that ſhould venture out of Harbour, but that wherein was the Pretender, found means to get off in the Darkneſs of the Night, being a clean tallow'd Snow, which made uſe of Oars as well as Sails, the Earls Mareſchal and Southesk, the Lord Tinmouth, Son to the Duke of Berwick, General Gordon, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, were left to ſhift for themſelves. Gordon took upon him the Command of the Remains of the Rebels, who march'd to Aberdeen, purſued by the Duke of Argyle, General Cadogan, and General Vanderbeck. Moſt of the Clans diſpers'd, and ran to the Mountains. At Aberdeen Gordon produc'd a Letter from the Pretender, in which he acquainted his Friends, That the Gordon* at the ſame time acquainted them that they could not receive any more Pay, upon which they made to the Mountains and diſpers'd. The Paſſage being thus left clear between Aberdeen and Inverneſs, the Duke of Argyle order'd four Battalions, and one Regiment of Dragoons, to march thither. And for the better preventing the Rebels joining again, his Grace thought fit to diſpoſe of his Majeſty's Troops in the moſt convenient Quarters, as Inverlochy, Dumbarton, Glaſcow, Sterling, Perth, Dunkeld, Aberdeen, Inverneſs, Elgin, Dundee, Arbroath, Montroſe, Brichen, Edinburgh, Fife. The Rebellion being happily extinguiſh'd, after it had laſted juſt five Months from Marr's ſetting up the Pretender's Standard, to his flying the Country with him, ſeveral Gentlemen ſurrender'd themſelves to his Grace at Diſcretion, as Major Urquhart, Smith of Methune, Bannerman of Elſeek, with his Brother, Fotheringham of Pourie, Dr Wood, one of the Pretender's High-Church Chaplains, Rollo of Powis, Carnegie of Finhaven, Balfour, and ſeveral others. Sir John Maclean, who ow'd his Life to the Clemency of the former Governments ſince the Revolution, was again taken and carry'd Priſoner to Aberdeen, as was alſo Mr Francis Stuart, Brother to the Earl of Murray. Mareſchal, Southeſque, Drummond, and Gordon, before-mentioned, and other Chiefs of the Rebels, got beyond Sea with much Difficulty, and have ſince lead the Life of Fugitives and Vagabonds, fed by foreign Alms, and deſpis'd and ſhunn'd by all Men of Senſe and Honour.

THE Proſecution of the Rebels, after the Rebellion was ſuppreſſed, ſhew'd the Difference between a Proteſtant legal Government, ſuch as King George I, and a Popiſh tyrannical one, ſuch as King James II, in whoſe ſanguinary Reign many hundreds, as well Churchmen as Diſſenters, were hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd, in the Weſt of England, for taking Arms with the Duke of Monmouth, beſides a great Number maſſacreed in cold Blood, after the Action at Sedgmore was over, and but twenty two of the Rebels, who were try'd and condemn'd in Lancaſhire for Forſter's Rebellion, were executed; as

Of theſe Roger Moncaſter, and Thomas Siddal were moſt talk'd of, though Mr Chorley of Chorley, was the Perſon of moſt Note amongſt them, Moncaſter was a High-Church Country Attorney, a buſy pragmatical Fellow very zealous for that Church, and very miſchievous in his Practice. Thomas Siddal was a Cobler at Mancheſter, a great Champion for Sacheverell in the time of his Sedition, and before and afterwards for High-Church. This Fellow was not ſo ſenſible of his Wickedneſs as Moncaſter, who made a Speech at the Gallows, part of which was.

Dear Friends,

I Am brought hither to be a miſerable Spectacle to you All. The Crime I am accus'd of, condemn'd and brought hither to be executed for, bears no meaner nor

A.D.1716. nor leſs infamous a name than Rebellion. A Crime prohibited both by the Laws of God and Man. And though I be the Perſon, not the only Perſon, to ſuffer for it, yet I declare that from my Heart I do deteſt and abhor the very Principles of Rebellion, and look upon the Promoters and Abetters thereof, to be Men without any, or at leaſt any good, Principles, and Enemies in the higheſt Degree to their lawful Sovereign King George and Country.

This is a ſecond Leſſon to thoſe Schiſm-Bill Men, who were apprehended and impriſoned for promoting and abetting this Rebellion, whom this poor Man at the Gallows declares to be Enemies to their King and Country, though they had the good Fortune to eſcape the Gibbet. About 1000 Rebel Priſoners at Lancaſter, Liverpool, and Cheſter, ſubmitted to the King's Mercy, and petition'd for Tranſportation.

A Fortnight after the condemned Rebels were hang'd in Lancaſhire. Two of the condemn'd Lords in the Tower were brought to Execution. There had been repeated application made to the King, and the two Houſes of Parliament, in Behalf of the Rebel Lords under Condemnation. Sir Richard Steele, who now took it into his Head to be out of humour with the Miniſtry for not rewarding his Merits according to his own Calculations of the Value of them, made a long Speech for Mercy, inſtead of Juſtice, which procur'd him only the Honour of being ſeconded by Mr Shippen, and ſome Members of the Houſe of Commons, who were far from wiſhing well to the Rebellion, ſpoke alſo in favour of the Rebels, upon which a right honourable Perſon now living, and in high Station, was ſaid to have riſen up, and have ſpoken to this purpoſe: I am mov'd with Indignation to ſee that there ſhould be ſuch unworthy Members of this great Body, who can, without bluſhing, open their Mouths in favour of Rebels and Parricides, who far from making the leaſt Advance towards deſerving Favour, by an ingenuous Diſcovery of the Bottom of the preſent horrid Conſpiracy, had rather aggravated their Guilt, both by their ſullen Silence and prevaricating Anſwers, adding, that the Earl of Derwentwater pretended and affirm'd, that he went unprepar'd and unawares into this Rebellion; yet to my Knowledge he had been tampering with ſeveral People, to perſuade them to riſe in favour of the Pretender, ſix Months before he appear'd in Arms. This Gentleman was back'd by Mr Boſcawen, Mr Lechmere, and General Stanhope. The latter ſaid, It was with the moſt ſenſible Concern he obſerv'd that the Rebels were grown more formidable ſince they were taken and diſarm'd at Preſton, than they were before; for it ſeem'd they had gain'd Advocates even among their Proſecutors, and found means to divide an Aſſembly which hitherto had acted with unparallell'd Unanimity and Vigour for the public Welfare. The further Debate of this Matter was prevented by a Motion for an Adjournment, which was carried in the Affirmative.

The Ladies of the condemn'd Lords were more ſucceſsful in their Application to the Houſe of Peers, than in that to the Houſe of Commons. The Duke of Richmond, on account of near Kindred to the Earl of Derwentwater, preſented a Petition in his Favour, but declar'd at the ſame time he would be againſt it. The Earl of Derby, out of Commiſeration for the numerous Family of the Lord Nairne, did the ſame for him, ſo did other Peers for other Lords under Condemnation; the Lord Viſcount Townſhend was againſt receiving theſe Petitions. The Earl of Nottingham, to the great Surprize of many, was for it, and the ſide of Clemency prevailing, an Addreſs was voted to his Majeſty to reprieve ſuch of the condemn'd Lords as ſhould deſerve his Mercy. To which his Majeſty was pleas'd to anſwer, that on this, and all other Occaſions, he would do what he thought moſt conſiſtent with the Dignity of his Crown, and the Safety of his People. Which wiſe and reſolute Anſwer was a terrible Mortification to the Jacobites and High-Church, who were ſtrangely ſpirited up by the carrying of this Addreſs in favour of the condemn'd Lords, though in truth it left the thing as it was before, at the King's Diſpoſal; but the moſt ſtupid, as well as provoking, part of the Behavionr of the Faction above-mentioned, was the defying the Government to execute the Earl of Derwentwater, giving out Speeches that the Miniſtry durſt not do it, ſo great was his Intereſt within doors and without, and they ſpoke almoſt as fooliſhly and inſolently of the other Lords under Condemnation. In the Evening of the ſame Day, February 23, there was ſome jarring in Council between the Earl of Nottingham and other Lords, about the Execution of the condemn'd Lords, and that Earl and his Brother, the Earl of Aylesford, and Lord Guernſey, Son to the latter, having lately more than once ſhew'd a Diſinclination to act in concert with the Perſons in the Adminiſtration. The Earl of Nottingham was five Days after remov'd from his Place of Preſident of the Council; the Earl of Aylesford from that of Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; and the Lord Guernſey from being Maſter of the Jewel-Office. The Well-affected were not much concern'd at theſe Removals, but that of the Lord Finch, Earl of Nottingham's Son, from being one of the Lords of the Treaſury, was much regretted, becauſe his Lordſhip, from his firſt Appearance in the World, and in the worſt of Times, had very heartily and uſefully eſpous'd the true Intereſt of his Country, in oppoſing the late ſcandalous and dangerous Meaſures of the Earl of Oxford, Henry St John, late Viſcount Bolingbroke, and in adhering to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Purſuant to the Reſolution then taken in the Council beforemention'd, Orders were ſent the ſame Evening to the proper Officers for executing, the next Morning, the Earls of Derwentwater and Nithiſdale, and the Viſcount Kenmure. The Earl of Nithiſdale found Means to eſcape the ſame Evening in a Woman's Apparel, with a Ridinghood over it, which was ſuppos'd to have been brought him by his Mother, who came to viſit him, with ſome Relations. The next Day, in the Forenoon, Feb. 24, the Earl of Derwentwater and the Viſcount Kenmure were beheaded on Tower-hill. The former had ſome unjuſtifiable Inſinuations in his laſt Speech, which confirm'd what had been ſaid of his being unworthy of Mercy. Some Means have been propos'd to me for ſaving my Life, which I look'd upon as inconſiſtent with Honour and Conſcience, and therefore I rejected them; for, with God's Aſſiſtance, I ſhall prefer any Death to the doing a baſe unworthy Action. He ſaid, when he pleaded guilty, that his Guilt was incurr'd without Premeditation; and it has been obſerv'd, that ſix Months before, he had tamper'd to make others as guilty as himſelf. The Viſcount Kenmure ſaid, he had ſo little Thoughts of dying ſo ſoon, that he had not provided a black Suit, that he might have dy'd with more Decency, for which he was ſorry: But there was not more Sincerity in what follows, than in the Earl of Derwentwater's Aſſertion of his Unpremeditation; for, contrary to what he declar'd in his Speech to the Lords, when Judgment was pronounc'd

A.D.1716. nounc'd againſt him, he pray'd for the Pretender, and repented of his having pleaded guilty. One cannot expect Men of more Integrity and Honour in a Conſpiracy for the Deſtruction of their Country. It was reckon'd very extraordinary, that in a Letter he left for the Pretender, he ſhould recommend his Wife and Children to his Majeſty, forſooth, to be provided for, they being in a miſerable Condition, and himſelf ſuffering for his Service, the Pretender wanting to be provided for himſelf, and little able to take Care of other Folks Wives and Children.

Upon the Suppreſſion of the Rebellion, there were ſeveral voluntary Aſſociations enter'd into, and Addreſſes from all Parts of the Kingdom, for the Defence of his Majeſty's Perſon and Government, I ſhall only repeat a Paſſage or two of the Addreſs from Rippon in Yorkſhire, preſented by John Aiſlabie, Eſq; Treaſurer of the Navy, wherein the Conduct of Tories and Craftſmen is very exactly delineated.

The Conduct of Tories & Craftſmen.

May the baſe Incendiaries, who, by the moſt envenom'd Libels, and deteſtable Lies, have traduc'd your Royal Perſon and Family, and poiſon'd the Minds of our Fellow-Subjects, be brought forth from under their Diſguiſe, to publick Shame and Confuſion.

Our Zeal for the Church of England, as it is bounded by the Reformation, and our Loyalty to your Majeſty, are both ſincere and unaffected: And as ſuch, we declare our Abhorrence of thoſe falſe Brethren, who ſhake Hands with profeſs'd Papiſts, and talk, and Fight for the Church, under the Banners of Popery, pretending a blind and abſolute Obedience to the worſt of Princes, make no Scruple of withdrawing it from the beſt.

The King having given the Royal Aſſent to the Act for attainting Marr, Mareſchal, Linlithgow, Tullibardine, and Drummond; The Lord-Chancellor read his Majeſty's Speech to both Houſes, February 17. The firſt Paragraph of which is;

I take this Opportunity of acquainting you, that my Forces have oblig'd the Pretender to fly out of Scotland; and he is ſince, as I am inform'd, landed near Graveline. But I don't know yet, whether any Country, in Amity with us, will give him Protection, after having publickly invaded our Kingdom.

The Lords and Commons, in their ſeveral Addreſſes of Thanks, ſay to this Purpoſe;

We do aſſure your Majeſty of our utmoſt Support and Aſſiſtance, in ſhewing your juſt Reſentment againſt any Prince or State that ſhall give him (the Pretender) Protection.

This vigorous Reſolution of the Parliament, did, doubtleſs, obtain the favourable Anſwer which the Regent of France gave to the Lord Stairs's Memorial againſt his giving Shelter to the Pretender and the other Fugitives. That he had already employ'd the Authority he is entruſted with, to make the Chevalier de St George quit the Kingdom.

Mr Doddington's two good Memorials in Spain.

His Excellency Mr Bubb, now Mr Doddington, his Britannic Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary at the Court of Madrid, preſented two Memorials to the Miniſters of the King of Spain. In the firſt, Complaint was made of a Ship at Port Paſſage in Biſcay, laden with Arms, by Order of James Butler, ſome time ſince Duke of Ormond, that would not admit the Viſit of the Spaniſh Officers. The ſecond, to notify the Flight of the Pretender from Scotland, with ſeveral of his Accomplices; and to demand of his Catholic Majeſty, That neither the Pretender, nor any of his Adherents, engag'd in the late Rebellion, may enjoy his Majeſty's Protection. But there is not a word of this Paragraph to be ſpar'd. And that he would not permit that either he or they ſhould enter or reſide in his Dominions, in any manner, or under any Colour whatſoever. For after an Invaſion ſo inſolent and unjuſt, the King, his Maſter, would think himſelf wanting to the Dignity of his Crown and the Honour of the Nation, if he did not employ his Inſtances in the livelieſt Manner with all Princes in Amity with him, no more to protect Perſons who have abus'd his Patience, and violated their Oaths and Allegiance. And he no ways doubts, but the great God, who has enabled him to cruſh the vain Efforts of his Enemies, will put Means into his Hands, to maintain the Juſtice of his Cauſe againſt thoſe who ſhall harbour Rebels, condemn'd by the Laws of their Country, under the imaginary Proſpect of inſulting his Government, and diſturbing the Happineſs of his People. The Marquis de Grimaldo, the King of Spain's Miniſter, ſaid, in his Anſwer to Mr Dodington's Memorials, The King, his Maſter, would never grant any Succour to the Pretender, directly or indirectly; nor will he protect or any ways aſſiſt any of his Followers. A.D.1716.

About the ſame Time, March 13, the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker was introduc'd into the Houſe of Peers, as Lord Parker, Baron of Macclesfield. The Preamble to his Patent was drawn up by Mr Addiſon, according to the Annaliſt; but I ſaw it in the Hands of Dr Clarke, Rector of St James's, who brought it to Sir Samuel Garth for his Peruſal before it was engroſs'd in the Patent. I ſhall only inſert this Paſſage in it. In that Station, Lord Chief Juſtice, at a Juncture when our Succeſſion to this Crown was moſt endanger'd, he promoted the Cauſe of our Family, and therein of the Britiſh Nation, with equal Juſtice and Fortitude, and took effectual Care that it ſhould not be ſafe for ill Men to attack thoſe Laws which were made in our Behalf, nor dangerous for good Men to defend them.

On the 7th of April, the Grand Jury at Weſtminſter found two Bills of Indictment of High-Treaſon againſt eleven of the Preſton Rebels; Thomas Forſter, Eſq; Brigadier Mackintoſh, William Shaftoe, Robert Talbot, Henry Oxborough, Charles Wogan, John Hall, Richard Gaſcoigne, Alexander Menzies, and John Robertſon; and three Days after, the Grand Jury of Surrey found the like Bills of Indictment againſt Mr James Hugh, Mr Miller, three Fergusſons, two Douglaſſes; Mr Scrimſhaw, Captain Maclean, Mr Skeen, and Mr Innes. Forſter, was to have been tried the 14th of April; but on the 11th he made his Eſcape out of Newgate, to the great Surprize of moſt People; tho' I think they had much more Reaſon to be ſurpriz'd, that Pitts, the Keeper of Newgate, was not hang'd in his ſtead. He let him have a Chamber in his Houſe, and the Night before he got out, at about eleven o' Clock, Pitts and Forſter were making merry over a Bowl of Punch; when, on a ſudden, Pitts, pretending to be grip'd, went down Stairs, and Forſter, making uſe of a falſe Key, which his Man had prepar'd him, open'd the Street-door, and made his Way to the Water-ſide, where People were ready to take him on Board a Ship, and carry him to France; where he arriv'd a few Days after, and proceeded to the Pretender at Avignon. He was this Seſſion attainted by Act of Parliament, and Pitts preſented by the Grand Jury of Middleſex, for a high Neglect in his Office. But much better Men than Pitts would have ten ſuch Preſentments againſt them, with the like Conſequence, for the tenth Part of what was reported Forſter paid for his Eſcape.

Select Veſtries corrupt.

At this Time there was a very great Complaint againſt the corrupt and baſe Management of the ſelect Veſtries within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and particularly of their Diſaffection to the Government; of which the chuſing Joſeph Trapp, M. A. Lecturer of St Martin's in the Fields, was reckon'd an undoubted Inſtance. A Committee was appointed to examine into the Conduct of theſe Veſtries; and on the 8th of March, Mr Moleſworth reported, That the Committee finding it a Work of inſuperable Difficulty to peruſe, within any competent Time, all the Books and Accounts of the ſaid Pariſhes in ſuch manner as is neceſſary for the thorough Information of this Houſe, have thought it more for the publick Service, to apply their Endeavours principally to thoſe that relate to the Maintenance of the Poor. And becauſe the Pariſh of St Martin's in the Fields has been repreſented to the Committee as the moſt free from Frauds and Abuſes, and averr'd to be under the beſt Regulation of any Pariſh in London in reſpect to the Government of the Poor, the Committee rather willing to propoſe a good Example for the Imitation of others, than deſirous of finding Fault, have choſe to begin with that Pariſh, &c. In this ſo very fair Management, we find theſe extraordinary Disburſements in 1712.

I have not room for the Particulars of all the Disburſements of the annual Collections in that Pariſh, amounting to near 6000 l. one Year with another, but this ſmall Sketch of the Account will give an Idea of the reſt, and of the Honeſty of theſe honeſteſt of Veſtry-men. I ſhall only add one Remark more of the Committee; which, touching every Pariſh in England, where there are French Proteſtants and Diſſenters, ſeems to be a pretty good Leſſon to our Legiſlators, when this Matter comes again on the Carpet.

A good Bill for regulating ſelect Veſtries, paſs'd the Houſe of Commons; and let the Annaliſt tell you what was it's Fate in the Houſe of Lords. "The "Clergy of the Church of England found Means, "towards the End of this Seſſion, to ſtave off a "Bill that was like to make them uneaſy; againſt "which, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the "Biſhop of London ſeverally preſented Petitions in "the Houſe of Peers; and on Friday, the 1ſt of "June, it was thrown out by a great Majority. "All the Biſhops voted againſt it, chiefly becauſe "it gave Lay-men an Authority over the Maſters of Charity-Schools, which Charity however comes out of Laymens Pockets, who are "moſt of them in holy Orders, and, if they are "not miſrepreſented, of the High-Church "Party."

His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, having been elected Chancellor of the Univerſity of Dublin, Dr Benjamin Pratt, Provoſt of Trinity College near Dublin; and Dr Robert Howard, Fellow of the ſaid College, were nominated to wait on his Royal Highneſs with the Diploma of his Election, and to admit his Royal Highneſs into the full Poſſeſſion of that Office. They were accompany'd by all the Perſons of Quality of the Kingdom of Ireland who were then in Town, and acquainted with their Errand. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury introduc'd them, and Dr Pratt made an elegant Speech, in which he ſaid, among other Things, ſpeaking of his Majeſty;

Happy, indeed, were our Preſages, and joyful altogether is the Accompliſhment of them. Our Eyes behold a Prince now ſitting on the Throne of his Royal Anceſtors, wiſe, valiant, juſt, and magnanimous. A Monarch loaded with all the Martial Glories of the Field, and long diſtinguiſh'd for the nobler Arts of Peace and Civil Government. His earlier Years he devoted to the Cauſe of Religion, againſt Turks and Infidels. He afterwards employ'd his Arms in the Defence of the Liberties of Europe, at a Time when they were in the utmoſt Danger from Abroad; and now he compleats his Glories at Home, in delivering Britain, the Bulwark of the Proteſtant Faith, from the inconſiſtent Rule of a Popiſh Pretender. By his Wiſdom he has defeated all ſecret Attempts. By his Valour, conquer'd in the open Field. His Juſtice awes the Daring and the Vicious. His Clemency gains the Weak and Deluded. His large Revenues he employs in ſecuring thoſe Liberties, for whoſe Preſervation his undoubted Right is moſt juſtly founded, &c.

This is the great, and good Prince, againſt whom the Schiſm-Bill Men form'd the ſecret Attempts which the Reverend and Learned Provoſt ſpeaks of; for which, upon Diſcovery, ſome of them were, indeed, impriſon'd; but, by the Royal Clemency, liv'd long enough to ſhew themſelves unworthy either of Clemency or Mercy, by their Impenitence and daring Oppoſition to the Government ever ſince. His Royal Highneſs return'd this gracious Anſwer.

His Royal Highneſs's Anſwer.

I am very glad the Univerſity of Dublin have given this Mark of their Regard and Affection to his Majeſty's Government and to me; and I don't doubt but it will be conſtantly follow'd by a ſuitable Zeal and Duty for the future.

I am very ready to take your Univerſity into my Protection, and ſhall accept of this Office as you deſire. You may depend upon it, I will always take

A.D.1716. Care, that the good Intentions and Loyalty of your Univerſity, and of it's ſeveral Members, ſhall meet with thoſe Marks of Favour and Regard, which I am perſuaded they will, on all Occaſions deſerve.

Tho' his Majeſty's Wiſdom had defeated the ſecret Attempts of the Jacobite and High-Church Faction, and his Arms had driven his open Enemies out of the Kingdom, there remain'd ſtill a Spirit of Mutiny and Rebellion in thoſe of them that had not as yet taken Arms, and eſpecially in the ordinary ſort of People, who had been ſo lately poiſon'd by Sacheverell, T——, and the Tory Prieſthood, who wanted an Opportunity to get together without Fear of the Proclamation, which they flatter'd themſelves would offer at the next Election for Members of Parliament.

Ill Deſigns of High-Church.

As this Faction has always conſiſted of the weakeſt as well as the wickedeſt People; ſo they have always been ſo raſh, as to diſcover their Intentions by their Diſcourſes, by their Boaſtings and Menaces. The Miniſtry wanted not ſuch Notices of their ill Deſigns. They were too well acquainted with their inveterate Malice and Hatred to the Government to make any Dependance on their Change of Mind, and growing wiſer by Diſappointment and Misfortune: They had a vain Imagination, then, as well as ſince, that by the Help of ſome Word given out by their Leaders in the Pamphlets of their Libellers, and Preachments of their Clergy, they might be able to get a Majority of Tories; and if not, they might raiſe ſuch a Ferment as would make way for a ſucceſsful Invaſion with an Army of Iriſh, Spaniſh, and French Papiſts. This was well foreſeen by the Miniſtry, who reſolv'd to baffle their fond Hopes, by prolonging the ſitting of the preſent Parliament, which was talk'd of before an Act for that Purpoſe was brought into the Houſe of Lords. It was at firſt ſaid, the Deſign was only to ſuſpend the Triennial Act, by which this Parliament would have continu'd three Years beyond the Time, when it would otherwiſe determine. But ſuch a Suſpenſion was like to be attended with more Inconveniencies than a Bill for enlarging the Time for Continuance of Parliaments. The Reaſons for ſuſpending the Triennial Bill now being likely to be as ſtrong at the three Years End as the ſeven; and then another Suſpenſion would meet with more Oppoſition, without anſwering the End firſt propos'd by it. On Monday, the 9th of April, in the Evening, above 30 Peers met at the Duke of Devonſhire's Houſe, where this Matter was taken into Conſideration, and it having been the general Opinion among the Movers in it, that it would be moſt eligible to bring it firſt into the Houſe of Lords, to prevent it's having ill Conſequences in in the future Elections in Caſe of Miſcarriage in the Commons Houſe, it was reſolv'd to make the Motion for it the very next Day; and his Grace, at whoſe Houſe this illuſtrious Meeting was held, was deſir'd to do it, which he did accordingly; and having offer'd the ſaid Bill, it was read as uſual, and then the Lord-Chancellor put the Queſtion, Whether it ſhould be committed; upon which there aroſe a warm Debate, that laſted from two till ſeven o' Clock in the Afternoon. Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, with ſeveral of her Gentlemen and Ladies, a great many Members of the Houſe of Commons, and others, being in the Houſe.

The Reaſons given by the Peers for the Bill are much the ſame with thoſe above-mention'd, from whence the Bill took it's Riſe. The Reaſons againſt the Bill have loſt what Weight there might ſeem to be then in them, by an Experience of near twenty Years, without any ill Conſequence to the Conſtitution or the Peoples Liberties, on which they all turn'd; ſo I ſhall only take Notice of a few remarkable Particularities in this Debate. The Lord Carteret made an excellent Speech for the Bill, to this Effect. His Lordſhip own'd, That frequent Parliaments are a great Security of the Peoples Rights and Liberties. And this Bill was not againſt frequent SESSIONS, but only againſt frequent Elections. That they ought maturely to weigh and conſider what was ſuggeſted in the Preamble to this Bill, viz. That there's a reſtleſs Popiſh Faction, deſigning and endeavouring to renew the Rebellion within this Kingdom. That of all Rebellions, this laſt was the moſt monſtrous and unnatural; for all other Rebellions were carry'd on under Pretences of Liberty; whereas this laſt was a Rebellion for Slavery. That as to our Allies abroad, tho' he could not ſay, that they expected this Bill, yet it was reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that they would be glad to ſee it paſs into a Law; for having found, by ſad Experience, that great Changes may be made in the beſt concerted Meaſures, by different Parliaments, influenc'd by different Miniſters; ſo if they had not ſome Security for the Treaties his Majeſty was now entring into with them, a ſtrong Tide might come, upon a new Election, that might overturn all. That, in ſhort, this Bill would fix the King, and the preſent happy Settlement, on a laſting Foundation, and therefore he was for committing of it. The Duke of Buckinghamſhire, who was againſt the Bill, had this pleaſant Turn in his Speech. "Pray, "my Lords, conſider what you are doing: Why, "to prevent robbing on the High-way, you for- "bid travelling—. If a Man breaks his Leg, "ſhall a Surgeon tell him, he muſt be flux'd, "and alter his Conſtitution?" The Earl of Cholmondeley ſaid, among other good Things, That they had lately ſeen what a corrupt Parliament might do; and by what Means ſuch a Parliament might be got. Let us not forget that the Earl of S— vindicated the Treaty of Utrecht, by the Approbation of that very corrupt Parliament. Every one might gueſs how there came to be a Debt of 500,000 l. upon the Civil Liſt. That, in his Opinion, there was no better Remedy againſt Corruptions, than the ſuppreſſing frequent Elections, which occaſion laſting Feuds and Skirmiſhes in Families. The Lord F— enlarg'd on the Excellence of our Conſtitution, and took notice, that the different Branches of the Legiſlature are a Check to one another, which, in Truth had been often taken notice of before, and prevented Exorbitances in the Adminiſtration, and dragooning, as in Turkey. Where I do not remember to have read that there are Dragoons. The Earl of Aylesford ſaid, as to Expences at Elections, "It could not be de- "ny'd, that a great deal of Money is expended "in

A.D.1716. " in Elections, but the Candidates might chuſe " whether they would ſpend any or no. That " it muſt likewiſe be granted, that thoſe Expences " lay the Foundation of Corruption; and thoſe " who make them, are in hopes to get either " Places or Penſions. But that by the Triennial " Act, the Country has an Opportunity to remedy " any Abuſes, &c." We have ſeen, by the Hiſtory of England, ſince that Act paſs'd, that there have been more Complaints of ſuch Corruption from that Time than had been in any Period of twice the Time before it's paſſing, and that it did not produce the Remedy here ſpoken of. The learned and eloquent Earl of Ilay ſpoke to this Effect: That 'tis certain, frequent Elections occaſion ruinous Expences; and that 'tis no leſs true, that ruinous Expences beget, of courſe, Corruptions; for when Gentlemen have laid out their Eſtates in Elections, they muſt exert their Induſtry to find out ſome Means to make themſelves amends: That beſides this Evil, frequent Elections are a great Occaſion of Vice, Debauchery and Decay of Trade. That notwithſtanding whatever had been ſuggeſted againſt long Parliaments, 'twas undeniable, that the Conſtitution was ſafe under a Parliament of ſeventeen Years Continuance in Charles the IId's Time. That on the contrary, it was certain, that frequent Elections occaſion great Heats, and even implacable Feuds and Diviſions between Father and Son, Husband and Wife, Brother and Siſter. That on theſe Occaſions, when Party Healths go round, the naming of one General before another often produces a bloody Quarrel, and which is far worſe, the ſacred Name of the Church is impiouſly profan'd in the Streets, and commonly join'd with Treaſon. What follows has ſo much Weight in it, and yet is ſo ſeldom taken into Conſideration, that it deſerves particular Mention. His Lordſhip made very judicious Obſervations on the great Change, which, in Proceſs of Time, has happen'd in the Qualifications of the Electors, by the Increaſe and Plenty of Silver and Gold Species in Europe; for forty Shillings a Year in Freehold, which qualifies a Man to vote in Elections, was formerly as good as forty Pounds is at preſent; ſo that formerly the Electors were either Gentlemen or Men of Subſtance; whereas now the Majority of them are of the Dregs of the People, and therefore more ſubject to Corruption. From all which his Lordſhip rightly inferr'd, that frequent Elections render'd our Government dependent on the Caprice of the Multitude, and very precarious. The Earl of P—— ſaid, " That " whether he was in Employment or no, he " ſtill had an entire Affection for the King, and " wiſh'd he could give his Vote for this Bill, but " that he would not be for a Remedy that was " worſe than the Evil." His Lordſhip afterwards diſcours'd on ſeveral Heads, and clos'd thus; If the preſent Parliament continu'd beyond the Time for which they were choſen, he knew not how to expreſs their Manner of Exiſtence, unleſs, begging Leave of that venerable Bench, turning to the Biſhops, they had Recourſe to the Diſtinction us'd in the Athanaſian Creed, for they would be neither created nor made, but proceeding, &c. The Earl of N—— having hinted, that this Bill would rivet the Jacobites in their Opinions, a noble Duke Duke obſerv'd, in Anſwer to it, That was no good Argument againſt the Bill, for he had ſeen ſome Perſons ſhift often Sides, and change their Opinions, and be very zealous for both. The Earl taking this to himſelf, ſaid he was for ſome time againſt the Abjuration Oath, becauſe he thought a Multiplicity of Oaths would make the Nation unſafe; but that as ſoon as he was convinc'd of the Neceſſity of that Oath, he readily came into it. The Duke of Buckinghamſhire clos'd the Debate, with ſaying, I am for the Bill, but don't think it ſeaſonable. The Queſtion for committing it was carry'd by a Majority of 96 Voices againſt 61; but theſe 30 Lords enter'd their Proteſt. A.D.1716.

One of theſe Biſhops ſaid, when this Bill came next into Debate in a grand Committee, That if it was never ſo good, it was very unſeaſonable, becauſe very unpopular, and altogether uſeleſs, the Rebellion being cruſh'd, and the Power of France not to be fear'd.

If Sincerity and Integrity are Requiſites in an honeſt Man, how much are they ſo in a Biſhop, who ought to be a Pattern of both; and yet how far was this High-Church Prelate from this Character? Now, added he, eſpecially when there was a glorious ſtanding Army, and a Miniſtry that knows how effectually to engage the Affections of the People. The contrary of which, whatever Truth there was in it, every one knew to be his Meaning. The Earl of N—— made another Speech againſt the Bill, when it was read the third Time, of near an hour long; wherein, by an hiſtorical Detail, he endeavour'd to ſhew, That Counſels for enlarging the Prerogative were ever pernicious to the Crown. To this his Grace the D—— of A—— reply'd, That not being ſo well read in Hiſtory as that noble Lord, he would confine himſelf to what had happen'd in his own Time; and that he had obſerv'd, that his Lordſhip had by Turns oppos'd all that had been offer'd, either for the Intereſt of the Crown, or the Liberties of the People; of which he might produce ſeveral Inſtances: Adding, He did not wonder there appear'd already ſo much Joy among a certain Party over a repenting Sinner. The Blank before the Word Years in the Act, being fill'd up with the Word Seven, the Queſtion, Whether it ſhould paſs, was carry'd in the Affirmative by a Majority of 69 Voices againſt 30; but 24 Lords enter'd their Proteſt, whoſe Names are in the laſt Liſt, with the Addition of the Earls of Berkſhire and Cardigan, and the Omiſſion of the other eight. The Lord G—— ſtood up, and mov'd, that the Bill be rejected without being read; but that being unprecedented, it was read the firſt time, and carry'd for a ſecond Reading by a Majority of 276 Voices againſt 156. In the mean time ſeveral Petitions were prepar'd in the Country, and tranſmitted to London againſt the Bill. But it is ſo eaſy a Matter to obtain Petitions, Addreſſes, and

Mr Lyddal's Speech against the late treacherous Ministry, and the High-Church Priesthood.

Mr Lyddal's Speech being of some Length, I can only spare Room for this Passage.

" If this Opportunity be lost, you may possibly " never have another, or at least so good one, " not only to conquer, but even to eradicate that " Spirit of Jacobitism, which has dwelt long a- " mongst us, and has more than once brought " this Nation to the very brink of Ruin and De- " struction? Since therefore with much Danger " and Difficulty we have at last secur'd our Reli- " gion, Laws, and Liberties, when all was at " stake, from the TREACHERY of the LATE " MINISRY, the unaccountable Proceedings of " the last TRIENNIAL PARLIAMENT, " Why should you run the Risque of having a " new one so soon, first chosen by French Money, " and then voting by French Directions, since the " King and his Parliament exert their united " Power for the Good of the Publick, and to " RETRIEVE the Honour of the Nation? " Why should they not continue longer together, " that they may finish what they have so unani- " mously and happily begun? Upon the whole, " Sir, the Electors and People of all the Boroughs " in England, having, for several Years pass'd, " been BRIB'D and PREACH'D into the Pre- " tender's Interest, and a Dislike of the Protestant " Succession, it becomes rather Necessity than " Choice, to apply an extraordinary Remedy to " an extraordinary Disease, &c."

Having been reflected on by some over-scrupulous Persons for using the Terms Whig and Tory, which 'tis impossible to write an History of the last Reigns, and not to use, I shall repeat part of Mr Hampden's Speech in Parliament, as well to justify myself by his Example, as to shew his Reasoning for this Bill.

It is said, the Reason of this Expedient, as 'tis call'd, is, because the Majority of this Parliament are Whigs. And tho' 'tis allow'd, that this Parliament has acted for the Service of his Majesty and the Nation, the Proceedings of the last Parliament are said to be as meritorious of the King's good Opinion, and the Nation's, as what this Parliament has done. It is much insisted on, that the Tories gave the Civil List: That is true: But had they not given it, I believe the King would not long have been depriv'd of it. 'Tis said, the King was receiv'd here with the universal Joy of the People; Why did that Satisfaction cease so soon? Has the King done any thing to lose the Affection of so many of his People? Or have his Ministers? If his Ministers, Why has the Spirit of Patriotism been so much wanting in Gentlemen, as not to represent to the King, or in this House, the Crimes of those he employs in his Service?

A.D.1716. Mr Hampden's Speech of Whigs & Tories.

Sir Richard Steele said of the Triennial Act, after the Earl of Sunderland, the Father, It made a Triennial King, a Triennial Ministry, and a Triennial Alliance. Read the Annals. " Some " of the Tory Members finding themselves over- " aw'd, both with Numbers and Arguments, " had recourse to Invectives. Mr Hadden, a " Scotch Member, having spoken for the Bill, " Mr John Snell, one of the Gloucester Members, " said, 'Twas no Wonder that they who had be- " tray'd the Liberty of their own Country, should be " so ready to give up ours. It is wonderful, that this rude Expression, reflecting on the whole Representatives of the Scots Nation and the Union, did not meet with more exemplary Punishment; whether the House had as mean an Opinion of this Member's Understanding as of his Discretion, upon his begging Pardon, it went no farther, only Mr Smith said smartly, He would not be so bold as to utter these Words any where else. Which every one who knew him that spoke them, verily believ'd. As much as I am circumscrib'd in Compass, I cannot omit that Part of Mr Tufnel's eloquent Speech which touch'd upon the Designs of the Tory Faction against our happy Constitution.

Tory Members abuse the Scots.

Nowithstanding that INDIFFERENCE and CONTEMPT with which I hear the Argument of the Alliances treated by some People, I must own, I can't but think there ought to be a good deal of Stress laid upon it. For how can we imagine, that any foreign Powers will readily enter into any Treaties with us for our Advantage without some Security, that they shall be made effectual as long as our Government is subject to such a Fluctuation, and, as it were, Triennial; especially if it be consider'd in how shameful, how INFAMOUS a manner. Let us not forget what the Earl of S—— said of the Treaty made at Utrecht by the Bishop of Bristol and his Colleague. The grand Alliance was broken, the Faith of Treaties violated, the Credit of this Nation sunk, our ancient and best Allies abandon'd and ill treated, and new ones sought for, and caress'd, with no other Design than to make us a more easy Prey to the Pretender; nay, have we not too just Ground to suspect, that this Cause has all along been underhand supported by these new Allies, the old inveterate Enemies of our Constitution, who are always envious of our Prosperity, and only wait a fair Opportunity to give us fresh Disturbances: And could their Vigilance, their artful Management, their Treasure, join'd with the unwearied Endeavours of a restless Faction at home, procure an Election in their Favour, What would be the Consequence, but to unlose the Doors of your Prisons? To set Traytors once more at the Head of your Affairs? To give them an Opportunity of re-acting their former unfinish'd Scenes of Treachery, and for ever complete the Ruin of these Kingdoms. All the World knows who were the restless Faction this ingenious Gentleman speaks of. For when the Prison Doors were to be opened, who

A.D.1716. who were the Traytors, who, in ſuch Caſe, were to be ſet again at the Head of our Affairs? even thoſe very Men who were at the Head of the Schiſm-Bill, of the French Commerce-Bill, and all thoſe Meaſures in the laſt Years of the Queen that were intended to complete the Ruin of theſe Kingdoms. A young Nobleman ſpeaking againſt the Bill, had theſe Expreſſions; If a Man did not fall into all the Meaſures of the Miniſtry, and lap with them like the Men of Gideon, he was immediately brow-beaten. Mr Comptroller anſwer'd, "That "that honourable Member was of another Opinion, "not many Weeks before, ſo that what he now "ſaid muſt proceed either from Reſentment or "Diſappointment." Sir John Brownlow ſpoke to this Purpoſe; That for his own Part, he neither expected nor look'd for a Place. That he would not have been for this Bill during the laſt Miniſtry, becauſe he was ſure they would have made an ill uſe of it; but that he was for it now, becauſe he was ſatisfy'd the preſent Miniſters would not abuſe it. The Queſtion being then put, That the Bill do paſs, it was carry'd in the Affirmative by a Majority of 264 Voices againſt 121; and the next Morning, April 27, Mr Hampden, by Order, carry'd it back to the Lords, accompany'd with a great many Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons.

Five Days before dy'd, of a Pleuretic-Fever, Anne Counteſs of Sunderland, ſecond Daughter of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough. Tho' the Annaliſt falls very ſhort in his Character of this incomparable Lady, yet, for ſome Variations in the way of thinking, among her noble ſurviving Relations, I chuſe to make uſe of his Words. "She "was a Lady who, by her perſonal Accompliſh-"ments, out-ſhin'd all the Britiſh Court, being "the general Toaſt, by the name of the little "Whig. She was, for her excellent Endow-"ments of Mind, good Nature, and Affability, "juſtly lamented by all that knew her, and her "irreparable Loſs in a particular manner affected "her illuſtrious Father and Conſort."

Death of the Counteſs of Sunderland; and Lord Somers.

On Thurſday, April 26, the Public was thrown into new Affliction, by the Death of the Lord Somers, the greateſt Lawyer, Orator, Politician, and Patriot of our Times, whoſe Picture is ſo exquiſitely well drawn by Mr Addiſon, in the Freeholder, that whoever attempts it afterwards, will at beſt appear but a deſpicable Bungler. The Modeſty of that Gentleman would not permit him to add another Inſtance of his Love of Learning, and his Country, which was his taking himſelf into his Protection, when he firſt came to London, where he then hardly knew any body but his Siſter and his Bookſeller, as he told me himſelf.

In this Month, April, William Benſon, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Shaftesbury, was made Surveyor-General of his Majeſty's Works, in the room of Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Knight. Sir Chriſtopher had been for many Years before in a manner ſuperannuated, and Sir John Vanbrugh (Comptroller of the Office of Works) had acted as Surveyor-General: But Sir John not being inclin'd, or not thinking himſelf particularly oblig'd to attend to the Œconomy of the Office, the common Repairs of his Majeſty's Palaces, or Matters included in that Article, were become an exceſſive Burden to the Civil Liſt, amounting to twelve or fourteen thouſand Pounds a Year: This, his Majeſty had been long uneaſy under, and having deſir'd the Earl of Sunderland to redreſs the ill State of the Office of Works, his Lordſhip recommended Mr Benſon, as the propereſt Perſon he knew for that Buſineſs. His Majeſty concurr'd with his Lordſhip in Opinion, and Mr Benſon was thereupon appointed Surveyor-General (not like Sir Chriſtopher Wren, only during Pleaſure) but for Life, or till one of the Offices of the Auditors of the Impreſts ſhould become vacant; the firſt of which that fell, his Majeſty had before granted to Mr Benſon. To this muſt be added what we have read in a Manuſcript on this Subject, which will eaſily be ſeen to come from a Connoiſſeur in Architecture, and that is quite out of our own Character. "This was the true Reaſon of Mr "Benſon's coming into the Office of Works, tho', "perhaps, not the only one; for it could not "but be agreeable to a Perſon, who was, with-"out Diſpute, the firſt in England that reviv'd "Inigo Jones's Manner of Building, to turn one "out of Jones's Chair, who had deſtroy'd an in-"credible Number of moſt excellent Performances "of that great Architect, and had introduc'd, in "the Place of Jones's Stile, a ſort of Gallo-Gothic "Building, to the great Injury and Diſgrace of "this Nation." A.D.1716.

The Earl of Nithiſdale and Forſter's Eſcapes had given ſufficient Warning to the Government, and ought to have doubled the Vigilance of the Jaylors, yet, on the 4th of May, Brigadier Mackintoſh, John Mackintoſh, his Son, Charles Wogan, James Talbot, Robert Hepburne, William Dalmahoy, Alexander Dalmahoy, and John Tasker, Servant to Butler, having knock'd down the Keeper and Turnkey, and diſarm'd the Centinel, broke out of Newgate between 11 and 12 o'Clock at Night, ſix more of the Rebels went out of the Priſon with them; but being unacquainted with the Streets, and turning into Warwick-Court, where they found no Paſſage, they were forc'd to return into Warwick-Lane, and ſo fell into the Hands of their Purſuers. Mackintoſh, and others of them, were to have been try'd the Day after. The Judges met in Weſtminſter-Hall for that Purpoſe, but receiving a Meſſage, that the Keepers of Newgate were buſily employ'd in ſearching after the Rebels, who had made their Eſcapes. The Court and Juries adjourn'd to the Monday following. James Talbot, one of the Fugitives, was re-taken, May the 6th, at a Houſe in Windmill-ſtreet, near Piccadilly, and ſent again to Newgate.

On the Monday after the Court ſat at the Exchequer-Bar at Weſtminſter, the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker, Mr Juſtice Powis, Mr Juſtice Eyre, and Mr Juſtice Pratt, being on the Bench, fifteen of the Rebels, Charles Ratcliffe, Charles Widdrington, Peregrine Widdrington, Eſquires; John Thornton, Robert Shaw, Thomas Errington, Philip Hodgeſon, Donald Robertſon, James Swinburne, Edward Swinburne, William Mackintoſh,

A.D.1716. Angus Mackintosh, James Macquean, and Alexander Macrudder, were arraign'd, and pleaded, not Guilty.

Rebels try'd.

Richard Gascoigne, Esq; was set to the Bar, but by the Indulgence of the Court, had ten Days Time allow'd him for bringing Witnesses to Town. His Trial came on the 17th of May; and, besides the Evidence of Mr Patten, who depos'd, that he saw Mr Gascoigne in their General Forster's Company at Preston, Mr Wye made Oath, That coming to the Duchess of Ormond's, he saw the Prisoner Gascoigne in her Grace's Closet. (His Majesty allow'd that Duchess a very handsome Subsistance out of her attainted Husband's Estate, and such Rewards did his Royal Clemency and Bounty meet with from this ungrateful and impenitent Faction). That being introduc'd, he told her Grace, that he was just come from France, and had seen the Duke but six Days before, who was well, and would be here quickly from Bayonne, and the Pretender from some other Place. Upon which the Duchess call'd for a Map, to find whereabouts St Sebastian lay. That he was ask'd by her, What People said at Paris, especially in relation to Sir William Wyndham? Is not this extreamly well! And ask'd Mr Gascoigne, whether it was true, which was said in the publick News, that he had Letters found in his Pocket of dangerous Consequence? To which Mr Gascoigne said, He could not tell, but if it were so, a School-Boy would deserve to be whipp'd for carrying such Papers in his Pocket.

Gascoigne's Trial.

Duchess of Ormond corresponds with Traytors.

Gascoigne's Saying of Sir W. Wyndham.

It being at that Time generally discours'd about Town, that Sir William Wyndham had surrender'd himself. Gascoigne said, That he had sent, or carry'd him one of the Proclamations, but the Evidence could not be positive which. What Patriots must such Company as this produce, let the Reader judge, when he comes to any of their Harangues for the Protestant Religion and the Liberty of their Country; of which the Protestant Succession is the Bulwark. He added, If he was taken, their Design was ruin'd, for there were a hundred Gentlemen who waited only for a Signal, and Sir William would be at the Head of 8 or 9000 Men. That the Lady Rochester having ask'd him, Gascoigne, where Sir William was, the Prisoner reply'd, Whether if he should tell her Ladyship, she would not make use of it to persuade Sir William to surrender? But if it were only to give Sir Wl-i Itam Notice of the Proclamation, he told her, e- had already sent him one. Mr Wye farther dhe clar'd, That when he was in the Duchess's Closet, he saw a Gentleman dress'd very fine in lac'd Scarlet Cloaths, which he understood was one of the Cottons, other Traytors; and having since seen Mr Cotton, knows it to be the same Person. There were some other Circumstances which Mr Wye said Gascoigne told him particularly, that the Prisoner said, he came to London to learn whether Sir William Wyndham made any Discovery. A Rebel caught in the very Act of Rebellion, with so many hundred other Rebels, could not have much to say in his Defence; so the Jury, after a considerable Stay, brought him in Guilty.

Henry Oxburgh, Esq; was try'd the Day that Gascoigne should have been try'd, when Time was given him. He made a very weak Defence. His Counsel, Serjeant Darnel, and Mr Kettleby, endeavour'd to serve him, by insisting on a Misnomer, but that avail'd him nothing; and the Jury, after a short Stay, brought him in guilty of High-Treason.

J. Hall, Esq; his Trial.

On the 26th of May, John Hall, of Otterburne in Northumberland, Esq; was brought to the Bar, Mr Justice Blencowe, Mr Justice Eyre, Mr Justice Tracy, Mr Justice Dormer, and Mr Justice Pratt, being on the Bench. This Person had been a Justice of the Peace in his Country, had taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Abjuration, had acted under the Government against which he now rebelled, but, like too many in that Commission in the remote Counties, his Zeal for High-Church blinded his Conscience as to all other Duties, and made him run into Perjury and Rebellion. He was brought in guilty by the Jury, after a pretty long Tryal, and he glory'd in his Guilt at the Gallows. Oxburgh was the first of these Rebels that suffer'd at Tyburn. Before he was hang'd drawn and quarter'd, he deliver'd a Paper to the Sheriff, wherein he said He forgave those who had promoted his Death by malicious Misrepresentations; as if there was any need of Misrepresentations to prove a Rebel's Guilt, who, in the Presence of thousands, had been ten Weeks in open Arms against his Majesty. Gascoigne had been a common Sharper, and having been bubbled by Gamesters out of the Money he had rais'd by the Sale of a small Estate in Ireland, liv'd afterwards by bubbling others. It has of late Years been too common for Persons of Condition to admit these fashionable Rascals into their Company, on account of the Pleasures they lead them into, one way and another: And as stupid Fellows are not fit for such Business, some of them have Heads fit enough for other Villany besides picking of Pockets. This, doubtless, recommended Gascoigne to the Confidence of the chief Conspirators, though besides his being a profess'd Gamester, he was a rank Papist. He was hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd at Tyburn, the 25th of May, and in his last Speech gave the World strong reason to believe that those who convers'd with him knew their Man, and that he was a Traytor as well as a Papist; for in the Paper he deliver'd to the Sheriff, he said that he had an uncommon Ardour and Zeal for the Pretender: He calls him his Royal Sovereign, which he own'd to every body. He reflected severely on the King's Evidence, and the latter vindicated themselves in another Paper, which prov'd Gascoigne's last Words to be tainted with the Falshoods of his Religion and Principles, as where he declar'd he was well assur'd of eternal Bliss and Salvation, through the Intercession of the Blessed Virgin, and of Saints and Angels.

James Hume, Esq; Brother to the Earl of Hume, was try'd and found guilty, May the 8th, John Farquharson, I find many of this Name among the Rebels, was brought in not guilty; Alexander Menzies, Esq; was found guilty. On the 12th of May, Thomas Farquharson, and John Ennis, were brought to their Trials at a Court of Admiralty in the Marshalsea, Mr Justice Powis, Mr Justice Dormer, and Mr Baron Mountague, being on the Bench. There was a great Uproar in the Court, upon the Jury's bringing in Farquharson not guilty, though the Evidence was positive that he was in arms with the Rebels at Kelso, and at Lancaster, where the Pretender was proclaimed, and also at Preston. Two Persons who clapp'd and shouted were apprehended. One of them, who was summoned as a Juryman, was fin'd 100 l. the other 50 l. and a Year's Imprisonment; the same Jury, contrary to as full Evidence as that against Farquharson, acquitted John Ennis also. And the same day five Rebel Prisoners, not more concern'd than Ennis and Farquharson in this damnable Rebellion, pleaded guilty, as the two Mr Douglas's, Captain Macquean, quean, Mr Scrimshaw, and Mr Skeen, who receiv'd Sentence of Death. Three Days after came on the Trials of Richard Townley and Edward Tildesley, Esqrs, at the Court of Admiralty in the Marshalsea, before Mr Justice Blencow, Mr Justice Tracy, Mr Justice Pratt, and Mr Justice Eyre. The Names of Townley and Tildesley, are well known to all that know any thing of the treasonable Plots against King William III of glorious Memory. It was sworn against Townley, that he was not only among the Rebels at Preston, but that there was a Troop of them called Mr Townley's Troop, in which rode his Coachman, his Butler, and Postilion. It was sworn against Tildesley, that a Troop of the Rebels went by his Name also, that he rode at the Head of them with his Sword drawn; and these Rebels had nothing to say for themselves, but that they were forced to do what they did, a Plea made use of by almost all that were try'd, and this Surry Jury on so slight Defence, brought in both Mr Townley and Mr Tildesley, not guilty. Sir George Warburton witness'd for Tildesley, that he was a facetious, inoffensive Man, and 'tis very probable a Man may be in Rebellion against King George, and yet give no Offience to the Friends of the late Ministers. Two Days after Mr Baron Mountague came to the Marshalsea Court, and discharg'd the Surry Jury, after having reprimanded them for their Behaviour in the late Trials, especially in the Case of Mr Townley, and Mr Tildesley, against whom there were such strong Proofs. The same Day Mr Nicholas Wogan was try'd at Westminster-Hall, and found guilty, and Major John Blaire retracting his former Plea, pleaded guilty.

Captain Lancelot Mackintosh, and Charles Ratcliffe, Esq; Brother to James Ratcliffe, late Earl of Derwentwater, were found guilty, and these two receiv'd Sentence of Death. The next Day Christian Cole, Esq; his Majesty's late Resident at Venice, being at the Smyrna Coffee-House, near St James's, made an Observation, upon reading an Account of Gascoigne's Tryal in the St James's Post, which every one must needs have made, that ever heard of the Duchess of Ormond's part in it; that 'twas well for the Duchess this happen'd under so mild a Government as that of England; for had she appear'd in Favour of a Traytor in any other Country, her Quality would not have secur'd her from a Prosecution, since it appears by this Account, and even by her own Declaration, that she was privy to a Design against the Government. An Irish Ruffian being in the Coffee-house, said, Whoever reflected on the Duke or Duchess of Ormond were Rascals. Mr Cole was talking to a Person of Quality, and did not at first take notice of that Bravo's Insult; but he repeating it, Mr Cole turn'd to him, and told him, He made no Reflexions on any body, but only stated a Point of Law groundea upon a Matter of Fact. The Irishman, who, doubtless, expected to make some small Market of this Quarrel some where or other, grew more insolent upon Mr Cole's generous Explanation, and offer'd to strike him; but Mr Cole prevented and forestall'd the Blow, and repell'd the Affront, by kicking the Bully, who could not help drawing after the Part he had acted; but Mr Cole was in that too before hand with him, drew his Sword, wounded, and disarm'd him; a Fellow not worth his Resentment, if he had not forc'd him to it, but a fit Champion for the Cause of condemn'd and attainted Traytors.

Mr Cole insulted by an Irish Ruffian in Behalf of the Duchess of Ormond.

Mr Cole disarms him.

Alexander Menzies, Esq; in his Petition for Mercy, declar'd, he had at all Times been a zealous Assertor of Revolution Principles, and was of the Communion of the Church of Scotland, as by Law establish'd. In the Close he said, That the Remains of the Life which he should owe to his Majesty's Goodness, in case of Mercy, might be spent in such a dutiful Manner as became one, who did from his Heart own his Allegiance to his Majesty and his Royal Successors, and abhorr'd all false Pretenders to the Crown. Upon this Petition, Mr Menzies was, by his Majesty's Royal Clemency, repriev'd, as were the rest of the Persons hitherto condemn'd, on the like humble Submissions, or the Intercession of Friends, excepting those whom we have mention'd to have been executed, Mr Menzies owning himself a Presbyterian, gave Occasion of Discourse, as if many of the Rebels were of the Church of Scotland; but, to clear that Church from so horrid an Imputation, it must be remember'd, that as there were but two Presbyterian Ministers in Scotland who gave the least Obedience to the Orders of the Pretender, and his Rebel Officers, for which they were turn'd out of Office and Benefice by the Provincial Synod of Aberdeen; so there were but two Episcopal Clergymen who behav'd with Loyalty to King George, and who thereby made themselves odious to their whole Party. This is not very strange, for who of all the Episcopal Clergy in the North of England, except the Reverend and Worthy Mr Peploe, Minister of Preston, distinguish'd themselves by the least Opposition the Rebels met with from them in Deed or in Word. If there were some that did so, I should have been glad to have known it, and would, with Pleasure, have done as much Justice to their Loyalty as the giving it Place in my History could do it.

A.D.1716. His Majesty's great Clemency to the Rebels.

But two Presbyterian Ministers in Scotland disloyal, and but two Episcopalians loyal.

On the 30th of May came on the Trial of John Dalton, Esq; at the Court of Admiralty. The Lord Chief Justice Parker, Mr Justice Powis, Mr Justice Tracy, and Mr Baron Price, for once, being on the Bench. The Parson of the Parish, Mr Dalton liv'd in, in Lancashire, witnessed for him, That he never heard him speak against the Government, and had sometimes express'd some Scruples about the Romish Religion. Upon which the Court ask'd him, Why he, being a Minister of the Church of England, had not endeavourd to improve those Notions in him, in order to convert him? He answer'd, He had made some Essay that way, but then found him alter'd in Judgment; that he was a peaceable Roman Catholic, and had several times drunk King George's Health. The Evidence against him being positive, as to Fact, the Jury, after a considerable Stay, found him guilty. Upon his begging the King's Pardon, and desiring the Court to interceed with him for Mercy, the Lord Chief Justice Parker observ'd, That the Prisoner, as well as others, had so far abus'd his Majesty's Clemency, by derogating from their former Submission, and giving the Government all the Trouble possible, even in standing it out, and combating with the King to the very last, that they might very well expect to meet with Severity, were not his Royal Breast open to the Intercessions of Mercy, when it had been requested. That there was one Gentleman who retracted his Plea, Major Blaire, and own'd the Indictment, and, upon Recommendation, had a Pardon already passing the Seals for him. That it would have been very well for the Prisoner to have made his Request for Mercy sooner; and they were not his Friends, who advis'd him to do otherwise. That recommending Prisoners to Mercy, was a Part he very much delighted in, and wish'd to have had better Grounds to have done it for the Prisoner. However, he would report his Case in the most impartial Manner to the King.

William

A.D.1716. William Tunſtal, Eſq; pleaded guilty, as to his being taken in Arms, but not, as in the Indictment, of any Deſign of murdering the King, which never enter'd his Heart. But the Court told him, That he being a Man of Senſe, could not but know, had the Rebellion ſucceeded, it could not have ended otherwiſe, ſince it was certain, that his Majeſty would not have run away, as the Maſter they had declar'd for had ſince already done. The Lord Chief Juſtice adviſ'd him, to draw up the State of what he had to ſay, in a Petition, and he would recommend it to the King. Compare this Conduct with that of the King and Judges, after the Duke of Monmouth's Buſineſs, you'll find the latter to be like the Rage of Devils, and the former like what is communicated to us of the Mildneſs and Benevolence of the bleſſed Spirits above.

There being nothing more remarkable in the Trials of the Rebel Priſoners, than what has been already touch'd upon, we ſhall enter no farther into the Particulars of them, ſo few of thoſe that were condemned for the Rebellion were executed, that one's Curioſity concerning their Conviction, is much deaden'd; beſides five or ſix ſome Months after at Lancaſter, only William Paul, Clerk, and John Hall, the Northumberland Juſtice, were hang'd. The latter were two perjur'd Traytors, who had in the moſt ſacred and ſolemn manner abjur'd the Pretender.

Whoſe Reprieves expir'd the next Morning, and it was determin'd that they ſhould be continu'd for all but Juſtice Hall and Parſon Paul, who were ſet apart for Execution, to be Examples to others in the ſame Station in Life, and deter them from committing the like damnable Sins of Perjury and Rebellion. Certainly never two ſuch harden'd Wretches were thrown off the Ladder at Tyburn. Paul would needs be hang'd in his Gown and Caſſock, to provoke the Indignation of the Rabble at the Sight of a Parſon's Neck in a Halter; but the Spectators were more provok'd at the Falſhood and Impudence of his laſt dying Speech. Beſides that, he was forſworn, in going into the Rebellion, He did, after Sentence, declare, in a Petition to Sir Peter King, Lord Chief Juſtice, That through the Grace of God, he had a deep Inſight into, and a lively Senſe of his Crimes; which he did now, at laſt, deteſt and abhor from the bottom of his Soul, and begg'd Pardon of God and King George, and his native Country, againſt all which he had highly offended, and did now ſincerely repent and declare his unfeign'd Sorrow in having been inſtrumental towards encouraging and promoting the ſame. In a Petition to his Majeſty, he humbly begg'd leave, in all Sorrow of Heart, to acknowledge his great and heinous Offence, and did, from the bottom of his Heart, ask Pardon of God, his moſt Sacred Majeſty, and the Church and Nation. In the Cloſe he ſays, From the true Affection of his Heart, ſhall be pour'd out daily and devout Prayers to the God of Heaven, for his Majeſty's long Life, happy Reign, proſperous Eſtate, and Royal Poſterity in this World, and for ever and ever. And yet the laſt Words of this moſt execrable Traytor, were, As to my Body, Brethren, I have taken no manner of Care of it; for I value not the barbarous Part of the Sentence, of being cut down, and quartered; when once gone, I ſhall be out of the Reach of my Enemies: And I wiſh I had Quarters enough to ſend to every Pariſh of the Kingdom, to teſtify, that a Clergyman of the Church of England, was martyr'd for being loyal to his King, James the Third. Hall, in his laſt Speech, inſtead of expreſſing a due Senſe of his horrid Wickedneſs, in breaking the many Oaths he had taken againſt the Pretender, and running into Rebellion againſt his rightful and lawful Sovereign, ſaid that he might have obtain'd Favour, if he would have petition'd, but he thank'd his God for inſpiring him with his holy Reſolution, to hold faſt to his Perjury and Treaſon to the laſt; for giving him Grace to perform it. A.D.1716.

The Behaviour of theſe two Monſters of Impiety and Impenitence at the Gallows was ſuch, that when the Cart drew away, the Spectators gave a mighty Shout, and, with loud Acclamations cry'd, God ſave King GEORGE.

A few Days after Paul was executed in his Clergyman's Habit, two notorious Rogues, Thomas Jacobs and William Skelſon, convicted of forging a Teſtimonial to procure Ordination for holy Orders, ſtood in the Pillory at the End of Salisbury Court in Fleetſtreet, in Canonical Habits; which was not ſo much taken notice of as theſe Raſcals expected, Paul having juſt before put ſuch an Affront on the Gown, as to inſiſt on being hang'd in it. But neither of theſe Criminals ought, on that Occaſion, to have had their Humour.

Some Days before this, his Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to General Cadogen, whom his Grace the Duke of Argyle left in Scotland, by his Vigilance, Activity, and Prudence, extinguiſh'd the ſcatter'd Sparks of Rebellion, both by ſecuring the Chiefs, and diſarming their Dependants. About the middle of April, the Marquiſs of Huntley, eldeſt Son to the Duke of Gordon, the Lord Rollo, Sir Thomas Calder, and the Laird of Tannaelue, were brought from the North of Scotland to Edinburgh, and committed to the Caſtle. Glengary, a famous Leader of the Rebels, ſurrender'd himſelf to the Duke of Athol, which inclin'd many of the Highlanders to ſubmit, as did the greateſt part of the Earl of Seaforth's Vaſſals; and all the Clans, except thoſe of the weſtern Iſles, being reduced, two Detachments, one of 600, the other of 300 Men, were ſent to thoſe Iſles, under the Command of Colonel Clayton, and Lieutenant Colonel Cholmley; upon which all the Rebels in the Iſle of Skie ſubmitted to Mercy. The Rebels in the other Iſles following their Example, General Cadogan return'd to Edinburgh, and from thence to London; where he arriv'd the 18th of May, having left the Command of the Forces in Scotland, with Major General Sabine, and order'd the Dutch Troops to march back into England; where they embark'd for Holland, after having receiv'd, both Officers and Soldiers, Marks of his Majeſty's Bounty for their good Services.

Dutch Troops ſent back.

A Court Martial ſitting at Edinburgh, made an Order for the following Scotch Officers, who had deſerted from the Dutch Service to the Pretender, to be hang'd in Effigy at the Marcat-Croſs in the Cannon-Gate, Edinburgh, and their Names to be be inſcrib'd round the Gallows. Congratulatory Addreſſes were preſented to his Majeſty from the City of London, and moſt of the Communities in the Kingdom, upon the entire Suppreſſion of the Rebellion; and the ſeventh of June was appointed to be kept as a Day of Thankſgiving. Sir William Withers, who ſeconded the Lord Mayor's Motion in the Court of Common Council for an Addreſs, took care not to have this Paſſage omitted. We are oblig'd alſo in Gratitude, to make our Acknowledgments for your Majeſty's moſt gracious and repeated Aſſurances of maintaining and protecting the Church of England, in particular, as by Law eſtabliſh'd. An Affectation of Zeal for that was no Complement to his Majeſty's Royal Word; as if he wanted to be put in mind of it. What follows is more juſt and ſeaſonable. As well as the Proteſtant Intereſt in general: And we muſt in juſtice, attribute to your Majeſty's Wiſdom and Steadineſs, and to the Power and Influence of your Councils and Arms, that the Honour and Reputation, the Credit and Commerce, of this Nation, are now in a way to encreaſe and flouriſh. About the beginning of May, the Lord Carteret was appointed Lord Lieutenant of the County of Devon, in the room of Sir William Courtney; Mr. John Gumley, of the Glaſs-Shop at the corner of Norfolk-Street, was made Deputy Muſter-Maſter, in the room of David Crawford, Eſq; Sir Arthur Owen, a very loyal Gentleman of Pembrokeſhire, was appointed Lieutenant of the County.

On the third of May, Mr. Harvey of Combe, who had been in the Meſſengers Hands, ſince he ſtab'd himſelf, was examin'd before a Committee of Council, and ſent to Newgate. About a Week after, Mr. Thomas Harley, who was formerly committed to the Gatehouſe, by order of the Houſe of Commons, for his idle and prevaricating Anſwer to Queſtions that were put to him concerning his Negotiations abroad, and was ſuppos'd to have been ſtill a Priſoner, was found in a Houſe in St. Martin's Lane, by Meſſengers that were ſearching for ſome of the Rebels that lately eſcap'd out of Newgate. Mr. Harley had a great parcel of Papers before him, which were ſiez'd and himſelf committed to the Gatehouſe. On the 19th of May, the grand Jury of Middleſex, found a Bill of Indictment of High Treaſon againſt the Lord Landſdown, Priſoner in the Tower.

On the 12th of June, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, reported from the Committee of Secrecy, that they had prepared a Replication to the Anſwer of Thomas, Earl of Strafford, to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him; which the Houſe agreed to; and Mr. Aiſlabie was order'd to carry it to the Houſe of Lords; where the Earl made a long Speech, complaining of the Dilatorineſs of the Commons; and the Earl of Sunderland thought it ſo much a hardſhip, that he ſpoke in favour of the Earl of Strafford, who return'd him thanks for it. His Majeſty having declared his Intention to go to Germany, to drink the Waters of Pyrmont, a Bill paſt the Houſe of Commons, with the utmoſt Expedition, to repeal that Clauſe in the Act for the further limitation of the Crown, that Perſons in Poſſeſſion of the Crown, ſhould not go out of the Kingdom without the Conſent of Parliament.

On the 26th of June, his Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Coinage Act, the Act for Commiſſioners of Enquiry; The Act for repealing the Clauſe in the Act of Limitation; The Act for the more effectual ſecuring the Peace of the Highlands in Scotland; The Act for holding the Aſſize at a convenient Place in Cornwal; The Act for attainting Forſter and Mackintoſh; The Act for excluding Members of the Houſe of Commons that have Penſions for a Term of Years; The Act for the more effectual Reverſing the Attainder of Charles Earl of Macclesfield; The Act for Naturalizing the Baroneſs of Schulenburgh, afterwards Dutcheſs of Kendal.

The firſt Paragraph of His Majeſty's Speech to both Houſes of Parliament, at the cloſe of the Seſſion, was as follows.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech. I Cannot put an end to this Seſſion, without expreſſing to you my Satisfaction in the Proceedings of this Parliament. The Wholſome and Neceſſary Laws which have been paſs'd with ſo much Steadineſs, Reſolution and Unanimity, will, I truſt in God, anſwer thoſe good Ends which it is evident you have had in view, by defeating the Deſigns and reducing the Spirit of Our Enemies, by Encouraging Our Friends, and raiſing the Credit and Reputation of the Nation Abroad, to ſuch a Degree as that I may reaſonably expect the Fruits of a ſettled Government; eſpecially being ſupported by a Parliament zealous for the Proſperity of their Country, and the Proteſtant Intereſt of Europe.

I am confident my Conduct hitherto in ſuppreſſing the Rebellion, and Puniſhing thoſe concerned in it, has been ſuch as Demonſtrates, that I deſire rather to leſſen their Numbers by Reclaiming them, than by making Examples; and I am ſorry to find, that the numerous Inſtances of Mercy which I have ſhown have had no other effect than to encourage the Faction of the Pretender, to renew their Inſults upon My Authority and the Laws of the Kingdom, and even to affect, with the greateſt Inſolence, to diſtinguiſh themſelves from my good and faithful Subjects, acting with ſuch Folly and Madneſs as if they intended to convince the World, that they are not to be reduc'd to Quiet and Submiſſion to any Government by ſuch gentle Methods as are moſt agreeable to my Inclination, &c.

The Tories wear Marks of Diſtinction These Marks of Diſtinction were particularly Oaken Boughs, on the 29th of May, being the Anniverſary of the Reſtoration of King Charles; which by reſtoring the Royal Family of the Stuarts, made way for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, a Bleſſing that makes us forget the Grievances under which this Nation groan'd from that Reſtoration to the Revolution. Another Diſtinction of that frantick deſperate Faction was their wearing White Roſes on the Tenth of June, the Day on which the Firſt Pretender is ſaid to have come into the World. We need not ſay, the Fools of the Faction, it will be underſtood without mention, were ſo Impudent on thoſe two Days this Year in London and other Parts of the Kingdom, that it not only provok'd the Indignation of the Soldiers, but of others, who ſtrip'd them of the Badges of their Folly, and drub'd them, upon Oppoſition, into better Manners. At Cambridge the Faction fell on Mr. Huſſey's Meeting-Houſe on His Majeſty's Birth-Day, pull'd down ſome of the Pews, broke the Clock, and would have totally demoliſh'd it, had not Aſſiſtance came and prevented them. In a Weſtern Borough certain Pragmatical Sons of High-Church and Seditions, then in the Magiſtracy, ſtrutted about with their White Roſes, and ſpirited their Companions among the Dregs of the People to Inſult the Friends to the Government.

Ill Judges in Ireland cenſur'd by Parliament. The Britiſh Parliament being prorogu'd to the 7th of Auguſt, we have leiſure to ſpeak a Word or two of the Parliament of Ireland, where the Houſe of Commons continuing their Inquiry into the arbitary and illegal Proceedings of the Archbiſhop of Armagh and Sir Con. Phips, when they were Lords Juſtices; of Sir Samuel Cook Lord Mayor of Dublin, who continued in that Office beyond his Time, to carry on the ill Deſigns of the Juſtices; of Sir Richard Cox, late Lord Chief Juſtice of the Kings-Bench; Robert Doyne, Eſq; late Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas; Robert Rochfort, Eſq; late Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; Sir Henry Echlin, late one of the Barons of the Exchequer; Thomas Coote, Eſq; late one of the Judges of the Kings-Bench; Robert Johnſon, Eſq; late one of the Barons of the Exchequer; Anthony Upton, Eſq; late one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas; and Richard Nutley, Eſq; late one of the Judges of the Kings-Bench; paſt ſeveral vigorous Reſolutions againſt them, and two in favour of the Alterations in the Miniſtry, and Judges in Ireland, and of the Defence made by the Twenty Aldermen who ſtood by the Liberties of the City of Dublin, when ſo ſhamefully attack'd by the Archbiſhop of Armagh and Sir Con. Phips: They alſo ordered their Thanks to be given to the Lord Chief Juſtice Forſter, the Nineteen ſurviving Aldermen, and Mr. Surdeville the ſurviving Sheriff: For their great Virtue and Reſolution in defending the Rights and Liberties of the ſaid City of Dublin; and that Mr. Joſhua Allen and Mr. Campbel do acquaint them therewith. We ſhall ſee farther what Hands the Government of Ireland was in at His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Crown by the Petition of Lieutenant Dennis King, in behalf of himſelf and Captain Hales, to the Houſe of Commons, ſetting forth, That a great Riot being raiſed by Papiſts and Jacobites, at the Election of Members for the City of Dublin the laſt Parliament, and that the ſaid Captain Hales, and the Petitioner, being then upon Duty on the main Guard, the Petitioner, by Order of the ſaid Captain Hales, with a Party of the Guard, quell'd the Riotous Mob, to the great hazard of his Life; and

Which Petition being read, the Houſe Reſolv'd, That Captain Hales, and Lieutenant Dennis King, be recommended to their Excellencies the Lords Juſtices for ſome Military Preferment, as a Recompence for their reſolute and prudent Behaviour, in quelling the Riot at the Tholſel, &c.

On the 20th of June, the Lords Juſtices gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for extinguiſhing the Regalities and Liberties of the County of Tipperary; and for veſting in his Majeſty the Eſtate of James Butler, commonly call'd James Duke of Ormond; and for giving a Reward of 10000 l. to any Perſon who ſhall take and ſecure him, &c. An Act to reſtrain Papiſts from being High and Petty Conſtables. And other Acts.

James Butler's Eſtate veſted in the Crown. 10000 l. to take him in Ireland.

In the beginning of this Month, Dr. Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter ſuſpended the Reverend Mr. Gibbon, Preacher of the Church at Graveſend, for lending his Church to the Dutch Soldiers, at the Requeſt of the Colonel and Chaplain, when they return'd thither from Scotland, to embark for Holland. Mr. Gibbon had inquir'd of the Soldiers whether any ſuch Favour had been granted in their March from Scotland; and they aſſur'd him it had never been deny'd them. He, with the Conſent of the Church-Wardens, permitted thoſe Soldiers to perform their Devotions in that Church, provided it was done before the Time to ring for Divine Service. Biſhop Atterbury, baniſh'd the Kingdom five or ſix Years for treaſonable Practices, came to Graveſend, and diveſted Mr. Gibbon of his Cure, for this Act of Charity, which ſhew'd that either his Knowledge or his Conſcience was not equal to his Character, Mr. Gibbon was ſoon reſtor'd to his Curacy; and on the Thankſgiving Day preach'd in the ſame Church an Excellent Loyal Sermon; which was a good Leſſon for his Biſhop, and wou'd have kept him in his own Country if he had learnt it. The Biſhop of London, and his Clergy, in their Congratulatory Addreſs to his Majeſty, did not omit to ſpeak with due Praiſe of the Principles of the Church of England, as the beſt Security of the Nation. They did not mean certainly the Principles of the Oxford Decree, and of Paſſive Obedience, and Non-Reſiſtance, as well againſt all Diſturbances in the State, as againſt Popery and Schiſm. They did certainly mean here the Church of Scotland, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, and all the Reform'd Churches in Chriſtendom, without the Pale of their own.

On the 4th of June, Mr. Baron Bury was declar'd Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, in the room of Sir Samuel Dod deceas'd. On the 10th of that Month Lieutenant General Maccartney took his Trial for the pretended Murther of Duke Hamilton. Colonel Hamilton, who, in Bolingbroke's Time, had given ſuch a poſitive Evidence, that he ſaw General Maccartney give the Duke his mortal Wound, now deviated from it; and only averr'd he ſaw his Sword over the Duke's Shoulder: The ſtaring Falſhood of which, appear'd by the Evidence of two Park-Keepers, who ſtood firm to their former Depoſitions, That they had taken the Swords from General Maccartney and Colonel Hamilton, when they went to the Relief of the Duke, and Lord Mohun; which the two Park-Keepers proteſted to my ſelf again and again in Queen Ann's Reign. Now turn to the Annals. But what fill'd the Court and all the Spectators with Amazement, was the Depoſition of one of the Park-Keepers, who ſaid, he was offer'd two Handfuls of Gold, and a Place of 100 l. a Year, by the late Lord Bolingbroke, if he would ſwear that Mr. Maccartney kill'd Duke Hamilton. So that a more villainous Contrivance to take away a Man's Life, was ſcarce ever laid open in Weſtminſter-Hall. I recommend this Paſſage, if ever this Work falls into ſuch Hands, to thoſe who ſtill aſſociate with the late Lord Bolinbroke who take part in his Pleaſures, receive him into their Houſes, and cheriſh him, as one of the Pillars of the Liberties of England. The Jury acquitted General Maccartney of the Murder, and he was diſcharg'd of the Manſlaughter, by the Formality of a Cold Iron, immediately made uſe of to prevent Appeal; in which Caſe one might perceive by Hamilton's double Evidence, there wou'd be no want of proper Witneſſes. General Maccartney was reſtor'd to the Rank he held in the Army, and had the Earl of Orrery's Regiment given him. Truth obliges me to ſpeak thus of this Officer, whom I had ſerv'd in this Affair, and met with an ungrateful Return.

Trial, and General Maccartney reſtor'd.

About this time the Duke of Argyle and Earl of Ilay his Brother, were remov'd from all their reſpective Employments, which occaſion'd much random Speculation, but not well grounded enough to deſerve Remembrance in Hiſtory; but it is certain, the Behaviour of theſe noble Lords was very different from that of ſome others, before and after their Removal; for neither His Grace nor His Lordſhip did (like the latter) let the World ſee that their Duty and Affection to the Government were bound up in their Employments; for there appear'd not the leaſt alteration in their Conduct or Sentiments,; and whatever Motive might be for this Proceeding then, it was not long before their Lordſhips were in their former Situations, with reſpect to the Favour of the Court.

His Majeſty being about to viſit his German Dominions, it was declar'd in Council, That His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales was conſtituted Guardian of the Realm, and His Majeſty's Lieutenant within the ſame. Lieutenant General Carpenter ſucceeded His Grace the Duke of Argyle as Commander in Chief of all the Forces in Scotland. The Lord Windſor's Regiment of Horſe was given to the Earl of Stairs. A new Eſtabliſhment of General Officers was fix'd, conſiſting of the Duke of Marlborough as Captain-General, General Lumley General of the Horſe, General Erle and the Lord Cadogan Generals of Foot, Five Lieutenant-Generals, Five Major-Generals, and Ten Brigadiers.

On the 12th of July was perform'd at Windſor the Ceremony of Degrading the late Duke of Ormond from the Honour of being one of the Knights Companions of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter; with which their Highneſſes Prince Frederick, and Prince Erneſt Duke of York had been lately inveſted.

Duke of Ormond degraded.

About the ſame time his Majeſty was pleas'd to appoint the Duke of Montroſs to be Lord Clerk Regiſter of North Britain; the Earl of Orkney

A.D. 1716 Orkney to be Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber in Ordinary; the Duke of Kent to be Lord Steward of his Majeſty's Houſhold; and the Lord Onſlow to be Lord Lieutenant of the County of Surry.

On the ſeventh of July, between eight and nine in the Morning, his Majeſty, with his Royal Highneſs the Prince, ſet out from St. James's Palace, took Water at the Tower, and arriv'd about two in the Afternoon at Graveſend; where his Majeſty went on board the Caroline Yatch; and then His Royal Highneſs return'd by Land to St. James's. The King was attended by General Stanhope, Principal Secretary of State; Mr. Boſcawen, Comptroller of the Houſhold; the Officers of the Green-Cloth, and moſt of his German Miniſters, who embark'd in other Yatchs. In Margate Road they met the Squadron of Men of War, commanded by Admiral Ailmer; and they all made the Coaſt of Holland, the ninth of July, about five in the Morning. About four in the Afternoon, his Majeſty went a-ſhoar; and Captain Vernon, Commander of the Ship Aſſiſtance, was order'd for Sheerneſs, to ſend to Court by Expreſs, from the firſt Port he ſhould make, an Account of his Majeſty's being landed in Holland. His Majeſty paſt thro' that Country incognito; lay at Voorts, the Earl of Albemarle's Seat, and arriv'd at Hanover, on Sunday the 15th of July. The People ſtood in Crowds all the way between the Bridge of Linden and the Palace to which His Majeſty went, under the continual loud Acclamations of Long Live the King: His Majeſty lighting at the Back-ſtairs went to his own Apartment, where was his Grandſon Prince Frederick, who kiſs'd his Majeſty's Hand; and the King taking him into his Cloſet, paſt almoſt an Hour in talk with him, and was very much delighted with his ingenious Anſwers. His Majeſty ſatisfi'd the earneſt Deſire of a great Number of Perſons of Diſtinction, and others of both Sexes, to ſee him dine the next and the following Days in Publick; and on Saturday the 20th of Auguſt, ſet out for Pyrmont, where he began to drink the Waters two Days after.

His Majeſty lands in Holland.

The ſame Day that his Majeſty ſet out for Holland and Germany, His Grace the Duke of Marlborough went from St. Albans to the Lodge in Windſor Park; and the next Saturday arriv'd at the Bath. His Grace was met by a great Number of Perſons of Quality and Diſtinction on Horſeback; and enter'd the Town under the loud Huzza's of a Multitude of People. The Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities waited on the Duke, congratulated him upon his Arrival there, and wiſh'd him in the Name of their whole Body, a happy Effect of the Waters. The Place was crouded, during his Grace's ſtay, with a Concourſe of People, from the neighbouring Counties of Somerſet, Glouceſter, and Wilts, to have the Pleaſure of ſeeing the greateſt General of that or any Age, ſince the Times of Alexander and Cæſar. His Grace receiv'd all that approach'd him in the moſt courtly and engaging manner; and having taken particular Notice of Colonel Pigot, late Knight of the Shire for the County of Somerſet, the Duke was pleas'd to tell the Company, that he had born Colours under him in the Guards; but that Gentleman roſe no higher in Military Honour, and indeed was never in any Foreign Service.

The Day after the News of his Majeſty's A.D. 1716 ſafe Arrival was brought to St. James's, a Council was held, July 12th, in which were preſent, Preamble to Duke of Portland's Patent.

A.D.1716. might have a Tendency to betray the Liberties of his Country.

About the middle of July ſeveral Libellers, ſeditious Printers and Hawkers were brought to Juſtice, for Writing, Printing and Diſperſing ſeveral ſcandalous Pamphlets and Papers againſt the Government, which at that time had made its beſt Friends very uneaſy at its too great Lenity to ungrateful Enemies. Charles Hornby a Hawker was found Guilty of diſperſing ſeveral ſeditious Libels produc'd by the Jacobite and High Church Faction; for which he was only Whip'd from Newgate to Smithfield: Whereas the Learned, Ingenious, and Reverend Mr. Samuel Johnſon was in the Reign of the abdicated King, barbarouſly Whip'd and Mangled from Newgate to Tyburn, for Writing a very honeſt and uſeful Letter to the Army, conſiſting of twenty or thirty Lines only (the Reader cannot too often be put in Mind of this Barbarity and Injuſtice) Iſaac Dalton was Convicted of Curſing the King, of attempting to debauch the Soldiers on the Guard at Newgate, while he was himſelf a Priſoner there for that Offence, and of Printing and Publiſhing Weekly Remarks, written by George Flint, who was alſo found Guilty of Writing it. Henry Cheap was Indicted for Publiſhing a Letter to Sir Richard Steel, reflecting on the Revolution and King William. Chriſtopher Smith for Publiſhing a Libel in Vindication of the Pretender's Title. James Dover for Printing A Supplement to the Church of England's Advice to her Children. Mary Dalton for Publiſhing an infamous Libel call'd Robin's Laſt-Shift; yet notwithſtanding the Enormity of their Crimes, they were on Conviction only fin'd:

Libellers and Printers puniſh'd too gently.

Iſaac Dalton, 50 Marks.
George Flint, 20 Marks.
Chriſtopher Smith, 20 Marks.
Henry Cheap, 40 Marks.
James Dover, 20 Marks.
Mary Dalton, 30 Marks.

Which ſlight Puniſhment was ſo far from deterring the Tools of that Traiterous Faction from committing the ſame Crimes, that in a few Days after, Keimer a Printer, now at Barbados, was apprehended for Printing and Diſperſing the Churchman's Weekly Journal; as was another Printer, Osborne, for Printing and Publiſhing a wretched inſolent Libel, call'd the Shift ſhifted; and George James, another Printer, for certain falſe, ſcandalous, and ſeditious Inſinuations in the Poſt-boy, a News Paper, that had been made uſe of by the laſt Miniſtry, to convey their publick and private Scandal into the World. James refus'd the Oaths when offer'd him; and lives ſtill in Impunity and Impenitence.

Theſe and the like inſolent and ſeditious Libels, and the ſeditious and inſolent Sermons of the High-Church Prieſthood, kept up a Spirit of Mutiny and Rebellion among the looſe diſorderly Rabble, who are ready to take hold of any Pretence to leave Labour, and run into Riot. Church and Ormond were ſtill the Cry, and as they were ſet up in Oppoſition to the King and Conſtitution, the well-affected cou'd not hear it without Indignation and Reſentment: But thinking a roaring ragged Rout unworthy the Chaſtiſement of the Military Arm, ſome of the moſt zealous and reſolute, undertook to chaſtiſe theſe raſcally Mobs themſelves; and for that End met at ſeveral Houſes, not only to have an Eye on the Rabble of High-Church, but to ſolace themſelves with Toaſting the glorious Memory of King William; the Healths of His Majeſty King George; Their Royal Highneſſes, and all the Royal Family; The Duke of Marlborough's; The Miniſters of State; and all thoſe that had been true and zealous in the worſt of Times. Theſe Toaſts were commemorated with Huzza's, and proper Songs, every Man having his Mug in his Hand, and making uſe of it at the Call of the Chairman of the Society at every publick Houſe where their Meetings were held; as the Roebuck in Cheapſide; the Mug-houſe in Long Acre, which gave Name to the reſt; Smith's, at St. John's, Clerkenwell; Read's, in Saliſbury Court, Fleetſtreet: Others were in Tower-ſtreet; in Taviſtock-ſtreet, Covent-Garden; in Southwark Park, and other Places; where Numbers of Perſons of good Subſtance as well as good Hearts met moſt Days in the Week, to the great Mortification of the Jacobites and High-Church (if they are diſtinguiſhable). Theſe honeſt and jovial Meetings were begun even in the Time of Meſſrs. Harley and St. John, but were encreas'd much after His Majeſty's happy acceſſion to the Throne; when, contrary to all Reaſon and Expectation the Rage of the unruly Rabble encreas'd more and more in Proportion to the Deſpair of their Faction. The Day before Parſon Paul was hang'd they fell upon the Mug-houſe in Southwark-Park, crying out, High-Church and Ormond, down with the Mug-houſe; but the Society ſallying out upon them, after the Windows of the Houſe had been all broken, the Raſcals ran away from Drubing, leaving ſeveral of their Clubs and Sticks behind them.

The Mug-houſes ſet up.

The hanging of Paul, who declar'd himſelf at the Gallows to be their Apoſtle and Martyr, added Fuel to their Fire, and the Society at Read's in Salisbury-Court having diſtinguiſhed themſelves by Demonſtrations of Duty and Reſpect to their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, at their Return from Greenwich, the Jacobites took ſo much Offence at it, that on Friday the 20th of July they attack'd Mr. Read's Houſe, and wou'd have demoliſh'd it, had not the Company within ſent for a Reinforcement from Taviſtock-ſtreet, with which being join'd, the cowardly High-Church Mob fled again from the Correction that was prepar'd for them. But they continu'd hov'ring about the Houſe the following Days; and hearing Mr. Archibald Butler, a Young Scot Gentleman, who had been in the Rebellion, the ſame that attracted the Eyes of the Spectators, when the Rebels made their renown'd Entry along Holbourn, by his Youth and Beauty, was in the Temple Walks, having receiv'd His Majeſty's moſt gracious Pardon, they ran thither, crying out, High-Church and Ormond: Mr. Butler got away from 'em as faſt as he cou'd; and preſently, one Vaughan, whoſe uſual Cry was Small-Coal, propos'd to them to go and revenge the Affront they had receiv'd three Days before at the Mug-houſe in Saliſbury-Court. This Fellow had been bred a Bluecoat Boy in Bridewel Hoſpital; which having been under Tory Governors ever ſince the Revolution, has furniſh'd all the deſperate Rabbles with Leaders and Aſſiſtants, to the great Scandal of Sobriety and Charity, and the juſt Provocation of a Royal Viſitation: Theſe Rude and Riotous Bluecoats having done more Miſchief among the High-

Mr. Read's Mug-houſe attack'd.

Bridewell Boys Rioters.

A.D.1716 Church Mobs, before, in and ſince Sacheverel's Sedition, than ever that Foundation has done, or will do good. The Mob aſſenting to Vaughan's Propoſal, with a loud Huzza follow'd him to Read's Houſe, on which they fell furiouſly, but meeting with a vigorous Reſiſtance, they gather'd Recruits from the Multitudes that crowded thither: Upon this Alarm, and hearing they determin'd to demoliſh the Houſe, Mr. Read appear'd, and bid them keep off, otherwiſe he would ſhoot among them. The Bluecoats and the reſt of them, regardleſs of this fair Warning, preſſing forwards with great Clubs and Sticks, Read fir'd a Muſket, and ſhot Vaughan their Leader, who dy'd on the ſpot. The Riot continuing, the Sheriffs of London repair'd to the Place, and caus'd the Proclamation appointed by Act of Parliament againſt Riots, to be read; but this not availing, and the Rioters being become Rebels, a Party of Horſe Guards was order'd by the Privy Council to march to Saliſbury-Court, to ſuppreſs them; and upon their Appearance, the Mob ran to their ſeveral Garrets and Cellers, from the Purſuit of Juſtice; which however overtook them; and John Love, Thomas Beau, a Servant to Caſſels and Carnegie, two condemn'd Rebels then in Newgate, George Purchaſe, (doubtleſs) of the Blood of that George Purchaſe, who was condemn'd to be hang'd for the Riot at Sacheverel's Trial, Richard Price, and William Price, five of the moſt buſy of the Rioters, were ſeiz'd, impriſon'd, and try'd, upon the Statute which makes it Felony to demoliſh, or to begin to demoliſh, any Houſe; the moſt reaſonable Law that ever was made for the Maintenance of Peace and Property. The Evidence againſt them prov'd, their breaking the Windows with Stones and Sticks, pulling down the Sign, entering the Houſe, fetching out the Goods, treading upon them, and breaking them. It was ſworn at their Trial, that one of the Mob brought three Bottles out of Read's Houſe, kneel'd down by the Swan Ale-houſe Door, where the Jacobites crouded, and drank the Pretender's Health, by the Name of James the Third; ſome of them that rifled the Houſe, below Stairs took the Money out of the Till: For not only here, but elſewhere, the High-Church Rabble have been found to be Thieves, as well as Rioters, and to deſerve Hanging for Stealing, as well as for Rebellion. The Evidence againſt theſe five Rioters being very ſtrong, they were all found guilty, and receiv'd Sentence of Death. His Royal Highneſs was very much inclin'd to ſhew Mercy to one or two of the youngeſt of them; but the diſmal Conſequences of Riots and Tumults in the Heart of the Capital City, and the Neceſſity of preventing the ſame by Exemplary Puniſhment, being repreſented to His Royal Highneſs by his wiſe and faithful Counſellors, he acquieſc'd in the Courſe of Juſtice, which has had the good Effect that was foreſeen and intended, the putting a ſtop to the deſperate Outrages of a Brainleſs Brutal Multitude, enflam'd with a Blind Zeal for High-Church, and their Champions abroad and at home. Some of their Teachers, forſworn, or not ſworn, have read Lectures on the Sufferings of theſe Malefactors; but far different from them were the Sentiments of the poor Sufferers themſelves, when they were no longer under Poſſeſſion of the Evil Spirit, by which they and others were, and are ſtill, deluded: George Purchaſe acknowledg'd himſelf greatly guilty, and his Sentence juſt; praying God to forgive him this, and all other his Sins: This, he ſaid, he raſhly committed, not conſidering then the unlawfulneſs and diſmal Conſequences of ſuch a Rebellious Sedition as that was, which ſo much tended not only to the Ruin of private Perſons, but to the great Diſturbance of, and Diſhonour to, the whole Government. Theſe five Rioters were executed on a Gibbet, erected at the End of Saliſbury-Court, in Fleet-ſtreet, near the Place where the Crime for which they dy'd was committed.

A.D.1716 They own their Sentence juſt.

Vaughan the Rioter ſhot.

Five Rioters condemn'd and hang'd.

The Evil Spirit before-mentioned, inſtigated certain Zealots to proſecute Mr. Read, for the Death of Vaughan, who led the Mob to deſtroy his Houſe, and all within it: He appear'd before the Lord-Mayor, who took Bail for him, Mr. Johnſon, a Juſtice of Peace, Colonel Coote of the Guards, and Colonel Weſtal of the London Militia. The Witneſſes againſt him at his Trial ſwore the moſt impudent and ſhameleſs Lies that ever were heard in a Court of Juſtice. John Bill depos'd, that he believ'd Vaughan did not belong to the Mob in Saliſbury-Court, and had no Stick in his Hand. Charles Tuckey ſwore, Vaughan had no Stick. The ſame ſwore Catherine Bennet. Joſeph Harris depos'd, that Vaughan told him, He would not be concern'd, but go to Work. This being ſo directly contrary to the Fact, known to ſo many Hundreds of Spectators, and fully prov'd by ſeveral of them, the Jury, without much Conſideration, acquitted Mr. Read, who had 400 l. paid him at the Treaſury, to make good his Loſſes and Charges; and Mr. Gill of the Roebuck in Cheapſide, had 200 l. on the ſame Score: His Houſe having been ſeveral times attack'd by the ſame Raſcally Rabble, of whom one was ſhot, preſſing on as Vaughan did, notwithſtanding repeated Warnings to keep off.

About the middle of Auguſt His R. Highneſs the Prince of Wales was graciouſly pleas'd to order Pardons to paſs the Seals for Charles Ratcliffe, Eſq; Brother to the Earl of Derwentwater, and Mr. Wogan. An Order was made for ſuſpending the Penſion of 3500 l. per Ann. granted to the Earl of Nottingham. Towards the latter End of that Month, the Lord Duffus, who, as Captain of a Man of War, muſt have ſolemnly abjur'd the Pretender, and afterwards enter'd into his Service, by joining with the Rebels in Scotland, was, from Hambrough, brought Priſoner to London, examin'd by Mr. Secretary Methuen, and committed Cloſe Priſoner to the Tower. But the Laird of Markintoſh, Head of that Clan, taken at Preſton among the Rebels, being lately diſcharg'd out of Newgate, on his Pardon, was introduc'd to kiſs the Hands of their Royal Highneſſes, having expreſs'd his utter Abhorrence and Deteſtation of the late Rebellion, and of being concern'd therein; and promiſing to ſpend the Reſidue of his Life, ſo mercifully ſpar'd, in a perfect and unalterable Loyalty to King George, and his Illuſtrious Family.

Lord Duffus a Deſerter ſent to the Tower.

While his Majeſty was at Pyrmont, he diſpatch'd the Baron de Bernsdorff, his Miniſter for German Affairs, to the Duke of Mecklenburgh Suerin, in order to perſuade him to forbear oppreſſing his Subjects, and particularly the Town of Roſtock; and to let him know, that unleſs he comply'd, His Majeſty, and the King of Pruſſia, would be oblig'd to put in Execution, the Imperial Mandate againſt him.

On

A.D.1716 On the 7th of Auguſt, His Majeſty return'd to his Palace at Haeren-Hawſon, where the Prince of Anhaulnet-Zerbz, and other Princes, waited on His Majeſty. The Marquis de Langallevil and Monſieur De Linarge, two Knight Errants, who had enter'd into a treaſonable Correſpondence with a Turkiſh Aga in Holland, being ſeiz'd by the Inſtance of the Emperor's Miniſter, were convey'd to Ivelinger in the Electorate of Hanover, and deliver'd into the Hands of an Imperial Commiſſary.

The Chancery of Sweden having return'd a diſſatisfactory Anſwer to the Memorials of the Britiſh Reſident; Mr. Jackſon complaining of the Capture of a great Number of Britiſh Merchant Ships by the Swedes; the giving Protection to the Scots Rebels, and other Matters, contrary to the Treaties between the two Crowns; and the King of Sweden's being apprehenſive that Sir John Norris was come with a Squadron into the Northern Seas, to facilitate the procuring the Satisfaction demanded; that King ſent Word to Sir John, that in Caſe he join'd the Daniſh and Pruſſian Fleet, he would cauſe all the Effects belonging to the Subjects of Great Britain in his Dominions to be ſeiz'd: But Sir John Norris, purſuing his Inſtructions, join'd the ſaid confederated Fleet, with Part of his Squadron, and order'd the reſt of his Men of War, to convey the Engliſh Merchant Ships to the ſeveral Ports they were bound for. This Proceeding of the King of Sweden, ſhew'd plainly enough that he had forgotten the effectual Aſſiſtance he receiv'd from England in his former Diſtreſs 15 or 16 Years before, and that his Miniſters had given too much Ear to the falſe Repreſentations of the Scots, and other Traitors, of the State of Affairs in England; where, according to the Jacobites, the nine in ten were not only Tories, as the late Examiner pretended, but Rebels; as Count Gyllemburg, the Swediſh Envoy at London, ſtil'd them, in a Letter to Baron Gortz ſome time after. The King and the Kingdom's Enemies have flatter'd and deceiv'd themſelves with ſuch vain Imaginations ever ſince the whole Nation agree'd to rid themſelves of a Popiſh Tyrannical Government. Having mention'd the Addreſſes which ſome High-Church Doctors, and others at Aberdeen, had preſented to the Pretender, 'tis fit, now the Rebellion is ſuppreſt, to inquire what became of the Addreſſers, who had had Time to return to their Senſes, and to be appriz'd of their Guilt, and the Puniſhment they deſerv'd. The Lord Juſtice Clerk ſet out from Edinburgh for Aberdeen, towards the latter end of Auguſt, to execute a Commiſſion for purging that Univerſity of ſuch diſtemper'd Members; but it has appear'd, by ſome Elections they have made ſince, that High-Church left a Leaven there after the Criminal Doctors were expell'd. The Commiſſioners met at King's-College in the Old Town, and it was prov'd, by good Witneſſes, that Dr. Middleton, Principal, Mr. John Gordon, Profeſſor of Civil Law; Mr. Richard Gordon, his Son, Philoſophy Profeſſor; Dr. James Urquhart, Profeſſor of Medicine; Mr. Alexander Gordon, Profeſſor of Humanity, had pray'd for the Pretender, by the Name of King James: And it was prov'd on Middleton, that he caus'd the Bells to ring for Marr's pretended Victory at Dumblane, when King George was burnt by the Mob in Effigy, with the Devil at his Right-hand, and ſome Loyal Noblemen at his Left. Other impious Acts of Rebellion and Brutality were A.D.1716 prov'd upon them; and to ſhew how much theſe High-Church Doctors had any Religion at Heart, as Religion conſiſts of Piety and Virtue, Proofs were exhibited againſt them, of their embezz'ling and ſquand'ring the Revenues of the College. The Viſitors ſitting, in Mattiſchal College, had Proof, that George Liddel, Mathematical Profeſſor, had pray'd for the Pretender, and been notoriouſly guilty of Whoring. Mr. George Peacock, the Sub-Principal, Mr. Alexander Moir and Mr. William Smith, two Philoſophy Profeſſors, quitted the College, Mr. William Meſton, another Philoſophy Profeſſor, ran away to France; Mr. John Findlates, Profeſſor of Humanity, and Mr. Thompſon, Firſt Uſher of the Grammar-School, beſides praying for the Pretender by the Name of King James, were prov'd to have been very buſy in Celebrating the Thankſgiving-Day, appointed by that Impoſtor and his Epiſcopal Clergy, for his Landing in Scotland, which Thompſon call'd, Appulſum Auſpicatiſſimum Noſtri Regis, i. e. The moſt auſpicious Coming of Our King; which would have been much more auſpicious to them, if they had taken hold of him, and intit'led themſelves to the 150000 l. given by the Parliaments of Great Britain and Ireland for that Service. The turning theſe Fellows out of the two Colleges, was but a ſmall Puniſhment for ſuch Criminals. The like was the disfranchiſing ſeveral Burghers of Perth, who, in the Time of the Rebellion, impriſon'd the lawful Magiſtrates, and uſurp'd the Magiſtracy: They were only now degraded from being Burgeſſes; Intimation of which was made, by publiſhing the Sentence at the Market-Croſs, and tearing their Burgeſs-Tickets. One of the Jacobite Party, Lawrence Howel, being ſeiz'd in Jewen-ſtreet, for Treaſonable Practices, among other Papers found in his dirty Lodgings, was an Original Inſtrument, by which it appear'd, that he was ordain'd by George Hicks, D. D. the quondam Dean of Worceſter, who ſtiles himſelf in that Inſtrument, Biſhop of Thetford, and declares by it, that he was conſecrated (as he terms it) in the Year 1694, when the Jacobites were in the Height of their Hopes, on the Succeſs of their Invaſion and Aſſaſſination Plots. The Biſhops who conſecrated him had loſt their Biſhopricks, for Diſobedience to the Laws; as Dr. Turner, once Biſhop of Ely; Dr. White, once Biſhop of Peterborough; and Dr. Lloyd, once Biſhop of Norwich. Turner was deeply concern'd in the Invaſion Plot, and 'tis no great Compliment to the Apoſtolical Succeſſion, to lodge it in the Hands of a Traytor to his Country. Howel was committed to Newgate for High Treaſon; as was one Nichols, another High-Church Prieſt, Curate of a Church near Canterbury, for uſing ſeditious Words againſt the Government, in a Sermon lately preach'd by him.

Seditious Prieſts.

Sir James Bateman, Sub-Governour of the South Sea Company, and ſeveral of their Directors, waited on His Royal Highneſs at Court, with a very Loyal Addreſs to His Majeſty; Sir James Bateman and his Companions were nobly Entertain'd by His Royal Highneſs's Order. Informations were given that ſeveral Addreſſes were preparing in the Univerſity of Oxford then repreſented in Parliament by Mr. William Bromley and Sir William Whitlock; in the City of Glouceſter then repreſented by South Sea Company's Addreſs.

A.D.1716 John Snell, Esq; and Charles Cox, Esq; and other Places, design'd to be presented to the Royal Guardian, to extol His Royal Highness's Wisdom in the Administration of Affairs during the King's Absence; and in particular his Affability and Graciousness to All Persons, without distinction of Parties. The sinister Meaning of such Addresses cou'd not escape that Wisdom which they so justly admir'd: It was soon perceiv'd that it Insinuated a Reflection upon His Majesty and His Ministers; and Notice was given, that His Royal Highness would receive no Addresses that were not directly made to the Throne.

His Royal Highness's great Wisdom.

The very ill Effects of having Faction in Power were seen every Day, in the Towns at a distance from London, and the necessity of keeping the Disaffected in Awe by regular Forces, where the Magistrates conniv'd at, if they did not encourage, the mutinous Mobs, was very apparent to all Friends of the present Government. At a contested Election at Wells in Somersetshire, where Thomas Horner, Esq; was oppos'd by John Dodd, Esq; Son to the late Lord Chief Baron Sir Samuel Dodd, the Tories not only manag'd the Return to their liking, but under Prete ce of Rejoicing for Mr. Horner's Election had Riotous Meetings, which so far endanger'd the Peace of the Neighbourhood that Brigadier Gore was obliged to interpose and desire them to disperse, which they did on the appearance of a Troop or two of his Dragoons: But the same Spirit has been kept up among them to this Day, and the Doctors of that Cathedral have been far from taking any Pains to suppress it.

At Dorchester one John Plowman was taken into Custody of a Messenger for High-Treason Sept. 22. as were also Peter Pike and Mr. Gapper an Alderman. Pike was sent to Goal, but Gapper was admitted to Bail. The High-Church Mob was very outragious on this Occasion, and threatned to rescue the Prisoners; to prevent which, the Messenger and Constables were forc'd to require the Assistance of the Dragoons: And is not this enough to put Speeches in the Mouths of their Leaders, against Soldiers and a standing Army?

Why Speeches against the Army.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales set out from Hampton Court on Monday the 24th of September, arriv'd at Knowle, the Earl of Dorset's Seat in Kent, before Noon, and at Tunbridge Wells, about five in the Evening; from thence he went to Haland in Sussex, the Seat of His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, where His Royal Highness lay, and was entertained in the most grand, respectful, and chearful manner. The Prince of Wales came to Lewis about ten a-Clock the next Forenoon, and about nine in the Evening, to Stansted, the Earl of Scarborough's Seat, where His Royal Highness met with the like magnificent Reception: The next Morning, September 26. His Royal Highness proceeded to Portsmouth, and having viewed the Fortifications, Docks, Yards, and Magazines, review'd the Regiments there, and went on Board the Guard-Ship, and Bomb-Ship; His Royal Highness dined at Lieutenant-General Erle's, and return'd in the Evening to Stansted, where Archdeacon Bowchier, one of the Canons Residentiary of Chichester, accompanied by the Prebendaries and Vicars of that Cathedral, with many of the Neighbouring Clergy, were presented to him by the Lord Lumley: The Archdeacon made a handsome Speech, Part of which is a good Lesson to the Doctors of the other Cathedral last mentioned. "We are those who "sincerely believe in our own Conscience, and "so shall always declare and preach to others, "That the Church of England, as by Law esta- "blished, is, and will always be, safe and "flourishing, while it is blest with His Majes- "sty's happy Reign, and your Royal High- "nesses Protection." On the 27th of September, about nine in the Morning, the Prince of Wales left Stansted; and on a Common near Rake, reviewed Wynn's Dragoons: He came to Farnham about One, and near that Place review'd Evans's Dragoons; who were extremely well mounted, and indeed there could be no Complaint of the contrary against any Regiments of Dragoons then in England: The Generals and Officers having mounted them so well, that they might pass for Horse, if the mounting only made the Distinction. In the Evening His Royal Highness arrived at Guildford, where he was pleased to shew himself in a Balcony to a vast Concourse of People, who filled the Streets, and expressed their Joy by continual Acclamations. About eleven at Night His Royal Highness returned to Hampton Court. In all the Places where His Royal Highness stopp'd, great Numbers were admitted to the Honour of kissing his Hand, and were highly satisfied with the gracious and affable manner in which he was pleased to receive them; and the poorer Sort shewed a grateful Sense of his Bounty and Charity, which were very liberally bestowed among them. Two Days after, the Venetian Ambassador had a private Audience of His Royal Highness, to notify the Success of the Arms of that Republick against the Turks, and the raising of the Siege of Corfu; owing chiefly to the great Valour, Vigilance, and Conduct, of General Schuylenburg, Commander of their Army, though a Protestant, and the Religion of the State is Popish. The Republick in Acknowledgement of so signal a Service, presented him with a Sword, valued at 5000 Ducats, and a yearly Pension of the like Value during Life. This General was in England some Years after, to pay a Visit to his Sister, the Dutchess of Kendal.

A.D.1716 Archdeacon Bowcher's Speech to His Royal Highness.

His Royal Highness's Progress.

The Treaty, of which Overtures were made to His Majesty upon his landing in Holland, for the support of that of Utrecht, between Great Britain and France, was by this Time in so good Forwardness, that in order to remove all Difficulties that might obstruct it, Monsieur Ibberville, the French Minister at our Court, having made a short Tour to France, returned, and brought with him, Monsieur de Moyenville, an Ingineer, to settle with our Government what Works were to be demolish'd at Mardyke to put the Canal in such a Condition as to give no Murmur or Jealousy to the British Nation. The Articles concerning the Pretender and the British Rebels, were already settled, and 'tis certain that the general Opinion in France, was so far from any Concern for the Interest of the Pretender, that if but a small Part of what the disaffected said of their Numbers amongst us had been true, there would still have been more Jacobites in England than in France at this Time: The harbouring the abdicated King, his Family, and Followers; the making frequent Armaments for Expeditions in his Favour; the Treaty of Alliance with France and Holland.

Losses

A.D 1716 Loſſes and Shame that had been the Effects of the eſpouſing his deſperate Quarrel with ſo much Obſtinacy, and the juſt Apprehenſion that nothing but Shame and Loſs would ever attend them, in the ſupporting his pretended Son, had made the Generality of the French Nation ſo weary of him and his Pretences, that 'tis not likely they will ever be fond of them, whatever Motives that Court may have to fall back into their former Error. The Treaty juſt mentioned, was negotiated alſo in Holland; and by the States-General joining in it, with Great Britain and France, it was called the Tripple Alliance; to forward which, Horatio Walpole, Eſq; the Britiſh Miniſter at the Hague, in the Lord Cadogan's Abſence, came to England; and having waited on His Royal Highneſs at Hampton Court, and received farther Inſtructions, returned to Holland, a few Days after.

The French weary of the Pretender.

Upon the Publiſhing of Howel the Nonjuring Prieſt's Book, charging Schiſm on the Church of England, a Controverſy aroſe, which waſted too much Time and Paper, the Nonjurors ſupporting that Libeller's Aſſertions, and the Jurors confuting them: As the former had under the Diſguiſe of Conſcience a concealed Deſign againſt their King and Country, the only reaſonable and effectual Method of proceeding againſt them, was what the Law directs; and to deal with them otherwiſe, was as vain and ridiculous, as to argue with Madmen on the very Subject of their Madneſs. The chief Occaſion of this Extravagance, was taken from what Howel had put into the Mouths of Paul the Parſon, and Hall the Juſtice, at Tyburn: For he was the reputed Author of their Dying Speeches, and ſtarted the Notion of the true Nonjuring Church of England. There's ſo much jargon in his and Hicks's pretended Arguments about Canons, Ordinations, Deprivations, Excommunications, and their Appurtenances, that no Man in Sobriety of Thinking can take Pleaſure in reading it. Dr. Bennet, of Cripplegate, being richly benefic'd under a Revolution Government, thought he could do no leſs than vindicate his own Swearing, by condemning the Jacobite's Non-ſwearing; but to compound with them for that Unkindneſs, he fell furiouſly at the ſame Time upon the Diſſenters, not forbearing foul Names, as Phanaticks, &c. The Learned Dr. Kennet, in a more rational and modeſt Manner, expos'd the Sin and Folly of thoſe Malignants, who charg'd the Proteſtant Church of England with Schiſm. I ſhall only repeat a Paſſage in his Treatiſe, where ſpeaking of Doctor Hicks, the Mock or Quack Biſhop of Thetford, he writes, "One is ſhock'd at his "diſtorted Uſe of Holy Scriptures, his fan- "ciful Inventions about the Nature and State "of the four Evangelical Churches, his inſiſt- "ing abſolutely on the Teſtimonies of Fathers "in Matters of Diſcipline, and outward Pri- "vilege, wherein they muſt needs run back- "ward and forward, as the Courſe of Times, "and Conſtitution of Countries, might re- "quire. (In what follows,) the Spirit of "High-Church is in its full Glory. His exalted "Notions of the KINGDOM of the CHURCH. Monſtrous! Where was the Kingdom of the Church, but in the Kingdom of Chriſt, when the Apoſtles were in Flames in all Parts of the Univerſe, and their Diſciples in Dens and Dungeons, devoted to Tortures and Death? "His "Thrones of the Royal Prieſts, His Vicege- "rents of the Eternal Melchiſedech; Perfect "Bedlam! His ſpiritual Principalities, and other "aſſum'd Titles of Sovereignty beyond Po- "pery; beyond any Enthuſiaſm, but that of "the fifth Monarchy Men; who were ſetting "up King Jeſus upon Earth: His arraigning "our whole Conſtitution, Eccleſiaſtical and "Civil, as upon a wrong Bottom from the very "Foundation of it. His renouncing Allegiance to his rightful and lawful Sovereign, where he's ſo wicked and ſo fooliſh as to ſay, rather than pray for his preſent Majeſty King George, He would turn Papiſt. This, and his abuſing the Biſhops and Clergy of the Church of England, would have brought him to the ſame End, as his honeſter and worthier Brother came to 30 Years before, had his Crime been committed where any ſuch Kings as his abdicated Maſter were upon the Throne. He ſays of the whole Body of the Church of England Clergy, Their Prayers are Sins, their Sacraments are no Sacraments, their Abſolutions Null and of no Force; God ratifies nothing in Heaven, which they do in his Name upon Earth; they, and all that adhere to them, can claim no Benefit of God's Promiſes, nor of Remiſſion of Sins, through the Merits of Chriſt's Blood: Nay, though they ſhould dye Martyrs, their Martyrdom would not be accepted: If they could dye Martyrs more than once, they could not make Amends for their Sins with their Blood, &c.

Howel being arraigned for his treaſonable Book, pleaded not Guilty, and was admitted to bail, Himſelf, Charles Adamſon, Leonard Henckman, and Joſeph Beardſley, in each 1000 l. The latter, Beardſley, was, I ſuppoſe, an Aſſociate of Paul the Parſon; for I knew a High-Church Attorney of that Name, in or near his Pariſh of Orton on the Hill. The laſt of the Rebels that were executed at Lancaſter, were Captain John Bruce, Thomas Shuttleworth, John Winkley, George Hodſon, and Chorley, who ſhew'd very little Signs of Repentance; Bruce, who had been Gentleman of the Horſe to the late Duke Hamilton, dy'd with a Lye in his Mouth, ſaying, "He was ſurpriz'd into a Con- "feſſion, by being brought to his Trial two "Days before that mention'd in the Notice:" For he had five Days notice, and Copies of the Indictment and Jury in time, as we read in the Annals.

The Behaviour of the far greater Number of the Men of Oxford towards the Government, ever ſince His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, has been ſo ſcandalous and provoking that there's no need of Proofs to fix it upon them: It is viſible they glory'd in it, and as much as it reflected on their Honeſty and Underſtanding, were as proud of their Diſobedience to the beſt of Kings, as they had been of their abject Submiſſion to the worſt, as they may juſtly be call'd: If arbitrary Power, Oppreſſion and Perſecution, are the Characteriſticks of the worſt of Princes.

The Charity of High-Church.

On His Majeſty's Birth-day, (May the 28th) all the Windows that were illuminated at Oxford, were broken to pieces, as were all the Windows that were not illuminated, on the 29th of May, the ſtatutable Holiday for reſtoring to us King Charles and King James the II. Dr. Baron, the Vice-Chancellor, and Mr. Richard Wiſe, the Mayor, took no Notice of theſe Outrages; and this ſame Dr. Baron having A Riot at Oxford.

A.D. 1716 having had an Information upon Oath against a Barber, by two Witneſſes, that he ſaid, "We "ſhould ſoon have King James the III. for "our King; and he knew no Body elſe that "had any Right to the Crown." The Vice-Chancellor, notwithſtanding the Words were ſworn poſitively upon the Barber, bound him over only for an Aſſault, and took no Care to bind over the Witneſſes to proſecute; but they were ſo honeſt as to come voluntary to the next Seſſions, and hearing the Barber's Recognizance read only for an Aſſault, they told the Bench, "They had made Information againſt him for "treaſonable Words, and therefore were much "ſurpriz'd to hear the Recognizance run only "for an Aſſault:" Upon which they were re-examined, and the grand Jury found the Bill againſt the Barber. At the next Aſſizes at Oxford, Bills of Indictment were found againſt one Matthews, an Innkeeper there; and one Wood, Manciple of Baliol College; for curſing the King and Government. The ſame grand Jury indicted ſeveral Popiſh Recuſants; and one Nichols, a Commoner of Exeter College, was try'd and condemn'd, for drinking Ormond's and Bolingbroke's Healths, two Perſons attainted for Treaſon, and ſhouting in the Streets, and crying Ormond for ever, and curſing the King and Government. One Stirling, a Nonjuror of Baliol, was try'd for the ſame Crime; and notwithſtanding this Diſaffection was ſo open and common, yet when the Soldiers quarter'd there, to prevent the ill Effects of it, were provok'd on His Royal Highneſs's Birth-day to reſent the Affronts that were put upon it; and the Inſults they met with from both Univerſity-Men and Townſmen, when they were celebrating it chearfully and peaceably, the Vice-Chancellor and the Mayor got a Bundle of Affidavits of the Soldiers, making Reprizals on the Windows of the Diſaffected: For their abuſing and aſſaulting them at their Bonefire, flinging Stones through the Windows of the Star-Inn, where the loyal Gentlemen met and attack'd them when they came forth to drink His Majeſty's, His Royal Highneſs's, and the Royal Family's Healths, at the Bonefire. Nothing can be made out plainer, than was the Provocations given by the Rabble; and that they were the Aggreſſors: And nothing can be truer, than that the Soldiers after the moſt provoking Inſults, did make ſuitable Returns on the Glazier's Work of the ſeveral Houſes, and ſome of the Perſons from whom the Provocations came. Thoſe Retributive Acts of Violence were all exaggerated, on the Oaths of the Witneſſes, examin'd by the Vice-Chancellor Dr. Baron, the Mayor, Mr. Richard Wiſe, the Recorder, Mr. William Wright, an Oxford Knight; one Sir Daniel Webb; Henry White and James Pinnel, Aldermen; but in all the numerous Affidavits, of Barbers, Shoemakers, Tapſters, Cooks, Cutlers, Cork-cutters, Pipe-makers, Taylors, there is not the leaſt hint of any Offence firſt given by the Oxford Men, to the Officers of the Soldiers, and the Gentlemen of the Conſtitution Club, who thought they had a Right to the uſe of the Star-Inn, and the Street before it for their Meeting and Bonefire; and that thoſe that were the Aggreſſors in the Diſturbance that was given them, might reaſonably be chaſtis'd, according to Lex Talionis. It will appear hereafter that the obſtinate Refuſal of the Mayor, and the Knight, Alderman Webb, to cauſe the Bells to ring, and due Reſpect to be paid to the Birth-day of the Royal Guardian, contrary to the Inſtances that were made to them about it, by the Major of the Regiment; and other loyal Gentlemen enflam'd the mutinous Spirit of the Aggreſſors, and not a little, the loyal Spirit of thoſe that oppos'd them. A.D. 1716

In the beginning of November the well-affected in Town and Country were in the deepeſt Concern for the well-doing of Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, who was in Labour, with ſmall Intermiſſions, from Sunday the fourth, to Friday the ninth of that Month; and then to their unſpeakable Sorrow, was deliver'd of a dead Prince; who on the Sunday-Night following, was privately depoſited in a Vault in Henry the VII's Chappel in Weſtminſter-Abbey. The publick Affliction was aggravated, by the great Danger Her Royal Highneſs was in, upon that unhappy Accident: But their Grief and Fears were in a few Days turn'd into as great Joy, upon Her Royal Highneſs's being in a fair Way of Recovery. On the 13th of November, the two new Sheriffs being deputed from the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, waited on His Royal Highneſs at St. James's, to condole on the Misfortune of a ſtill-born Prince, and to enquire after the Health of Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs; them His Royal Highneſs receiv'd very graciouſly, and in a very particular manner returned Thanks to the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, for this and all other Marks of Loyalty and Affection for His Majeſty and the Royal Family. Six Days after Jeremy Dummer, Eſq; preſented to His Royal Highneſs an Addreſs from the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Church of New-England: He was introduc'd by Mr. Secretary Methuen, and accompanied by Dr. Calamy, Mr. Tongue, Mr. Reinolds, Mr. Bradbury, and a conſiderable Number of New-England Gentlemen. Compare the following Paragraph of their Addreſs with the Letters of Thomas Rowney, Eſq; Member of Parliament for the Univerſity of Oxford, Dr. John Baron Vice-Chancellor, the Mayor, &c. about the laſt mention'd Diſturbance there. "At the ſame Time, ſay the "Miniſters of New-England, it gives us inexpreſſible Joy, that we cannot hear of ſo much as one ſingle Perſon or People of our Denomination that has been found in the late unnatural and curſed Rebellion againſt your Majeſty and their Country. To God be all the Glory of that diſtinguiſhing Honour. And we truſt that our Brethren will ſtill go on to ſignallize their Loyalty and Fidelity, Affection and Zeal, for your Majeſty's Title, the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Liberties of their Country, till the Wiſdom and Juſtice of the Government, acknowledge them worthy of further Regards and Favours." A nameleſs Author has declar'd in a Pamphlet, That Time can never happen, let there be never ſo much Wiſdom and Juſtice in it. After the preſenting of the Addreſs, Dr. Calamy, in the Name of his Brethren ſpake as follows. Her Royal Highneſs deliver'd of a dead Prince. New-England Clergy's loyal Addreſs.

His Royal Highneſs gave a very favourable Anſwer to the Addreſs, and all the Gentlemen who attended with it, were admitted to the Honour of kiſſing his Hand.

The pretended Biſhop of Edinburgh, tho' a Nonjuror, had been allow'd a Penſion, not only in the late Queen's Time, but ſince His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne; but it was now ſuſpended, and aſſign'd to Mr. Barclay, an Epiſcopal Clergyman, who had all along taken the Oaths required by the Government.

About this time Mr. Juſtice Tracy, Mr. Juſtice Dormer, the Lord Chief Baron Smith, and Mr. Baron Scrope, were put in Commiſſion, for trying the Rebel Priſoners at Carliſle, to whom the Reverend Mr. Thomas Tullie, Chancellor of that Dioceſe, preach'd an excellent Sermon, wherein he plainly convinc'd them of the wicked Crime they had been guilty of; and being a Divine of unblemiſh'd Loyalty and eminent Worth, His Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to grant him the Dignity of Dean of that Cathedral Church vacant by the Death of Dr. Gibbons.

Upon a Diſcovery, ſaid to have been made by Lieutenant General Wills, that ſeveral Perſons were on the Liſt of Half-Pay Officers, who were either dead, or had no Title to the Pay they receiv'd from the Government, His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, was pleas'd to appoint a Board of General Officers and others, to enquire into theſe Abuſes, conſiſting of,

The concerted Deſcent upon Schonen by the Danes and Ruſſians, for which 50000 Men were got in Readineſs, coming to nothing, I ſhall only obſerve, that it was thought the Czar conſidered more the aggrandizing himſelf, than the procuring a juſt, ſafe, and honourable Peace for the Northern Allies, who from that Time began to conceive ſome Jealouſy of his Power and Intentions. Sir John Norris took Care of the Trade in thoſe Seas; but meeting with a violent Storm, in his Return home, loſt the Auguſt and the Garland, two Ships of his Squadron.

'Tis neither fit nor prudent for Perſons not in the Secret of Affairs of State, and remote from ſuch Counſels, to venture on Conjectures which are founded on common Fame; therefore we are only to obſerve, that on the arrival of an Expreſs from Hanover the 11th of December, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, to the great Surprize of every Body, and the particular Concern of the Well-affected to the preſent Settlement, was remov'd from his Place of Principal Secretary of State. All the Perſons that were diſcharg'd, with the deepeſt Senſe of Gratitude acknowledg'd His Majeſty's Royal Goodneſs and Clemency; and among the reſt, John Patten, of Granham, Eſq; made this Speech to the Judges.

My Lords,

John Patten, Eſq; Speech of Thanks.

"I Have often heard of the merciful Diſpoſition of His Majeſty King George: I do now, by dear Experience, feel the Effects, and taſte the Fruits thereof, with the utmoſt Joy and Gratitude; the Proceedings of this Day are ſuch, as Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard; but we are living Witneſſes, and will bear Teſtimony thereof, while we live, breathe, and have a Being: And I may ſafely ſay, not only in my own Name, but, I believe, alſo in the Names of all my late Fellow-Priſoners, that whatever former Attempts we have made, we ſhall, to the utmoſt that in us lies, endeavour to compenſate them with a grateful Acknowledgment, and faithful and loyal Behaviour, towards His Sacred Majeſty King George, and His Royal Iſſue, whom God long preſerve on the Throne of theſe Realms; and may they continue to be the higheſt Comforts and Darlings of their People, and a Terror to all their open and ſecret Enemies."

It was the Deſtruction of this great and good King that Biſhop Atterbury and other wicked Conſpirators traiterouſly plotted a very few Years afterwards.

On the 19th of December, James Butler, who valu'd himſelf much in his laſt dying Speech on his Excellent Education, and his being born and bred a Gentleman, was hang'd at Tyburn, with other Thieves, for Robberies committed by him; and before he was turn'd off, declar'd himſelf a Papiſt; and that he turn'd Thief becauſe his Conſcience would not permit him to take ſuch falſe Oaths as are neceſſary to qualify an Engliſh Gentleman for a Poſt; ſuch as the Oaths of Allegiance, Supremacy, &c.

It

A.D. 1716 It is not amiſs to give an Inſtance now and then of the Make of theſe Mens Conſciences. Some Years before this Mr. Dodwell, the Nonjuror of Oxford, publiſh'd Writings, wherein he endeavour'd to prove, that Baptiſm by diſſenting Miniſters was invalid; thoſe Miniſters being in Effect Laymen, according to him, for want of Epiſcopal Ordinations: Nay, he puſh'd the Matter ſo far, as to queſtion whether Infants without Baptiſm by High-Church Miniſters would have any Souls to be ſav'd. The Nonſenſe and Impiety of this and the like Tenets, did not hinder their being eſpous'd by that Faction; and is taken notice of by Dr. Bentley, Maſter of Trinity College Cambridge, and Archdeacon of Ely, in a Speech he made to the Clergy of that Dioceſe, at a Viſitation, December 13th; of which I Inſert what follows.

Dodwell's Hereſy.

Dr. Bentley's Speech againſt it.

Proves the Diſſenters more againſt Lay Baptiſm than the Church of England.

"They have made the very Charter of Man's "Salvation precarious and uncertain; and ren- "der'd the whole viſible Church a meer Office "of Heraldry, adapted to ſecular and politi- "cal Views: This laſt will clearly appear, if "we recollect the Progreſs of their Artifices for "the Space of ſome Years paſt. The firſt Step "was a pretended Attack on the Diſſenters, "the Invalidity of Lay-Baptiſm; tho' in this "Point the Diſſenters were of all Men the leaſt "concern'd; the Calvinian Doctrine being more "ſtrict and rigorous againſt Lay-Baptiſm, than "either the primitive Churches or our own: "Why then againſt the Diſſenters? But the "Hook lay hid and out of Sight in the Infe- "rence of ſecond Propoſitions. Lay-Baptiſm "is invalid: But the diſſenting Miniſters are "meer Laymen, for want of Epiſcopal Ordi- "nation; therefore they cannot efficaciouſly "baptize. Thus a Calvinian Poſition, un- "taught by our Church, was craftily aſſum'd, "and eſpous'd, on purpoſe to unchriſtian all "the Calviniſts themſelves, and with them, "the much greater Part of the whole Refor- "mation." Horrible to ſpeak or think! I have in more Places than one of this Hiſtory intimated that the Preſbyterian Churches are the main Body of the Reformed Religion; and if not the nine in ten of Proteſtants, very near to that Majority: Which I doubt not the Rural Clergy, and thoſe they influence, took to be a ſchiſmatical Falſity: But it is here in a great meaſure confirmed by Doctor Bentley, one of the moſt learned and eminent Doctors of the Church of England; and it ſerves very much to ſhew the Ridiculum of their Pretences, who make the Majors in a Schiſm againſt the Minors, the Majors being the greater Part of the whole Reformation, (according to Doctor Bentley) may certainly keep to their Churches, without being Schiſmaticks to the Minors, who refuſe Communion with them: And as the Diſſenters have from the firſt Settlement of the Succeſſion in the Royal Houſe of Hanover been inviolably attach'd to it, ſo they have on that Account been expos'd to the Malice and Rage of that Church, the common Enemy of the Proteſtant Succeſſion and Toleration. Doctor Bentley adds, "But the Authors and firſt "Broachers of it had a politick Aim in it; it "was directly levell'd againſt the illuſtrious "Houſe of Hanover, which by this wonderful "Doctrine was to be wholly excluded out of "the Church of Chriſt; and their tacit Con- "ſequences were ready and plain, that, of two "Evils, 'twas better to have a Papiſt on the "Throne than a Pagan. Too many of the

And the Presbyterians the much greater Part of the Reformation.

"younger Clergy, quite ignorant of the Drift A.D. 1717 "of it, preach'd ſtrenuouſly the new Opinion, "drawn in by the ſpecious Bait of adding Dig- "nity and Prerogative to their own Epiſcopal "Orders:" And the ſame Ignorance has contin'd the ſame Preaching in too many Places, eſpecially in the Country, to this Day.

High-Church againſt Dr. Bentley.

Such Sentiments as theſe, ſo oppoſite to the Faction, could not but exaſperate them ſtill further againſt the Perſon that broach'd them; and a ſcandalous Libel was now publiſh'd, entit'led An humble and ſerious Repreſentation of the preſent State of Trinity College in Cambridge; which that College paſt a regular Cenſure againſt, as a falſe malicious Libel, ſigned by Richard Bentley, George Modd Vice-Maſter, Edmund Bathurſt, Senior Burſar, Abraham Johon, Matthew Barwel, Junior Dean, William Ayloffe, James Brabourne, John Hacket, Senior Dean, John Baker. 'Tis true, College Diſputes were made the Pretence for the barbarous Uſage the Doctor then met with from the Faction, but no doubt his Principles of Loyalty and Liberty at that Time (at leaſt) heighten'd their Reſentment againſt him.

Libellers puniſh'd.

On the ſeventh of December, a Bill of Indictment for High-Treaſon was found againſt Redmayne the Printer, a Priſoner in Newgate for printing a treaſonable Libel, entituled The Caſe of the Schiſm of the Church of England. Iſaac Dalton was again convicted for publiſhing the treaſonable Paper call'd the Shift ſhifted; for which he was fin'd and pillory'd. The chief Libellers were Leſley, Bedford, Spinkes, Orme, Howel, and after them came Larbery, who with leſs Senſe has ſince had more Impudence and Malice, and lives ſtill an Inſtance of the Moderation and Lenity of the Government, which he has ſo long, and ſo inſolently, traduc'd. We ſhall preſently hear more of Howel. His Majeſty having put off his Departure from Hanover till the beginning of the next Month, His Royal Highneſs the Prince, Guardian in Council, order'd a Proclamation for the proroguing the Parliament from the 8th to the 17th of that Month; but they did not ſit till the 20th of February. On the 24th of December the Treaty of Defenſive Alliance between Great Britain, France, and the States General, was ſign'd at the Hague, by the Lord Cadogan, Ambaſſador Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary of his Britannick Majeſty, the Abbot Du Bois, and the Marquis De Chateauneuf; the French Ambaſſadors, and the States Deputies.

His Majeſty ſet out from Hanover on Tueſday the 19th of January, 1717, and arriv'd on the 23 at Utrecht, and lay that Night at Alphen, a Village between Utrecht and Leyden; from whence he went the next Day to Ulaerden near Helvoet Sluyce. The Earl of Sundarland, the Lord Cadogan, and Mr. Secretary Stanhope, attended the King at Utrecht, and the Czar, who as yet had not given Ear to the Counſels of His Majeſty's Enemies, having deſir'd an Interview with the King of Great Britain, near the ſame Place, Utrecht, His Majeſty conſented to it; but the Czar's Indiſpoſition detain'd him at Amſterdam. Some Days before the Czar notify'd by a Letter to the States General, that His Conſort was brought to Bed of a Prince, and deſir'd them to be Godfathers. A very odd Deſire, conſidering the States were Preſbyterians, who do not think ſo well of thoſe Baptiſmal Sureties as the Roman and Greek Churches, and our own Church of England do.

The Czar deſires the Presbyterian States to be God-fathers.

A.D.1717 The States referr'd the Czar's Requeſt to Conſideration, according to their uſual Method of Proceeding; and the News of the Death of the young Prince, which came the ſame Day, put an end to this Affair. On the 15th of January the King paſt thro' the Old Maeſe, landed at Helvoet Sluyce, and lay there that Night: The next Day His Majeſty embark'd, lay all Night on board the Carolina Yatch; and on the 17th about two in the Afternoon, the Squadron, commanded by Admiral Aylmer, with the Yatchts, ſail'd out of the Goree: On the 18th about three in the Afternoon His Majeſty landed at Margate, lay that Night at Canterbury; from thence His Majeſty ſet out, Saturday the 19th, about ſix a-Clock in the Morning, and between three and four in the Afternoon he was met at Blackheath by the Prince of Wales, with a great Number of the Nobility, Gentry, and Perſons of Diſtinction. His Majeſty having with paternal Affection receiv'd His Royal Highneſs into his Arms, and then into his Coach, they came from thence together, and paſſing thro' the City, arriv'd at St. James's about ſix in the Evening, the People all the way making joyful Acclamations for His Majeſty's happy Return. Two Days after the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen attended the King; and the Recorder made a very handſome Compliment to His Majeſty on his happy Arrival, and on the Prince of Wales's wiſe Adminiſtration during the King's Abſence.

His Majeſty lands at Margate.

Promotions Four Days after it was declar'd that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint Charles Lord Viſcount Townſhend to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; John Forteſcue Aland to be one of the Barons of the Exchequer; Sir William Thompſon Recorder of London, to be Sollicitor General; and Dr. Henry Downes to be Biſhop of Killalagh and Achery, in Ireland.

On the 22d of January came on the Trial of Francis Francia the Jew, for High-Treaſon, before the Lord Chief Baron Bury, Mr. Juſtice Tracy, Mr. Juſtice Pratt, and Sir William Thompſon Recorder: The Council for the King were Sir Joſeph Jekyl, His Majeſty's Serjeant at Law; the Attorney General, the Solicitor General; Mr. Spencer Cowper, Attorney General to the Prince; Mr. Denton and Mr. Cowper, junior: For the Priſoner Mr. Ward, Mr. Hungerford, Mr. Kettleby. I ſhall not enter into the Particulars of this Trial, the Succeſs of which was not anſwerable to moſt Peoples Expectation. The Attorney General gave an Account how the Priſoner came acquainted with one Abbot Butler, and Monſieur D'Aulmay, two Agents for the Pretender in France, under the Dukes of Aumont and Ormond, who held Correſpondence with Mr. Harvey of Combe, in order to favour the Pretender's Invaſion. This Harvey of Combe, was one of the Pillars of High-Church, and as a Member of the Houſe of Commons, had been in all Votes againſt the Government, when in the Hands of Men of Revolution Principles; a Stickler for Sacheverel, the French Commerce Bill, the Schiſm Bill, &c. He has been ſpoken of already. The Attorney General took Notice of a very remarkable Letter writ by Mr. Harvey, that was found among Francia's Papers: This Letter had been ſhewn to Harvey while he was under Examination before a Committee of the Privy Council, and threw him into the greateſt Agony and Confuſion, inſomuch that twelve Hours after he ſtabb'd himſelf, as has been related elſewhere.

Francia's Trial.

Mr. Harvey of Combe a ſteady Tory.

This fatal Letter was read in Court, in which Mr. Harvey expoſtulates with his Correſpondent in France, about Money he had diſburſt for the Duke D'Aumont, and was not repaid: He therefore preſſes to have a Bill from that Duke. He adds, He is reflected on as being a Penſioner to 6, French King; but nevertheleſs he ſhall omit nothing to ſerve him, tho' at the hazard of his Life, and all he has. Again, He'll do any thing to ſerve the French King, and the Duke D'Aumont: That great Intereſt is made for the enſuing Elections of Parliament Men; but aſſures him that 8, the Pretender gains Ground, and that 9, King George loſes himſelf ev'ry Day. This being full Evidence of Francia's treaſonable Correſpondence with D'Aumont, which was confirm'd by his own Confeſſion; an Account of which was given by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend and Mr. Secretary Stanhope, who were both preſent in Court, the Lord Chief Baron Bury concluded his Charge to the Jury thus: If you are ſatisfy'd in your Conſciences that the Priſoner at the Bar wrote and receiv'd the Letters produc'd in Court, you ought to bring him in guilty of the Indictment; otherwiſe, you ought to acquit him; which they did accordingly, after about half an Hour's Conſultation: Their Foreman, Sir Daniel Wray, delivering a Verdict not guilty.

Zealous for the French King.

On the 29th of January Mr. Secretary Stanhope, by the King's Command, communicated to the Privy Council the Information His Majeſty had receiv'd of a Traiterous Conſpiracy that had for ſome time been carried on to excite a new Rebellion, and to favour a Foreign Invaſion of His Majeſty's Dominions; the ſame Night Major Smith an Iriſh Officer, who was no longer in the Service, was ſeiz'd at his Lodgings; and about Twelve a Clock Lieut. Colonel Blackney, with a Detachment of the Foot Guards, ſecur'd the Houſe of Count Gyllenbergh the Swediſh Miniſter, who had liv'd ſome Years in England, marry'd an Engliſh Woman, and pretended to be as much in the Intereſt of the Nation as any Native of the Kingdom. Not long after Major General Wade, attended by the Colonel, went and knock'd at the Door of that Miniſter, and being admitted, found him making up ſome Diſpatches: Having in few Words made him a Complement and acquainted him with his Commiſſion, to put a Guard upon his Perſon and to ſecure his Papers, he laid hold on ſuch as were on the Table, and demanded thoſe that were in his Scriptore. Gyllemberg expoſtulated with great Vehemence about the Law of Nations being violated in his Perſon. A vain abſurd Pretence, contrary to the Law and Practice of all Nations, to privilege any Perſon in Caſe of Treaſon againſt the Prince in whoſe Dominions he is found. This is ſufficiently diſcuſs'd by Monſieur Wicquefort, in his excellent Treatiſe, The Ambaſſador and his Functions. He afterwards deſir'd leave to ſend for the Marquis de Menteleone, Ambaſſador of Spain, to conſult with him how he ought to behave on ſuch an extraordinary Occaſion; but General Wade having poſitive Orders not to let him ſpeak to any Body, could not grant his Requeſt; and being refus'd the Keys of his Scriptore by the Count's Lady, he was oblig'd to cauſe it to be broke open. He found in it a great many Papers, which he ſeal'd up, took his Leave of the Swediſh Miniſter, and left a ſtrong Guard upon him.

A.D.1717

Mr. Cæſar and Sir Jacob Banks apprehended.

The ſame Morning Charles Cæſar, Eſq; Member of ſeveral Parliaments for Hertford, another Stickler for Sacheverel, the Utrecht Peace, the French Commerce, and Schiſm Bill, and in every Vote for High-Church, was apprehended on Suſpicion of being in Confederacy with Gyllemberg; as was alſo Sir Jacob Banks, a Swede too, once a Captain of a Man of War, who had marry'd into a Family in the Neighbourhood of Sir William Wyndham in Somerſetſhire, much ſuperior in Quality and Fortune to himſelf. This ſame Banks, preſented the Minehead Addreſs to Queen Anne, that Borough having been ſo weak as to chuſe him ſeveral times their Repreſentative; and then, as a farther Proof of their and his Weakneſs, they told the Queen (as has been before menti-on'd) That Kings are accountable to none but God, and that Subjects muſt obey notwithſtanding any Tyranny and Oppreſſion whatſoever. There were ſeveral Conjectures as to the means of the Diſcovery of this helliſh Conſpiracy; ſome pretended Notice of it came from France; others, that it was owing to an intercepted Letter from Count Gyllemberg to the Lord Duffus in the Tower; and others again, that the Lord Duffus accidentally reveal'd the Conſpiracy to an Engliſh Lord his Fellow Priſoner, who diſcover'd it to the Government, and thereby merited his Pardon. The King and his Miniſters had long before ſuſpected Gyllemberg's clandeſtine Practices; and their Suſpicions were not a little encreas'd upon the Publication of the Libel, entituled, An Engliſh Merchants Remarks upon a ſcandalous Paper publiſh'd in the Poſt-boy, under the Name of, A Memorial preſented to the Chancery of Sweden, by the Reſident of Great Britain; which Gyllemberg, who ſpoke and wrote Engliſh, was either the Author of himſelf, or directed the Writing of it, as himſelf owns in his Letters to Baron Gortz, of the 29th of September and 12th of October laſt. The ſeizing the Perſon of a Publick Miniſter, with his Papers, made a great Noiſe, and ſome Foreign Miniſters expreſt their Reſentments of it; but upon Information of the ſtate of the Caſe, by Letters from Mr. Secretary Stanhope and Mr. Secretary Methuen, to the ſeveral Foreign Miniſters of their reſpective Provinces, they were pretty well reconcil'd to the Proceedings of the Court, only the Marquis de Monteleone, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, whom, from the future Conduct of King Philip, might well be ſuſpected to have been in the Confidence of Count Gyllemberg, ſaid, in his Anſwer to Mr. Stanhope's Letter, "He was ſorry no "other way could be found out, for pre-"ſerving the Peace of His Majeſty's Dominions, "without arreſting the Perſon of a Publick "Miniſter, and ſeizing all his Papers, which "are the ſacred Repoſitories of the Secrets of "his Maſter; and in whatever manner theſe "two Facts may be underſtood, they ſeem "very ſenſibly to wound the Law of Nations." Which is ſo falſe, he muſt either be very ignorant of that Law and the Practice of all Nations, in the like Caſe of Gyllemberg's, or be capable of the greateſt Effronterie to ſay ſo much to the Miniſter of a Great King. The Court of France not long after did the ſame thing, with reſpect to the Prince de Clelamare Ambaſſador of Spain at Paris, who was ſuſpected of the like Treaſonable and Clandeſtine Practiſes againſt the Regent; and 'tis equally abſurd and ridiculous to pretend that a Foreign Miniſter who has firſt violated the Publick Faith by Treaſon againſt the Government, that Protects him, has afterwards a Title to the Benefit of that Faith which he has ſo violated. Baron Gortz, Miniſter and Favourite of the King of Sweden, was come as far as Calais in his way to England, to aſſiſt Gyllemberg in his traiterous Deſigns, but hearing that he was under Arreſt he return'd to Holland; Mr. Leathes, the Britiſh Reſident, repreſented to the Regents of that State, that Gortz, with his two Secretaries, Slambke and Guſtavus Gyllemberg, had for ſome time carried on a Correſpondence, and concerted Meaſures with the Engliſh Rebels in France, and ſeveral Perſons in England, for raiſing a Rebellion in His Majeſty's Dominions, to be ſupported by Foreign Force, upon which Repreſentation the Council of State paſt a Reſolution, that the ſaid Gortz and his two Secretaries ſhould be ſeiz'd. Gortz having ſome Intimation of it, kept cloſe wherever he came, and fled from one Place to another, being well hunted by proper Officers who were in purſuit of him, and at laſt took him at Arnheim in Gelderland; the Deputies of which Province wrote a Letter to the Magiſtrates of that Town, ordering them to cauſe the Baron to be kept in ſafe Cuſtody. Gortz was ſo far from denying the Treaſon, that he made his Brags that he was the Projector of it, and had actually provided 10000 Arms and other Neceſſaries for ſo noble and glorious an Enterpriſe, as he call'd it. The States of Holland were ſo ſenſible of the Danger the Peace of Europe in general, and of their Republick in particular, would have been brought into by the Execution of this horrid Conſpiracy, and the good Service that was done in ſeizing Gortz, his two Secretaries, and their Papers, rhat they paſt a Reſolution, not only to approve thoſe Proceedings, but to return the Council of State Thanks for the great Care they had taken in ſo important an Affair; which His Majeſty communicated to the Parliament February the 20th, in the following Paragraph of His moſt gracious Speech:

A.D.1717

"My Endeavours have not been wanting, "during your Receſs, to improve the happy "Proſpect which was in view, by entring into "ſuch Negotiations as I judg'd moſt conducing "to thoſe good Ends: And it is with Pleaſure "I can acquaint you, that many Defects in the "Treaties of Utrecht, which very nearly af-"fected the Trade, and even the Security of "theſe Kingdoms, have been remedied by ſub-"ſequent Conventions: The happy Conſe-"quence of which have very ſenſibly appear'd "by the flouriſhing Condition of our Trade "and Credit; by the Alliance lately concluded with France and the States General, "we are ſoon to be eas'd of all future Ap-"prehenſions from Dunkirk and Mardyke, the "Pretender is actually remov'd beyond the "Alps, his Adherents are depriv'd of all Hopes "of Support and Countenance from France, "and even the Aſſiſtance of that Crown is ſti-"pulated to us in Caſe of Exigency." Then His Majeſty was pleas'd to add, "Such is the "obſtinate and inveterate Rancour of a Faction "amongſt us, that it hath again prompted "them to animate and ſtir up Foreign Powers "to diſturb the Peace of their native Country, "they will chuſe rather to make Britain a

" Scene of Blood and Confusion, and to venture
" the putting this Kingdom under a Foreign
" Yoke, than give over their darling Design
" of imposing a Popish Pretender. I have " ordered to be laid before you Copies of " Letters which have pass'd between the Swe-
" dish Ministers on this Occasion, which con" tain a certain Account of the projected In" vasion; and promise Myself, from your
" experienc'd Zeal and Affection to my Person
" and Government, that you will come to
" such Resolutions as will enable me, by the " Blessing of God, to defeat all the Designs
" of Our Enemies against Us.

We shall see in the Sequel, how that miserable Faction impos'd on the Rashness of the King of Sweden and his Ministers, who, both Master and Men, were poor and in great want of Money, in so great Want that they were forc'd to rob the Spittle and take Money of the Pretender and the Jacobites.

After the Report of His Majesty's Speech Mr. Secretary Stanhope laid before the House of Commons Copies of Letters that past between Count Gyllemberg, Baron Gortz, Baron Sparr, and others; out of which I have taken the most essential Parts of their Contents.

Gyllemberg and Gortz's Letters.

Baron Sparr, the Swedish Ambassador at Paris, wrote to Gyllemberg, September 25, 1716, He was inform'd he had enter'd upon Business with some of the most topping Lords of the Pretender's Party; and he believ'd the King of Sweden would espouse the Interests of that Prince, or the Interests of the Prince of the Powers of the Air; to be reveng'd on his Britannick Majesty, for keeping what he had bought and paid for, the Dntchy of Bremen.

Gyllemberg to Gortz, the 12th of October: There is no Medium: Either Bremen or the Hanoverians must be sacrific'd: The latter is not so difficult, considering the general Discontent, 10000 Men will be sufficient. The Malecontents require but a Body of regular Troops, to which they may join themselves. We must have 15 or 20000 Arms, and Accoutrements for Horse; the Number mention'd afterwards 4000. Again, I have spoken with two of the Principals, who have assur'd me that there shall be 60000 l. Sterling, as soon as I shall shew them a Line from the King, with Assurance under his Hand, that he will assist them. They were in the Right, considering what Shifts they must be put to, to raise such a Sum; not to take two such insufficient Persons Words for it, as Gortz and Gyllemberg.

Gustavus, Brother to Gyllemberg, and Secretory to Gortz, writes his Brother from Paris, that Baron Gortz had receiv'd a Letter from the Duke of Ormond; in which that quondam Duke said, The King his Master (wretched Man! to be the Slave of a Creature, who came into the World no body knew how,) had order'd him to let Gortz know, that he expected shortly a Supply of Money, and wou'd remit 60000 l. to his Swedish Majesty, and begs him to look upon it as only a Token of what's to come after, if his Majesty of Sweden behaves to the liking of his Majesty of Avignon. Gortz, in his Letter of the 12th of November, tells Gyllemberg, He has actually open'd the Matter to the King. And in another, That the Business in hand had for some time been part of his Correspondence with Ambassador Sparr.

Gyllemberg, in his Letter of the 16th of December, gives Gortz an Account of a long Conversation he had with one of the Chiefs of the Jacobites, who gave him to understand, that the Conspirators expected something more than Gortz and Gyllemberg's Word for Assurance of Assistance from their Master; and among other Treasonable Matters, told Gyllemberg, 'Tis probable half the Army would be disbanded by the Parliament. Is it not plain from what Quarter and for what Reason the Clamour of disbanding came? When this was suggested, it was always pretended that the Talk of Invasion and Rebellion were Bugbears, rais'd on purpose to give a Colour to keep up a standing Army. This Chief of the Jacobites said farther, The maintaining of the Church of England must be a Topick in the King of Sweden's Manifesto. Don't you see to what vile Uses the Faction put the Sacred Name of the Church? And how much a Jest it is among themselves in their Privacies and Cabals? Gortz tells Gyllemberg in his Letter of the 8th of January, For the Rest our Intention was to transport 12000 Men, 8000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, of which 500 to be mounted. We were to carry with us a sufficient Train of Artillery Arms for 10 or 12000 Men more, with requisite Stores of Ammunition. That Gortz receiv'd some Money, which must needs come from the poor Jacobites as Drops of their Blood, is nam'd in these Letters, particularly in Gyllemberg's of the 18th of January, My Friend believ'd the Sum was 8000 l. but it was but 6500 l. which exactly answers that which has been paid to your Excellency, and which makes Part of the 20000 l. that has been remitted. Both Gortz and Gyllemberg labour the Money Point incessantly; and Gyllemberg was so much in want of it, that he duns the other for 60 l. towards printing his Pamphlets: But afterwards he got 4000 Crowns by Gortz's Means, which swept away a good Part of what the Jacobites had contributed for his Masters abandoning his Country once more in a Project more chimerical than that of the Conquest of the Russian Empire, of which having once dreamt, he never left off pursuing it, till, like Bajazet, he found himself shut up in a Turkish Cage at Bender. On reading these Letters Thomas Onslow, Esq; now Lord Onslow, made a short Speech, wherein he said, " The Com-
" mons ought to shew the highest Resentment
" and Indignation against the Traiterous Pra" ctices of the Swedish Ministers, who, in vi-
" olation of the publick Faith, and in Con-
" junction with the open Enemies to His Ma" jesty's Person and Government, had laid
" Schemes to excite a new Rebellion, to be sup" ported by a foreign Force; and concluded
" with a Motion for an Address." He was seconded by Sir John Brownlow, who said, " We " had no need of the King of Sweden to main" tain the English Liberties and support the " Church of England;" which in Gyllemberg and Gortz's Letter were hinted to be the Pretence of the intended Invasion. Mr. Hungerford took this Occasion to say, " He was sorry " to find a Member he had in his Eye, (mean" ing Mr. R. Walpole) was mention'd in the " Letters that had been read to the House; that " he had the Honour to defend him formerly,
" and he would be ready to do the like for
" the future." The Address of the House of Commons to His Majesty being agreed to, was presented to the King two Days after by the whole

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"WE, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and "loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual "and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, beg "leave to return your Majeſty our moſt hum"ble and hearty Thanks for your Majeſty's "moſt gracious Speech from the Throne, and "to congratulate your Majeſty on your ſafe "and happy Return to theſe your Dominions; "and on the prudent Adminiſtration of His "Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, under "your Majeſty; and the great Care he took of "the Peace and Security of the Kingdom du"ring your Majeſty's Abſence.

"We are ſenſible that the GROSS DEFECTS "and pernicious Conſequences of the late Trea"ty of Utrecht could not have been remedied, "but by your Majeſty's unwearied Applica"tion for the good of your Subjects, and by "that juſt Regard which is paid by Foreign "Potentates to your Majeſty's Wiſdom and "Integrity. It is with unſpeakable Satisfacti"on that we ſee your Majeſty's Endeavours "Succeſsful in ſuch Conventions as have al"ready given new Life to our Trade and "Credit; and particularly in the Treaty late"ly concluded with France, and the States "General; as your Majeſty has by this Trea"ty recover'd to us in ſo great a meaſure thoſe "Advantages which might have been expected "from a glorious and ſucceſsful War, and were Both Houſes aſſur'd His Majeſty, "they "would ſupport him againſt the deſign'd In"vaſions, and all his Enemies, both at Home "and Abroad."

We ſee here the Utrecht Peace declar'd by the moſt auguſt Aſſembly in the Univerſe, Treacherous and Diſhonourable. The Negotiators of it were in hearing, and if they could digeſt this Morſel we need not wonder that Oſtriches can digeſt Iron. Dr. John Robinſon, Biſhop of London, one of the Utrecht Plenipotentiaries, ſaid, He drew up himſelf the Inſtruments of that Treaty, and that, in his Opinion, it was as good a Peace as had been concluded for theſe forty Years paſt. But had England ever ſuch an Opportunity to inſiſt upon good Terms in Treaties with her Enemies, as that when the Reputation of her Arms and Counſels was higher than ever it had been ſince the Reigns of Edward III. and Henry V. but there was a worſe Foible than this in the Biſhop's Speech; he ſays true, he drew up the Inſtruments for that Treacherous and Diſhonourable Peace; and the Lord Coningsby obſerv'd in the Houſe, About two Years ago, when the Miniſters who made the late Peace were impeach'd, he declar'd, He was kept in the dark, and ſcarce knew any thing of what was doing at Utrecht.

The next Day after the two Houſes of Parliament had preſented their Addreſs, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with the Biſhops and Clergy of his Province, in Convocation aſſembled, preſented a very dutiful and loyal Addreſs to His Majeſty, much to the purpoſe of the other two Addreſſes, excepting in this Paragraph, "We have ſeen in the late Declarati"ons of ſome of theſe Men, who nevertheleſs "call themſelves by the Name of Proteſtants, "what we muſt look for ſhould a Popiſh Prince "ever ſit upon the Throne of theſe Kingdoms; "whilſt they allow us no better Character than "that of Schiſmaticks and Hereticks; of Men "cut off from the Communion of Chriſt's "Church, and all the Hopes of Salvation. "What can be expected from profeſs'd Papiſts, "who account no better of them, however "they may flatter themſelves, than they do "of us; but that both they and we, ſhall be "utterly deſtroy'd by them.

Convocation Addreſs.

At a Meeting of the Vice-Chancellor, and the Heads of the Colleges at Oxford, on another Occaſion at this Time, Dr. Dunſter, Warden of Wadham College, made a Motion for an Addreſs to His Majeſty, and was ſupported by Dr. Wynne, then Biſhop of St. Aſaph; and the Warden of Merton College. The Biſhop of Briſtol deſiring to know the Subject of the Addreſs, the Biſhop of St. Aſaph readily anſwer'd, They might Addreſs upon theſe three Heads: The Suppreſſion of the late unnatural Rebellion; The King's ſafe Return; The Favour ſhewn by the Court to the Univerſity in granting their late Requeſt, That the Effigies of the Devil, Pope and Pretender, might not be burnt, as the Officers intended, on the Day they heard of His Majeſty's Arrival. To put a ſtop to which, the Vice-Chancellor wrote a Letter to Mr. Secretary Methuen; and Mr. Pulteney, Secretary at War, by Direction of the Secretary of State, wrote an Anſwer to the Vice-Chancellor, importing in Subſtance, That in regard to the Loyal Univerſity of Oxford, Orders were ſent down thither to prevent the Burning of the ſaid Effigies. And this Anſwer was now read at this Meeting. However Dr. Smalridge, Biſhop of Briſtol and Dean of Chriſt-Church, reply'd, That the Rebellion had been ſuppreſs'd long before; That there would be no end of Addreſſing if they made one on ſuch an Occaſion, as the King's Return; That the late Favour they had receiv'd was over-ballanc'd by having a whole Regiment quarter'd upon them. Why did not the Biſhop put the Vice-Chancellor in mind of hinting this to the Secretary of State, when he beg'd that Favour? Dr. Charlotte urg'd, There was no Precedent for addreſſing a King that return'd from his German Dominions. A wretched Quibble! There was Precedents for addreſſing a King that return'd from beyond Sea. Dr. Gardiner was againſt addreſſing, to ſave Expences; Dr. Cobb and others made other Objections, and ſo the Motion for an Addreſs dropp'd. Let the Reader judge whether the Government had any Reaſon to order the Regiment then at Oxford to change Quarters.

A.D. 1717 on that Learned Body, who say in their Address, among other Things, with great Truth and Eloquence,

A loyal Address from Cambridge.

"Permit us, Great Sir, with the utmost Sincerity, to profess, that our Principles animate us with a stedfast Loyalty to your sacred Majesty, our only Rightful and Lawful Sovereign; that they imprint on our Minds the Obligations we are under of adhering firmly to our excellent Constitution in Church and State; of which your Majesty is the great Defender; that they inspire us with a hearty Concern for the Welfare of our Country, the Interest of which you have so gloriously advanc'd; and an universal good Will towards all our Fellow-Subjects, of whom you are the common Father." Now read again what Bishop Smalridge, Dr. Charlette, Dr. Gardiner, Dr. Cobb, &c. of Oxford said against any Address to His Majesty at His Return from Abroad.

Dr. Calamy, introduced by Mr. Secretary Stanhope, presented to His Majesty the Address of the dissenting Ministers, which being of some Length, I shall only insert part of it.

Address of the dissenting Ministers.

"We think it the particular Honour of the Protestant Dissenters, that their strict Adherence to the Interest of your Illustrious Family, before your Majesty's Accession, and their Loyalty to it since, have drawn upon them so much of the Fury of their Fellow-Subjects; we are not conscious what else could render us obnoxious to them: Our Principles being as we hope the most friendly to Mankind, and amounting to no more than those of a general Toleration to all peaceable Subjects, universal Love and Charity for all Christians, and to act always in Matters of Religion, as God shall give us Light into his Will about them.

"We do not so much as expect or desire any thing that ought to give any one the least Disturbance; we only wish, that under your Majesty, as the common Father of all your loyal People, those of our Persuasion might not want Capacity, as we hope your Majesty will find they never want an Inclination, to promote the true Interest of the Protestant Religion, and of their Country."

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for your dutiful and affectionate Address.

"I am fully convinc'd of the Loyalty and Zeal of the Protestant Dissenters." Compare the Moderation and Meekness of this Address with the Spirit of High-Church and Torism, as it reigns in that seditious and scandalous Libel, intitul'd The Case of Schism in the Church of England; for which Laurence Howel, a Jacobite Priest, was indicted the last Day of February. All the Church of England Divines are there represented as Schismaticks, and excommunicated Ipso Facto. It is said, that "whosoever went to the Parish Church, and perform'd holy Duties with any of them, their Prayers, Sacraments and holy Duties, were all Sins. That none were of the true Church of England, but the Nonjurors; that none are true Ministers but they that have their Ordinations from true Bishops; and none were true Bishops but the Pretender's, &c. The Instrument of his Ordination was read in Court, signed GEORGIUS HICKES. Howel was found guilty, fin'd 500 l. and a Year's Imprisonment, to lie in Goal till the Fine was paid; to find four Sureties of 500 l. each, and himself bound in 1000 l. for his good Behaviour during Life; and to be twice whipp'd: Tho' the bloody whipping of Mr. Johnson was such an execrable Barbarity, that the future Miseries of all that were concern'd in it could not attone for; yet this impudent Wretch, deserv'd at least the hundredth Part of the Pains inflicted on that good Man. Howel had the Impudence to ask when Sentence was past upon him, If they would whip a Clergyman? Ay, and hang a Clergyman, if he is guilty of the Crime that's punish'd with Death. The Court answer'd, They paid no Deference to his Cloth, because he was a Disgrace to it, and had no Right to wear it; and they did not look upon him as a Clergyman, in that he had produced no Proof of his Ordination, but from Dr. Hickes, which was illegal, and not according to the Constitution of this Kingdom, which knows no such Bishop. He behav'd himself contemptuously to the Court, who order'd the Hangman to strip him of his Parson's Gown. But when the Day drew near upon which he was to be lash'd, his stout Heart came down, and he drew up an humble Petition to His Majesty, to implore His Royal Clemency; which had the Success that might have been expected from His Majesty's Goodness and Compassion, too often exercis'd towards such Criminals against His Person and Government: The corporal Punishment was remitted, which if it had been inflicted, would have been a better Lesson to Earbery, and other Nonjuring Priests, than any Lectures of Law and Reason.

The glorious Things His Majesty had done by the Negotiations of his Ministers abroad, in remedying the many gross Defects of the scandalous Treaty of Utrecht, and particularly the procuring the entire Demolition of Dunkirk, and even of the new Works of Mardyke; and removing these Hardships which affected our Trade, were in Effect to recover for us the Fruits of a victorious ten Years War, which the late treacherous Ministers had sacrific'd for a Peace, that serv'd only their own base and treasonable Purposes. The Alliance His Majesty refers to in his Speech, was the new Tripple League, a defensive Alliance between Great Britain, France, and the States General; of which we shall have Occasion to speak hereafter, it being the same that was afterwards by the Emperor's acceding to it call'd the Quadruple Alliance. This Treaty which had been some time on the Anvil, is spoken of in one of Gyllemberg's Letters to Gortz, dated October the 12th; but it shews that he was a superficial Negotiator, of a Genius adapted only to such clandestine and desperate Schemes, as was that of the King of Sweden's Knight Errantry to assist the distrest Chevalier of St. George, by running away from his own Distresses at home. 'Tis a Jest only, says Gyllemberg in that Letter, that Count Volkra, the Imperial Ambassador, told Mr. Petkum that his Master would enter into that Alliance: For the Emperor did actually enter into it; and the Count himself is now the only Jest that we meet with in the Matter.

His Majesty recovers the Fruits of a victorious ten Years War.

On the 27th of February, the King gave the Royal Assent to an Act to authorize His Majesty to prohibit Commerce with Sweden, during such time as His Majesty shall think it necessary for the Safety and Peace of these Kingdoms. When that Bill was first mov'd in the House of

The Pretender ſent from Avignon.

In the beginning of February Monſieur Iberville, Envoy Extraordinary from the moſt Chriſtian King, notify'd to Mr. Secretary Stanhope, That the Pretender left Avignon the 6th of February New Stile, in order to paſs the Mountains and ſhelter himſelf in the Pope's Territories. And after he was got on the other ſide of the Alps, Gyllemberg continued his Caballing with the Jacobites, who had been ſuch Fools as, out of the little they had to ſpare, punctually to execute what was agreed on with Gortz, as far as related to the Money, which was to be 300000 Crowns in all; and then Gyllemberg gives Gortz to underſtand 'tis time he ſhould have Part of it; I beg of you, for God's ſake, to order Matters ſo that I may be eas'd of the Care where to find Subſiſtence. A parcel of rare Adventurers theſe, to reduce Three Kingdoms that had ſo lately reduc'd the moſt exorbitant Power in the World.

We ſhall find in the Sequel, that the Lord Coningsby makes but very ill Returns for His Majeſty's great Favours to him at this time in creating his Daughter Margaret, Viſcounteſs Coningsby of Hampton-Court in the County of Hereford, the Dignity to deſcend to her Heirs Male.

In more ſerious Pieces if he had not had great Helps he cou'd not have ſupported his Character ſo long as he did; and when thoſe Helps left him, it dropp'd in a very great Degree. His Objections (ſays the Annaliſt) were not thought much to the Purpoſe; and the Houſe came to ſeveral Reſolutions about the publick Debts, agreeable to what had three Days before been concerted in Council at St. James's; and a Bill was order'd to be brought in thereupon by Mr. Farrer Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means; Mr. *R. The Commons having paſt the Mutiny and Deſertion Bill and ſent it to the Lords, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Abingdon, the Earl of Angleſey, the Lord Harcourt, the Lord Trevor and others, made ſome Objections to it, but were anſwer'd by the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Devonſhire, the Duke of Newcaſtle, the Earl of Sunderland and ſome other Peers, whoſe Arguments in favour of the Army muſt certainly have a very great Weight, after the treaſonable Letters of Gyllemberg and Gortz had been juſt read, diſcovering a Conſpiracy for a foreign Invaſion.

His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the mutiny and deſertion Bill, March 25th; the next Day the Houſe of Commons receiv'd a Petition from Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Francis Viſcount Montacute, Hugh Lord Clifford, Charles Lord Dormer, James Lord Waldgrave, Walter Lord Aſton, Sir William Goring, Sir William Gage, William Plowden, William Stafford, Henry Charles Howard, Edward Blount, and Joſeph Edward Gage, the leaſt exceptionable Perſons among the Popiſh Nobility and Gentry, praying that Leave be given to bring in a Bill for explaining the Act of the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, entituled An Act to oblige Papiſts to regiſter their Names and real Eſtates; which was order'd accordingly. On the 28th of March Mr. Secretary Stanhope preſented to the Houſe The Treaties made with the Biſhop of Munſter, the Duke of Saxe Gotha, and others, for putting ſix Battalions of their Troops into His Majeſty's Service, to ſupply the Place of ſuch as during the late Rebellion were drawn from the Gariſons of the States General to aſſiſt His Majeſty. 'Twas generally believ'd that theſe Treaties had been call'd for by ſome Gentlemen with a Deſign to bring a Cenſure upon ſome German Miniſters, and theſe made a Motion for an Addreſs to have the Inſtructions given to His Majeſty's Miniſters who tranſacted thoſe Treaties laid before the Houſe; but the Queſtion being put, it paſt in the Negative by a Majority of 165 Votes againſt 28.

This Fleet Sail'd towards Gottenbourg at the latter end of March, and after that no body was in any Pain about the King of Sweden's Dream of Invading Britain.

The Character of the late Duke of Wharton, in the latter Part of his Life, will appear the more wicked and extravagant, by comparing it with his Sentiments in the former Part of it, when he introduc'd the Corporation of Wycomb, and the Inhabitants of Aileſbury in Buckinghamſhire, with their Addreſſes; he was then only Marquis of Wharton, and how could he forget the Truths which were preſented to the King by himſelf in a manner, himſelf introducing the Preſenters. In the Wycomb Addreſs it is ſaid:

Wycomb Addreſs.

"We your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal "Subjects beg leave to approach your Royal "Perſon with Hearts full of Gratitude to Al- "mighty God for your Majeſty's happy Re- "turn into your Domininns.

"The wiſe and irreproachable Conduct of "His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, "during your Majeſty's Abſence, had been "ſufficient to extinguiſh the Spirit of Rebel- "bellion amongſt us, and ſettling every thing "on a ſure and laſting Foundation, were not "the obdurate Malice of our Enemies ſuch as "no Lenity can conquer, nor Reaſon ſubdue; "which plainly appears by their forming a "Deſign to invade us with a foreign Power, "and make their Country a Prey to an ambiti- "ous cruel Enemy, notwithſtanding the Hap- "pineſs they might enjoy under your Majeſty's "moſt auſpicious Government, which, like the "Sun, extends its happy Influence alike to "the juſt and unjuſt, &c. *A.D.*1717

"We doubt not but that all Proteſtants will, "by the happy Influences of your Majeſty's "Adminiſtration, be united; and that Part "of them who, at preſent, by Law are ex- "cluded, put upon an equal Foot with their "Fellow Subjects; that ſo the Hands of the "Church of England may be ſtrengthned "againſt the Papiſts and their wicked Adhe- "rents. Againſt the Teſt.

In the Addreſs from Aileſbury it is ſaid:

"Amongſt the many Proofs your Majeſty Ailesbury "hath given of your tender Love to your Addreſs. "People, there is no one hath a juſter Pretence "to the Applauſe and Thanks of All, than "the Appointing His Royal Highneſs the "Prince of Wales to be Guardian of the "Realm in your Majeſty's Abſence, by whoſe "Prudence and Juſtice the Hopes of our Ene- "mies have been diſappointed, and the Nation "ſettled in a peaceable and flouriſhing State, "even before the late Unnatural Rebellion "was over in the remoteſt Parts of your Ma- "jeſty's Dominions.

"As the uniting the Proteſtants of theſe Againſt Teſt upon Proteſtant Diſſenters. "Kingdoms would be the moſt likely way to "break the Meaſures and defeat the Councils "of our Adverſaries, ſo we doubt not but "that (when your Majeſty and the Parliament "in their great Wiſdoms ſhall think it proper) "all the Obſtructions (which a great Part of "our Fellow Subjects lie under by the Malice "of a few ILL DESIGNING Men, who "cloak their Treaſons under the ſpecious "Pretence of Zeal for the Church) will ef- "fectually be remov'd.

This ſober way of Thinking is a great Rebuke to ſuch as have enter'd their Proteſt againſt Removing theſe Obſtructions. Some time in the laſt Month about 200 Members of the Houſe of Commons had a Meeting at the Roſe Tavern near Temple-Bar, to conſult about the Repeal of the Occaſional Conformity Act, one of the bleſſed Effects of the Wildfire Counſels in the late Reign. The Lord Moleſworth, Mr. Jeſſop, Sir Richard Steele, and ſome other eminent Gentlemen made Speeches, wherein they ſhew'd the Reaſonableneſs and Juſtice of eaſing the Diſſenters of their Hardſhips, chiefly on account of their Zeal and Affection for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and of putting them in a Capacity to ſerve their King and Country, urging, That they had Reaſon to believe that ſuch a Bill would be very acceptable to His Majeſty. The Majority of the Aſſembly inclin'd to this Opinion; but Mr. Tuffnel, an Ingenious Gentleman, who having conſulted with a Perſon in a high Poſt, knew that the Court were apprehenſive, that ſuch a Bill would meet with ſtrong Oppoſition, made a Speech, wherein, among other things, he ſaid, "That as for his "Part he had already ſo often declar'd againſt "the Occaſional Act, that he hop'd no body "would ſuſpect him of entertaining any Doubt "concerning the Repeal; for beſides the Reaſo- "nableneſs and Juſtice of it, they ought out "of Gratitude to take off a Mark of Infamy "which the Enemies of the Proteſtant Succeſſi- "on had put on them, who appear'd moſt

A.D. 1717 " zealous for it. But that in his Opinion the " Queſtion now before them was not whether " the Repeal of the ſaid Act was Reaſonable " and Juſt; for he hop'd the whole Aſſembly " were ſatisfy'd as to that; but whether the " ſame were practicable at this Juncture? " and, whether the bringing of it in ought " not to be put off till a more favourable " Opportunity?" Several Members were of a contrary Opinion, but Mr. Secretary Stanhope having declared for it, the Aſſembly adjourn'd; and tho' the Debate was reſum'd a Week after, the Matter took not effect at this time.

We have made mention of the Oxford Riot which came under Conſideration of the Houſe of Lords on the 25th of March, when the Houſes were upon the Mutiny and Deſertion Bill; a Noble Peer complain'd of the Licentiouſneſs of the Army, and of the Diſorders committed by the Soldiery, particularly at Oxford, and mov'd, that before they paſt a Bill in their Favour they ſhould inquire into the Riot which happen'd in that City on the Prince of Wales's Birthday, which the Whig Lords readily conſented to, but ſome of the other ſide, who were apprehenſive that the Univerſity would get no Credit by ſuch an Examination, endeavour'd to wave it: however, upon the Queſtion it was carried in the Affirmative for an Addreſs that the Papers relating to that Affair might be laid before the Houſe; The firſt Paper we meet with is a Letter from Dr. John Baron Head of Baliol College Vice-Chancellor, and Richard Wiſe, Eſq; the Mayor, aſſerting, That the Soldiers were encourag'd to break the Windows of the Inhabitants without any Provocation given. Than which nothing can be falſer, if what Major d' Offranville wrote to the Lord Townſhend, and confirm'd by an Affidavit be true. The Major having given his Lordſhip an Account of the Regiment's firing three Rounds, not without being inſulted by the Gownmen and Mob, with the Cry of, Down with the Roundheads, he adds, So I diſmiſt the Regiment, myſelf and moſt of the Officers repair'd to the Star-Inn, with ſome honeſt Gentlemen of the Conſtitution Club, where I ordered a Bonfire to be made. We all agreed to drink about the Fire, His Majeſty's Health, the Prince, Princeſs and Royal Family, the pious Memory of King William, the Duke of Marlborough, your Lordſhips, &c. After which we retir'd into the Houſe; and that very Moment our Windows were broke with Stones. The Soldiers of the Regiment that were about the Fire perceiving our Houſe thus Affronted, and ſeeing the Stones coming from the Houſe of an Ironmonger, arm'd themſelves with Stones and broke ſome of the Windows; ſeveral Gentlemen of the Conſtitution Club then in Company with us, hearing the Diſturbance, deſir'd me to go out and appeaſe them, and at my Appearance all the Soldiers immediately ceas'd, &c. Thus it is very plain that the Rabble of Townſmen and College-men began the Uproar with the Cry of, Down with the Roundheads; by which thoſe ſtupids meant the Friends to the Government; that Major d' Offranville and the Officers went to the Star-Inn Bonfire, drank ſeveral loyal Healths about it, and retir'd to their Room to compleat the Mirth of the Day with a Bottle of Wine at Night; and that they were ſcarce ſettled in their Room before a Volley of Stones were thrown at their Windows from Hurſt's the Ironmonger, which was repeated again after that. This rais'd (and very juſtly too) the Indignation of the Soldiers, who did break ſome Windows; and, in truth, if they had not ſo done, they would themſelves have deſerv'd to have had their Heads broke. What a doleful Account of this Riot did Thom. Rowney, Eſq; one of the Oxford Members, write in a Letter to Mr. Secretary Methuen, The very Peace and Quiet of the City are broke and diſturb'd, by thoſe that are ſent hither to preſerve both; the very Houſes of the Inhabitants are begun to be demoliſh'd by the Command of the Major, Cujus contrarium verum eſt. I ſhould wonder this Man could write ſuch notorious Contradictions to Affidavits, if I did not conſider who he was and where he wrote his Letter. Tumults rais'd by the Officers, and Soldiers running up and down the Streets with Swords drawn, ſays the Writer of the Letter; but not one Word of the Tumult's being rais'd by Stones being flung from Hurſt's Houſe, nor of a Mob and Gownſmen with Swords drawn in the Lane over againſt the Star Inn, as was ſworn by Mr. John Hamilton, a Lieutenant in the Regiment; but beſides the Officers and Soldiers who made Affidavits proving the Falſhoods in the Letters of Complaint ſent to the Secretaries of State, there were ſeveral worthy Members of the Univerſity, who depos'd the ſame Things, or Things to the ſame Effect, as were contain'd in the Depoſitions of the Major, Captain, and Lieutenant of the Regiment, and ſeveral of the Centinels; as Mr. Richard Meadowcourt, Mr. Thomas Herne, Mr. John Gilbert, Mr. John Ruſſel, Dr. John Martin, Fellows of Merton College; Mr. George Ingram, Fellow of Oriel College; Mr. John Baker Fellow of Wadham College. The Lords of the Council having taken into Conſideration the Depoſitions on both Sides, made the following Report to His Royal Highneſs the Prince.

The Oxford Riot before the Houſe of Peers.

The Loras of the Council juſtify the Major and the Soldiers.

" The Lords are of Opinion, that the Heads of " the Univerſity and Mayor of the City, neg- " lected to make any publick Rejoycings on " the Prince's Birth-day: But ſome of the Col- " legiates with the Officers, being met to cele- " brate the ſaid Day, the Houſe where they " were was aſſaulted, and the Windows were " broken by the Rabble, which was the begin- " ning and Occaſion of the Riots that enſu'd, " as well from the Soldiers as the Scholars and " Townſmen; and that the Conduct of the " Major ſeems well juſtifi'd by the Affidavits " produc'd on his Part." By this juſt, wiſe, and equal Deciſion of the Affair, we may be confirm'd in our Opinion of the Ingenuity and Modeſty of the Vice-Chancellor Dr. John Baron, and their Repreſentative Mr. Thomas Rowney. The Vice-Chancellor and another worſhipful Perſon Richard Wiſe Mr. Mayor of Oxford, are ſo modeſt and ingenuous as to ſay, " The Soldiers were encourag'd to break Win- " dows without any Provocation;" and Thomas Rowney, Eſq; with ſtill more Ingenuity and Modeſty aſſerts, " The very Houſes of the " Inhabitants were begun to be demoliſh'd by " the Command of the Major." The Depoſitions for the Townſmen and for the Soldiers being read in the Houſe of Lords, the Earl of Clarendon in the Chair, Dr. George Smalridge Biſhop of Briſtol, Sir William Dawes Bart. Archbiſhop of York, Dr. Francis Gaſtrel Biſhop of Cheſter, and Dr. Francis Atterbury Biſhop of Rocheſter: Men are beſt known by their

A.D. 1717 Company, endeavour'd to juſtify the Univerſity; as did alſo the Lord North and Grey, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord Harcourt, the Lord Trevor, and ſome others. What the Lord Coningsby ſaid in Anſwer to the Biſhops, gives us the Contents of what they themſelves ſaid, "That he knew the Uſage of the "Univerſity to have been otherwiſe than was "repreſented; that in the Reign of King "Charles II. and King James II. they had "expreſt their Loyalty in an extraordinary "Manner, and had made ſuch great Advances "to countenance an unlimited Power in the "Prince, that if Providence had not miracu-"louſly interpos'd, they had as far as in them "lay, deſtroy'd the Liberties of their Coun-"try." This noble Lord knew them well, and till they clear themſelves of the Charge his Lordſhip brings againſt them, I ſhall be very little concern'd at their charging me with Partiality. The Lord Chancellor Cowper, the Duke of Kingſton, the Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Parker, the Lord Cadogan, and ſome others, ſpoke on the ſame Side, obſerving in general, "That the Diſreſpect to the Prince Regent, "charg'd upon the Univerſity of Oxon, was "manifeſt; becauſe the Major of the Regiment "did about ten a-Clock in the Morning go to "the Mayor, and complain'd that he had "ſhew'd no Regard to His Royal Higeneſs's "Birth-day, by ringing the Bells; to which "the Mayor return'd a ſhuff'ling Anſwer, "pretending he did not know it to be the "Prince Regent's Birth-day: That upon this "the Major told him, he would draw out the "Regiment to celebrate the ſaid Day with pro-"per Rejoycings; which he did accordingly: "But that the Mayor inſtead of joining in the "ſaid Rejoycings, with a great Mob after him "fill'd up the publick Street, and ſome of his "Attendants inſulted the Soldiers on their "March, and gave them opprobrious Lan-"guage; that they proceeded ſo far in their "Inſults, as to throw Dirt and Stones at the "Soldiers; and even attempted to diſarm ſome "of them, &c." Upon the whole, it was reſolv'd by a Majority of 65 Voices againſt 33, "That "the Lords of the Committee of Council to "whom the Papers relating to the Riots at "Oxford were referr'd, had ſufficient Grounds "to come to the Reſolution reported to His "Royal Highneſs, &c." What Grounds then had Dr. John Baron, Mr. Richard Wiſe, and Mr. Thomas Rowney, the Vice-Chancellor, the Mayor, and the Repreſentative, to write as they did to the Secretaries of State? In the mean time the Cloud gather'd ſtill in the North; and the King ſent a Meſſage to the Commons by Mr. Secretary Stanhope for a Supply to enable His Majeſty to make good ſuch Meaſures as ſhould be early concerted with other Princes and States, as may prevent the preſent Danger from Sweden, and as far as is poſſible the like Apprehenſions for the future. Mr. Shippen and Mr. Hungerford made Harangues againſt the Meſſage; ſo did Gilfred Lawſon, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for Cumberland; William Grimſton, Eſq; Burgeſs for St. Albans; and other Members in the true Intereſt of their Country: But what was moſt taken notice of was the Silence of Robert Walpole, Eſq; on this Occaſion. His Brother Horatio Walpole, Eſq; Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq; and other Members, back'd Mr. Stanhope's Motion; and Sir Gilbert Heathcote was the beſt Judge of the Neceſſity of making Proviſion againſt any Attempt from Sweden, he having been long acquainted with the Trade of it, which was extreamly interrupted of late by the Depredations of the Swedes, who took Ships from the Subjects of Great Britain to the Value of 65000*l.* in the late Queen's Time, and in the preſent King's continued their Captures without Controul, as appear'd by the Petition of the Muſcovite Company, whoſe Loſſes amounted to 45000*l.* the chief Sufferers were Sir Randolph Knipe, Mr. Samuel Holden, Mr. George Morley, Mr. Richard Norris, Mr. George Aſtell, Mr. Richard Crowle, Mr. Philip Niſbet, Mr. Ralph Robinſon, Mr. Richard Cambridge, Mr. Bryan Benſon, Mr. James Church, Mr. Joſias Wadſworth, jun. Merchants of London, Liverpool, Hull, &c. The Neceſſity of a Supply for this Service was farther explain'd by Mr. Craggs jun. Mr. Aiſlabie and ſeveral others; and farther oppos'd by Lord Guernſey, Mr. Hutchinſon, Mr. Herne and Mr. Ward; who cloſ'd what they had to ſay againſt it with a Motion for an Addreſs, to be acquainted with the Nature of the Engagements His Majeſty would enter into; and the Sum requiſite to make them good. Mr. Stanhope and ſome other Members anſwer'd, in Subſtance, That the Diſcovery of the late Conſpiracy carried on by the Swediſh Miniſters, in Conjunction with the Diſcontented Party at Home, ſufficiently evinc'd the neceſſity of a Standing Army in Great Britain. That the Treaty of Triple Alliance ſeem'd intended to ſecure us againſt any Danger on the Part of France; but that it was to be obſerv'd, that the ſaid Treaty had met with ſo great Oppoſition at the French Court, that had not the Regent ſtickled ſtrenuouſly for it, the ſame would have miſcarried; therefore in good Policy we ought not to depend on that Treaty any longer that it ſhould be the Intereſt of France to obſerve it. To the motion for an Addreſs it was anſwer'd That the ſame would be injurious to the King's Prerogative of entering into ſuch Alliances as His Majeſty thinks neceſſary for the good and ſecurity of his Dominions, without communicating the ſame to his Parliament, which Prerogative was grounded on very good Reaſons, for if the Crown was obliged to impart the Secret of Affairs to ſo great a number of Perſons, the moſt important Negotiations might thereby miſcarry.

Sir Gilbert Heathcote mention'd the great Loſſes ſuſtain'd by the Swedes taking Britiſh Ships, and in the Concluſion ſaid, 'That the 'King of Sweden having ſeveral times refus'd 'to make Satisfaction for the ſame; and, on the 'contrary, his Miniſters having endeavoured 'to raiſe a new Rebellion in His Majeſty's Do-'minions, there was ground to declare War a-'gainſt him." We muſt now Copy the Annals: 'On the other hand, to the great Surprize 'of the generality of the Aſſembly, Mr. Speaker 'and John Smith, Eſq; one of the Tellers 'of the Exchequer, tho' both eminently well-'affected to the preſent happy Settlement were 'yet of a contrary Opinion, ſaying, They were 'not againſt a Supply, but againſt the De-'manding and Granting of it in ſuch an Un-'parliamentary manner. And Mr. Speaker pro-'pos'd, that Part of the Army ſhould be dis-'banded, and the Money ſav'd, apply'd towards 'making good ſuch new Engagements as were 'thought neceſſary to be enter'd into:" But Lieutenant-General Mordaunt and other Members bers ſhew'd how unſafe and impolitick it would be at this Juncture to diſband any of the Troops. Mr. George Caſwall a Banker in Lombard-ſtreet, clos'd the Debate with a ſhort ſmart Speech, which was much applauded: That for his own Part, he had rather pay others for fighting than fight himſelf; that he thought it more Advantagious to Great Britain to carry the War abroad and enjoy Peace at home, in order to improve our Trade; and that as the employing Foreigners againſt Sweden would be a far leſs Expence than National Troops, he was for complying with His Majeſty's Meſſage,

Mr. Caſwall's ſmart Speech.

When this Debate was reſum'd the next Day, April 9. Mr. Hampden ſaid, as to the Unparliamentary and unpreſidented manner of aſking for a Supply, he remember'd, that about ten or eleven Years before a great Man in that Houſe made a Motion for providing for about 900000 l. which the Government had expended, without laying an Eſtimate before the Commons.

Mr. Hampden's Speech, and Mr. Speaker's Anſwer.

Mr. Speaker (the Perſon meant) ſaid, He wonder'd that Gentleman would bring in as a Precedent a Buſineſs that was tranſacted ſo many Years ago, and which is not parallel to the preſent Caſe. Mr. Hampden reply'd, I do not thereby intend to reflect upon Mr. Speaker, ſince I had the Honour to vote with him upon that Occaſion. It is obvious, that on ſome Account and by ſome Management or other, there was a Miſunderſtanding among the King's beſt Friends and Servants, and that the Enemies of both the King and his Friends threw their Weight into one of the Scales to do Miſchief; whereas the Deſign of ſome that differ'd in this Point was the Reverſe of any ſuch View.

The Queſtion for the Supply abovemention'd was carried in the Affirmative by a Majority of 4 Voices only, 153 againſt 149. Upon this the Annaliſt remarks, 'This hard got Succeſs which 'in reality was rather a Defeat than a Victory, 'could not but give the King ſome Uneaſineſs; 'and it being plain that the great Oppoſition 'which the Court found upon this Occaſion in 'the Houſe of Commons, mainly proceeded 'from a Party of which the Lord V——T——d 'was ſaid to be the Head, and which was by 'ſome repreſented as tending not only to make 'a Fatal Diſtinction among His Majeſty's Ser-'vants, but even to carry things to greater Ex-'tremities, His Majeſty reſolv'd to break that 'growing Knot, which at firſt was thought 'might be done by the Removal of the Perſon 'who was the Center of their Union. Here-'upon, that very Evening, Mr. Secretary Stan-'hope wrote a Letter to my Lord Townſhend, 'acquainting his Lordſhip, that His Majeſty 'return'd him Thanks for his paſt Services, 'but that His Majeſty had no farther occaſion 'for him, as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. 'This Blow being ſtruck, Mr. Robert Walpole 'reſolv'd to prevent that which he imagin'd 'would infallibly be level'd next againſt him; 'and accordingly, on the 10th of April in the 'Morning, he waited upon His Majeſty to 'reſign his Places of Firſt Lord Commiſſioner 'of the Treaſury and Chancellor of the Ex-'chequer. The King ſhew'd great Regret to 'part with ſo able a Servant, and, with many 'kind Expreſſions, endeavour'd to perſwade 'him to keep his Poſt; but tho' Mr. Walpole, 'melting with generous Sorrow, vow'd never 'to ſwerve from his bounden Duty to ſo good 'and ſo gracious a Maſter, yet he at the ſame 'time repreſented, how impoſſible it was for 'him to ſerve His Majeſty in the preſent Cir-'cumſtances of Affairs. Mr. Secretary Me-'thuen, and Mr. Pulteney Secretary at War, 'follow'd Mr. Walpole's Example, and the 'ſame Morning reſign'd their Places; four 'Days after the Earl of Orford reſign'd his 'Place of Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Ad-'miralty, as did George Dodington, Eſq; as 'one of the Lords of the ſame Commiſſion; 'and three Days after the Duke of Devonſhire 'reſign'd his Place of Lord Preſident of the 'Council. At which (ſays our Author) all 'the Well-affected were no leſs concern'd than 'ſurpriz'd, being apprehenſive that the Diviſi-'on which appear'd amongſt His Majeſty's Ser-'vants might be attended with fatal Conſe-'quences.

On the 12th of April there was a freſh Debate about the Supply againſt Sweden; Mr. P—— began it, and we ſhall ſee what a Spirit he had for the Deſtruction of Miniſters by his Speech. 'That as for his part he had not yet 'ſaid any thing in this matter, becauſe he 'thought it inconſiſtent with Decency, to op-'poſe a Motion that came from Court; that 'he had the Honour to be His Majeſty's imme-'diate Servant, but that having reſign'd his 'Place, that he might act with the Freedom 'becoming an Engliſhman, he could not forbear 'declaring againſt granting a Supply in a man-'ner altogether unparliamentary and unprece-'dented: That he could not perſuade himſelf 'that any Engliſhman advis'd His Majeſty to 'ſend ſuch a Meſſage; but he doubted not but 'the Reſolutions of a Britiſh Parliament would 'make a German Miniſtry TREMBLE." The Lord F—— ſeconded Mr. P—— I am as ſenſible as any one can be of the meanneſs of this way of Writing by Initials in Hiſtory, and do as much deſpiſe it; but there is not Generoſity, nor Genius, nor Vertue enough in the Age, to bear Truths without Guard or Diſguiſe. Mr. Stanhope anſwer'd what was ſaid about Bremen and Verden, and the Con-duct of Great Britain with reſpect to the Czar. But beſides Exceptions to theſe Things, Mr. John Smith charg'd the Miniſtry with ſeveral Miſtakes; 'As the not iſſuing a Proclamation 'of Pardon at the breaking out of the Rebelli-'on; the driving People to Deſpair after the 'Rebellion was ſuppreſt; the not paſſing an 'Act of Grace; the forming Parties and Cabals 'for repealing the Occaſional Act." Mr. John Smith's Speech was anſwer'd by Mr. Barrington Shute, now Lord Barrington, who had no difficult Task upon his Hands. As to what related to the Occaſional Act, he ſaid, 'nothing 'in his Opinion was either more juſt or reaſo-'nable; and he could not but wonder that a 'Gentleman who had been turn'd out of his 'Employment in the late Reign, and reſtor'd 'ſince the King's coming to the Crown, ſhould 'account it a Miſtake on the one hand, not to 'grant an Indemnity to His Majeſty's declar'd Diſſenter-'Enemies, and a Miſtake on the other hand, 'to make His Majeſty's undoubted Friends 'eaſy." William Yong, Eſq; a young Gen-tleman, who by his good Senſe and eloquent Expreſſion had early gain'd Attention in that Aſſembly, ſaid to this Effect, 'That ſome Days 'before he had been againſt the Motion for 'granting a Supply upon the King's Meſſage, 'becauſe he thought it unparliamentary; and 'it was then his Opinion to addreſs the King 'to enter into ſuch Engagements as His Majeſty 'ſhould

'ſhould think proper; and that the Commons 'would make good the ſame: But that ſince 'the Majority of the Houſe had determin'd to 'grant a Supply, they had brought themſelves 'to this Dilemma; and it is ſtrange ſo plain a 'Reaſon had not hinder'd the Debate, either to 'grant what was ask'd neceſſary for the Service, 'or to tell the King that that Service muſt re-'main unperform'd, which they had in a man-'ner determin'd to be neceſſary by granting a 'Supply." This Speech had great Weight, and was back'd by Sir John Brownlow and Mr. Gould a Swediſh Merchant. Mr. Robert Walpole ſaid, among other Things, 'That having 'already ſpoken for the Supply, he would 'not refuſe the Court his Vote; and the Sum 'being named 250000 l. he was for granting 'it." Hereupon I copy the Annals, moſt of the Tory Members who were divided among themſelves, as to the Sum, went out of the Houſe; and ſo it was carryed without dividing in the Committee, and in the whole Houſe, by a Majority of 153 Votes againſt 132. The next Day April the 13th, His Majeſty was pleas'd to appoint Charles Earl of Sunderland to be one of the Principal Secretaries of State; James Stanhope, Eſq; to be Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer; Thomas Lord Torrington, John Wallop, Eſq; George Bailie of Jerviſwood, Eſq; and Thomas Micklethwaite, Eſq; to be the other Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury; James Craggs, jun. Eſq; was declar'd Secretary at War; the Duke of Bolton, who had formerly been one of the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, was made Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom; and his Place of Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold was given to the Duke of Newcaſtle; Joſeph Addiſon, Eſq; Burgeſs for Malmsbury was appointed one of the Principal Secretaries of State; and James Earl of Berkley, Matthew Aylmer, Eſq: Sir George Byng, John Cockburne, Eſq; and William Chetwynd, Eſq; Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty. It was remark'd by Obſervers at that Time, that in the Compariſon the Gentlemen who left their Places were not ſucceeded by Gentlemen as well qualify'd for them. Mr. Addiſon was allow'd to be an excellent Writer and Poet; but no body thought he was ſo well acquainted with Affairs of State as Paul Methuen, Eſq; who had from his Youth been accuſtom'd to ſuch Tranſactions: Neither did any one think that Sir Thomas Micklethwayte, Eſq; was as fit for the Treaſury Board as William St Quintin; or John Cockburn, Eſq; for that of the Admiralty, as George Dodington, Eſq;: But the Compariſon was much more unequal ſtill between General Stanhope and R. Walpole, Eſq; as Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer: As to James Craggs, Eſq; who was made Secretary at War in the room of William Pulteney, Eſq; thoſe that made Compariſons had nothing to ſay.

It is a very grave Subject we are going upon, the Cenſure of a Biſhop of our Church by the Convocation, and yet the gravity of it will be reliev'd by ſeveral Circumſtances attending it The Right Reverend Dr. Hoadly, Lord Biſhop of Bangor, had preach'd a Sermon before the King at St. James's, Intitled, The Nature of the Kingdom of Chriſt, which proving, by Scripture and Reaſon, that it was not of this World, was a very great Surprize to the whole Party of High Church, Spiritual and Temporal, Clergy and Laity, who make the Kingdom of Chriſt to conſiſt in Miters, Lordſhips, Spiritual Courts, Abſolutions, Perſecutions, and other Things which are the very Reverſe of the Piety, Purity and Simplicity of Primitive and True Chriſtianity; and being founded on Lay Authority muſt therefore relate to the Kingdom of this World. I have been ſo abus'd by the Malice and Reſentment of this ſort of People, that I am forc'd to take ſhelter any where rather than ſtand out ſingly againſt them; therefore I copy the Annals, where, ſpeaking of this Learned Prelate's Preſervative againſt the Principles of the Nonjurors and the beforemention'd Sermon, 'tis added, 'The latter gave moſt Offence to the High-'Church Clergy; and therefore in order to ſound 'the Alarm, and ſtir up the Convocation againſt 'that worthy Prelate, Dr. Snape, Head School-'maſter of Eaton College, wrote a Letter to 'his Lordſhip, wherein he ſays boldly, "'Tis 'amazing with what View his Lordſhip could 'attempt to found a Doctrine of a moſt perni-'cious Tendency to the Ruin of ſo many Texts 'of Scripture, unleſs it were to give a Specimen 'in his own Perſon, of the Fallibility, or ſome-'thing worſe, of human Interpreters; it being 'impoſſible that under the Roman or Jewiſh 'Government any Texts of Scripture ſhou'd au-'thorize the Temporal Powers, Prerogatives, 'Honours, Dignities and Poſſeſſions of Preachers 'of the Goſpel, as Preachers of the Goſpel.' This Saying of Dr. Snape's is one of the Circumſtances that gives ſuch Relief to the Gravity of the Subject. The Annaliſt proceeds, 'After which 'he nibbles at the Biſhops elevated and ſublime 'Notion of the Church of Chriſt: Though Dr. 'Snape's Letter was by all impartial and can-'did Readers look'd upon as a very ſlight and 'looſe Performance; yet being induſtriouſly 'cry'd up by the Multitude, and in particular 'by the diſcontented, it had the deſir'd Effect;" for about the beginning of May the Lower Houſe of Convocation appointed a Committee, conſiſting of Dr. Moſs, Dr. Sherlocke, Dr. Friend, Dr. Sprat, Dr. Cannon, Dr. Byſſe, to draw up a Repreſentation to be laid before the Upper Houſe, concerning ſeveral dangerous Poſitions in the Lord Biſhop of Bangor's Preſervative and Sermon, which theſe ſix Doctors did accordingly; and the ſame being read in the Lower Houſe, it was voted to be enter'd upon their Books *Nem. Doctors againſt Biſhop Hoadly.

Their firſt enormous Charge againſt his Lordſhip is taken out of the Sermon as follows. His Lordſhip affirms, 'As the Church of Chriſt is 'the Kingdom of Chriſt, He himſelf is King: 'And in this it is imply'd, That He is himſelf 'the ſole Lawgiver to his Subjects; and him-'ſelf the ſole Judge of their Behaviour in the 'Affairs of Conſcience and Eternal Salvation: 'And

A.D.1717 'And in this Senſe therefore his Kingdom is not 'of this World. That He hath in theſe Points 'left behind him no viſible human Authority, 'no Vicegerents who can be ſaid properly to 'ſupply his Place; no Interpreters, upon whom 'his Subjects are abſolutely to depend; no 'Judges over the Conſciences or Religion of his 'People.' To theſe eternal Truths the ſix Doctors object, This Paſſage ſeems to deny All Authority to the Church. No, no, It does not ſeem to deny the Authority of Teaching, Exhorting, of Reproving and Expelling Reprobate Members from Chriſtian Communion. But this will not do the Buſineſs of High-Church. All the reſt of the Repreſentation being of a Piece with this, I ſhall refer to it.

The Annaliſt proceeds: 'The King was in-'form'd of what paſs'd in the Lower Houſe, 'and being apprehenſive that this Diſpute, if 'not timely check'd, might occaſion dangerous 'Heats, and inflame Old Animoſities, His 'Majeſty thought fit to prevent them; and 'therefore a Royal Writ was ſent to His Grace 'the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to Prorogue 'the Convocation.

A Debate about Dr. Snape's Preaching.

Three Days after Sir William Wyndham mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, that Dr. Snape be deſired to Preach before the Houſe on the 29th of May, a Day of Thankſgiving for the Reſtoration of the Government, &c. It was ſeconded by Mr. William Shippen, and back'd by Mr. Horatio Walpole and Mr. Robert Walpole; the two firſt probably would not have made that Motion if they had not expected ſuch powerful Seconds to have ſupported it. Mr. Lechmere ſaid, after Mr. Robert Walpole had done ſpeaking, He could not but wonder that a Member who had been one of the Managers againſt Dr. Sacheverel, ſhould now ſpeak in behalf of a Divine who had aſſerted the ſame Notions of Paſſive Obedience and Nonreſiſtance, for which the other had been Proſecuted, and who had lately attack'd a ſtrenuous and worthy Champion of the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion. It was not likely that this Motion ſhould miſcarry, when ſuch Men as Mr. Aiſlabie, the Earl of Hertford, Mr. Methuen, Mr. Edgcombe were on the ſame ſide with the Gentlemen who ſpoke for it; tho' Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Mr. Boſcawen, Mr. Treby and others oppos'd it, and the very Debate would have been an extream Mortification to a Man of Meekneſs of Spirit, it being, as Mr. Horatio Walpole obſerv'd, unuſual on ſuch Occaſions to put a Negative on any Man whom a Member of that Houſe had thought fit to name. But the Annaliſt ſeems to have hit the true Reaſon how the Doctor came to have a major Vote: A great many Whigs, who did not expect ſuch a Motion, happening to be Abſent, it was carried in the Affirmative by 10 Voices only, 141 againſt 131, and Sir William Wyndham and Mr. Shippen were ordered to acquaint Dr. Snape with the Deſire of the Houſe.

The Parliament met, after the Receſs, on the 6th of May, when the Lord Chancellor, by His Majeſty's Command, read the Royal Speech, the Subſtance of which is explain'd in the Lords Addreſs,

The Lords Addreſs of Thanks for His Majeſty's Speech.

Moſt gracious Sovereign,

'WE, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and 'loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and 'Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, beg leave 'to return your Majeſty our moſt humble 'Thanks for your Majeſty's moſt gracious 'Speech from the Throne, and for your Ma-'jeſty's having taken effectual Care to prevent 'all immediate Danger of an Invaſion upon 'theſe Kingdoms, by ſending your Fleet ſo 'early into the Sound. And we cannot but 'acknowledge, with the greateſt Satisfaction, 'your Majeſty's moſt tender Regard to the 'Eaſe of your People, in giving Orders as ſoon 'as it was conſiſtent with the Publick Safety 'for reducing ſo conſiderable a Number of the 'Land Forces. A.D.1717

'We alſo give your Majeſty our moſt humble 'Thanks, for your having communicated to 'your Parliament your Intention to paſs an 'Act of Grace, which we hope, will have all 'the good Effects your Majeſty ſo reaſonably 'and juſtly expects from it.

'And we take this Occaſion to aſſure your 'Majeſty, we will, with the utmoſt Zeal and 'Duty, defend and ſupport your Majeſty's ſa-'cred Perſon and Government, againſt all your 'Enemies, both at Home and Abroad.

His Majeſty's Anſwer was to this Effect.

My Lords,

'I thank you kindly for this very dutiful 'Addreſs: Your Zeal and Affection for my 'Perſon and Government, is what, under God, 'I ſhall always principally rely on.

Mr. Lechmere againſt the Reſigners, anſwer'd by Mr. R. Walpole.

Mr. Lechmere mov'd for a like Addreſs in the Houſe of Commons, was ſeconded by the Lord Caſtlecomer, and oppos'd by no body; excepting in that Part of his Speech preceding the Motion, wherein he animadverted on thoſe who had lately reſign'd their Places, in ſuch a manner, as if they deſign'd to diſtreſs the King's Affairs; which however was his own Practice ſome time after. Mr. Robert Walpole taking himſelf to be intended by this ſevere Reflection, ſaid, 'That People had been often 'reflected upon for accepting Places, to carry 'on Deſigns contrary to the Intereſts of their 'Country; but that he never heard a Man 'found Fault with for laying down one of 'the moſt profitable Employments of the 'Kingdom: That for his own part, if he 'would have comply'd with ſome Meaſures, 'it was not in the Power of any of the pre-'ſent Miniſters to remove him; but that he 'had Reaſons for reſigning his Place, with 'which he had acquainted His Majeſty; and 'which he might, in a proper time, explain to 'that Houſe. And in the mean while, the 'Tenour of his Conduct would ſhew, that he 'never intended either to make the King un-'eaſy, or embroil his Affairs;" which Declaration, equally prudent and generous, was extreamly acceptable to the Well-affected. This Gentleman having mov'd, That the Bill for Redeemiug ſeveral Publick Redeemable Funds might be read a ſecond time, Mr. Stanhope repreſented that ſome Things in it wanted to be amended, and therefore mov'd for putting the ſecond Reading off to the next Day ſevennight; which was agreed to. He alſo took that Opportunity to inſinuate ſomewhat to the Diſadvantage of thoſe that had been concern'd in the Adminiſtration of the Treaſury; which ſeem'd to require more Proof than he thought fit to confirm it by: 'As if it had been their 'Cuſtom to make Bargains for the Publick with 'the Governors and Directors of Companies,

A.D. 1717 'whereby ſome private Advantages were gene-
'rally made: But that, in his Opinion, ſuch
'Bargains ought to be made at the Bar of their
'Houſe, by the Repreſentatives of all the Com-
'mons of Great Britain; and if any Advan-
'tages could be made, they ought to accrue to
'the Publick.

Mr. Lechmere reporting the Addreſs to be preſented to His Majeſty, Mr. Shippen propos'd an Amendment to that Part of it that relates to the Army: 'That nothing could more en-
'dear His Majeſty to all his Subjects, than the
'reducing the Land Forces to the Eſtabliſhment
'of Guards and Garriſons, ſuch as His Majeſty
'found at his Acceſſion to the Crown." All who are acquainted with the Hiſtory of England, muſt think meanly of that Gentleman's Acquaintance with it, who in affirming, that in Cromwell's Time a Force much leſs aboliſh'd Epiſcopacy, &c. For beſides that Cromwel had ſeldom leſs than 20 or 30000 Men ſtanding Forces, it was not in his Time that Epiſcopacy was aboliſh'd, &c. I mention this only becauſe it includes the Danger of the Church, which this Inſinuation tacks to the ſtanding Army. He was ſeconded by Mr. William Bromley, Mr. Herne, and General Roſs; and anſwer'd by Mr. Stanhope, who was ſupported by Mr. Robert Walpole, who in this made good what he had ſo lately ſaid to the Houſe of his Attachment to the Government. Mr. Pulteney alſo declar'd very frankly, 'That before the Diſco-
'very of the late Swediſh Conſpiracy, while he 'had the Honour to ſerve His Majeſty, as Se-
Mr. Pulteney's Speech for the Army. 'cretary at War, he had receiv'd ſuch Directi'ons, as ſhew'd His Majeſty's Intention at that 'Time, to reduce ſtill a greater Number of 'Forces than at preſent; and therefore he did
'not doubt but His Majeſty would do it, as
'ſoon as the Safety of his Kingdom would
'admit of it." He added, what it is hop'd he will remember always when the like Queſtion is on the Carpet, 'That, in his Opinion,
'the Nation had no Reaſon to fear any thing
'from an Army, who for near 30 Years paſt had 'given ſignal Proofs of their firm Adherence
'to the Proteſtant Intereſt, and of their Zeal
'to maintain the Liberties of their Country."
The Negative was put upon Mr. Shippen's Motion, by a Majority of 188 Voices againſt 83. The next Day Mr. Pulteney mov'd for an Addreſs to have the Papers laid before the Houſe relating to the Dutch Forces that ſerv'd in An Inquiry about the Dutch Forces in Scotland. Scotland; which was agreed to. And it was ſuppos'd, the Intention was to find out Matter of Accuſation againſt the Earl of Cadogan; who, it was ſaid, had given a little too largely for the Tranſports that carryed thoſe Troops to Britain: And as it was an Affair which requir'd the utmoſt Expedition; perhaps it was not ſeaſonable to loſe Time in making better Bargains.

As the Commons Addreſs to His Majeſty was in Subſtance much the ſame as the Lords; ſo was His Majeſty's Anſwer to it.

In the Debate about the Propoſals of the South Sea Company to advance two Millions to the Publick, to encreaſe their Capital of ten to twelve Millions, at the Intereſt only of 600000 l. per Ann. which was paid for their Capital Stock of ten Millions. Mr. Pulteney ſaid, 'He did not know what private Advan-
'tage ſome Perſons might have in accepting the 'Propoſal of the South Sea Company; but that 'in his Opinion, no Term of Years ought to
'be granted, or at moſt not above three Years; A.D. 1717
'and the Company propos'd ſix Years, and a
'Year's Notice, for Redemption." General Stanhope being ſenſible that both the Oppoſition made againſt the Company's Propoſal, and the Reflection of private Advantage, were chiefly levell'd againſt him, thought fit to vindicate himſelf: He began with ingeniouſly owning, 'His Incapacity for the Affairs of the 'Treaſury; which were ſo remote from his 'Studies and Inclination, that therefore he 'would fain have kept the Employment he
'had before; which was both more eaſy and
'profitable to him; but that he thought it his 'Duty to obey the King's Commands. That 'however he would endeavour to make up by
'Application, Honeſty and Diſintereſtedneſs,
'what he wanted in Ability and Experience.
'That he would content himſelf with the Sa-
'lary and lawful Perquiſites of his Office;
'and tho' he had quitted a better Place, he 'would not quarter himſelf upon any body
'to make it up: That he had no Brothers

'that upon his firſt ent'ring into the Treaſury,
'he had made a ſtanding Order againſt the late
'Practice of granting Reverſions of Places."

'was in Employment, he had endeavour'd to
'ſerve his Friends and Relations; than which,
'(in his Opinion) nothing was more reaſonable
'or more juſt. That as to the granting Reverſions,
'he was willing to acquaint the Houſe with the 'meaning of it: That he had no Objections
'againſt the German Miniſters whom His Ma-
'jeſty brought with him from Hanover; and,
'who, as far as he had obſerv'd, had all along
'behav'd themſelves like Men of Honour; but
'that there was a mean Fellow, (of what Na'tion he could not tell) who took upon him to
'diſpoſe of Employments: That this Man ha-
'ving obtain'd the Grant of a Reverſion which
'he deſign'd for his Son; he thought it too
'good for him, and therefore kept it for his 'own Son: That thereupon that Foreigner was
'ſo ſaucy, as to demand the Sum of 2500 l. un-
'der Pretence that he had been offer'd ſo much
'for the ſaid Reverſion, but that he was wiſer
'than to comply with his Demand: And that 'one of the chief Reaſons that made him re-
'ſign his Places, was, becauſe he would not
'connive at ſome Things that were carrying 'on." Mr. Stanhope anſwering, and Mr. Walpole replying with like Vivacity, ſome Expreſſions dropp'd in the Heat of Diſcourſe, which Gentlemen thought might have ill Effects; and after the Queſtion about the South Sea Company's Propoſal, was carry'd in the Affirmative, Mr. Boſcawen Comptroller of His Majeſty's Houſhold, acting the generous Part of a Common Friend between General Stanhope and Mr. Walpole, ſaid in Subſtance, 'That
''twas melancholy to ſee any Difference ariſe
'between two worthy Members; and it would
'ſtill be a greater Misfortune, if they ſhould
'go out with any Reſentment; wherefore he
'mov'd that the Houſe would lay their Com-

Mr. Pulteney moves for Addreſſes about the Dutch Forces.

The next Day, May 21, Mr. Pulteney made Obſervations on ſome Papers relating to the Tranſportation of the Dutch Troops, (before ſpoken of) and ſuggeſted, that the Perſon who was entruſted with the Management of that Affair, (the Earl of Cadogan) had defrauded the Publick; and mov'd for Addreſſes for Accounts of, and Vouchers and Authorities for, the Sum of 2106*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* charg'd for bringing thoſe 6000 Men from their reſpective Garriſons to Oſtend, which is about 7*s.* a Man, for many Day's Marches, Waggons, &c. and for the Sum of 992*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* for Tents, Sacks, and other Neceſſaries, about ten Groats a Man. A Gentleman ſaid, 'If the Houſe had 'a Mind to inquire into needleſs and extrava-'gant Expences, they ought to begin with the 'Expedition to Quebec, in Henry St John, late 'Viſcount Bolingbroke's Time." However, no leſs than four ſeveral Addreſſes to His Majeſty were voted, relating to theſe two Articles, the Contracts for the Tranſports, and the Bills of Exchange drawn from Abroad, for, or on Account of, the Rebellion.

It will not be improper to remember, that about this time the True State of the Caſe between John Harris, D. D. Rector of St. Mildred Bread-ſtreet, London, and Charles Humphreys, L. L. D. late Lecturer of that Pariſh; who was outed of his Lectureſhip for Preaching Sedition; ſo nearly bordering upon Treaſon, that he wou'd hardly have eſcaped its Puniſhment in another Country for the like Offence. Dr. Harris, (the learned Author of Lexicon Technicum) finding that this ſame Humphreys had ſo diſguſted his Pariſhioners by his ſeditious Lectures, that many of 'em refus'd to hear him, or contribute to his Lectureſhip, admoniſh'd him to forbear that wicked Practice for the future, ſo contrary to the Oaths he had taken, particularly that of Abjuration. Humphreys repreſents this Admonition as a Perſecution for his Righteouſneſs, ſaying, in his next Sermon, If I am thus treated for Preaching on a Subject of Love and Charity, what would my Enemies have ſaid if I had diſcours'd on this Text; Why are you the laſt to bring the King back? Or on theſe Words in Deuteronomy; When thou art come into the Land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, and ſhall poſſeſs it, and dwell therein; and ſhall ſay, I will ſet a King over me: Thou ſhalt in any wiſe ſet a King over thee whom the Lord thy God ſhall chuſe; one from among thy Brethren ſhalt thou ſet King over thee: Thou mayeſt not ſet a Stranger over thee, which is not thy Brother. Such is the Loyalty of High-Church to the Royal Houſe of Hanover; ſuch their Impiety and Inſolence. Cou'd this forſworn Prieſt think to mock God with Impunity in the next World; tho' he might mock the Government and the Laws in this, by that ſhameleſs Abuſe of Scripture. Dr. Harris made his Complaint of it to Dr. Robinſon Biſhop of London, late Plenipotentiary at Utrecht; who promis'd to reprove Humphreys for his Behaviour; which the Biſhop then ſeem'd to think very inſolent and ſhocking. But a few Days after, the Doctor receiv'd a Letter from one Gibbon, of whom he knew nothing to acquaint him, by Command of the Lord Biſhop, that Dr. Humphreys had given him Satisfaction as to his Sermon; and he does not conceive he has advanced any thing in it but what was agreeable to his Duty. But Dr. Betteſworth, Dean of the Arches, and Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, gave Sentence againſt Charles Humphreys, L. L. D. in favour of Dr. Harris; and the former being turn'd out of the Church in Bread-ſtreet, was taken into that of St. Andrew's Holbourn by Dr. Sacheverel, as one of his Curates; and appointed one of the Lent Preachers in the City of London, by the Biſhop of that Dioceſs. Sir John Trevor, Maſter of the Rolls, dying the latter end of May, that great Office was given to Sir Joſeph Jekyl, who was ſucceeded as Chief Juſtice of Cheſter by Spencer Cowper, Eſq; and Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; was made Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter for Life, in the room of the Earl of Scarborough, who when his Removal was notified to him, made this loyal and generous Anſwer, That whether in or out of Place, he would on all Occaſions ſhew his Zeal and Affection for His Majeſty's Perſon and Government. Colonel Armſtrong, Mr. Ackworth, and Mr. Laſſels, were appointed Commiſſioners to ſee the Works of Mardyke demoliſh'd, according to the late Treaty with France.

The pious and learned Biſhop of Bangor, who had the ſolemn Thanks of his Country, for the many Services he had done her, by vindicating the Principles of the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion by Spiritual Liberty and Charity, had rendred himſelf extremely obnoxious to High-Church, to all the Friends to Superſtition, Perſecution, Hereditary Right and Arbitrary Power. The Government, by ordering the Convocation to be prorogued, had put a ſtop to the Effects of the Envy, Malice and Hatred of my Lord Biſhop's Enemies among them, avow'd Enemies to the Cauſe he defended. Mention has been made of the firſt Attack upon him by the Head Schoolmaſter of Eaton, Dr. Snape, who, as the Annaliſt told us, was mightily cry'd up by the Multitude, but as much deſpis'd, as a Writer, by Men of Sobriety and Judgment in Thinking. One may by one Paragraph in Biſhop Hoadly's Anſwer, be fully appriz'd of the Inducement Dr. Snape and the Convocation had to be angry with that Prelate, and to treat him with ſo much Injuſtice and Indecency: As for them who infer, ſays Biſhop Hoadly to Dr. Snape, that I am arguing abſolutely againſt worldly Advantages, they do me the Honour indeed to make me a very Disinterested Man, but they may as well infer, that I contend absolutely that All Christians ought to be always in an Afflicted, Low and Starving Condition, because I say what all the World have said, That all the Honours and Profits of this State naturally tend to endanger Sincerity of Religion, which must be built upon a willing Belief of a Future State; and that the less the World is mix'd with the Affairs of Religion, consider'd as such, the more Sincerity, probably, there will be in the Profession. This Truth is known to ev'ry Babe in Christianity, and could not but be known to Dr. Snape and the Committee of Convocation, who sate upon the Bishop of Bangor: But such Men are too much interested in the Argument to take the right Side; when on the wrong is the World with all its Honours, Profits and Powers, with all its Pomps and Vanities, renounc'd in Baptism. There's not a reasonable Man in Christendom, who thinks the Labourer is not worthy of his Hire; or would exclude the Clergy from worldly Advantages, to which they are intitled by Law: But no reasonable Man in Christendom, can think it prudent, decent or just in them, to set their Hearts upon Things that are not of the Kingdom of Christ, whose Ministers they are; and to prefer them to Sincerity, Humility and Charity, which are of Christ's Kingdom: But they do not touch the Sense so quick as what pleases the Passions and Appetites; and consequently will not make their Way so much among the Children of this World, who are doubtless the Numbers.

Bishop Hoadly of Christ's Kingdom.

At the Close of Dr. Snape's second Letter he says, 'The flying off so often to such Evasions, 'will cause the Sincerity of any Writer to be 'call'd in Question: But I cannot help on this 'Occasion, pressing your Lordship with a Point 'of Fact, which will shew more convincingly 'how sincerely you have dealt.' And then the good Doctor publishes a notorious Untruth against the Bishop; that he had shewn his Sermon before he preach'd it to a Person who had corrected it, and softned some Passages which wou'd otherwise have been worse than they now were. To this the Bishop of Bangor answer'd in an Advertisement in the Daily Courant, 'I hereby solemnly averr, that I did not 'before the Sermon was preach'd shew it to 'any Person in the World.' Dr. Snape answer'd in an Advertisement in the late Lord Bolingbroke's News-Paper, the Post-boy, and said, he had it from Dr. Hutchinson, who had it from the Bishop of Carlisle, who underwrit the Advertisement, This is true. The Bishop of Carlisle writes to Dr. Kennet, Dean of Peterborough, to know whether he did not tell him so. Dr. Kennet disown'd it with great Earnestness; and the Bishop of Bangor with as great Earnestness call'd upon Dr. Snape and the Bishop of Carlisle, to bring out their Man, which neither of them did, or could do: For as we read in the Annals, 'The Bishop of Bangor's last 'Advertisement, a Reply to that underwritten 'by the Bishop of Carlisle, being unanswerable, 'gave Bishop Hoadly an undisputable Victory.' And it is a lamentable Thing to see here what a shameful Dilemma the Bishop of Carlisle and Dr. Snape had brought themselves into, by endeavouring to confute a Sermon by false Fact, which could not be confuted by false Argument.

An Untruth against Bishop Hoadly, told by several Doctors.

On the 30th of May Sir William Wyndham having mov'd in the House of Commons to give Dr. Snape Thanks for his Restoration Sermon, Mr. Shippen seconded it. It was a very thin House; and tho' there was some Opposition, yet the Thanks were carryed by 86 Voices against 70. This is what Bishop Hoadly refers to, in his Reply to Dr. Snape's first Letter. This 'puts me in mind to congratulate you 'upon the Publick Honour lately done you, so 'soon after a Performance which ends with so 'remarkable a Story.' His charging the Bishop of Bangor with 'an Opposition in his present 'Practice to his former resisting Doctrines:' Which the Bishop then explains, and his Explanation shews, why it was that Dr. Snape's Friends lov'd him, and hated the Bishop. 'My 'present Practice is, all that Zeal, Duty and 'Submission, which can result from the sincerest 'Affection to King George: My former resisting 'Doctrines, all the World knows never taught 'any Resistance but to the Worst of Princes 'engag'd in the total Destruction of the Civil 'Rights of a whole Nation: The natural 'Thought is this, That no one can reproach me 'with any Contradiction in this Matter, without implying, too strongly I fear to be deny'd, that his present Majesty is —— what I 'care not to name.

Dr. Snape thank'd by this House.

Bishop Hoadly's Principles.

The Accounts relating to the Charge of transporting the Dutch Troops to Great Britain, having been laid before the House, and read, Mr. Pulteney made a Speech, wherein he endeavour'd to shew, that there had been great Sums of Money embez'led in this Expedition. The whole Charge of transporting them forwards and backwards, of bringing them from their several Garrisons to Ostend; of maintaining them there, and at Sea; with three Weeks Provision, which was order'd, because it was not determin'd where they should land; amounted to 1828*3l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* about 3*l.* a Man, including all Incidents; which does not seem to be a Sum out of which great Sums could be embez'led. And the Earl of Cadogan's Case then publish'd shews plainly enough that there was not, nor could be, such Embezzlements: The Gentlemen who thought otherwise, would not admit Mr. Farrer, Chairman for Ways and Means, to be Chairman of the Committee, in this Debate; but being the Majority voted Mr. Edgecombe into the Chair, Mr. Robert Walpole urg'd, that by the Papers that had been read, there was an apparent Fraud; though he could not say but that it might afterwards appear otherwise; and he could not tell but that my Lord Cadogan might produce other Evidence to prove his Innocency. Sir Joseph Jekyl said, 'That in his Opinion, neither was there any 'Fraud, nor if there were, could it in any Justice or Equity be charg'd on my Lord Cadogan, who in all this Affair acted only as a publick Minister, and not either as a Commander 'or an Agent;' concluding with some Praises on his Lordship, who in military Affairs held the second Rank, next to that great Man, to whom every body allow'd the First. Mr. Hungerford said, He wonder'd there was so much Noise made about a Dutch Reckoning; that by all that had been laid before them, the Lord Cadogan appear'd very innocent; and therefore he thought he deserved rather the Praise than the Censure of the House. Mr. Craggs, Mr. Lechmere, Sir William Thompson, Mr. Hampden, Mr. Aislabie, spoke also for the Lord Cadogan; and tho' Mr. Hungerford spoke for him, yet he voted against him. After a Debate of several Hours

Mr. Pulteney against the Lord Cadogan.

Sir Joseph Jekyl defends him.

Earl of Oxford petitions for a Trial.

On the 22d of May, the Earl of Oxford petition'd the Houſe of Peers for a Trial; the Lord Trevor, who preſented his Petition, made a long Speech in his Behalf, and was ſeconded and back'd by the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Abingdon, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord Harcourt, who were oppos'd by the Lord Coningsby and others. Heat againſt the Earl of Oxford abated.

'Tis moſt certain that the Earl of Oxford ſtood in much better Terms with the People, both within Doors and without, after ſo long an Impriſonment, than he did before he was impriſon'd: The Heat of their Reſentment was much worn off by Time; and the Delay of the Proſecution, made them think it was not ſo well grounded as was at firſt imagin'd. If it was to end in High Crimes and Miſdemeanors only, they thought his being four or five and twenty Months in Priſon, wou'd go a good way in his Puniſhment; and there was little Expectation of ill Conſequences to him, by his being brought to a Trial: For it was now the general Opinion, that the Earl of Oxford had dropt the Pretender in the latter part of his Miniſtry, and left that treaſonable Deſign entirely to the late Viſcount Bolingbroke, a Man of quick Thought, and conſequently not of much Foreſight. Mr. Robert Walpole, Chairman of the Committee of Secrecy, abſenting from it, Laurence Carter, Eſq; was put into that Chair.

The Lords having addreſt the King to appoint a Lord High Steward for the Trial of the Earl of Oxford, His Majeſty was pleas'd to appoint the Lord High Chancellor.

The Committee of Secrecy deſiring longer Time to prepare Matters for the Earl of Oxford's Trial, it occaſion'd a Silence in the Houſe of Commons for two or three Minutes: At laſt Mr. Hungerford having made one of his uſual Flouriſhes, ſpoke ſeriouſly to the Matter, and took Notice of the great Hardſhips the Earl of Oxford had undergone. Mr. Boſcawen expreſt his Concern, 'That a Proſecution which the 'Commons had begun in ſo ſolemn a manner, 'and which was thought ſo neceſſary to vindi-'cate the Honour and Juſtice of the Nation, 'ſhould at laſt be dropt; which he was ſure 'would be a Reflection on that Houſe.' Here again was a deep Silence: And Mr. Speaker riſing in order to put the Queſtion for a Meſſage to the Lords for a longer Time, Mr. Samuel Tuffnel made a Speech, in which he obſerv'd, that the Houſe having been aſſur'd by the Chairman of the Committee of Secrecy, that there was Evidence againſt the Earl of Oxford ſufficient to convict him of High-Treaſon in Weſtminſter-Hall, it was that which ſway'd him to vote for bringing an Offender to publick Juſtice, who had betray'd the Honour and Intereſt of the Nation. Tho' Mr. William Bromley vindicated Mr. Walpole, ſaying, 'If any 'thing were done amiſs by the Secret Commit-'tee, it were hard to lay all the Blame at the 'Door of the Chairman.' Yet he could not help adding, 'That they had been told above 'a Year and a half ago, that the Evidence was 'ready: But that they ought not to give the 'Lords the Trouble of going through the whole 'Impeachment, ſince (in his Opinion) twenty 'of the Articles were altogether vain and need-'leſs.' Several Members were ſhockt at this Expreſſion; and Mr. Bromley immediately explain'd himſelf, 'That if the two Articles that 'were for High-Treaſon were made good, the 'other twenty would be needleſs and inſignifi-'cant.' Mr. Walpole ſaid, 'He had of late 'look'd over ſome of the moſt material Papers 'relating to this Impeachment, and he was ſtill 'convinc'd in his Conſcience, that the late Mi-'niſtry had given themſelves up entirely, and 'were ready to deliver up the Nation to France.' Mr. Lechmere came ſtill cloſer to the Point, ſaying, 'It was no wonder that a certain Set of 'Men, who had at firſt oppos'd the Impeach-'ments, ſhould now be for letting them drop; 'and that this was yet the leſs ſurprizing, in 'that the ſame Gentlemen had conſtantly op-'poſ'd all that had been propos'd, for the Sup-'port of the preſent happy Settlement: But 'that for his own Part he was of the ſame Opi-'nion he ever was, viz. That the Nation could 'not proſper till they had brought thoſe to Ju-'ſtice who betray'd its Allies in ſo ſcandalous a 'manner; and brought it to the very Brink of 'Ruin: And that he would venture his Life in 'this Proſecution.' This Speech had ſo much Weight, that it was carried without dividing; That the Meſſage be ſent to the Lords; which being done, the Earl of Sunderland mov'd to allow the Commons a Fortnight; the Duke of Devonſhire ſaid twelve Days were ſufficient; the Lord North and Grey, the Lord Trevor, and the Lord Harcourt, inliſted upon keeping to the Day already fix'd: Bnt the Duke of Devonſhire's Motion was carry'd by a Majority of 76 Voices againſt 57. A very full Houſe, at almoſt Midſummer.

A.D.1717

On the 24th of June, the Lord High Steward with the Houſe of Peers, paſt to the Court prepar'd for them in Weſtminſter-Hall, where the Commons were preſent, as a Committee of the whole Houſe, their Managers coming there firſt, and taking their Places, the King, the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, were ſeated in Boxes; as were the reſt of the Royal Family,

*A.D.*1717 and the foreign Miniſters. All Things being prepared, and Silence proclaim'd; the Earl of Oxford, who had been brought from the Tower by Water to Weſtminſter, was conducted to the Bar, by the Deputy Lieutenant of that Fortreſs, having the Axe carried before him, by the Gentleman-Jaylor of the Tower, who ſtood with it on the Left-hand of the Priſoner, with the Edge turn'd from him.

The Lord High Steward open'd the Affair with a ſhort Specch, wherein he addreſs'd himſelf thus to the Priſoner, after having mention'd the uſual way of Exhorting Perſons in his Condition, as to their Behaviour: But conſidering the many great Offices your Lordſhip has born in the State, your long Experience and known Learning in all Parliamentary Proceedings, I cannot but think it would ſeem improper for me to ſpeak to your Lordſhip in that manner.

After this ſhort Speech Mr. Hampden, one of the Managers, made a long one, wherein he recapitulated the Charge againſt the Priſoner; of which I ſhall only repeat the Cloſe:

'The Commons think it their Duty to ex-
'preſs their utmoſt Abhorrence of the traite-
'rous Proceedings of the Priſoner at the Bar,
'and to ſhew their Reſentment againſt him,
'as the Author and Promoter of them.

Earl of Oxford's ill Practices.

'They have found him abuſing and betraying
'the Honour of his Royal Miſtreſs, into whoſe
'Favour he had inſinuated himſelf for the 'moſt deſtructive and wicked Purpoſes. They 'have found him induſtriouſly dividing and

'War; and contriving and effecting the Diſ-
'ſolution of the greateſt and moſt noble Con-
'federacy that ever was form'd and united in 'Defence of the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the 'glorious Liberties of Europe.

'They have found him attempting to de-

'Free People Happy: On the Continuance of 'which Succeſſion, next under God, all that is
'dear and valuable to Us entirely depends.

My Lords,

After this Sir Joſeph Jekyll ſtood up in order to proceed to make good the Firſt Article, but the Lord Harcourt having ſignified to the Lords, that before the Managers proceeded farther he had a Motion to make, their Lordſhips adjourn'd to their own Houſe, where the Lord Harcourt mov'd, That the Commons be not permitted to proceed, in order to make good the Articles againſt the Earl of Oxford for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, till Judgment be firſt given upon the Articles for High Treaſon. He was ſeconded and back'd by the Lord Trevor, the Earls of Angleſey and Nottingham, who were anſwer'd by the Lord Parker, the Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Coningsby, and the Lord Cadogan, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Duke of Argyle, the Earl of Ilay, and the L. Townſhend back'd the Lord Harcourt's Motion; as did ſtrenuouſly the Biſhop of Rocheſter and the Lord North and Grey; and it was carried in the Affirmative by 88 Voices againſt 56. This Vote being communicated to the Commons, it was, after a Debate, reſolv'd to deſire a Free Conference with the Lords thereupon; which their Lordſhips did not think fit to conſent to; and ſeveral warm Speeches were made upon it in the Lower Houſe, by General Stanhope, Mr. Craggs, Mr. Tuffnel, and others; Mr. Lechmere 'lamented the unhappy Dilemma to which 'they were brought, either to ſee ſo great an 'Offender as the Earl of Oxford eſcape unpu-'niſhed, or to acquieſce in Proceeding on his 'Trial in the manner preſcrib'd by the Lords. He ſaid, 'he thought the latter more eligible 'of the two, with a ſaving to the Rights and 'Privileges of the Commons, and therefore made a Motion for it. He was ſeconded and back'd by Mr. Hampden, and ſeveral other Members, but the Queſtion being put, it was carried in the Negative. Then a Meſſage was brought from the Lords, that their Lordſhips intended to proceed farther to the Trial of the Earl of Oxford at Weſtminſter-Hall; of which the Commons took no notice, but being ſenſible the Lords would diſcharge the Priſoner, Sir William Strickland mov'd, that leave be given to bring in a Bill, to inflict ſuch Pains and Penalties upon Robert Earl of Oxford, as his TRAITEROUS PRACTICES and other High Crimes and Miſdemeanors do deſerve, and as ſhall be thought reaſonable. A Debate enſuing upon it, it was adjourn'd till Wedneſday the 3d of July.

Commons deſire a free Conference.

July 1. The Refuſal of it occaſions

The Lords went down to Weſtminſter-Hall about ſeven a Clock in the Evening, and three Proclamations were made for the Accuſers of the Earl of Oxford to appear and make good the Articles of Impeachment againſt him. No body appearing, their Lordſhips went back to their Houſe, where the Lord High Steward put the Queſtion, Whether the Earl of Oxford ſhould be diſcharged of the High Crimes and Miſdemeanors as well as of the High Treaſon; which, after ſome Debate, being carried in the Affirmative, the Lords came again to Weſtminſter-Hall, where they All gave their Votes ſeverally for the Diſcharge of the Earl of Oxford.

The Annaliſt tells us, 'It was obſerv'd that 'moſt of the Whig Lords retir'd before the Peers 'went the laſt time into Weſtminſter-Hall.' By which one may calculate, that of the 106 Peers then in the Hall 60 were not at firſt for the Impeachment, and 46 were now in the laſt Diviſion; there were 144 Members in the Houſe of Peers, of which 38 is by the Annaliſt ſuppos'd to have retir'd: Theſe added to 46, wou'd have made 84; and it was well for the Earl of Oxford that Times and Circumſtances had chang'd the View of Things, as well as the Diſpoſition of Perſons. As his Lordſhip had never affected to make Modeſty his Characteriſtick, ſo it was not ſurprizing that he went into the Houſe of Lords the ſame Evening, and receiv'd Compliments upon his Deliverance from thoſe Lords, who had moſt favour'd him in it: But the Commons were reſolv'd not to part with him ſo; and tho' Sir William Strickland's Motion for a Bill to attaint him was not ſeconded, yet the Lord Viſcount Caſtlecomer's was carry'd, July 3. 'That an humble Addreſs 'be preſented to His Majeſty, ſetting forth the 'many great CRIMES, of which Robert Earl 'of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer, had been im- An Addreſs againſt him. 'peach'd by this Houſe; as likewiſe the Endea- 'vours that have been us'd by the Commons to 'bring the ſaid Earl to Juſtice; in which Pro- 'ceedings the unhappy Differences that have a- 'riſen between the two Houſes, have diſap- 'pointed their juſt Expectations; and likewiſe 'humbly to pray His Majeſty, that he will ex- Parliaments Addreſs againſt the Earl of Oxford. 'cept the ſaid Earl out of the Act of Grace; to 'the end the Commons may be at Liberty to 'proceed againſt the ſaid Earl in a parliamen- 'tary way.' The Lord Caſtlecomer being ſeconded by Mr. Yonge, and the Queſtion put upon his Motion, the ſame was carry'd in the Affirmative; and the Addreſs being drawn up, was preſented to His Majeſty by the whole Houſe, July the 5th; to which His Majeſty was moſt graciouſly pleas'd to anſwer;

'I will give Directions with relation to the 'Earl of Oxford as you deſire; and it is with 'Pleaſure I obſerve the Senſe you expreſs in 'your Addreſs, of my Endeavours for the Se- 'curity, Honour and Advantage, of theſe King- 'doms.' His Majeſty had two Days before for- He is forbidden the Court. bidden the Earl of Oxford the Court, upon Information that he deſign'd to come thither.

On the 15th of July the King gave the Royal Aſſent to

An Act for the two Millions to be advanc'd by the Bank of England, at 5 per Cent.

An Act for two Millions to be advanced by the South Sea Company, at 5 per Cent.

An Act for the King's moſt gracious general Pardon: And to other publick, and 18 private Acts.

After which the Lord Chancellor, by the King's Command, deliver'd His Majeſty's Speech to both Houſes of Parliament, in His Majeſty's Name and Words; of which I ſhall inſert the Beginning only, and refer to the Records for the reſt.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'I cannot put an End to this Seſſion without 'expreſſing my Thanks to you for the Diſpatch 'you have given to the Publick Buſineſs, and 'declaring the Satisfaction I promiſe my ſelf, 'in meeting you again early the next Winter, 'with the ſame good Diſpoſitions for the Ser- 'vice of your Country. The Meaſures we have 'taken in this Parliament, have, by the Bleſſing 'of Almighty God, effectually defeated all the 'Attempts of our Enemies, both at Home and 'Abroad; and as the Principles on which theſe 'Meaſures are founded, are equally conducive 'to the ſupporting the juſt Rights of the 'Crown, and the Liberties of the People, I 'ſhall always perſevere in them my ſelf, and 'diſtinguiſh thoſe who adhere to them with 'the ſame Steadineſs and Reſolution.

There were excepted by Name in the Act of Grace, Robert Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer; Robert Blackbourne, and others, concern'd in the Conſpiracy to aſſaſſinate King William: William Redmayne the Jacobite Printer; Simon Lord Harcourt, Matthew Prior, Thomas Harley, Arthur Moore, James Duke Criſp,

And about 500 more Engliſh and Scotch Rebels and Traitors, of whom but a very ſmall number were executed. And the few Examples that were made encourag'd the Enemies to the Government to foment that wicked Spirit which had driven ſo many of 'em into Rebellion. One Eves of Oriel College Oxford having ſpoken very indecently of His Majeſty in the hearing of Mr. Stafford of that College; the latter reproving him for his Raſhneſs and Impudence, Eves immediately ſtab'd him with a Penknife, and ran away, to avoid falling into the Hands of Juſtice.

A ſeditious Student at Oxford ſtabs another.

The Commiſſioners appointed by His Majeſty to ſee the great Sluyce and other Works of the Harbour of Mardyke demoliſh'd, purſuant to the Treaty of Alliance between the Crowns of Great Britain and France, arriv'd there in the Beginning of July, and found 400 Men actually at Work in making Dams, above and below the Sluyce, to pump out the Water, and take up the Timber Works; the Flood-gates being already unhing'd; and the whole was executed according to the Treaty in a ſhort Time after.

Coniers D' Arcy, Eſq; being remov'd from his Employment of Gentleman of the Horſe, and one of the Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Maſter of the Horſe to His Majeſty; Francis Negus, Eſq; was appointed ſole Commiſſioner of the ſaid Office; and not long after, (July 12th) it was declar'd that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to create James Stanhope, Eſq; Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, Baron Stanhope of Elvaſton in the County of Derby; and Viſcount Stanhope of Port-Mahon.

General Stanhope made a Peer.

There being a new Commiſſion of Trade and Plantations, the following Commiſſioners were appointed by His Majeſty. The Earl of Suffolk, John Chetwynd, Eſq; Sir Charles Cooke, Paul Docminque, Eſq; John Moleſworth, Eſq; Thomas Pelham, Eſq; Daniel Pulteney, Eſq; Martin Bladen, Eſq;: Charles Earl of Carliſle was made Conſtable of the Tower; and ſeveral Gentlemen of the Army having been thought too buſy about the Inquiry into the Lord Cadogan's Management as to the Tranſportation of the Dutch Troops, 'twas expected there would be Changes among the military Officers: And on the 19th of July it was made publick, That His Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint William Lord Cadogan, General of all the Foot Forces in England; George Lord Forreſter, Captain of the ſecond Troop of Horſe Grenadier Guards, in the room of the Earl of Deloraine; Lieutenant General Withers, Governor of Sheerneſs, in the room of Brigadier Grant; Captain Delabene, Lieutenant Governor of Tinmouth, in the room of Colonel Middleton; Brigadier Stanwix, Colonel of the Regiment of Foot, late Lord Forreſter's; Colonel Armſtrong, Colonel of the Regiment of Foot, late Honiwood's; Sir Charles Hotham, Colonel of His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales's Royal Regiment of Dragoons, late Churchill's; Brigadier Crofts, Colonel of the Regiment of Dragoons, late Sir Robert Rich's; Colonel Naſſau, Colonel of the Regiment of Foot, late Grant's; Lord Leſlie, Captain of the Company of Foot-Guards, late Montgomery's; Lord Frederick Howard, Captain of the Company of Foot-Guards, late Campbell's; Charles Otway, Eſq; Colonel of the Regiment of Foot, late Gorge's.

About the latter end of July, Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq; Comptroller of His Majeſty's Houſhold, was made Joint-Vice Treaſurer of Ireland, in the room of the Lord Scarborough; and the Earl of Leiceſter Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, and Warden of the Cinque Ports, in the room of the Earl of Dorſet; the Lord Haverſham was made Joint-Treaſurer of the Exciſe, in the room of the Lord Delawar; the Duke of Portland was appointed one of the Lords of the Bedchamber; Alan Lord Broderick Lord Chancellor of Ireland, was created Viſcount Middleton in that Kingdom; Guſtavus Lord Hamilton, Viſcount Boyne; John Allen, Eſq; Baron and Viſcount Allen, in the County of Kildare; Trevor Hill, Eſq; Viſcount Hillsborough; and Sir Thomas Southwell, Lord Southwell of Caſtle Martyr in that Kingdom; where His Grace the Duke of Bolton, Lord Lieutenant, held the Parliament. Towards the end of the next Month Auguſt, the Earl of Carnwarth, the Lord Widdrington, and the Lord Nairne, were releaſed from the Tower, purſuant to the late Act of Grace; but the Lord Duffus being excepted, was continu'd under Confinement, with an Allowance of 3 l. a Week: which was alſo allowed to the Lord Widdrington. All the Rebels in Newgate, and in the Marſhalſea, within the Benefit of the Act, were diſcharg'd. Silk the Pewterer, one of Dr. Sacheverel's Champions, being in Newgate for an Extent, and Howel the Nonjuring Prieſt for a Fine, Iſaac Dalton for a Libel, and Blackbourne, &c. for the Aſſaſſination Plot, were continued in Goal.

Creations and Preferments.

About this time Sir Ralph Gore was made Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland; and Mr. Robert Dundaſs Sollicitor-General for Scotland, in the room of Sir James Stewart; the Lord Viſcount Longueville was created Earl of Suſſex; Grey Nevil, Eſq; John Plumtree, Eſq; Leonard Smelt, Eſq; Sir William Gordon, Sir Thomas Palmer, Robert Briſtow, Eſq; and William Yonge, Eſq; were appointed Commiſſioners for the Army Debts: George Townſend, Mountague Bacon, and Thomas Fervoiſe, Eſqs;, Commiſſioners of Hawkers and Pedlars: Henry Cartwright, Eſq; Stephen Byſſe, Eſq; John Byard, Eſq; Samuel Tuffnel, Eſq; John Boteler, Eſq; and James Lockhart, Eſq; Commiſſioners for the Scotch Equivalent: Sir Joſeph Jekyl was ſworn of His Majeſty's Privy Council, July 31; and William Stanhope, Eſq; was appointed Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Spain.

On the 22d of Auguſt, Count Volkra the Imperial Miniſter went to Hampton Court, and communicated to His Majeſty the Advices he receiv'd by an Expreſs, That Major-General Hamil-

A.D. 1717

Hamilton was come to Vienna from the Imperial Army, under the Command of Prince Eugene of Savoy, with an Account, That on the 4th of Auguſt, in the Night, that Prince commanded General Palfi to move out of the Lines before Belgrade with Part of the Army; and His Highneſs following with the main Body, on a Signal given, at break of Day the 5th, O.S. the Imperialiſts attack'd the Turkiſh Camp, which was defended by a Triple Intrenchment; and that the Turks ſuſtain'd the Attack till three a-Clock in the Afternoon, when they were entirely broken and put to flight, leaving behind them all their Artillery, about 130 Braſs Guns, Ammunition, Baggage and Chancery: For which Victory, Prince Eugene caus'd Te Deum to be ſung in the Vizier's Tent; and Belgrade ſurrender'd two Days after.

Prince Eugene beats the Turks.

If the News of the Glorious Victory obtain'd by Prince Eugene over the Turks at Belgrade, and the Conqueſt of that ſtrong Fortreſs, had been known at the Court of Spain, probably they would not have enter'd into a War with the Emperor; which they were encourag'd to do, by the Diverſion the Turks were likely to give the Imperial Arms on the Side of Hungary; which King Philip flatter'd himſelf would give him a good Opportunity to recover what he had loſt in the Confederate War in the Mediteranean and Italy. On the 22d of Auguſt, N. S. the Marquiſs de Lede, his General, landed about 8000 Foot, and 600 Dragoons, in the Iſland of Sardinia; and ſummon'd the Marquis de Rubi, the Emperor's Vice-Roy, to ſurrender; which he refuſing, Hoſtilities commenc'd between the Spaniards and Germans: The Reaſons the former gave for it, were all ſtrain'd and frivolous; ſuch as the Infraction of the Treaty for evacuating Catalonia and Majorca, and the ſeizing the great Inquiſitor of Spain. This Enterprize oblig'd the Courts of Great Britain and France, and the States General, to concert proper Methods to preſerve the publick Tranquility. The Capital of Sardinia, (Cagliari) held out till the 30th of September, N. S. and then capitulated. About a Fortnight before this, the Abbot Du Bois, Miniſter of State in France for Foreign Affairs, arriv'd in England, and had a private Audience of His Majeſty at Hampton Court, where His Majeſty had reſided ever ſince the 19th of July, except when he went to Windſor and Newmarket, where he arriv'd the 2d of October; and on the 4th the Vice-Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, attended by many Heads of Houſes, Doctors and Maſters, waited upon the King; and the Vice-Chancellor made a Speech on this Occaſion; the Subſtance of which is expreſt in His Majeſty's Anſwer.

The Spaniards invade Sardinia.

Mr. Vice-Chancellor,

'I thank you for the Aſſurance you give me 'of your Duty and Affection; and the Univer-'ſity may always depend upon my Favour and 'Encouragement.'

His Majeſty was pleas'd to accept of their Invitation to honour them with His Preſence at Dinner, and appointed the next Sunday for that Purpoſe. The King coming to the Regent Houſe, Dr. Bentley, Regius Profeſſor, made a Speech; and then His Majeſty commanded ſeveral Degrees in all Faculties to be conferr'd; and the Ceremony of admitting and creating ſeveral Doctors, was perform'd in His Royal Preſence.

They were all admitted to kiſs His Majeſty's Hand; who was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Timothy Lannoy, Eſq; Philip Jackſon, Eſq; William Hammond, Eſq; John Locke, Eſq; John Bull, Eſq; and Charles Vernon,

A.D. 1717 non, Esq; Two Days after, the Lord Cadogan arriv'd here from Holland, where he had been in Conference with the Ministers of State, and the Spanish Ambassador, on occasion of the Invasion of Sardinia by the Spaniards, and was come to England to receive further Instructions thereupon, while the Abbot Du Bois was at our Court.

While Dr. Snape, Dr. Sherlock, Dr. Cannon, and the Convocation, were falling upon Dr. Hoadly, Lord Bishop of Bangor, for distinguishing the Kingdom of Christ from the Kingdom of this World, the Society of the Sorbonne in Paris, who are Roman Catholicks, were endeavouring to confine Ecclesiasticks to Christ's Kingdom, and exclude them from that of this World; As to Politicks and Temporalities, they publish'd at this Time a Treatise concerning the Kingdom of Christ, and the Sovereignty of Temporal Princes in Opposition to the Doctrines of the Jesuits; and appointed one of their Members, a Subject of Great Britain, to present the said Book to the Earl of Stairs, the British Ambassador at the Court of France; which he did accordingly; and made a handsome Speech to his Excellency, wherein, among other Things, he said, 'This Work, my Lord, 'sets forth, That the Son of God came into the 'World only to give the Kingdom of Heaven, 'and not to disturb the Princes of the Earth. 'That the Power of the Church is altogether 'Spiritual.' The same Thing for which Bishop Hoadly contended; and which is so certain a Principle of Christian Religion, that moderate, learned, and wise Romanists, are more orthodox in it, than our High-Church Doctors. Again, 'That Peter was given to the Church 'only as a Minister, and not as a Master; all 'Europe will thereby see, that Ambition and 'Interest have never prevail'd over the Duty 'of our Ministry; and that we never follow'd 'the Example of those base and selfish Flatterers, who, thro' a Complaisance, as Criminal 'as Mercenary, have forg'd those Opinions about 'Infallibility, those Fables and Chimeras, to no 'other end, than that they might reign with 'the Pope over all Nations, and even over 'Kings themselves.'

The Doctors of the Sorbonne present a Book to the Earl of Stairs, Concerning the Kingdom of Christ in Bishop Hoadly's Sense.

Against the Pope.

On the 5th of November, the Day of our double Deliverance from Popery and Slavery, His Majesty was pleas'd to order His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Chamberlain, to appoint Dr. Davies, Master of Queen's College in Cambridge, and Dr. Laughton, Fellow of Clare Hall, to be Chaplains in Ordinary to His Majesty, in the room of Dr. Sherlock, and Dr. Snape, who were struck out of the List.

Dr. Sherlock struck out of the List of Chaplains

The Doctors beforemention'd were not the only Persons that quarrel'd with the Bishop of Bangor, one Mills, formerly a Schoolmaster in Somersetshire, then at Croydon, his Wife and his Usher, W. Edwards, A. B. supported Dr. Snape in the Charge he brought against the Bishop, for entertaining Mr. De la Pellonniere, a converted Jesuit in his House, whom they concluded to be still a Jesuit, because he had not taken the Sacrament Test, which he said he was never call'd upon to do, but had Communicated with the French Church in the Savoy, in which the Liturgy of the Church of England is us'd. The Boys of Mills's School at Croydon were prevail'd with to make Depositions against Mr. Pellonniere, in favour of Dr. Snape; and after this there will certainly be no need to say any thing more in that Doctor's Vindication. But it will not be improper to set before him the true Character of the Reverend and Learned Prelate, who was treated with so much Malice and Bitterness. This Character comes from a Man in his last Hours, when he was leaving the World, a Time of the strictest Truth and Sincerity. William Glanville, Esq; one of the Chief Clerks of the Treasury, having left Bishop Hoadly a Legacy in his Will, assigns the following Reasons for it. A.D. 1717

Dr. Snape's Help against Bishop Hoadly.

'As to the Legacy I have before given to the 'Lord Bishop of Bangor, I declare the same to 'be in Testimony of the Respect I bear him, 'for defending the Liberties of his Country, 'and for his Love to Mankind, and for his endeavouring to free Religion from Superstition 'and Tyranny, which worldly Interest and Ambition have blended with it; and to restore it 'to that Simplicity and Usefulness, which was 'the Design of its Blessed Author: For which 'his Labour of Love, he has justly merited the 'Esteem and Regard of all Good Men, instead 'of that Load of Infamy and Scandal, which 'the Passions of designing Men, have so maliciously and uncharitably thrown upon him.'

Mr. Glanville's dying Character of Bishop Hoadly. Proving ill Men only against the Bishop.

William Glanville.

No Man was better known than this Mr. Glanville, a Person of great Sense and Honour; and as this is the best Answer that can be given, to the Representation of the Committee of Convocation, to Dr. Snape, Dr. Cannon, &c. it must be left to the serious Consideration of as many of 'em as are living.

On Saturday the 2d of Novemb. about Six a Clock in the Evening Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was safely Deliver'd of a Prince in the Palace at St. James's, there being then present in the Room, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, the Dutchesses of St. Alban's, Montagu and Shrewsbury, the Countess of Dorset, the Lady Hinchinbroke, the Lady Cowper, all the Ladies of Her Royal Highness's Bedchamber, the Dutchess of Monmouth, the Countess of Grantham, the Countess of Picbourg, the Women of Her Royal Highness's Bedchamber, Sir David Hamilton, and Dr. Steigerdahl, Physician to His Majesty. Their Royal Highnesses dispatch'd the Lord Harvey to Hampton-Court to acquaint His Majesty with it, who was pleas'd the same Evening to send the Duke of Portland with his Compliments to their Royal Highnesses. And on the Monday following His Majesty came from Hampton-Court to St. James's, to make a Visit to Her Royal Highness and to see the New-born Prince; and afterwards return'd to Hampton-Court, where His Majesty resided till the 13th of Novemb. by which time the Reduction of the Land Forces in Great-Britain was so far carried on, that the Troops remaining consisted of but about 16000 Men.

Her Royal Highness deliver'd.

Dr. Welton the Nonjuring Priest's Conventicle in Goodmans-Fields, being visited by Col. Ellis and other Justices of the Peace, with proper Assistants, about 250 Persons were found there assembled, of whom but 40 would take the Oaths: The Doctor refusing them also, he and his Brethren were order'd to be proceeded against according to Law.

Dr. Welton, the Nonjuring Priest, keeps a Conventicle.

About the middle of the Month His Majesty was pleased to grant to William Benson, Esq; who had signaliz'd his Zeal for the Constitution and the Protestant Succession in the worst of Times;

Times; and to Wortly Mountagu, Esq; the Reversion of the Places of Auditors of the Impreſt and Foreign Accounts; and to confer the Dignity of Baronet on Abraham Elton, Esq; Alderman of Briſtol.

On the 18th of Novemb. a very dutiful and affectionate Addreſs was tranſmitted by His Grace the Duke of Ancaſter, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Lincoln, from the High Sheriff, Grand Jury, Deputy Lieutenants, Juſtices of the Peace, Clergy and Laity of that County, at the Aſſizes; it was preſented by Sir John Brownlow, Knight of that Shire, of which I ſhall inſert a few Lines, to ſhew the Stupidity, Baſeneſs and Ingratitude of the Faction, Enemies to this good Government.

"That conſummate Wiſdom and Indefatigable Care for the Proſperity and Welfare of "your People, which has ever been eminent "in your Majeſty through the whole Courſe "of your Adminiſtration, would extort an "Acknowledgment even from the greateſt In-"grates.

"We beg leave, in the humbleſt ſenſe of our "Duty, Gratitude and Affection, to expreſs our "ſincereſt Thanks for the happy Effects thereof "we already feel in preventing Invaſions from "Abroad, and ſecuring our Peace at Home, by "the Recovery and flouriſhing Increaſe of our "Trade; whilſt, at the ſame time, we declare "our utmoſt Abhorrence of thoſe Deluded "Wretches, who, under a ſpecious Zeal for "the Church of England, have endeavour'd "to ſubvert it, and thereby the whole Prote-"ſtant Religion; and who, thro' their reſtleſs "Endeavours to foment a Rebellion againſt ſo "gracious a Prince, would have involved their "Country in Blood and Miſery.

Will any one pretend this is not a lively Image of the Bolingbroke and Schiſm Bill Men?

On the 21ſt of Novemb. the Parliament met, and the Lord Chancellor read His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Speech, which was as follows, excepting what relates to the Supplies and Funds.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I am very glad I have been able to bring "the Sitting of Parliament into a more proper "and uſual Seaſon of the Year. I hope ſuch "an early Meeting will not only be a Benefit to "the Publick, but a Convenience to your pri-"vate Affairs.

"As I have always had at Heart the Security "and Eaſe of my People, ſo I never kept up "any Troops but for their Protection, and have "taken every Opportunity to diſband as many "as I thought conſiſtent with their Safety. "I have reduc'd the Army to very near one half "ſince the beginning of laſt Seſſion of Parlia-"ament, and leſſen'd them to ſuch a Number "as will neither be a Burthen to any good Sub-"jects, nor an Encouragement to our Enemies "to infeſt them. You cannot but be ſenſible of "the many Attempts which have been ſet on "foot to diſturb the Peace of Europe and of "theſe Kingdoms. They only pretend not to "ſee who are not afraid of them. But "as no Applications has been wanting on my "Part to preſerve the Publick Tranquility, I "have the Pleaſure to find my good Offices have "not been altogether unſucceſsful: And have "reaſon to hope they will, in the End, have "their full and deſired Effect.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

A.D. 1717

"I could heartily wiſh that, at a Time when "the common Enemies of our Religion are by "all manner of Artifices endeavouring to un-"dermine and weaken it both at Home and "Abroad, All thoſe who are Friends to our "preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, might unani-"mouſly concur in ſome proper Method for "the greater ſtrengthening the Proteſtant Inte-"reſt; of which, as the Church of England is "unqueſtionably the main Support and Bul-"wark, ſo will ſhe reap the Principal Advan-"tage accruing by the Union and mutual Cha-"rity of All Proteſtants.

His Majeſty recommends Revolution Principles.

"As none can recommend themſelves more "effectually to my Favour and Countenance, "than by a ſincere Zeal for the juſt Rights of "the Crown and Liberties of the People, ſo "I am determin'd to encourage All thoſe who "act agreeably to the Conſtitution of theſe my "Kingdoms, and conſequently to the Principles "on which my Government is founded.

Which Principles were ſolemnly condemn'd by the Oxford Decree, by Sacheverel's Sermon, by the High Church Addreſſes in the laſt Four Years of the Queen, and by the Lectures and Libels of that Faction in the preſent Reign.

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, and His Majeſty's Speech reported, the Lord Hinchinbrook mov'd, "That an humble Ad-"dreſs be preſented to His Majeſty, returning "the humble Thanks of this Houſe, for his "moſt gracious Speech from the Throne, and "for his great Goodneſs in aſſembling his Par-"liament ſo early in the Year; that this Houſe "is highly ſenſible of His Majeſt'ys Concern for "the Welfare of his People, by the ſeaſonable "Reductions which he has been pleaſed to make "from time to time of his Land Forces: That "His Majeſty's unwearied Endeavours to pre-"vent the many Attempts which have been "made to diſturb the Peace of Europe, demand "the utmoſt Thanks and Acknowledgments of "this Houſe: And that this Houſe will effectu-"ally ſupport His Majeſty in ſuch Meaſures as "He ſhall judge neceſſary to attain ſo deſirable "an End: That His Majeſty's gracious Expreſ-"ſions and Aſſurances touching the Supply "granted laſt Seſſion, do give the greateſt Satiſ-"faction to this Houſe: And that this Houſe "will grant His Majeſty ſuch Supplies as ſhall "effectually provide for the Publick Service: "That the Commons have the moſt grateful "Senſe of the Tender Concern which His Ma-"jeſty has been pleaſed to expreſs for the Pro-"teſtant Religion, eſpecially for the Church of "England as by Law Eſtabliſh'd; and are re-"ſolv'd on their Part to conſider the moſt ef-"fectual Methods for ſtrengthning the Prote-"ſtant Intereſt of theſe Kingdoms.

Commons Addreſs.

The Lord Hinchinbroke being ſeconded by the Lord Morpeth, and oppos'd by no body, a Committee was appointed to draw up the ſaid Addreſs, which was preſented to the King by the whole Houſe, Nov. 23. and His Majeſty return'd the following moſt gracious Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

"I thank you for the repeated Aſſurances "you have given me in this dutiful and loyal "Addreſs, of your affectionate Support and "Aſſiſtance in the preſent Juncture of Affairs. "I expected no leſs from a Houſe of Commons "ſo affectionate to my Perſon, and ſo zealous "for the Publick Welfare.

The King's Anſwer.

What

*A.D.*1717 What is ſaid of the Supply granted the laſt Seſſions, relates to the 250000*l.* for extraordinary Service, which ſhews that the Commons were far from having any Reaſon to repent of the Confidence they repos'd in His Majeſty on that Occaſion.

Congratulatory Addreſſes to His Majeſty and their Royal Highneſſes.

The Lords Addreſs aud His Majeſty's Anſwer being of the ſame Tenour with the preceding are not here inſerted. The Houſe of Commons voted a Congratulatory Addreſs to the King, on the Birth of the Prince, and alſo a Congratulatory Meſſage to their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, who were attended with it by Sir John Cope, Sir John Brownlow, Earl of Hertford, Lord Stanhope, Lord Morpeth, Mr. Maynard, Mr. Cowper, and Mr. Carter : To which Addreſs and Meſſage His Majeſty and Their Royal Highneſſes return'd moſt gracious Anſwers.

Proceedings of the loyal Parliament in Ireland.

His Grace the Duke of Bolton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, open'd the Seſſion of Parliament there Novemb. the 7th; and we muſt by no means omit the ingenuous, the hearty, and loyal Behaviour of both Lords and Commons. The Jacobites having been very buſy in the City of Kilkenny, where James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, had ſtill many Friends, Ebenezer Warren, Eſq; a Member of the Houſe of Commons, was very zealous for detecting ſeveral corruptious and notorious Jacobite Proceedings of John Birch, Alderman of Kilkenny, and others, which were laid before the Houſe ; upon a full hearing, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, which paſt both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent, for diſfranchiſing and puniſhing Alderman John Birch, Alderman Edward Philips, Alderman Robert Connell, Alderman Thomas Blount, all of the City of Kilkenny ; alſo John Doyle a Common-Council Man, and George Smith a Freeman of the ſaid City ; for carrying on a Popiſh and diſcouraging a Proteſtant Intereſt : And Robert Connel, Robert Shirvington, Thomas Blount, Arthur Melſham, were in the mean time order'd to be taken into Cuſtody of the Sergeant at Arms. How uſeful ſuch an Inquiry and Proceeding would be in England, where High-Church have the Corporations, is eaſily ſeen, but not ſo eaſy to ſecure ſo good Succeſs in it. A Bill being brought into the Houſe of Lords in Ireland, to repeal the Corporation Oath paſt ſoon after the Reſtoration of King Charles II. and repeal'd in England after the Revolution, the Archbiſhop of Armagh, who dipt deeply in the Guilt of Sir Con Phips's ill Miniſtry, not only ſaid, That ſuch a Bill was derogatory to the Rights of the Crown and opened a Door to Rebellion, and that King George could not give his Conſent to it without violating his Coronation Oath, but caus'd a Proteſt to the ſame effect to be enter'd in the Journal. The Marquis of Wharton, and other Lords, looking on theſe Expreſſions as a Reflection on His Majeſty, mov'd that the Archbiſhop ſhould either be ſent to the Caſtle, or beg Pardon. He ſav'd himſelf from a Commitment, by cauſing his Proteſt to be expung'd.

Kilkenny Aldermen diſfranchis'd.

Archbiſhop of Armagh offends and retracts.

On Thurſday the 28th of November, in the Evening, the young Prince was Chriſten'd by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and nam'd George William : The King and the Duke of Newcaſtle, Lord Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, being Godfathers, and the Dutcheſs of St. Albans Godmother. The Annaliſt adds, 'But the publick Joy occaſion'd by the Birth of 'a young Prince, was unhappily damp'd, by an 'Accident that happen'd after the Chriſtening 'was over, in the Performance of which Cere- 'mony, there was a Circumſtance with which 'His Royal Highneſs was ſo little ſatisfied, that 'he forbore not to expreſs his Reſentment in a 'manner that His Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle 'thought injurious to him.' But how that Matter might be repreſented to His Royal Highneſs ; as if His Grace had ſollicited the Honour of being Godfather to the young Prince in ſpight of him, and how His Royal Highneſs's taking it ſo might be repreſented to His Majeſty, is not proper for our Explanation, were we ever ſo well inform'd, without Warrant. There is too much Delicacy and Danger in ſuch Diſcuſſions for us to enlarge in this Place. The King having ſent the Dukes of Kingſton, Kent, and Roxburgh, to the Prince ; and His Royal Highneſs avowing the Matter, as the Duke of Newcaſtle thought himſelf oblig'd to tell it to the King, His Majeſty order'd His Royal Highneſs not to go out of his Apartment till further Order ; and after the Prince had written two Letters to His Majeſty, Mr. Vice-Chamberlain Coke was commanded to let His Royal Highneſs know, it was His Majeſty's Pleaſure he ſhould leave the Palace of St. James's. It was told Her Royal Highneſs, that ſhe might continue there, as long as ſhe ſhould judge convenient : But no body thought the Princeſs of Wales could act otherwiſe than ſhe did ; which was to go with Her Royal Conſort the Prince wherever he went ; and their Royal Highneſſes retir'd to the Houſe of the Earl of Grantham, her Lord Chamberlain. The young Princeſſes and the young Prince remain'd with His Majeſty in the Palace of St. James's, Orders being given, that Her Royal Highneſs might ſee them there as often as ſhe deſir'd.

His Royal Highneſs leaves the Court.

A Debate about the Forces.

A Motion having been made in the Houſe of Commons, December 4th, for a Supply for Guards and Garriſons, for the Year 1718 ; a great Debate aroſe about the Number of the Land Forces ; the Motion was oppos'd by Mr. William Shippen, Sir William Wyndham, and ſome other Members, among whom was Mr. Robert Walpole, who excepted againſt the Number of 18000, againſt the Diſproportion in the diſbanding between the Horſe Dragoons and Foot ; againſt the keeping up of ſo many Officers, and the Pay of General Officers, 20000*l.* a Year in Time of Peace : All which Particulars that Gentleman enlarg'd upon and made good, by proper Vouchers. Mr. Craggs, Secretary at War, thought it incumbent on him, as in that Office, to anſwer thoſe Allegations ; which he did with the Applauſe of all thoſe that were on the Affirmative Side of the Supply : He was back'd by Mr. Aiſlabie, Mr. Richard Hampden, Mr. John Smith, Mr. Coventry, Colonel Bladen, Sir David Dalrymple, Mr. Barrington Shute, who chiefly inſiſted upon the Neceſſity of keeping up 16000 Men at leaſt one Year longer. Theſe Members were oppos'd by Mr. William Bromley, Mr. Freeman, General Erle, whoſe Opinion had great Weight, his Affection to the King's Perſon and Government being as well known as his Skill in military Affairs. And again by Mr. Shippen, who uſing theſe Expreſſions, 'That the ſecond Paragraph of the King's Speech 'ſeem'd rather to be calculated for the Meridian 'of Germany, than Great Britain ; and that 'twas a great Misfortune that the King was a 'Stranger to our Language and Conſtitution,' the Majority of the Houſe took great Offence

*A.D.*1718 at them; and Mr. Lechmere, who had taken down the Words, urg'd, 'That the ſame was 'a ſcandalous Reflection againſt the King's Perſon and Government, of which the Houſe 'ought to ſhew the higheſt Reſentment; and 'therefore he mov'd, That the Member who 'ſpoke theſe offenſive Words, ſhould be ſent to 'the Tower;' which was carry'd upon the Queſtion, by 173 Voices againſt 81. And the Votes of many without Doors among the Well-affected would have ſent him thither long before, if they had been of any Significancy. The Supply was granted for the 16000 Men. And, purſuant to an Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons, the Price of Guineas was reduc'd by Proclamation (December 22) to one and twenty Shillings; and other Gold Coins proportionably. The ſame Day the King gave the Royal Aſſent to the three Shilling Land Tax Bill.

Mr. Shippen ſent to the Tower.

Guineas 21 Shillings.

The Abbot Du Bois returning ſuddenly to France, after he had been two Months in England, and coming to England again a Month after, occaſion'd much Speculation at that Time; but the Alliance that was then negotiating between the Crowns of Great Britain and France being made known ſome Months after, unfolded that Myſtery.

I do not enter into the Detail of the Debates in Parliament about the Scarcity of Silver Money, and for providing againſt it, becauſe, notwithſtanding the Harangues that were made upon it, to find Matter of Complaint againſt the Adminiſtration on that Account, few People are ignorant of the only Way and Means to encreaſe Bullion amongſt us, which nothing can do but Trade; and if that do not bring it in, no Law can do it; nor keep it here when it is here. If the Neceſſity of Trade requires its Export. When this Affair was debating in the Houſe of Peers, the Lord Bingly repreſented the great Prejudice Trade receiv'd from the Scarcity of Silver. His Lordſhip doubtleſs meant the inland Trade in Shops, Markets, &c. For according to his own Conception, it could not be wanted for Foreign Trade, it being never to be exported when it is once imported. His Lordſhip added, ''Twas matter of Wonder 'a Remedy had not ſeaſonably been apply'd to 'ſo great an Evil, which had viſibly been grow-'ing for ſo many Months paſt.' This was very far from being ſo wonderful a Matter to all that knew the many Calls there were for our Silver; and the many Difficulties that the Trade which ſupply'd us with it lay under. My Lord Stanhope, who anſwer'd him, ſhew'd that the Scarcity of Silver was owing chiefly to the encreaſing Luxury in relation to wrought Plate, now more to be complain'd of than ever, if we have not Coin enough to carry on our Trade at Home, which will not be pretended.

Scarcity of Silver complain'd of.

Mr. Hutcheſon, took a great deal of Pains in writing Tracts to ſet the Parliament againſt the Half-Pay to the Officers in the manner the Miniſters deſired. The Sum was, at firſt 115000 l. for this Year: Their Oppoſers were for reducing it to 80000 l. but Mr. Robert Walpole propoſing a Medium 94000 l. the Sum was readily accepted on both ſides.

On the 28th of January, 1718, the Lords, who had before reſolv'd, That no Alteration ſhould be made in the Standard of the Gold and Silver Coin, ordered a Bill to be brought in to prevent the melting down of the Silver Species.

His Highneſs Prince Frederick, Son to His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, had been laſt Year inveſted with the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, and in the beginning of this was created Duke of Glouceſter, and about the ſame time His Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Marquis of Wharton a Duke of this Kingdom, for his Father's Merits rather than for his own, his Life having been a Series of Frolick and Extravagance, in the former part of it; and of Extravagance and Treaſon in the latter: The Words of the Patent explain'd His Majeſty's Royal Intention to reward the Services of the Father by conferring this Honour on the Son. *A.D.*1718

'The Britiſh Nation not forgetful of his 'Father lately deceaſed, gratefully Remember 'how much their Invincible King William ow'd 'to that conſtant and couragious Aſſerter of the 'publick Liberty and the Proteſtant Religion; 'the ſame extraordinary Perſon deſerved ſo 'well of us, for having ſupported our Intereſt 'by the Weight of his Counſels, the Force of 'his Wit, and the Firmneſs of his Mind, at a 'Time when our Title to the Succeſſion of this 'Realm was endangered, that in the Beginning 'of Our Reign we Inveſted him with the Dig-'nity of Marquis, as an Earneſt of Our Royal 'Favour; the farther Marks whereof We were 'prevented from beſtowing on him by his Death, 'too haſty and untimely for his King and Coun-'try, &c.

Preamble to his Patent.

About this time His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Thomas Brand, Eſq; Gentleman Uſher of the Green Rod, being introduc'd by His Grace the Duke of Athol, the Marquis of Anandale, the Earl of Sutherland, the Earl of Orkney, the Earl of Portmore, and the Lord Cadogan, Knights of the moſt Noble Order of the Thiſtle.

One Whitehead a Jacobite Prieſt was committed to Newgate for Treaſonable Practices, of which he was found Guilty, yet no greater Puniſhment was inflicted on him than a Fine of 20 Marks and ſix Months Impriſonment. Leake, another Nonjuring Prieſt, behav'd more wiſely and dutifully, for James Shepherd, a young Man under 20, having been a great Frequenter of Jacobite Conventicles, where his Head was fill'd with Traiterous Notions and Schemes, grew at laſt ſo deſperate and Wicked that he reſolv'd to put the moſt damnable of 'em in execution, by Murdering His moſt Sacred Majeſty, which, in a Letter to Leake he term'd, Smiting the Uſurper in his Palace. The Prieſt ſufficiently frighted at the reading ſuch a Letter, which was left for him at his Lodgings, communicated the Contents of it to Sir John Fryer a Worthy Alderman of London, who order'd him to ſeize the Fellow when he came for an Anſwer; which was done, and Shepherd being carried before Alderman Fryer, own'd the Fact, for which he was committed to Newgate.

James Shepherd deſigns to kill the King.

Another Jacobite Prieſt, Dr. Welton, who had not only ſworn Allegiance to Queen Anne, if not to King William, and Forſworn the Pretender, continuing his Treaſonable Lectures at his Conventicle in Goodman's-Fields, was order'd to be ſeiz'd by a Meſſenger, who finding him very ill, thought fit to leave him where he found him, till he was in a Condition to appear before a Secretary of State; but the Doctor thought fit not to ſtay for his ſecond Coming, and kept out of his way.

Notwithſtanding the many unanſwerable Arguments againſt Perſecution for Points of Conſcience urg'd by Mr. Locke in his Letters about Toleration, notwithſtanding that Great Man

A.D.1718 Man had call'd the Paſſive Obedience Oath Unlawful and Unjuſtifiable, and prov'd it to be ſo: One of the Committee of Convocation did, in anſwer to Biſhop Hoadly's excellent Reaſons for Repealing the Corporation Oath, and Teſt of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, impos'd on Cuſtom-Houſe Officers and Exciſemen, on Officers of Dragoons, Grenadiers, Bomb-Ships and Fire-Ships, publiſh a Vindication of that Oath and Teſt, even at a time when wiſe and moderate Men grew every Day more and more aſham'd of them. Beſides that Hiſtory is by no means a proper Place for Controverſy: This Piece is ſo verboſe and puffy as to Stile, and ſo looſe and flat as to Argument, that it requires more leiſure and room than we can ſpare to attempt an Examination of it; ſo we ſhall content ourſelves with what the Reverend and Learned Dr. Edward Tenniſon, Archdeacon of Carmarthen, ſaid of Biſhop Hoadly's Adverſaries, in and out of Convocation, in his Proteſt againſt the Report of the Doctor's Committees of the Convocation, in the Caſe of the Lord Biſhop of Bangor: 'Being perſwaded in my 'own Mind, that the Word of God is the only 'ſufficient Foundation upon which a true Pro-'teſtant can build his Religion; and that the 'Doctrines contain'd in the Biſhop's Sermon 'preach'd before His Majeſty on Sunday March '31. 1717. and publiſh'd by His Majeſty's 'ſpecial Command, are true Proteſtant Do-'ctrines, and ſo perfectly agreeable to the Word 'of God reveal'd to us in the Bible, that there 'ſeems to me to be no juſt Cauſe for the Com-'plaints made againſt them, which Complaints 'probably would never have been thought of, 'had not SOME MEN, whilſt they were ma-'king open Profeſſions of their Loyal Intentions, 'ſecretly deſign'd to caſt a Blot and Contempt 'upon the Regal Authority; and under the 'plauſible pretence of doing Service to the 'CHURCH laid hold of an Opportunity of 'ſhewing their Perſonal HATRED and Reſent-'ment againſt the' Biſhop.

Dr. Tenniſon's Character of Biſhop Hoadly's Adverſaries.

Ev'ry one knows ſo well what Spirit it is that animates thoſe who are under the Power of Hatred and Reſentment, that we ſhall leave the Biſhop of Bangor's Antagoniſts to anſwer Dr. Tenniſon, and take no farther Notice of their Anſwers to the Lord Biſhop of Bangor.

On the 1ſt of February, Mr. Boſcawen, Comptroller of the Houſhold, preſented this Meſſage to the Houſe from His Majeſty.

GEORGE R.

The King's Meſſage of his being Governor of the South Sea Company.

'His Majeſty having receiv'd a very dutiful 'Addreſs from the South Sea Company, that 'he would be graciouſly pleas'd to permit him-'ſelf to be elected Governor of the ſaid Com-'pany; and His Majeſty being willing to con-'deſcend thereto, recommends it to this Houſe 'to conſider of proper Methods to remove any 'Difficulties that may ariſe on that Occaſion.'

It was immediately order'd, that leave be given to bring in a Bill to enable His Majeſty to be Governor of the South Sea Company; which was read twice, engroſt; read the third time, paſt, and ſent to the Lords, who the ſame Day read it three times, and concurr'd in it without any Amendment. Two Days after His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to that Bill, and three private Acts. The next Day, February 4th, came on the Debate about a Clauſe in a Bill, making it lawful for Courts Martial to puniſh Mutiny and Deſertion with Death. Mr. Hutcheſon urg'd againſt it, 'That a Court Martial was never allow'd of 'in England in Time of Peace.' Mr. Lechmere confuted this by inſtancing the Court of Admiralty, which is allow'd in Time of Peace, and has equal Power, with relation to Seamen, with a Court Martial with relation to Soldiers. And Mr. Harley, to ſhew the Danger of a ſtanding Army, quoted with great Commendation, a Book written ſome Years ago by a Noble Member of that Houſe, entit'led, An Account of Denmark. The Lord Moleſworth, Author of that Book, ſhew'd it was no parallel Caſe, and that the Commons having already declar'd it neceſſary to maintain ſtanding Forces, it was no leſs neceſſary to keep thoſe Forces within the Bounds of Duty and Diſcipline, by the ordinary Rules of Martial Law, as was ever practis'd in all civil Nations. The Clauſe being put to the Queſtion was carri'd in the Affirmative by a Majority of 247 Voices againſt 229; ſo that there were 476 Members in the Houſe, which muſt therefore be as full then as (perhaps) ever was known. Monſieur the Abbot Du Bois having deſired to be an occular Witneſs of this important Debate, was admitted incognito into the Houſe of Commons. The Mutiny and Deſertion Bill paſt that Houſe by a great Majority the 12th of February, which was aſcrib'd to Mr. Walpole's giving his Vote for it, tho' he had oppos'd it in the Debate, declaring to his Friends, He had rather Mutiny and Deſertion ſhould be puniſh'd by a Court Martial, than not puniſh'd at all. The Bill being carried to the Lords by Mr. Craggs, and read the firſt time, (an Earl in a high Station) ſaid, 'That he 'wiſh'd the ſame might be thoroughly canvaſs'd 'and examin'd in a full Houſe, for he was not 'like ſome Perſons, who chang'd their Opini-'ons according as they were in or out of Place.' A noble Duke taking this Reflection to be level'l'd againſt him, reply'd, 'That for his own 'part he follow'd the Miniſtry, when he 'thought they were in the right; but went a 'contrary way when he thought they went 'aſtray.' The Earl of Oxford, who had been lately diſcharg'd from Impriſonment for High Treaſon, began his Speech againſt the Bill with ſaying, As long as I have Breath I will ſpeak for the Liberties of my Country; the hearing of which, did doubtleſs change the Countenances of many of that auguſt Aſſembly, who were ſufficiently ſenſible into what Peril the Liberties of his Country were brought by him, when at the Head of the Miniſtry in the laſt Years of the laſt Reign. The Force of his Argument being directed againſt the keeping up 16000 Men, as altogether uſeleſs in time of Peace; but not of ſuch a Peace as he had procur'd for us; the Lord Viſcount Stanhope fully anſwer'd whatever he had urg'd againſt the Forces and the Bill, and alledg'd, that there was a Neceſſity of keeping up ſo ſmall an Army as long as the Pretender's Friends both at Home and Abroad, were ſo buſy and ſo inſolent; and that Great Britain ſtanding Guarantee for the Neutrality of Italy, which was then threatned with an Invaſion; it was therefore matter of Prudence as well as Neceſſity, to keep up a competent Strength, both to ſuppreſs any Inſurrection at Home, and to repel any Inſult from Abroad; and to make good our Engagements

The Earl of S—— ſaid to this 'He was ſurpriz'd 'to hear that ſo great a Miniſter as the noble 'Lord who ſpoke laſt, was not better acquainted with ſome Matters of Fact; but that he 'thought himſelf oblig'd to inform the Houſe 'that by the Treaty concluded and ſign'd at 'Utrecht, in Mrrch 1713, between the Miniſters of Great Britain and France, the late 'Queen, of GLORIOUS MEMORY, was 'Guarantee for the Neutrality of Italy, and 'the Iſlands in the Mediteranean, only during 'the Evacuation of Catalonia; and till the 'Concluſion of a general Peace. That ſince 'that Time the State of Things was quite alter'd; and thoſe in the Miniſtry could beſt tell 'what Engagements had been enter'd into, either with the Emperor or France.' I have not enter'd into the Particulars of the Arguments on the Negative Side of the Queſtion, about the Mutiny Bill, becauſe they ſeem to be excentrick: For whereas the main Hinge on which they turn'd was the Danger from ſtanding Armies under tyrannous Princes, it had no manner of relation to ſuch a Prince as King George: And whereas a ſtanding Force was alledg'd to be altogether uſeleſs in Times of Peace, there could be no Inſtance given of ſuch a Peace as that after the Treaty of Utrecht; and of the Arguments on the Affirmative Side, we repeat only what was ſaid by the Lord Chancellor Cowper.

Lord Chancellor Cowper's Speech.

'That he had maturely conſider'd the Affair 'in agitation, not as a Perſon in a publick Sta'tion, but as a private unprejudic'd Man; and 'that he was convinc'd in his Judgment and 'Conſcience, That it is neceſſary both for the 'Support of the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, 'and the Security of the Nation, to keep up 'the Forces now on foot; and that he was con'firm'd in his Opinion, by conſidering what 'Thoughts the Pretender and his Friends had 'of this Matter, and reflecting, that they have 'nothing more at Heart than to procure the 'diſbanding of thoſe Forces that have ſuppreſt 'the late unnatural Rebellion. That he doubted 'not but the whole Body of the Nobility that 'made up that auguſt Aſſembly, were inviola- *A.D.*1718 'bly attach'd to His Majeſty King GEORGE: 'That His Majeſty had alſo the beſt Part of 'the Landed Intereſt, and all the Trading In'tereſt: That as to the Clergy he would ſay '— Nothing —— but that 'twas notorious 'that the majority of the Populace had been 'poyſon'd, and that the Poyſon was not yet About poyſoning the Populace. 'quite expel'd: That the Danger which ſeem'd 'to be apprehended from the preſent Army 'may be Chimerical, or, at leaſt, eaſily reme'died in any ſubſequent Seſſion of Parliament, 'whereas the Dangers with which the Nation 'is threatned from the Pretender and his Friends, 'in caſe there were no Army to oppoſe them, 'are real; and the Miſchiefs that might enſue 'upon the Succeſs of their Deſigns, irreparable: 'That if there had been ſuch a ſtanding Force 'as we now have, timely to ſuppreſs the Tu'mults and Riots which were rais'd ſoon after 'His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, in all 'Probability there had been no open Rebellion; 'That, on the other hand, if there had not been 'Troops ready at hand to aſſiſt the Civil Power 'in ſuppreſſing the late riotous Aſſemblies of Danger from riotous Journeymen. 'the Wool-Combers and Weavers, in the Coun'ties of Devon and Somerſet, there had by this 'Time been another Rebellion. That the men'tioning of Magna Charta, was, in his Opini'on, entirely foreign to the preſent Debate: 'That the Thing now in Queſtion, and that 'wherein they were immediately concern'd, 'was, to ſecure and ſupport the Government, 'and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, againſt vigilant, 'bold, and reſtleſs Enemies; and that they had 'the more reaſon to be upon their Guard, in 'that the Trumpeters of Sedition and Rebellion, 'had again forcibly intruded into ſeveral Pul'pits in Scotland.' The Queſtion, upon a Motion of the Lord Trevor's, being at laſt put, That the Power of the Court Martial ſhould not extend to Life and Limb, it was carri'd in the Negative by a Majority of 14 Voices, Yea's 91, No's 77; in all 168. Lord Viſcount Stanhope calls the Utrecht Peace ſcandalous.

In the Debate upon ſome other Clauſes of this Bill, the Lord Viſcount Stanhope ſuggeſted, 'That all the Objections rais'd againſt it, 'amounted to no more than bare Suppoſitions of 'Chimerical Dangers, and defy'd any Body to 'charge the Adminiſtration with any thing that 'might give juſt ground of Apprehenſion for the 'Liberties of the People: Adding, That if the 'Government be now oblig'd to keep a greater 'Number of Forces than formerly, it is partly 'owing to the Situation in which the Affairs of 'Europe have been left by the late ſcandalous 'Peace.' This was not a proper Matter for Conteſt or Argument, ev'ry one, but the Makers of that Peace, and their Adherents, felt it, and own'd it.

Earl of S--- vindicates it by Parliaments.

The Earl of S—— ſaid, 'He could not be 'ſilent while a Work in which he had ſo great 'a Share was ſo openly attack'd; but that the 'Peace, which ſome are pleas'd to call ſcanda- 'lous, was approv'd by three ſucceſſive Parlia- 'ments.' No body having ever preſum'd to offer any thing, as of Weight, in Vindication of that ſcandalous Peace, but the Approbation of thoſe Parliaments, let us ſee what Mr. Hampden ſaid of it to the Houſe of Lords, when the Earl of Oxford was Priſoner at their Bar.

Mr. Hampden of thoſe Parliaments.

'He miſrepreſented the moſt eſſential 'Parts of the Negotiations of Peace, to obtain 'the Sanction of Parliament to his wicked and 'pernicious Proceedings, thereby fatally decei- 'ving Her Majeſty, Her Allies, Her Parliament, 'and Her People, by ſeveral falſe Speeches and 'Declarations, concerted and adviſed by him, 'to be made by Her Majeſty from the Throne, 'to her Parliament, on the Subject of the ſaid 'Negotiations of Peace; and by ſuch wicked 'and unexampled evil Council, he did moſt un- 'gratefully abuſe the Favour of His Royal Mi- 'ſtreſs; and by means of her Authority, miſled 'her Parliament into groundleſs and prejudicial 'Reſolutions, and thereby not only prevented 'the juſt Advice of the Parliament to Her Ma- 'jeſty, in that Critical Juncture, but obtain'd 'the Approbation of Parliament to his myſte- 'rious and dangerous Practices; and did not 'only deprive Her Majeſty of the Confidence 'and Affection of her Allies, but expoſe Her 'Majeſty, and her People, to the Contempt of 'the Enemy.'

Proteſt againſt the Mutiny Bill.

After the third Reading of the Mutiny Bill in the Houſe of Peers, the 24th of February, the Lord North and Grey made a ſummary Recapitulation of the Arguments rais'd againſt it; but being neither back'd by any of his Party, nor anſwer'd by any of the contrary Side, the Queſtion was put, whether the Bill ſhould paſs, and was carry'd in the Affirmative by 88 Voices againſt 61 Diſſentient.

The Act for erecting Hoſpitals and Work-houſes at Briſtol, having paſt the Houſe of Commons, was ſent to the Lords, by Joſeph Earl, Eſq; Member of Parliament for that City, with a Clauſe in it, which repeal'd the Sacramental Teſt, with Reſpect to Perſons to be Guardians for the Poor, and why it was not repeal'd, abrogated, and for ever made void, with reſpect to other Lay Officers, is fitter for the Conſideration of Parliament than private Enquiry.

Part of the ſacramental Teſt repeal'd.

In this Seſſion of Parliament, Application was made to the Houſe of Commons, with His Majeſty's Conſent, in the Behalf of ſeveral attainted Perſons, and their Relations, for Relief out of the forfeited Eſtates. Theſe were,

William, late Lord Widdrington, Henry, Alathea, Jane, William and Mary, his Children, Emely Lady Lovel, John Balfour, Eſq; Henry Balfour, Eſq; Mr. John Carſtairs, Patrick Seaton, Robert Rollo, Lady Philippa Standiſh, Mrs. Margaret Thornton, Mr. Francis Dalton, Mrs. Mary Hodgſon, Mrs. Dorothy Hodgſon, Mrs. Ann Walton, Mrs. Elizabeth Shaftoe, Lady Seaforth: And the Queſtion being put, 'That it be an Inſtruction to the Committee on 'the Bill for the Sale of the Forfeited Eſtates, 'That they do provide in the Bill, that a Pro- 'portion of the neat Produce of the Eſtates be 'reſerv'd to his Majeſty, to be diſpos'd of to 'the Wives and Children of ſuch forfeiting Per- 'ſons, as His Majeſty ſhall judge to be proper 'Objects of his Royal Compaſſion.' It paſt in the Negative. In the Debate about the Trade with Sweden, which had been interrupted by a Proclamation, after ſeveral Provocations from the Swedes, and many Depredations on our Merchants Ships, Mr. Jackſon, late Reſident in that Kingdom, was call'd in, and heard by the Commons. The King of Sweden had reſolv'd to crown his other Acts of Knight Errantry, with an Attempt in Favour of the Pretender. A Knight in very great Diſtreſs, and conſequently a proper Object for the Relief of Chivalry.

A Negative about the forfeited Eſtates.

Tories for the Swedes

This endear'd the King of Sweden to the Tories, who ſtickled much for the Swediſh Intereſt, when that Trade was under Conſideration. Mr. Jackſon being aſk'd by Mr. Craggs, whether he was of Opinion, 'That if the Trade 'were open'd with Sweden, our Merchants 'would be on a better foot than they are at 'preſent?' Mr. Jackſon reply'd, 'That in his 'Opinion the contrary would happen: For now 'that the Swedes are diſtreſs'd for want of our 'Commodities, particularly Corn and Salt, 'they are inclin'd to facilitate to us, under- 'hand, the Purchaſe of their Iron; whereas, if 'the Prohibition of Trade with them was ta- 'ken off, they would immediately provide 'themſelves with what they want, and know- 'ing at the ſame time, that there are amongſt 'us a Set of Men, who make it their Study 'and Buſineſs, to embarraſs the Government, 'the Court of Sweden would be more ſtiff than 'ever, and render the Purchaſe of their Iron 'more difficult to us.' Some Members of the Houſe being offended at Mr. Jackſon's Reflection on a Set of Men, (by which, ſays the Annaliſt, 'twas plain he meant the Tory Party) cry'd out Cuſtody! Cuſtody! A very poor Encouragement for Perſons to give their Opinion with Plainneſs, and to the Purpoſe. The more moderate Members contented themſelves with putting Mr. Jackſon on explaining himſelf; and he ſaid, He meant the Merchants who preſented unreaſonable Petitions. Some thought this rather an Aggravation than an Excuſe; and cry'd out Cuſtody! Cuſtody! but Mr. Robert Walpole brought him off, by ſuggeſting, 'That that 'Gentleman having liv'd ſo long in a deſpotick Government, where Petitions and Repreſentations of that Nature are accounted Capital Crimes, he had forgot the Rights and Privileges of his Country Men; and therefore mov'd that his unguarded Expreſſions might be excus'd;' and no body oppoſing Mr. Walpole, Mr. Jackſon withdrew. It muſt be remember'd, that this Prohibition of the Trade with Sweden, was purſuant to an Addreſs of the Parliament; and therefore the Reflection of the Tories upon it, was the more unjuſt and ungrateful. The Annaliſt informs us, Sir W——m W——m 'wonder'd we ſhould diſtruſt, and endeavour to ruin, a Prince and 'Nation who have ever been the Support of 'the Proteſtant Religion; and whom by Treaties we ſtand oblig'd to defend.' But it was far from being matter of Wonderment, that we ſhould endeavour to diſtreſs a Prince who endeavour'd to ruin us; and inſtead of being the Support of the Proteſtant Religion, had given us juſt Grounds to fear an Invaſion from him, to ſupport a Popiſh Pretender. This Debate was adjourn'd for a Month, by a Majority of 201 Voices againſt 111.

About this time dy'd Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, whoſe Character had been very bright, in the former part of his Life, but ſomewhat darkned in the latter, by his Adherence to that Set of Men, who, as Mr. Jackſon ſaid, made it their Study and Buſineſs to embarraſs the Government, when the Adminiſtration was not in their Hands.

On the 13th of February, Robert Earl of Holderneſs, was ſworn of His Majeſty's Privy Council, and on the 14th the Convocation was further prorogu'd to the 18th of June.

Ev'ry one expected that the Bill beforemention'd for erecting Hoſpitals and Workhouſes at Briſtol, wou'd meet with ſome Obſtruction in the Upper Houſe, on account of the Clauſe, which, in the Caſe of Guardianſhip for Charities, abrogated and made void for ever the Sacramental Teſt; but whatever Obſtruction there was, the Bill paſt with ſome Amendments; upon which ſeveral Lords enter'd their Proteſt, as,

A.D. 1718

On the 17th of March, Mr. Comptroller acquainted the Houſe of Commons that he had a Meſſage ſign'd by His Majeſty, which was read by Mr. Speaker as follows:

GEORGE R.

A Meſſage about Exceedings for Sea Service

'His Majeſty being at preſent engag'd in ſe-'veral Negotiations of the utmoſt Concern to 'the Welfare of theſe Kingdoms, and the Tran-'quility of Europe; and having lately receiv'd 'Information from Abroad, which makes him 'judge that it will give Weight to his Endea-'vours, if a Naval Force be employ'd where it 'ſhall be neceſſary, does think fit to acquaint this 'Houſe therewith, not doubting, but that in 'Caſe he ſhall be oblig'd, at this Critical Juncture, 'to exceed the Number of Men granted this 'Year for the Sea Service, the Houſe will (at the 'next Meeting) provide for ſuch Exceedings.'

The Commons readily comply'd with this Meſſage, and upon a Motion made by Sir William Strickland reſolv'd, 'That an humble 'Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty, to return 'His Majeſty the Thanks of this Houſe, for his 'unweary'd Endeavours to promote the Wel-'fare of his Kingdoms, and preſerve the Tran-'quility of Europe: And to aſſure His Majeſty 'that this Houſe will make good ſuch Exceed-'ings of Men for the Sea Service of the Year '1718, as His Majeſty (in His Royal Wiſdom) 'ſhall find neceſſary to obtain thoſe deſirable 'Ends.' This Motion was carri'd without dividing: And the Spaniſh Ambaſſador having about this Time expoſtulated concerning the great Preparations for ſending a Fleet into the Mediteranean; it was reported Mr. Walpole ſaid, 'That ſuch an Addreſs had all the Air of 'a Declaration of War againſt Spain;' which thoſe ſhould have conſider'd, who made the Want of ſuch a formal Declaration, an occaſion of Complaint, when our Fleet fought that of Spain.'

The next Day, March 28. Mr. Comptroller acquainted the Houſe, 'That their Addreſs 'had been preſented to His Majeſty, and that 'he was commanded by His Majeſty to return 'His Majeſty's hearty Thanks to this Houſe, 'and to aſſure them, That His Majeſty ſhall 'think himſelf oblig'd, in Return of the great 'Confidence they have repos'd in him, not on-'ly to uſe the utmoſt Oeconomy that ſhall be 'conſiſtent with the real Intereſt of his Subjects 'for the enſuing Year, but likewiſe apply his 'moſt earneſt Endeavours to prevent future 'Burdens to his People, by eſtabliſhing a laſt-'ing Peace and Tranquility.' About this Time Sir Edward Northey was remov'd from being Attorney General; and Mr. Lechmere, Chancellor

The Reverend, Pious and Learned Dr. Clark, Rector of St. James's Weſtminſter, was appointed Maſter of Wigſton's Hoſpital, in the Town of Leiceſter, fit to be recorded as an Inſtance of the Modeſty and Diſintereſtedneſs of that very eminent Divine, equal to, tho' not deſirous of, the higheſt Station in the Church. The Reverend Mr. Peploe, Miniſter of Preſton, was made Warden of Mancheſter College; and Dr. Offley, Dean of Cheſter.

On the 21 of March, His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Acts of Parliament: And my Lord Chancellor having receiv'd from His Majeſty's Hands His Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech to both Houſes, read it as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'I Cannot put an End to this Seſſion without returning my hearty Thanks to ſo good a Parliament for the Diſpatch which has been given to the publick Buſineſs: You will, I hope, in your private Capacities, feel the Convenience of an early Receſs; and, I am perſwaded, the Publick will receive great Benefit by the ſeaſonable Zeal and Vigour of your Reſolutions, in Support of my Government.

'Nothing can add ſo much to the Credit and Influence of this Crown, both at Home and Abroad, as the repeated Inſtances of your Affections to Me: This Readineſs and Reſolution of yours, will, I hope, enable Me to procure againſt your next Meeting, ſuch Treaties to be concluded, as will ſettle Peace and Tranquility among our Neighbours.

'If, thro' the Bleſſing of God, my Endeavours to this End prove Succeſsful, I ſhall have the Satisfaction to Silence even thoſe who will never own themſelves convinc'd; and to let all the World ſee plainly, that what I have moſt at Heart is the Good and Welfare of my People, who may then be eas'd in their Taxes and enrich'd by their Trade.

'The Pretences which are daily us'd by a moſt Reſtleſs and Unhappy Sett of Men to diſturb a Government by whoſe Clemency they are Protected, require Our utmoſt Attention and Vigilance. Intereſt therefore recommends it to You, that in your ſeveral Stations and Countries You will endeavour to quiet that Spirit of Diſaffection which our Common Enemies are ſo induſtrious to foment.

The Lord Chancellor, after reading the Speech, prorogu'd the Parliament to the 20th of May.

The Marquis De Paleoti, an Italian, Brother to the Dutcheſs of Shrewſbury, was try'd, convicted and condemn'd for the Murder of his Servant, and his Character was ſo vile, that notwithſtanding the Interceſſion made for him by his Siſter and ſome Foreign Miniſters, all the Favour he could obtain was, that he ſhould be Executed by himſelf. Accordingly he was carried to Tyburn in a Coach, on Monday March the

The Jacobites cry'd out againſt this Proſecution and Execution, as an Act of Injuſtice and Cruelty, but Orme, one of their Prieſts who attended him in Newgate, witneſs'd to the contrary, by extolling him as a pious ſenſible Youth, excited by Zeal for a good Cauſe; and after having adminiſtred the Sacrament to him ſeveral times, he abſolv'd him of his intended Treaſon and Murder at the Gallows. This young Traitor being call'd upon at his Trial to make Defence, after the King's Evidence, Mr. John Leak, Mrs. Mary Leak his Daughter, Martha Wale their Servant Maid, Sir John Fryer, Mr. De la Fay, had been heard to the Proof of the Fact, ſaid, He acknowledg'd the truth of what had been depos'd againſt him, that he meant it, intended it, and did not think there was any harm in it, or any guilt in the Fact if committed. Being aſk'd, before Sentence, what he had to ſay why Judgment ſhould not paſs upon him according to Law, he reply'd, I cannot hope for Mercy from a Prince I will not own. Dr. Henchman (one of that Name was Advocate for Sacheverel) was his Uncle, and had concern'd himſelf in his Education, and he ſaid at the Secretary's Office, he was confirm'd in his Principles by reading Pamphlets, particularly one entitled, A Vindication of the Biſhop of Exeter, Dr. Offspring Blackhall, who wrote againſt Biſhop Hoadly with very bad Succeſs. All theſe Things put together are convincing Proofs of the tendency of thoſe Tory Pamphlets, and of the great Danger to which His Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government were expos'd by them.

It has been hinted that the Abbot du Bois's Journey and Stay in England was for finiſhing the Project of a Treaty for Preſerving the Peace of Europe, about to be broken by King Philip, who impatient to recover his Loſſes in Italy, was reſolv'd to attempt it while the Emperor was involv'd in a War with the Turks: The Courts of Great Britain and France well Inform'd of his Intentions made Proviſion againſt it, by this Treaty in which the States General were included, notwithſtanding their High Mightineſſes had not in Form concurred in it: but one muſt ſuppoſe that the Miniſters in Holland were well appriz'd of the Diſpoſition of their Maſters to contract with Great Britain and France for that good Purpoſe, and that the Towns and Provinces wou'd in due time impower their Deputies in the Aſſembly of the States General, to conſent that their High Mightineſſes ſhould become Parties in the Tripple Alliance, ſo called till the Emperor acceded to it, and the Quadruple Alliance, or Treaty of London afterwards. The Lord Cadogan the Britiſh Ambaſſador, and the French Ambaſſador the Marquis de Chateauneuf, had frequent Conferences with the States Deputies on this Subject; which, beſides the Delays occaſion'd by the tedious Forms in paſſing Treaties in Holland, was delay'd by ſome Difficulties about the Barrier Treaty, which the States were willing to have remov'd before they enter'd into an Alliance ſo much to the Advantage of the Emperor, as was that concluded between Great Britain and France. The good Offices of His Britannick Majeſty brought the Affair of the Barrier to a final and happy Concluſion, which was ſoon follow'd by the States joining in the Treaty of London.

His Majeſty's Miniſters bring the Barrier Treaty to a happy Concluſion.

The Court of Great Britain knew very well that nothing would contribute more to the good Effect of that Treaty, than a Preparation to maintain it by Force if the Enemies to the Repoſe of Europe drove them to it: For that End a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War was, as has been hinted, fitted out for the Mediteranean, which we ſhall ſpeak more particularly of a few Weeks hence: And another, under Sir John Norris, ſail'd from Solebay for Copenhaguen, May 1. to have an Eye on the Powers of the North, that were in ill Terms with Great Britain. Ld. Parker made Lord Chancellor.

On the 12th of the ſame Month His Majeſty was pleas'd to deliver the Great Seal of Great Britain to Thomas Lord Parker, and to declare him Lord High Chancellor. Three Days after His Lordſhip went with great Solemnity from the Inner-Temple-Hall to Weſtminſter, attended by the Judges, and ſeveral Perſons of the firſt Quality, as the Duke of Bolton, Duke of Kent, Duke of Kingſton, Duke of Newcaſtle, the Earl of Lincoln, Earl Stanhope, Lord Viſcount Cobham, Biſhop of Glouceſter, Mr. Secretary Craggs, Mr. Boſcawen, and others. At the ſame time Mr. Juſtice Prat was appointed to be Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Kings-Bench in the room of the Lord Parker, Baron Forteſcue Aland to be one of the Juſtices of that Court, and Sir Francis Page to be a Baron of the Exchequer, Robert Pringle, Eſq; under Secretary, was made Secretary at War pro Tempore, and his Brother Sir Walter Pringle one of the Lords of Seſſions in Scotland.

The Lord Chancellor gave two good Places to two good Poets, he made Nicholas Rowe, Eſq; Poet Laureat, Secretary of the Preſentations; and Mr. John Hughs, Author of the Siege of Damaſcus, a Tragedy, Secretary of the Commiſſions of the Peace.

Sir John Brownlow was created Lord Brownlow and Viſcount Tyrconnel in the Kingdom of Ireland; the Lord Roſſe was made an Earl, Captain Bacon Morris was appointed Lieutenant-Governor

A.D.1718 Governor of Languard-Fort, in the room of Gwyn Vaughan, Eſq; The Biſhop of Carliſle being tranſlated to the See of Londonderry in Ireland, the Biſhop of Glouceſter was appointed Lord High Almoner to His Majeſty.

In the mean time the Treaty of Peace between the Imperial and Ottoman Courts was carried on at Paſſarowitz by the Mediation of His Britannick Majeſty and the States General, and concluded and Sign'd the 2d of July.

On the 10th of July an Expreſs arriv'd from Earl Stanhope and the Earl of Stairs in France, with an Account, That a Convention between His Britannick Majeſty and the moſt Chriſtian King, for ſettling the Terms of the Treaty of Peace between the Emperor and the King of Spain, and between His Imperial Majeſty and the King of Sicily, having on the 6th Inſtant, O. S. been read in the Council of the Regency and unanimouſly approv'd, was Sign'd the next Morning by the Earl of Stairs and Earl Stanhope on the Part of Great Britain, and by the Mareſchal de Huxelles Preſident of the Council for Foreign Affairs, and the Count de Cheverny another Member of the ſaid Council, thereby Impower'd on the Part of France. In purſuance of the ſaid Convention, the Treaty of Alliance between the Emperor, His Majeſty of Great Britain, and the moſt Chriſtian King, for Reſtoring the Tranquility of Europe, was Sign'd at the Secretaries Office at the Cock-Pit, by the Baron de Benterrieder and Monſieur Hoffman his Imperial Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries; by the Abbot Du Bois his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Plenipotentiary; and by the following Lords of his Britannick Majeſty's Privy-Council, thereto authorized by His Majeſty's full Power under the Great Seal of Great Britain, viz. the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Parker Lord High Chancellor, the Earl of Sunderland Lord Preſident of the Council, the Duke of Kingſton Lord Privy-Seal, the Duke of Kent Lord Steward of the Houſhold, the Duke of Newcaſtle Lord Chamberlain, the Duke of Bolton Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the Earl of Berkley Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, the Duke of Roxburgh and Mr. Craggs Principal Secretaries of State. We have obſerv'd, that it not being doubted but the States General would come into this Alliance, their High Mightineſſes were nam'd in it as one of the Contracting Parties; from whence this Treaty was rightly term'd, The Quadruple Alliance. The Convention abovemention'd was inſerted in this Treaty, and declar'd, that the Reduction of Sardinia, was a Breach of the Neutrality of Italy: That Sicily ſhould be deliver'd up to the Emperor; and Sardinia to the Duke of Savoy. The Succeſſion to the Dutchies of Parma and Tuſcany, was ſettled on the Queen of Spain's Son, in Caſe of Failure of Heirs in the Houſes of Tuſcany and Parma, provided the King of Spain enter'd into the Treaty by a certain Time. Soon after News came to London, of the ſigning of the abovemention'd Convention at Paris, the Count de Perouſe, Ambaſſador from the King of Sicily, waited on his Britannick Majeſty with a Letter from his Maſter, acquainting His Majeſty, that the Spaniards had poſſeſt themſelves of Palermo in that Iſland, in Violation of the Treaty of Utrecht, of which the Crown of Great Britain is one of the Guarantees; and therefore his Sicilian Majeſty hop'd, His Britannick Majeſty would aſſiſt him with his Forces, to drive the Spaniards out of Italy. We muſt not forget that the Earl of S—— took up the Lord Stanhope very ſhort in the Houſe of Lords for ſaying the ſame thing. That ſcandalous Treaty was ſo well known that no body did deny this Guaranty: But the Tories who made that Treaty, were now as clamorous to have it broken, by rejecting this Guaranty, as they were for the making of it to break the Confederacy. 'Twas ſuppos'd that Alberoni, who did what he pleas'd in Spain, underſtanding that Sicily was to be deliver'd up to the Emperor, got a Fleet and Army to be ſent thither to poſſeſs themſelves of that Iſland for King Philip, before the Allies cou'd accompliſh any ſuch Ceſſion to the Emperor. His Britannick Majeſty was not very forward to anſwer the Expectation of the King of Sicily, by a Promiſe of his Aſſiſtance: The Anſwer was equally juſt and prudent: That His Britannick Majeſty and the moſt Chriſtian King, acted only as Mediators to reſtore and ſecure the Tranquility of Europe, and in that View they had projected and concluded a Treaty of Alliance, in which the Emperor had concur'd; and that the beſt way for the King of Sicily to recover and ſecure his juſt Pretentions was to come into the ſaid Treaty.

The Convention before the Quadruple Alliance.

On the 12th of July, O. S. the Earl of Cadogan receiv'd an Expreſs from Paris with an Account of the Signing the Convention Preparatory to the Quadruple Alliance, as abovementioned: He notified it immediately to the States General; upon which their High Mightineſſes wrote very preſſing Letters to the Provinces that had not yet given their Conſent to the Republick's coming into it, exhorting them to do it without delay; which had the better effect, upon their receiving News of the Concluſion of the Treaty of Paſſarowitz, and Prince Eugene's detaching 16000 Men to reinforce the Imperial Army in Italy, which the Dutch thought wou'd much facilitate the Concluſion of a Peace.

Sir George Byng came with the Britiſh Fleet into the Bay of Cadiz, the 24th of June, and the next Day ſent Mr. Alix, his Secretary, with Diſpatches for Colonel Stanhope, His Britannick Majeſty's Miniſter at Madrid, where Mr. Alix arriv'd five Days after, and delivering his Diſpatches to Colonel Stanhope, went to the Eſcurial, and deliver'd a Letter to King Philip from Sir George Byng, importing in Subſtance, That as the King of Great Britain was Guarantee of the Peace of Italy, he could not but maintain the ſame; and therefore his Admiral had Orders to act againſt thoſe who ſhould go about to violate it. Colonel Stanhope made the ſame Declaration by Word of Mouth, to which the Court of Madrid return'd an Anſwer, that reliſh'd very much of the Inſolence with which the falſe Repreſentations of James Butler, and the other traiterous Fugitives, had inſpir'd them, as if the Faction in England would be ſtrong enough to hinder any War with Spain: They ſaid, The Admiral might follow his Orders. He did ſo: And the Conſequence was, that Alberoni was glad to get out of that Kingdom. The Jacobites in England were indeed anxious enough about the Safety of the Spaniſh Fleet; which they hop'd and expected wou'd in a little Time be employ'd in the Pretender's Service: And beſides the idle Argument that we were not concern'd in Sardinia and Sicily, and that the Recovery or Preſervation of them was no Buſineſs of ours; notwithſtanding the Guaranty

The Court of Spain has Notice of Sir George Byng's Inſtructions to act. They deliſe it.

The Clamour of the Loſs of the Spaniſh Trade falſe.

of Great Britain for the Emperor's Territories in Italy, as well after, as before, that Neutrality; they made a great Noiſe for the Loſs of our Commerce with Spain, by a Rupture on that account: When at the ſame Time the Engliſh Merchants in Spain wrote home, that ſo many Hardſhips were put upon them and their Trade, it was impoſſible for them to carry it on, without Redreſs of their Grievances; and impoſſible for them to get any Redreſs by Repreſentations and Memorials, without a Force to ſupport them. This I was aſſur'd by Mr. Addiſon, late Secretary of State, whom I ſaw at the Hot Well near Briſtol, where he was then uſing the Waters; and upon the Merchants of that City diſcourſing with him in the vulgar Opinion of the Loſs of our Trade to Spain, by a War; He ſaid, They knew nothing of the Matter: For the Engliſh Merchants in Spain, are the very Perſons that have (ever ſince I was in the Secretary's Office) deſir'd a War for the Security of that Commerce; which theſe Men pretend will be loſt by one. 'Tis certain the Britiſh Merchants judg'd for themſelves in particular, and according to their particular Views and Intereſts, and not for the general Good of the Trade. All the Steps the Court of Great Britain took to preſerve the Peace by Accommodation, juſtify thoſe they took to ſecure it by Power; if the other means fail'd. The Earl Stanhope ſet out from the Court of France for that of Madrid, on the 22d of July, N. S. to prevent (if poſſible) the Coming to Extremities; which by Sir George Byng's Inſtructions, he knew wou'd be near at hand. But the Court of Spain were long before come to a Point, which they reſolv'd to puſh, at all Adventures, to recover what had been taken from them in Italy, by the Treaty of Utrecht: And we ſhall find Earl Stanhope's Journey to Madrid, has not Succeſs equal to the Length and Fatigue of it. That King Philip's Miniſters were concerting how to break that Treaty as ſoon as it was concluded is not doubted; from their Conduct towards His Majeſty of Great Britain; who, before he enter'd into the Alliance with the Emperor in May 1716, or into that with France in 1717, had by his Miniſter George Dodington, Eſq; then George Bubb, Eſq; propos'd a defenſive Alliance with Spain, and communicated to that Court Copies of thoſe two Treaties before they were ſign'd, and Cardinal Alberoni ſeem'd to approve the pacifick Meaſures taken by the Court of Great Britain. His Excellency Mr. Dodington frequently mention'd to Cardinal Alberoni to diſpoſe His Catholick Majeſty to give ſuch Orders and Inſtructions as would put it in His Britannick Majeſty's Power to ſtand up for his Intereſts and Advantages in the Negotiations, towards preſerving the Tranquility of Europe: And Colonel Stanhope was afterwards ſent to Spain, on Purpoſe to repeat the Inſtances made by Mr. Dodington on that Subject; which he did for five Months without Intermiſſion; but with no better Succeſs than the former Inſtances had met with. The Court of Spain knew well enough that by the Treaty of May 1716, between the Emperor and the King of Great Britain, His Britannick Majeſty lay under an indiſpenſible Obligation to aſſiſt the Emperor, when the Territories whereof he had Poſſeſſion were attack'd; and that this new Obligation was only a Confirmation of a prior one, in the Guaranty of the Treaty of Neutrality. By all which it appears, that King Philip was obſtinately bent on the Breach of that Treaty; and in Defiance of all Treaties made by the Supream Powers of Europe, invaded the Territories of the Emperor and King of Sicily. The ſmall Conqueſt of Sardinia, and the Arrival of the Plate Fleet from New Spain at Cadiz, ſo fluſh'd the Spaniſh Miniſters, that Earl Stanhope, who was at firſt receiv'd with great Marks of Reſpect, found his Stay at that Court wou'd produce nothing to the Purpoſe he came about; and not being deſirous of remaining there after News ſhould come of Sir George Byng's having met the Spaniſh Fleet, the Conſequence of which, (he doubted not) would be as it was, he had his Audience of Leave the 26th of Auguſt, N. S. a Fortnight after his Arrival at Madrid. Six Days before he left that Court, Cardinal Alberoni wrote a Letter to the Marquis de Beretti Lenide, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador in Holland, full of Expreſſions of his Maſter's Kindneſs and Favour to the Engliſh Nation, and eſpecially to the Merchants; which was intended only to humour the Faction in England, that made Speeches and diſperſt Libels againſt performing our Treaties with the Emperor, by hazarding a War with Spain, where James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, George Keith, late Earl Mareſchal in Scotland, and other Britiſh Traytors, were ſo well protected and entertain'd.

The next Day the Admiral receiv'd Advice that the Spaniſh Fleet was in Sight of Reggio; upon which he reſolv'd to follow them; and the next Day, July 31, juſt four Years after the late Queen's Death, he came up with them, and an Engagement enſu'd.

From the Defeat of the Spaniſh Fleet by Sir George Byng off of Sicily, to the Execution of the South-Sea Company's Scheme for Incorporating Publick Funds into their Stock.

Containing the Space of one Year and Eight Months.

A.D. 1718 THE Account of the Victory obtain'd by Sir George Byng over the Spaniſh Fleet, was brought by his eldeſt Son Captain Byng, and is as follows in the genuine Maritime Stile.

Auguſt 6. O. S.

'Early in the Morning, on the 30th of July, 'as we were ſtanding in for Meſſina, we ſaw 'two Scouts of the Spaniſh Fleet in the Faro, 'very near us; and at the ſame time a Felucca 'coming off from the Calabrian Shore, aſſur'd 'us they ſaw from the Hills the Spaniſh Fleet 'lying by; upon which the Admiral ſtood 'thro' the Faro after the Scouts, judging they 'would lead us to their Fleet, which they did, 'for before Noon we had a fair ſight of all their 'Ships, as they were drawing into Line of Battle. 'On our approach they went from us Large, 'but in their Order of Battle their Fleet con-'ſiſting of 26 Men of War, great and ſmall, 'two Fireſhips, four Bomb Veſſels, ſeven Gal-'leys, and ſeveral Ships with Stores and Pro-'viſions. The Admiral order'd the Kent, Su-'perbe, Grafton and Orford, the beſt Sailors in 'the Fleet, to make what Sail they could to 'come up with the Spaniards; and that the Ship 'that could get neareſt to them ſhould carry 'the Lights uſually worn by the Admiral, 'that he might not loſe ſight of them in the 'Night, and he made what Sail he could with 'the reſt of the Fleet to keep up with them. 'It being little Wind the Spaniſh Galleys tow'd 'their heavieſt Sailors all Night. The 31ſt in 'the Morning, as ſoon as it was Day, they 'finding us pretty near up with their Fleet, 'the Galleys and ſmaller Ships, with the 'Fireſhips, Bomb-Veſſels, and Store-Ships ſe-'parated from their Admiral and bigger Ships, 'and ſtood in for the Shore. After whom the 'Admiral ſent Captain Walton in the Canter-'bury, with the Argyle and ſix Ships more. As 'thoſe Ships were coming up with them, one 'of the Spaniard's fir'd a Broadſide at the 'Argyle. (By this it appears that the Spaniards began the Hoſtilities between the two Fleets.) 'The Admiral ſeeing thoſe Ships engag'd with 'the Spaniſh which were making towards the 'Shore, ſent Orders to Captain Walton to ren-'dezvous after the Action at Syracuſe. The 'like Orders he diſpatch'd to the Flags, and 'to as many Ships as were within his reach. We 'held our Chace after the Spaniſh Admiral with 'three of his Rear Admirals and the biggeſt 'Ships, which ſtaid by their Flags, till we came 'near them. The Captains of the Kent, Su-'perbe, Grafton and Orford having Orders to 'make all the Sail they could to place them-'ſelves by the four Headmoſt Ships, were the 'firſt that came up with them. The Spaniards 'began by firing their Stern Chace at them. (A ſecond Proof of their being the Aggreſſors.) 'But they having Orders not to fire unleſs 'the Spaniſh Ships repeated their firing, made 'no Return at firſt, but the Spaniards firing 'again, the Orford attack'd the Santa Roſa, 'the St. Charles ſtruck without much Oppoſi-'tion, and the Kent took Poſſeſſion of her. 'The Grafton attack'd the Prince of Aſturias, 'formerly call'd the Cumberland, in which was 'Rear Admiral Chacon, but the Breda and 'Captain coming up, ſhe left that Ship for 'them to take, which they ſoon did, and 'ſtretch'd a Head after another 60 Gun Ship, 'which was at her Starboard Bow while ſhe 'was engaging the Prince of Aſturias, and kept 'firing her Stern-Chace into the Grafton. A-'bout One a Clock the Kent and Superbe en-'gaged the Spaniſh Admiral, which, with two 'Ships more fir'd on them, and made a running 'Fight till about Three, when the Kent bear-'ing down upon her and under her Stern gave 'her a Broadſide, and went away to Leeward 'of her; then the Superbe put for it and laid 'the Spaniſh Admiral on Board, falling on her 'Weather-Quarter, but the Spaniſh Admiral 'ſhifting her Helm and avoiding her, the Su-'perbe rang'd under her Lee-Quarter, on which 'ſhe ſtruck to her. At the ſame time the 'Barfleur being within Shot of the ſaid Spa-'niſh Admiral, after inclining on her Weather-'Quarter, one of their Rear Admirals, and an-'other 60 Gun Ship, which were to Windward 'of the Barfleur, bore down and gave her three 'Broadſides, and then clapt upon a Wind, 'ſtanding in for the Land; the Admiral in the 'Barfleur ſtood after them till it was almoſt 'Night, but it being little Wind, and they 'galing from him out of reach, he left purſu-'ing them and ſtood away to the Fleet again, 'which he found two Hours after Night. The 'Eſſex took the Juno, the Montague and Ru-'pert took the Volante; Vice Admiral Cornwal 'follow'd the Grafton to ſupport her, but it 'being very little Wind and the Night coming 'on, the Spaniard galed away from the Grafton; 'Rear Admiral Delaval with the Royal Oak 'chas'd two Ships that went away more Lee-'wardly than the reſt, one of them ſaid to be 'Rear Admiral Crammock, a Scotch or Iriſh 'Renegade, who had ſerv'd ſeveral Years in the 'Engliſh Fleet; but we not having ſeen them 'ſince, know not the Succeſs; Cammock got 'away to Maltha.'

The Spaniards fire firſt.

And again.

Auguſt 7. O. S.

'Juſt now is returned one of the eight Ships 'which the Admiral ſent with Captain Walton 'to purſue thoſe of Spain that went in with 'the Shore with a Letter from that Captain, 'giving an Account that he had taken one 'Spaniſh Rear Admiral of 60 Guns, one Man 'of War of 54. one of 40, which gave the 'Argyle the firſt Broadſide, one of 24, one 'Ship laden with Arms, one Bomb-Veſſel; 'and had burnt one Man of War of 54 Guns,

'two

A.D 1718 'two of 40 each, one of 30, one Fireſhip, 'one Bomb-Veſſel, one Sattee, Rear Admiral 'Delaval took the Iſabella a 60 Gun Ship.

The Prizes were ſent to Port Mahon, and the Priſoners put a-ſhoar in Sicily. The Court of Great Britain had News of this Victory, by Advices from Turin, ſome Days before the Arrival of Captain Byng, who, not having ſet out from Naples till the 15th of Auguſt, came not to Hampton Court till the 30th. As to the Superiority in Strength of the two Fleets, it was very little, reckoning by the Guns, Engliſh 1360, Spaniſh 1310: To the latter muſt be added ſeven Galleys of great Service to the Enemy; and the Advantage of the cleaner Ships; the Engliſh having been a two Months Voyage before the Battle, and the Spaniards being but juſt put to Sea. 'Tis certain they made but a poor Buſineſs of it, conſidering the Airs they gave themſelves before the Blow was given; and as is uſual on ſuch Occaſions, their Mortification after their Defeat, was equal to their Preſumption before. By the following Liſts, the Equality of the Strength of the two Fleets, and the Loſs of the Spaniards, are more apparent. A.D 1718

What the Marquis de Monteleone ſaid in a Letter ro Mr. Secretary Craggs, That this Action was unexpected, is doubtleſs as true as that which comes after, God has committed the Indies to the Truſt of the Spnniards that all Nations might partake of the Riches of that New World: And as what Cardinal Alberoni wrote to the Marquis de Beretti Lande, that the Spaniſh Fleet was equip'd only to ſecure their Ports in the Mediterranean; when at the ſame time they were attacking Sardinia, and about to attack Sicily, both Guaranted by Great Britain to the Emperor and Duke of Savoy, by the late Treaties, which the Court of Spain was after put in Mind of. What elſe but the Diſaſter and Diſgrace which happen'd to him could the Spaniards expect, after they knew Admiral Byng (as he told them) had Orders to act againſt thoſe that ſhould violate the Peace of Italy, of which the King his Maſter was Guarantee; and after they had Inſolently told him, He might follow his Orders. Now this Action was ſo far from being unexpected, as the Marquis de Monteleone pretended, that Cardinal Alberoni told Earl Stanhope, He well foreſaw what might happen, but us'd no Endeavours to prevent it, being infatuated either with the Hopes of reducing Sicily before the Engliſh Fleet could come up with theirs, or with a vain Perſwaſion that the Engliſh durſt not attack them, it being againſt the Senſe of the Nation, as was falſely repreſented to him by the Diſaffected Party, and eſpecially by the Engliſh and Scotch Fugitives at Madrid.

Spaniards Inſolence before the Fight, tho' they expected it.

We have ſeen by the Convention Sign'd at Paris, what care the Contracting Parties took of the Intereſts of King Philip, and had he enter'd into the Quadruple Alliance in Time, he would have ſav'd himſelf and all Europe much trouble; that he did it afterwards, prov'd he might as reaſonably have done it before the Action between the Fleets; for the Defeat of his Fleet did not alter the Reaſon or Juſtice of his doing it, but encreas'd the Neceſſity, of which he would not till then be convinc'd.

The Famous Quadruple Alliance is purely Defenſive between the Emperor of Germany, the King of Great Britain, the moſt Chriſtian King, and the States General, who are reciprocally engag'd to aſſiſt each other againſt all their Enemies Foreign and Domeſtick, according to the following Stipulation, in Caſe of Attack: His Imperial Majeſty to furniſh 8000 Foot and 4000 Horſe, His Britannick Majeſty 8000 Foot and 4000 Horſe, His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty 8000 Foot and 4000 Horſe, and the Lords the States General 4000 Foot and 2000 Horſe. The Article for the Defence of each others Territories is reciprocal, and almoſt in the ſame Terms with reſpect to all, excepting that Article as it relates to Great Britain, which is the moſt plain and direct Guaranty againſt the Pretender that is inſerted in any Treaty whatſoever: And King Philip entring into it afterwards we ſhall know the better what Judgment to make of the Conduct of the Emperor and King of Spain, upon concluding the future Treaty of Vienna. The Article is thus worded, 'V. Their Imperial and moſt Chriſtian Majeſties, and the Lords the States General, engage 'for Themſelves, their Heirs and Succeſſors, to 'maintain and Guaranty the Succeſſion to the 'Kingdom of Great Britain, as 'tis eſtabliſh'd 'by the Laws of the Kingdom in the Houſe of 'His Britannick Majeſty who now Reigns, and 'alſo to Guaranty All the Dominions which 'His Britannick Majeſty poſſeſſes, and to give 'no Aſylum or Retreat in any Part of their 'Dominions to the Perſon, who, during the 'Life of King James II. took the Title of 'Prince of Wales, and ſince his Death the Title 'of King of Great Britain; nor to the Deſcendants of the ſaid Perſon, in Caſe he ſhall have 'any; promiſing likewiſe for Themſelves, 'their Heirs and Succeſſors, never to aid the 'ſaid Perſon, nor his Deſcendants, directly or 'indirectly, by Sea or by Land, by Counſel or 'Aſſiſtance, either by Money, Arms, or Ammunition, Ships, Soldiers, Mariners, or in 'any other manner whatever, nor likewiſe in 'any ſort ſuch as may have Commiſſion from 'the ſaid Perſon or his Deſcendants, to diſturb 'the Government of His Britannick Majeſty, or 'the Repoſe of his Dominions, either by open 'War, ſecret Conſpiracies, exciting Seditions and 'Rebellions, or by committing Pyracies againſt 'the Subjects of His Britannick Majeſty.' This laſt Stipulation is alſo reciprocal between the King of Great Britain and the other Contracting Powers.

Articles of the Quadruple Alliance.

The Emperor and K. of Spain Guaranty the Proteſtant Succeſſion by it

On the 25th of Auguſt Signior Fiorelli, Secretary of the Republick of Venice, had a private Audience of the King, being introduced by Mr. Secretary Craggs, and delivered a Letter to His Majeſty from the moſt Serene Republick, in whoſe Names he thank'd His Majeſty for the good Offices done for the Republick by His Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at the Congreſs of Paſſarowitz in the Negotiation of Peace with the Turks.

The State of Venice thank the K. of G. Britain for his good Offices.

A.D. 1718 But while His Majesty's Arms and Counsels were Victorious and Successful Abroad in preventing the pernicious Designs of those who would have involv'd Europe in War; the Jacobites, (in his own Dominions) to give a new Proof of the Baseness and Malice of the evil Spirit that possest them, defac'd and cut in Pieces His Majesty's Picture, which His Majesty had given the City of Dublin, and was set up in the Tholsel: In Detestation of which villainous Act, the Lords Justices and Council issu'd a Proclamation, with a Promise of 1000 l. Sterling Reward, to such Person as shall discover one or more of the Villains concern'd in defacing the said Picture: and the Lord Mayor of that City, by Advice and Consent of the Court of Aldermen, and Common Council, publish'd a Proclamation with the Promise of a Reward of 500 l. Sterling, to the Discoverer. Such was the hellish Spite and Rage of the Irish Tories! And how the English imitated them, was seen in their defacing the Equestrian Statue of His Majesty set up in Grosvenor Square, Westm. Miserable Wretches! to be held in perpetual Abhorrence, as the very Dregs of Treason and Rebellion.

The Citizens of London about this Time, (July 4th) set up a fine Statue of His Majesty in one of the Nitches of the Royal-Exchange, and would not in those Days have refus'd a Spot of Ground for a Pedestal to bear the Statue of our great Deliverer King William III of glorious and immortal Memory: But that odious Incident comes not into this History. Mr. Secretary Craggs's Letter to the Marquis de Monteleone, in Answer to one from that Minister, after the News of the Naval Engagament of Sicily, clears up every Particular in the Dispute between the two Courts of Great Britain and Spain; shews the Wisdom and Justice of His Majesty's Proceeding, and the Injustice and Obstinacy of the Spaniards: We must content our Selves with the last Paragraph of it, for want of more Compass.

Mr Secretary Craggs's Letter to the Spanish Ambassador.

'To conclude, Sir, I beg of your Excellency 'to reflect, that the King has demanded no new 'Advantage; that he does not seek to aggran-'dize himself by any new Acquisitions; but 'is rather inclin'd to sacrifice something of his 'own, to procure that general Quiet and Tran-'quility, which he only desires to enjoy in 'common with the rest of his Neighbours: And 'I have His Majesty's Orders to declare to your 'Excellency, that he wishes not only for Peace, 'but even for the strictest Friendship with his 'Catholick Majesty; that he earnestly demands 'them both, and that on his Part he offers them 'to him. But, in a Word, whatever shall be 'the Event, His Majesty will maintain the Dig-'nity of his Crown, the Trade and Privileges 'of his Subjects, and the Faith of his Treaties.'

Cardinal Alberoni writing to the Marquis de Beretti Lande, at the Hague, gives him an Account of the ill Success of Earl Stanhope's Negotiations at the Court of Spain; and tells him, the King and Queen of Spain detested the Project form'd by the Convention at Paris, and inserted in the Quadruple Alliance. At the Close of this Letter he speaks of the Advantages the Germans would have over the French and their Allies in a War in Italy, which however did not hinder King Philip's engaging with France in a War against the Germans in Italy, at the Time we are now writing, and shews the Uncertainty of the Spaniards Politicks, as well as of their Amity. 'I likewise shew'd my Lord 'Stanhope, (says the Cardinal) that the Ger-'mans, in the last War, with a small Body of 'Troops, made Head, and disputed the Ground 'against two Crowns, which had formidable 'Armies in Lombardy, were Masters of the 'Country, and of a great Number of considera-'ble Places: I also represented to him, (very 'clearly) that to make War in Lombardy, was 'to make it in a Labyrinth, and that it was the 'fatal Burial Place of the French and English: 'That every Year of the last War, cost France '18 or 20000 Recruits, and above 15 Millions: 'That the Duke of Vendosme, at the Time 'Things went prosperously, said, That if the 'War in Italy lasted, the two Crowns must in-'dispensably abandon that Province, because of 'the immense Charge.

A.D. 1718 Cardinal Alberoni's Letter to the Spanish Ambassador.

The South Sea Company having presented to the King a long Memorial, containing a State of the Difficulties which they labour'd under in their Trade to New Spain, and the Damages and Losses they had sustain'd thereby; which was sign'd by Sir James Bateman, Sub-Governor, and Samuel Shepheard, Esq; Deputy Governor: His Majesty was graciously pleas'd to return the following Answer.

South Sea Company's Address against the Spaniards.

'In the Differences lately arisen with the 'Court of Madrid, you may be assur'd, I have 'had at Heart the Security of the Trade of my 'Subjects: And I hope, whenever the Catholick 'King shall think fit to put an end to them, 'you will see our Treaties so confirm'd, and 'duly executed, that the Trade to the Spanish 'Dominions, and particularly the Share of it 'you ought by those Treaties to enjoy, will 'no longer be subject to the many violent 'Treatments of which you so justly complain.'

His Majesty's Answer.

The Tories and disgusted Whigs now in an unnatural Calibion against the Administration, taking hold of all Occasions to oppose and perplex it as much as they could, borrow'd from the Papers dispers'd by the Spanish Ministers Pretexts to make a Clamour about Sir George Byng's fighting the Fleet of Spain off Sicily, after that Fleet had attack'd him, as if it had been a breach of the Utrecht Peace, and was done without a previous Declaration of War. The most part of these Paper were published in Holland by the Marquis de Beretti Lande, Ambassador of Spain, who in that call'd his Speech to the States General, Octob. 1. affirms, That the Treaty of Neutrality of Italy in 1713 was ended when the Peace of Baden was concluded; and therefore his Master King Philip was at liberty to attack Sicily: Whereas this very Marquis, in a former Paper, made the Emperor's pretended Contraventions of the same Neutrality of Italy, to be the Motives for his attacking Sardinia: Thus does he blow hot and cold with the same Breath. The Treaty of the Neutrality of Italy, was concluded at Utrecht, the 14th of March, 1713, between the Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor, of the King of France and his Allies; and those of the Queen of Great Britain, as Guaranty, and as the Answerer of Bereti Lande's Speech, observ'd, 'This Treaty does not only subsist, but 'all the Reasons which induc'd Queen Anne to 'make her self Guaranty of it, do continue (at 'least) in as full Force. Had Her Majesty liv'd 'to see King Philip, for whom she generously 'did so much at Utrecht, take Advantage of 'the Emperor's being engaged against the Turks 'to break the Neutrality of Italy, and throw 'Europe into a new War, after his solemn Pro-'mise

False Pretences of the Spaniards and Tories.

A.D. 1718

'miſe to the Pope, Not to make any Attempt 'againſt that Neutrality, during the Turkiſh 'War, the Honour of her Crown, the Intereſt 'of her People, the Faith of her Treaties, 'would have oblig'd her to interpoſe, by all the 'Offices of a Guaranty.' Thus even by the ſcandalous Treaty of Utrecht was the Court of Great Britain engag'd in the Defence of Sicily; and the Inſtructions given to Sir George Byng, were the neceſſary Conſequence of Engagements enter'd into by Queen Anne; yet the diſaffected and diſguſted, of which the Faction was a Compoſition, were every where clamouring with ſuch inſolent and abſurd Queſtions, What is it we fight for? Whoſe Quarrel imbarks us? What have we to do in that Quarrel? What Stupidity! Queen Anne had engag'd to guaranty the Emperor's Dominions in Italy, by Vertue of the Treaty of Neutrality. The Emperor calls upon King George to make good Queen Anne's Engagement: He does it, as well for the Intereſt and Security of the Nation, as to perform the late Queen's Stipulations in the Utrecht Treaty: And now it is done, the very Perſons that made or approved that Treaty, quarrel at the Doing it, tho' Sicily was at that Time ſav'd by it. Nothing can be more contrary to Truth than King Philip's Miniſters Pretences, that they were in full Security, and without the leaſt Apprehenſion of any Act of Hoſtility from Admiral Byng: For that Admiral, when he came firſt on the Coaſt of Spain, gave the Court poſitive Information, that his Inſtructions were to preſerve the Neutrality of Italy; which could be done no other way, but by Force; ſince King Philip's Miniſters rejected His Britannick Majeſty's Offers of Mediation with Haughtineſs. And Cardinal Alberoni, in his Anſwer to Mr. Secretary Craggs's Letter, owns, that frequent Warnings had been given them of the Neceſſity the King of Great Britain lay under, by Treaties, to defend the Emperor's Dominions in Italy, if the Spaniards attack'd them. His Words are, We had been before unjuſtly threatned. Nothing can be more provoking than his denying their ſhewing any Favour to the Pretender, when thoſe arch Traitors, James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, Keith, once Earl Mareſchal, and ſo many other Rebels and Traitors were ſhelter'd in the Court and Capital of Spain; unleſs it is his Boaſting what his Catholick Majeſty ſo generouſly granted by the Treaty of Utrecht to Queen Anne's Subjects; what a Prince who had been twice driven out of Spain, by the Arms of Her Majeſty, and her Allies, did, purſuant only to former Treaties, to prevent his being driven out a third Time, and for ever. Alberoni lays ſo much Streſs on King Philip's receding from the three Explanatory Articles in the Treaty concluded by Mr. Bubb, now Mr. Dodington, that it is mention'd again and again, and is a farther Proof of the Treachery and Wickedneſs of Queen Anne's laſt Miniſters, in ſacrificing the Intereſt of their Country to that of Spain, by thoſe three Articles.

Treaty of Utrecht oblig'd the Crown of England to protect Sicily.

On the 13th of October, the Ratifications of the Quadruple Alliance ſign'd at London the 22d of July laſt, were mutually exchang'd between the Baron de Bentenrieder, on the Part of the Emperor; Mr. Secretary Craggs, on the Part of the King of Great Britain; and Monſieur de Touches, on the Part of the moſt Chriſtian King.

About a Fortnight after the Counts de la Perouſe & Provance, the King of Sardinia's Miniſters, ſign'd their Maſter's Adherence to the ſaid Treaty; which was properly an amicable Declaration of the Neutral Powers who made a Plan of Peace, and who, as common Friends, offer it to the Parties that are at Difference. It is a Plan of Accomodation, which terminates in the ſame End as the Mediation; or rather a Plan of Mediation, which abridges the Conferences, the Aſſemblies, the infinite Diſcuſſions, and the Embarras, that accompany the ordinary Way of Negotiations. Yet this admirable Treaty, ſo well deſign'd, ſo well form'd and finiſh'd, did not eſcape the Cenſures of the Malecontents; who urg'd, that the very thing which was intended to put an end to the War, between the Emperor and Spain, and which did effectually do it at that Time, would draw us into it. But theſe Men argu'd in the Spirit of Craftſmen, whoſe Buſineſs it is, to oppoſe every thing done by the Miniſters, whether Treating or Fighting, Peace or War. It appear'd by His Majeſty's wiſe Conduct in Britain, that there was no Reaſon to apprehend this Kingdom's being engag'd in a War, in Conſequence of any Treaties concluded, ſince the Death of the Queen, or even before it, for there was now made a very conſiderable Reduction of the Land Forces; which ſhew'd that the King himſelf, who was the beſt Judge of the Neceſſity of keeping up thoſe Forces, was the beſt Judge alſo of the proper Time for diſbanding them. For there was many in the Kingdom, who did not think that it was a Time to do it immediately after the defeating of the Spaniſh Armada in the Mediteranean: But His Majeſty having entire Confidence in the Juſtice and Power of his Alliances, far from being affected by the Menaces and Rodomantado's of the Spaniards, thought fit to eaſe his Subjects of above 130000 l. per Ann. Charge, by the following Reductions.

In October, Sir John Pratt, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, was ſworn of the Privy Council: Bennet Lord Harborough, was created Viſcount Stapleford, in the County of Leiceſter. Dr. White Kennet, Dean of Peterborough, Author of the four laſt Reigns, (in what John Nicholſon the Bookſeller entitul'd the Compleat Hiſtory of England) was nominated to the Biſhoprick of Peterborough. Dr. John Ayliffe of Oxford, who had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf there, before and after His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, by his Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, was made a Commiſſioner for licenſing Hawkers, Pedlars, and Petty-Chapmen. His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales's Birthday, October 30th, was ſolemniz'd with great Rejoicings in London and Weſtminſter. In the Morning their Royal Highneſſes were complimented by great Numbers of the Nobility and Per-

*A.D.*1718 Persons of Quality of both Sexes, particularly the Duke of Argyle, Earl of Dorset, Earl of Pembroke, Earl of Essex, Earl of Burlington, Earl of Bristol, Mr. Spencer Compton, Mr. Robert Walpole, Mr. William Pulteney, Mr. Paul Methuen, &c. Great was the Harmony at this Time among these illustrious Persons, and in nothing more than in their dutiful Behaviour to His Royal Highness, now His Present Majesty: What Reason any of them have had to seperate from the rest in this good Affection, is an Anecdote which the Parties who were the Aggressors are not very fond of having made publick.

About this Time one Bowes was taken into Custody for offering his Service to a Minister of State to go over to Italy, and assassinate the Pretender; whose wretched Followers did not however stick to charge even the Legislature of England, with encouraging Assassins, by giving 100000 l. to any one that should apprehend him, if he endeavour'd to land in this Kingdom.

The Pretender gets a Wife.

He had now the good Luck to get him a Wife out of Poland, a Daughter of Prince James Sobieski, who threw aside the Delicacy of her Sex and Rank so far, as to go to seek him above a 1000 Miles off: She was stopp'd at Inspruck by the Emperor's Order: But since she and her Family had so little Regard for their Honour, as to bring into it the Offspring of one who was only known in the World by his vain Pretences and Misfortunes, it wou'd have been to have done them a Service, of which this Proceeding had render'd them unworthy, to have prevented her Ruin against her Will.

There being a whimsical Act past after the Restoration, about the solemn League and Covenant, obliging all Mayors, Aldermen, &c. to sign a Declaration against it, at the Time of their Admission into their Offices, on a considerable Penalty; and this same solemn League and Covenant being dead every where but in that Act, and the Penalty of it, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, November 6th, presented a Petition to the King, humbly praying, 'That His Majesty would give such Directions 'therein, as should effectually quiet the Minds 'of the Petitioners.' To which His Majesty was pleas'd to return this very gracious Answer.

His Majesty's gracious Answer to the Lord Mayor about the Covenant.

'I am fully perswaded of your Duty and Affection to Me, and my Government; and I 'take this Application kindly, as it is a Mark 'of your Trust and Confidence in Me: I shall 'be glad, not only for your Sakes, but my 'own, if any Defects which may touch the 'Rights of my good Subjects are discover'd in 'my Time, since that will furnish me with the 'Means of giving you, and all my People, an 'indisputable Proof of my Tenderness for their 'Privileges; and how unwilling I shall ever be 'to take Advantage of their Mistakes.'

On the 11th of November the Parliament met; and His Majesty in his Speech to both Houses, first mention'd 'the Alliances concluded between the greatest Princes in Europe, 'with a View of making any Attempts to disturb the publick Tranquility, not only dangerous, but impracticable: That the contracting Powers had engag'd to support the Succession to these Kingdoms, in His Majesty's 'Family; to which some were not at all, and 'others not so fully bound, by former Treaties. 'Further, That during the whole Course of the 'Negotiations, particular Regard had been had 'to the Interest of Spain, and better Conditions 'had been stipulated for that King, than were 'insisted upon in his Behalf, even at the Treaty 'of Utrecht.' His Majesty's own Words were as follows: 'But the War in Hungary, which 'by our Mediation is since happily ended, ha'ving tempted that Court unjustly to attack the 'Emperor, and the Hopes they have since con'ceiv'd of raising Disturbances in Great Britain, 'France, and elsewhere, having encourag'd 'them to believe, that we should not be able 'to act in pursuance of our Treaties, for the 'Defence of the Dominions invaded by them; 'nor even to support those other essential and 'necessary Conditions of the Treaty of Utrecht, 'which provided against the great Monarchies 'of Europe; being at any Time hereafter uni'ted under one Sovereign: They have not only 'persisted in such a notorious Violation of the 'publick Peace and Tranquility, but have re'jected all our amicable Propposals, and have 'broke through their most solemn Engagements, 'for the Security of our Commerce, &c.' The Addresses of the House of Lords, and House of Commons, will let us into His Majesty's Speech.

Addresses of both Houses.

The Lords Address was mov'd by the Lord Carteret: The Substance of it, 'Their Lordships 'humble Thanks to His Majesty for his Care 'in preserving the publick Peace, and the Ballance of Power in Europe: For the considerable Reduction of the Land Forces; and for 'having obtain'd so great and further Securities 'of the Succession to these Kingdoms in His 'Royal Family: As also to congratulate the 'seasonable Success of His Majesty's Naval Forces; and to assure him, that this House would 'support him in the Pursuit of those prudent 'and necessary Measures he had taken, to secure 'the Trade and Quiet of these Kingdoms, and 'the Tranquility of Europe.' The Lord Carteret was seconded by the Lord Tenham; but several Lords excepted against some Expressions in the Motion, particularly about approving the Sea Fight, which I do not repeat, because so much has been said of the Reason and Justice of that Action, that there is little more about it, on either Side of the Question in the Debates in Parliament: The Motion was carri'd in the Affirmative by 83 Voices against 50: The principal Speakers on the Affirmative Side were the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl Stanhope, Lord Carteret and Lord Tenham. On the Negative Side spoke the Duke of Buckinghamshire, the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Argyle, the Earl of Nottingham, Earl Cowper, the Earl of Orford, the Earl of Ilay, the Lord North and Grey, and the Lord Harcourt.

The King's Speech to the Parliament.

The Lord Hinchinbroke made the Motion for an Address in the House of Commons; 'To 'return the Thanks of this House to His Majesty, for his most gracious Speech, and for the 'many and great Instances which he has therein 'given to his People, of his constant Endeavours for their Security and Welfare: That 'this House has entire Satisfaction in those Measures which His Majesty has already taken, for 'strengthening the Protestant Succession, and 'establishing a lasting Tranquility in Europe; 'and particularly in relation to the Crown of 'Spain; and is resolv'd to enable His Majesty, 'in Concurrence with his Allies, not only to 'resent the Injuries that Crown has already 'done to the Commerce of these Kingdoms, in 'Breach of the Treaties subsisting between the 'two Nations, but will likewise support him 'in the most vigorous and effectual manner, in 'such farther Measures, as His Majesty shall judge

A.D. 1718 'judge neceſſary to compleat the publick Tran-
'quility, and to check the Growth of that Na-
'val Power, which muſt otherwiſe prove dan-
'gerous to the Trade of theſe Kingdoms, and
'to the Repoſe of Europe.' The Lord Hinchinbroke was ſeconded by the Lord Tyrconnel, and back'd by other Members, who were oppos'd, not only by thoſe who had been in the Oppoſition to the Government, ever ſince His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, but by ſome Members alſo whoſe Affection to His Majeſty's Perſon and Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion were not ſuſpected. The Chief Speakers were,

The five laſt Gentlemen took Care to guard their Expreſſions againſt any Suſpicion of Diſaffection to His Majeſty's Perſon and Government, a Caution which was not expected from the others. But as thoſe Gentlemen were eminent for great Abilities and Knowledge of Affairs, they cou'd not but know, that His Majeſty had nothing more at Heart than the Performance of All the Treaties the Crown was engag'd in, and particularly that of the Neutrality of Italy; and that ſuch Performance of Treaties is the ſupream Law of Nations: Wherefore the Queſtion turns upon this and nothing elſe, Whether the Crown was oblig'd by the Treaty of Neutrality and the Treaty of Utrecht, to Guaranty the Emperor's Dominions in Italy. If ſo (and it was not conteſted) the Action off Sicily was the moſt juſt and wiſe Meaſure that could be purſu'd; becauſe it not only executed the Treaty beforementioned, and the Guaranty of Great Britain, but broke all the Meaſures of Spain contriv'd to aggrandize that Monarchy, at the expence of the Publick Tranquility. The Queſtion being put, on the Lord Hinchinbroke's Motion, the Addreſs was carried in the Affirmative by 216 Voices againſt 155.

The Action off Sicily juſt.

About the beginning of November the Earl of Berkſhire was declar'd Deputy Earl Marſhal of England. And His Majeſty was pleas'd to call by Writ to the Houſe of Peers Anthony de Grey, commonly call'd Earl of Harold, and eldeſt Son to Henry Duke of Kent, by the Title of Baron Lucas of Crudwell in Wiltſhire. He was introduc'd into the Houſe of Lords Nov. 11. As was the Earl of Eſſex, now of Age. Toward the latter end of the Month Robert Conſtable, a Proctor of Doctors-Commons, was fin'd 200 l. for Treaſonable and Seditious Words, to lie in Jail half a Year, and to find Security for his good Behaviour for three Years. Edward Biſſe, a Somerſetſhire High Church Prieſt, had for ſome time defy'd the Juſtice of the Nation, by his Treaſonable and Impudent Preaching and Speeches againſt the Government; (there are ſtill of his Name and Kidney in thoſe Parts) but his Impudence diſtinguiſhed his Diſaffection from all others in a particular manner, and his Cloth wou'd not have ſav'd him from Capital Puniſhment, in a Country where more Regard is had to the Conſtitution than any Profeſſion whatſoever. This perjur'd Wretch, for he had taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Abjuration, was Parſon of Portbury and St. George, two ſmall Pariſhes near the Severn Channel below Briſtol. A Perſon who taught School in one of thoſe Pariſhes, heard him utter theſe Words in his Sermon, However God may in his Judgment allow Uſurpation, yet God will never proſper or bleſs the ſame: I need not go to Foreign Countries for Proof of this, but confine our ſelves to our own Iſland, where we have groaned under this Plague theſe thirty Years; we have had neither King, Parliament nor Laws theſe thirty Years. Deteſtable Villain! Things have never been right theſe thirty Years, that is, ſince the Misfortune of the Father, (meaning the abdicated King James the ſecond:) And Things will never be right till the Reſtoration of the Son, my Maſter, (meaning the Pretender.) Fit Maſter for ſuch a profligate forſworn Traitor. He was convicted at the Aſſizes at Wells, (Auguſt 19th) for preaching theſe Words, and upon another Indictment for theſe Words, preach'd in St. George's Church, King George is an Uſurper, King James is the lawful King. Before this, at the Aſſizes at Ailesbury, July the 28th, he was convicted for ſpeaking theſe Words at Slough, King George has no buſineſs here, we have had no Laws theſe thirty Years, never ſince the Time of King James the II. This Idiot imagining that the Laws did not conſiſt in the Juſtice and Reaſon of Things, but in the Blood of the Prince in whoſe Reign they were made: Nor ſhall we till King James comes; he is my Maſter and my King, and the Rightful Heir. He was convicted at Salisbury Aſſizes, for ſpeaking the ſame Words at Abury in Wiltſhire. For this brazen Trumpeter of Treaſon and Sedition, went from Place to Place, to utter his Lies and falſe Propheſies. On the 27th of November he was brought to the King's Bench Bar, Weſtminſter, and for his Crime in Preaching in Portbury Church, was ſentenc'd to ſtand in the Pillory at Charing-Croſs, on Monday the firſt of December, with this Inſcription over his Head, For Seditious and Treaſonable Preacking, to be impriſon'd four Years, and to find Sureties for his good Behaviour during Life; himſelf in 1000 l. and two Sureties 500 l. each: And for his Crime in Preaching in St. George's Church, to ſtand in the Pillory at the Royal Exchange: He was alſo fin'd for his four Crimes, in all, 600 l. But Poverty and a Goal, did not cure him: The worſt Part of this Story is the Sequel of it: Two Juſtices of the Peace in the Neighbourhood, Sir John Smith, and Mr. ——— (the latter being living, and in a Condition to attone for this falſe Step, by future good Conduct, I forbear mentioning) under Pretence that the Schoolmaſter who had liv'd ſome Years out of the Pariſh, was, upon his returning thither, become a Vagabond, ſign'd a Warrant for whipping him, contrary to Law, as they found afterwards to their Coſt; for upon his bringing an Action againſt them they were caſt at Taunton Aſſizes, and paid ſeveral Hundred Pounds Damages; they were alſo ſtruck out of the Commiſſion of the Peace. This barbarous Treatment of that Man, who was the chief Evidence againſt

Conſtable the Proctor fin'd.

Biſſe the High-Church Prieſt's Crime and Puniſhment.

His horrid Treaſon.

Sir John Smith and another Juſtice whip the Evidence againſt him.

A.D. 1718 against Biſſe, was a flagrant Inſtance of Diſreſpect to the Government, if not worſe, there not being a Clown in that Country, which ſwarms with them, but had Senſe enough to know, the Man was laſh'd purely for his being a Witneſs of Biſſe's Treaſonable Preaching. He had a Poſt given him in the Cuſtom-Houſe at Briſtol, but he did not behave ſo well in it, as he did in the Thing for which the Juſtices whipped him; and the warmeſt of the Well-affected did not ſtick to ſay in the Height of their Indignation and Reſentment, They thought there ought in that Caſe (if ever) to have been, Lex Talionis; for there can be no Satisfaction to a free-born Man, who has unjuſtly ſuffer'd a Slave's Punithment.

It appears ev'ry where that all the Deſigns againſt Great Britain ſince the fatal Period of the late Miniſtry, have at the Bottom been form'd by the Friends to the Pretender, whether carri'd on in Sweden, in Spain, or any where elſe; even the Conſpiracy againſt the Regency in France, for which the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, the Prince de Cellamare, was put under Arreſt, was owing in ſome Meaſure to the Intrigues of the Abbot Brigand, who had always been a very buſy Agent for the Pretender, and accompany'd him from St. Malo's to Dunkirk, where he embark'd for Scotland. This Abbot had notice given him by the Ambaſſador Prince, as ſoon as his Packets were ſecur'd by the Government, to get out of the way; which, as ſoon as he was endeavouring he was ſeiz'd at Nemours. All the Chief of theſe Conſpirators in France were Wellwiſhers to the Pretender, particularly the Duke and Dutcheſs de Maine, who were both arreſted; and in Spain itſelf it was the publick Diſcourſe that King Philip had engag'd to ſupport the Intereſt of that Impoſtor; which however the Marquis de Beretti Lande, his Miniſter in Holland, deny'd, in his Conference with the Deputies of the States General, or even that James Butler, call'd Duke of Ormond, was in Spain. The Negotiations for concluding the Treaty of Barrier, were much quicken'd by News of the Conſpiracy in France, and it was happily ſign'd December 11, by the Marquis de Prie, on the Part of the Emperor, by the Earl of Cadogan on the Part of the King of Great Britain, and by the States Deputies on their Part. Affairs took another Face in Sweden on the Death of that King, who was kill'd before Frederickſhalt, the 11th of December; and his Counſellors that put him on all his late raſh Meaſures, as the Baron Gortz, Count Vandernath, and Count Gyllemberg, were immediately ſeiz'd and impriſon'd, and all their Papers ſecur'd and ſeal'd up; which gave the Court of Great Britain the better Opportunity to attend the Affairs of Spain. On the third of December, the Order of Council for granting Letters of Reprizal againſt the Spaniards was publiſh'd, and on the 17th of this Month War was proclaim'd againſt Spain, in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, with the uſual Solemnities; and twelve Days after, the moſt Chriſtian King's Declaration of War againſt Spain, was publiſh'd at Paris. Great Clamour has been made by the Diſaffected againſt the War with Spain; and the Country Gentlemen within Doors, as well as without, ſeem'd to be in more pain for the Loſs of the Engliſh Trade to Spain, (during a Rupture) than the Merchants of London were: Nay, than the Engliſh Merchants that liv'd in that Kingdom, and had the greateſt part of their Effects there. The ſame Day that the War was proclaim'd, Mr. Boſcawen, Comptroller of the King's Houſhold, by His Majeſty's Command, acquainted the Houſe of Commons, That all His Majeſty's Endeavours, and thoſe of the moſt Chriſtian King, to procure Redreſs of the many Injuries done to the Subjects of Great Britain by the King of Spain, to the unſpeakable Detriment of the Trade of theſe Kingdoms, or even to obtain a Diſcontinuance of the unjuſt Hoſtilities carrying on by that Crown, having prov'd ineffectual, His Majeſty had found it neceſſary to declare War againſt Spain. Then George Treby, Eſq; mov'd for an Addreſs of Thanks, and 'to aſſure His 'Majeſty, that this Houſe will, with the great-'eſt Chearfulneſs and the utmoſt Vigour, aſſiſt 'and ſupport His Majeſty in the War with the 'King of Spain, till Spain is reduc'd to accept 'of reaſonable Terms of Peace, and to agree to 'ſuch Conditions of Trade and Commerce, as 'this Nation is juſtly intit'led to by their ſeve-'ral Treaties.' He was ſeconded by Thomas Weſtern, Eſq; but the Motion was oppos'd by Mr. Shippen, Mr. Freeman, Sir Thomas Hanmer, and other Gentlemen, ſome of whom al-ledg'd, 'That the Grievances complain'd of by 'the Merchants, might have been redreſs'd in an 'amicable Manner.' This was very extraordinary, becauſe it was in direct Contradiction to Matter of Fact, as related by Colonel Stanhope, who told the Houſe, 'He had had the Honour to 'ſerve His Majeſty as his Envoy to the King of 'Spain; and he could aſſure them, that he had 'preſented (at leaſt) five and twenty Memorials 'to that Court, in relation to the Complaints of 'our Merchants, without any Succeſs.' The Speech that made moſt Impreſſion, was what Sir Joſeph Jekyl ſaid on the Affirmative Side of the Queſtion: 'He was now fully convinc'd, 'that if there was any Injuſtice, 'twas on the 'Side of the King of Spain; and that the Con-'duct of His Majeſty and his Miniſters were 'entirely agreeable to the Law of Nations, and 'the Rules of Juſtice and Equity. Was it Juſt 'in the King of Spain to attack the Emperor's 'Dominions, Sardinia, while he was engag'd 'in a War with the Turks, without any Decla-'ration of War? Was it Juſt in the ſame Prince 'to invade the Dominions of one of his Allies, 'the King of Sicily, without the leaſt Provo-'cation? And, Was it not Juſt in His Majeſty 'to vindicate the Faith of his Treaties, and to 'defend and protect the Trade of his Subjects, 'which had been violently oppreſs'd.' The Reſolution was carry'd by 178 Voices againſt 107; and being preſented by the whole Houſe to the King, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to anſwer, This ſeaſonable and loyal Addreſs, will, I truſt in God, contribute effectually to what you deſire, I return you true Thanks for it. Upon a Motion for a like Addreſs in the Houſe of Lords it was carry'd without a Diviſion.

On the 13th of December, after the reading an Act for quieting and ſtabliſhing Corporations, by recapacitating ſuch as had made themſelves incapable of Membership in them, by omiting to take the Oath againſt the Solemn League and Covenant, Earl Stanhope offer'd a Bill to the Houſe, intituled, An Act for ſtrengthning the Proteſtant Intereſt in theſe Kingdoms, importing in Subſtance, a Repeal of the Occaſional Bill and Schiſm Bill, both which Bills were promoted by Perſons who have ſince been Impeach'd

Sir J. Jekyl's Speech for the War.

The Parliament addreſs for it.

A.D.1718 peach'd and Impriſon'd for High Treaſon, and were ſome of the worſt Works of the worſt Men that ever influenc'd the Affairs of Great Britain. The Proteſtant Diſſenters, beſides theſe two Bills againſt them, groan'd under the Burthen of the Sacramental Teſt; and many of them were of Opinion, that if it was thought they had not deſerv'd, or indeed had a natural Right, both as to Conſcience and Property, to whatever their Fellow-Subjects had a Right, they ſhould have recourſe to Time and Patience, and not concern themſelves about any Relief that was not general. For, that in Truth and Reaſon, Juſtice and Gratitude, there ought not to be any Difference made between them and other Britons in any ſtate of Life whatſoever. Before this Act was prepar'd the Proteſtant Diſſenters were conſulted about the Repeal of the two Bills abovementioned, and they had numerous Meetings in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, to confer with proper Perſons on this Head. The Majority in all theſe Meetings, were for a general Repeal of the Acts that were Hardſhips upon them, or leaving Matters as they ſtood: But they were aſſur'd that His Majeſty had preſt that Affair as far as it would go with the Miniſters; who, and the Earl of Sunderland in particular, ſaid, It was not practicable: And to attempt the Repeal of the Teſt, would ruin all. His Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to tell Lord Barrington (a Diſſenter) 'that if there were any Hopes of carrying 'the Whole, he would not be againſt it; 'but if there were no Hopes, as he was 'aſſur'd by his Miniſters, he believ'd the Diſ'ſenters were too much his Friends, to inſiſt 'upon a Thing which might be infinitely pre'judicial to him, without doing them any 'good; but, on the contrary, a great deal of 'Hurt.' This ſway'd with the more moderate of that Party, and the Teſt was then given up; after they had receiv'd Aſſurances from ſuch as were in Conference with them, that they ſhould be eas'd of that too in a proper Time; which no body imagin'd was a Negative to all their Petitions and Pretences; for that no ſuch Time could ever be. The Miniſters did not miſlead their Maſter on this Occaſion: There was ſo much Oppoſition to the Repeal of the Wild-fire Bill, and Occaſional Bill, that we may perceive, if the Teſt Act had been join'd to it, all would have miſcarry'd. Earl Stanhope's Bill being read the firſt time, he mov'd that it might be read a ſecond time; which occaſion'd a long Debate. The Lord Stanhope in a very fine Speech endeavour'd to ſhew, 'The Equity, 'Juſtice, Reaſonableneſs and Advantage, of re'ſtoring Diſſenters to their natural Rights; and 'of eaſing them of thoſe ſtigmatizing and op'preſſive Laws, that had been made againſt 'them in turbulent Times, and obtain'd by in'direct Methods, for no other Reaſon, than be'cauſe they ever ſhew'd their zealous and firm 'Adherence to the Revolution and Proteſtant 'Succeſſion.' After this one would think all Debate would drop: For there being no other Reaſon to perſecute Diſſenters, but becauſe they were true Lovers of the Government and its Foundation. Revolution Principles, What can be ſaid for oppreſſing them, but that it was for the Honour and Intereſt of Men, who neither lov'd the Government, nor Revolution Principles; the Caſe of High-Church? My Lord Stanhope added, 'This deſirable Union of all 'true Proteſtants, as it would certainly ſtrengthen the Proteſtant Intereſt, ſo would it rather A.D.1718 'be an Advantage than any Prejudice to the 'Church of England, by Law eſtabliſh'd, 'which would ſtill be the Head of all Proteſtant 'Churches.' The Lord Stanhope was ſeconded by the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Stamford, and other Lords, and ſtrenuouſly oppos'd by the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Earl of Nottingham, the Earl of Aylesford, and the Lord North and Grey, which doubtleſs every one expected; but it was contrary to all Expectations, that the Duke of Devonſhire, and the Lord Viſcount T——d, fell in with them. The Duke of Devonſhire ſuggeſted that it was 'irregular to bring in a Bill of ſo great Conſe'quence, without previouſly acquainting the 'Houſe.' But it was readily anſwer'd by my Lord Stanhope, His Grace had forgot that about two Years before he brought in himſelf, in the ſame manner, a Bill of much greater Conſequence, meaning the ſeptennial Act. The Earl of Nottingham urg'd, That nothing could be more contradictory, than a Bill which is ſaid to be calculated to ſtrengthen the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the Church of England; and which at the ſame Time repeals two Acts that were made for her further Security. The Earl of Cholmondeley propos'd to have the Opinion of the Biſhops; and herein the Archbiſhop of Canterbury acted a Part, which leſſen'd him in the Opinion and the Love of many Diſſenters, who had been his greateſt Admirers and Friends: Nor did His Grace ever after recover the Ground he loſt on this occaſion, in both the Affection and Eſteem of thoſe Men. The Subſtance of what His Grace ſaid, was, 'That the Acts which by this Bill 'were to be repeal'd, are the main Bulwark 'and Supporters of the Eſtabliſh'd Church' His Grace will ſuffer us to believe that the Holy Scripture is that Bulwark and Support, and whatever is of humane Eſtabliſhment is to it, for a Foundation, like the Sand compar'd to a Rock on the Sea Shore. His Grace was pleas'd to add, 'That he had all imaginable Tender'neſs for all the Well-meaning Conſcientious 'Diſſenters: But he could not forbear ſaying, 'That ſome amongſt them made a wrong Uſe 'of the Favour and Indulgence that was ſhewn 'them upon the Revolution, tho' they had the 'leaſt Share in that happy Event.' They were the leaſt in Number, and conſequently in Wealth and Power: But proportionably to what they were, His Grace upon Recollection cannot but remember that they both by Hand and Heart had as much Share in that happy Event as any Body of Men in the Kingdom; and for the Share they had in it, as Lord Stanhope juſtly obſerv'd, thoſe Bills to perſecute them, were paſt in turbulent Times. It were to be wiſh'd, my Lord Archbiſhop, inſtead of Favour and Indulgence, had made Uſe of the Term Toleration, becauſe Britons will never allow that they hold any Part of their natural Rights by Indulgence and Favour; and whoever withholds them from them, are guilty of Injuſtice and Oppreſſion. His Grace added in the Cloſe, 'As to the Act againſt Schiſm, tho' 'it may carry a Face of Severity, yet it ſeem'd 'needleſs to make a Law to repeal it, ſince no 'Advantage had been taken of it againſt the 'Diſſenters, ever ſince it was made.' There was no Advantage taken of the Act De Hæretico Comburendo, for above 100 Years before it was repeal'd, yet the Legiſlature thought fit to repeal it, that it might never be in the Power of Men

Conſultation about the Repeal of the Occaſional and Schiſm Bills.

Lord Stanhope's Speech in Behalf of Proteſtant Diſſenters.

Duke of Devonſhire anſwer'd by Lord Stanhope.

Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Speech againſt the Repeal.

A.D. 1718 Men of ſuch bloody Principles as thoſe, that paſt that murderous Act, to put it in Execution. The Author is known to be ſo heartily affected to the Archbiſhop Perſon and Intereſts, that none will ſuſpect him of want of Duty or Veneration for his ſacred Character. Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York, gave leſs Trouble to his Anſwerers: 'He urg'd in 'particular the Danger of truſting the Diſſenters, the open and avow'd Enemies of the 'Church;' I am ſorry to find ſuch Expreſſions here, the Fact being notoriouſly the contrary: With Power and Authority he urg'd, That the Acts againſt Occaſional Conformity and Schiſm, were only for Self-Defence, and Preſervation; that the Diſſenters were never to be gain'd by Indulgence; and quoted a Paſſage out of a Treatiſe, entit'led A Perſwaſive to Lay Conformity, written by a Prelate, who, as he ſaid, had ſince the writing of that Book, embrac'd and maintain'd other Principles. This Archbiſhop was ſo far from being a Match for the Biſhop whom he had a Fling at here, that when the Reader has ſeen what the latter ſaid in Anſwer, he will think it ſtrange that the former ſhould give him ſuch Provocation. Dr. Hoadly, Lord Biſhop of Bangor, anſwer'd the ſaid Archbiſhop of York, particularly with relation to the Paſſage quoted out of one of his Treatiſes, and ſaid, 'He was ſo far from having alter'd his 'Principles, that both before and after he had 'been promoted to the Station he held in the 'Church, he had endeavour'd to bring over the 'Diſſenters to the Church; but that he ever 'was of Opinion, that gentle Meaſures were 'the moſt effectual for that Purpoſe. After this 'His Lordſhip ſhew'd at large, the Unreaſo-'nableneſs and ill Policy of impoſing Religious 'TESTS, as a Qualification for civil or mili-'tary Employments; which abridges Men of 'their NATURAL RIGHTS; deprives the State 'of the Service of many of its BEST Subjects, 'and expoſes the moſt ſacred Inſtitutions and 'Ordinances to be abus'd by profane and irreli-'gious Perſons. He alſo endeavour'd to prove, 'that the Occaſional and Schiſm Acts were in 'Effect perſecuting Laws, and that by admit-'ting the Examples of Self-Defence, and Self-'Preſervation, in Matters of Religion, all the 'Perſecutions of the Heathens againſt the Chri-'ſtians, and even the Popiſh Inquiſition, may 'be juſtify'd.' In what follows, His Lordſhip comes home to the Point, and diſtinguiſhes between Perſons and Things: 'As to the Power, 'of which ſome Clergymen appear'd ſo fond 'and ſo jealous, he own'd, that the Deſire of 'Power and Riches is natural to all Men; but 'that he had learnt both from Reaſon and the 'Goſpel, that this Deſire muſt keep within due 'Bounds, and not intrench upon the Rights 'and Liberties of our Fellow-Creatures and 'Countrymen.' Why did not the other Prelates, and thoſe that adher'd to them, ſpeak as frankly and truly as the Biſhop of Bangor? It is not for the encreaſing the Communion of Saints: It is not for the Salvation of Souls, for the promoting Piety and Godlineſs, that we wou'd drive Diſſenters within the Pale; but as Sheep within the Fold, that we may have all the Fleece to our ſelves. The Weight of Dr. Smalridge Biſhop of Briſtol's Arguments lay in this, that becauſe a Clauſe for repealing the ſacramental Teſt, was rejected in King William's Time, this Bill ſhou'd now be rejected alſo. He was anſwer'd in an excellent Speech by Dr. Willis, Biſhop of Glouceſter, who, among other Things, endeavour'd to wipe off the Imputation of Hypocriſy caſt upon the Diſſenters. The Biſhop of Glouceſter was back'd by the Biſhop of Lincoln, 'who artfully commended 'the Zeal of a noble Earl, who promoted a 'Comprehenſion, when Secretary of State.' His Lordſhip alſo took notice, 'That Religion was 'ever us'd by Crafty Men, as a Pretence to car-'ry on Political Deſigns; and he remember'd, 'in particular in the late Reign, that while our 'Arms were victorious abroad, the Church was 'in Danger at home; but no ſooner was a ſtop put 'to that glorious War, than the Church was in 'a flouriſhing Condition.' The Earl of Nottingham, who was hinted at by that Prelate, juſtify'd his Conduct about the Comprehenſion, by ſaying, He was in thoſe Days but a young Man. He had been a Member of Parliament eight or ten Years before that Time, and he had ſince found the Diſſenters were obſtinate, never to be ſatisfy'd. Wou'd it not be a noble Argument in a Caſe of Right, to urge againſt a Plaintiff or Complainant, He is obſtinate, and will never be ſatisfy'd. Let him have his Right, and then if he will not be ſatisfy'd, the Trouble will be to himſelf only. Dr. John Robinſon, Biſhop of London, late Plenipotentiary at Utrecht, to prove that in all wiſe Governments, all Offices and Places of Truſt, are in the Hands of thoſe of the national Church, urg'd the Example of Sweden, which was the more extraordinary, becauſe he had been finely rally'd for what he had ſaid on that Subject in his Account of Sweden, by a Gentleman, whom he knew to be as well acquainted with it as himſelf, in the Letter to Sir J.B. in theſe two Artitles, Ignorance, Stupidity, and Uniformity, pag. 35. Indulgence to ſcrupulous Conſciences taken away, pag. ibid. Biſhop Atterbury with his uſual Airs concluded what he had to ſay againſt the Repeal thus; We live in a changeable Country; and the Hardſhips which the Diſſenters bring now upon the Church, may one Day or other be ſeverely retaliated upon them. He muſt doubtleſs refer to the Succeſs of the Plots, to impoſe a Popiſh Pretender on theſe Kingdoms; for one of which, he was not long after baniſh'd his Country. The Biſhop of Peterborough anſwer'd whatever had paſt, without anſwering in the Speeches of the Prelates againſt the Bill; and the Queſtion at the Cloſe of the Debate, being put, it was carri'd in the Affirmative by 86 Voices againſt 68: And of theſe 68, ſeveral noble Lords did not give their Negative, out of ill Will to the Diſſenters, or a Diſinclination to eaſe them of their Hardſhips; but for that ſeveral Lords were thought to be at that Time on the Affirmative Side, rather to gain the Diſſenters than to eaſe them. 'Tis true, Notice was taken that ſome of the Peers who ſpoke againſt the Bill, as the Earl of Nottingham, Duke of Devonſhire, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, then Biſhop of Lincoln, &c. had enter'd their Proteſts againſt paſſing the Bill, which they now voted againſt repealing; and this Conduct ſeem'd very unintelligible to many. It will be very ſurprizing to the judicious Part of Poſterity, that Engliſhmen, ſo tenacious of their Liberty, ſhou'd ever ſuffer the leaſt Part of it to be abridg'd; if the natural Right which Parents have to the Education of their Children, may be call'd the leaſt Part of it. Sir William Thompſon, Sollicitor General, urging this natural Right, Mr. Shippen anſwer'd, 'It was ſomewhat ſtrange to ſee ſo able a Law-'yer inconſiſtent with himſelf: For when the 'twelve Judges were conſulted in a Caſe rela-'ting to a great Family, he was of the Opinion 'of ten of them, that Children may be taken 'from their Parents, and educated as the Good 'of the Nation requir'd.' To this Sir William readily reply'd, 'That as he never was conſul-'ted, ſo had he never declar'd his Thoughts, in 'that nice Caſe hinted by that Gentleman, and 'therefore he could not with any Colour of Ju-'ſtice be ſaid to have chang'd his Opinion: 'But that the Member who tax'd him with it, 'and who thereby declar'd againſt the Opinion 'of the ten Judges, if he would be conſiſtent 'with himſelf, muſt now be for the Bill that 'repeals the Schiſm Act, which reſtor'd Parents 'to their natural Right.' The King of Spain excites a Rebellion in France, as well as England.

In the mean Time the Court of Spain continu'd their clandeſtine Practices to excite Rebellions in England and France. To ſtir up the French, a Declaration was publiſh'd in the Name of that King, wherein all Perſons that obey'd the Commands of the Regent, in ſupporting his late Treaties with the Emperor, the King of Great Britain, the States General, were treated as Rebels and Traitors. This Declaration was complain'd of to the Parliament of Paris, as a ſeditious Writing, by the Sieur de La Moignon, Advocate General, who procur'd an Arreſt againſt it as ſuch. The Parliament of Bourdeaux alſo condemn'd it as a Libel. However the Marquis de Beretti Lande, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador in Holland, communicated it to the States General, as his Maſters Act and Deed. Among the poor Shifts the Spaniſh Miniſters were put to, in purſuing their raſh Counſels, that of inviting James Butler into Spain, after he was driven out of France, is equally vain and contemptible, being founded on the boaſted Intereſt of that Fugitive, eſpecially in Ireland, where he was to do Wonders for his Maſter the Pretender, King Philip's new Ally; and the latter doubtleſs furniſh'd him with Money, to make a Figure on the Way for the Credit of the Thing, he travelling Poſt with two Berlins, two Calaſhes, and ſome Men on Horſeback: But when he came within forty Leagues of the Court, he was order'd to ſtop; Affairs not being ripe enough yet for his avow'd Reception there. How he wou'd have been dealt with had he gone to Ireland, one may gueſs by the Proclamation which the Lords Juſtices of that Kingdom, the Archbiſhop of Dublin, and William Conolly, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, order'd for a Reward of 10000*l.* to any Perſon or Perſons that ſhould ſeize or ſecure him there, alive or dead. This Proclamation was ſign'd by Privy-Councellors. A Proclamation for ſeizing him was alſo iſſu'd in England; and the Expectation of his landing was ſo great among the Jacobites, that they cou'd not help diſcovering it in the Inſolence of their Looks and Expreſſions. The King of Sweden's Affairs were in ſo deſperate a Condition, that his Miniſters (like ſinking Men) caught at every Twig to ſave their Maſter and themſelves, who had ruin'd their Country by raſh and obſtinate Counſels and Actions. They not only encourag'd the Diſaffected in England, to enter into new Cabals and Schemes, for an Invaſion of that Kingdom, to be ſupported by a Rebellion in Favour of the Pretender; but they enter'd into treaſonable Correſpondencies in France, in Favour of King Philip, who had juſt ſuch another giddy reſtleſs Faction for him in that Kingdom, as the Pretender had in England; and both theſe Factions promis'd themſelves mighty things from the Court of Spain; where Alberoni gave all manner of Countenance and Support to the Britiſh Fugitives. But the Death of the King of Sweden, who was kill'd before Frederickſtat in Norway, and the Acceſſion of his Siſter the Princeſs Ulrica to the Crown, which was very likely to fall upon the Head of her Royal Conſort, the hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, ſoon cut off all their Hopes from that Quarter: And upon the States General formal entring into the Quadruple Alliance, their Hopes from all Quarters languiſh'd and dy'd.

His Declaration declar'd a Libel by the Parliament of Paris.

A Committee of the Houſe of Commons having been appointed to inquire what Sums of Money had been laid out in particular Places, where any of the fifty new Churches have been built; they made their Report to the Houſe the 23d of January. A ſcandalous Impoſition on a parliamentary Inquiry, by which not a tenth Part of their Numbers, or Eſtates in Value, cou'd be regiſter'd.

The commendable Care of the Czar of Muſcovy to improve his own Riches by thoſe of his Subjects, put him upon all Experiments for improving their Trade and Manufactures; and having perfect Information of the Extent of the Trade in Iron Manufactures at Birmingham, Encouragement was given to his own Manufacturers, to ſend ſome of their Youth thither, to learn the various Working of Iron: This being of dangerous Conſequence to our own Manufacture, Petitions were preſented to the Parliament againſt taking Foreigners Apprentices; and a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to prevent the Inconveniencies ariſing from ſeducing Artificers in the Iron and Steel Manufacturies into foreign Parts; and from taking Foreigners Apprentices in the ſaid Manufacturies.

Preferments.

About this Time His Majeſty was pleas'd to declare Evelyn Duke of Kingſton, Lord Preſident of the Privy Council; Charles Earl of Sunderland, Groom of the Stole; Henry Duke of Kent, Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal; and the Duke of Argyle, Lord Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold.

Diſputes about the Peerage Bill.

In the great Controverſy concerning the Bill to limit the Number of Peers, which Mr. Lechmere drew up, tho' he declar'd afterwards againſt it, the Reaſons on both Sides of the Queſtion were ſo ſtrong, that whoever decided it, without due Conſideration and a good Underſtanding of our parliamentary Conſtitution, was in certain Danger of entangling himſelf in more Difficulties than he could eaſily get clear of. Two particular Friends, the late Secretary Addiſon, and Sir Richard Steele, were Oppoſites in this Diſpute; Mr. Addiſon for the Bill, and Sir Richard Steele againſt it: Indeed the latter piqu'd himſelf now ſo very much on his Oppoſition to the Court, that he deſcended ſo low, as to flatter the Earl of Oxford; and by ſaying many fulſome Things in his Praiſe, endeavour'd (weakly enough) to unſay the many ſevere Things he had ſaid in his Diſpraiſe. The Piece I am here ſpeaking of, was intitul'd, A Letter to the Earl of Oxford: But there came out at this Time, another Pamphlet of much more Importance, which appear'd on the ſame Side of the Queſtion with Sir Richard, and was even ſaid to have been written by him, call'd, the Plebeian, but in Reality was writ by William Benſon, Eſq;. There were four ſeveral Numbers publiſh'd of this Paper: The firſt came abroad before the Bill was brought into the Houſe of Lords; and Mr. Addiſon, in his Pamphlet, (the Old Whig) endeavour'd to anſwer it. The next Plebeian reply'd to Mr. Addiſon; and it was a long while before the Old Whig appear'd a ſecond Time. That Paper was follow'd by two other Plebeians; after which the Bill being drop'd in the Houſe of Lords, the Plebeian was diſcontinu'd. The Curious may find both the Plebeian and the Old Whig amongſt the State Tracts of thoſe Times, they having gone through ſeveral Editions, and there being in them all, the chief Arguments on both Sides of that important Queſtion.

The making many Lords to ſerve a Turn complain'd of.

On the laſt of February, the Day the Lords return'd to their old Houſe, His Grace the Duke of Somerſet, the firſt Peer of Great Britain qualify'd for Parliament, repreſented that the Number of Peers being of late Years very much encreas'd, eſpecially ſince the Union of the two Kingdoms, it ſeem'd abſolutely neceſſary to fix the ſame, both to preſerve the Dignity of Peerage, and to prevent the Inconveniencies that may attend the Creation of a great Number of Peers, to ſerve a preſent Purpoſe; of which they had a remarkable Inſtance in the late Reign. There's no need of obſerving, that this has Reference to the twelve Creation, becauſe it can refer to nothing elſe; and how agreeable it muſt be to the Earl of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer, and others then preſent, 'tis eaſy to imagine. His Grace then made a Motion for bringing in a Bill to ſettle and limit the Peerage in ſuch a manner, that the Number of Engliſh Peers ſhould not be enlarged beyond ſix above the preſent Number, which upon Failure of Male Iſſue might be ſupply'd by new Creations; and that inſtead of the ſixteen elective Peers, twenty five be made Hereditary on the Part of Scotland, whoſe Number, upon a Failure of Heirs Male, ſhould be ſupplied by ſome other Scots Peers. The Duke of Argyle ſeconded this Motion; which was alſo back'd by the Earls of Sunderland and Carliſle; but the laſt of theſe added, That this was a Matter of ſo great Importance, that it became the Wiſdom of that auguſt Aſſembly, maturely to conſider it, before they came to any Reſolution; and thereupon his Lordſhip mov'd for the adjourning the Debate to the Monday following; and that the Peers in and about Town might be ſummon'd to attend. I cannot reaſonably be blam'd for copying the Memoirs of others in Things of ſo delicate and difficult a Nature. 'The Earl of Oxford (ſays the Annaliſt) excepted againſt the Duke of Somerſet's Propoſal, 'and ſaid, that as it tended to take away the 'brighteſt Gem of the Crown, of which, if we 'gueſs right, he ſhew'd himſelf ſo tender, in 'the abovemention'd twelve Creation; it was 'matter of Wonder to ſee it ſupported by thoſe, 'who, by the great Employments they enjoy'd, 'ſeem'd under the ſtricteſt Obligation to take 'Care of the Royal Prerogative: That therefore 'there muſt be a ſecret Meaning in this Motion; but for his own Part, tho' he expected 'nothing from the Crown, yet he would never 'give his Vote for lopping off ſo valuable a 'Branch of the Prerogative: Becauſe this wou'd 'put it out of the Power of the Crown, to 'reward Merit and virtuous Actions.' Shou'd he not have added, by Dozens? To this the Earl of Sunderland anſwer'd, 'That tho' the 'Number of Peers were limited, yet the 'Crown ſhould ſtill be the Fountain of Honour, and preſerve the Prerogative of creating 'new Peers, upon the Extinction of old Titles, for 'want of Male Iſſue, which happen'd frequently; and that thoſe Extinctions would give the 'Prince on the Throne, ſufficient Opportunities to beſtow Honours upon Commoners of 'diſtinguiſh'd Merit and Abilities.' The Debate being adjourn'd to Monday, on that Day, March 2d, Earl Stanhope, Principal Secretary of State, deliver'd to the Houſe the following Meſſage from His Majeſty.

The Duke of S---'s Motion for the Peerage Bill.

GEORGE R.

The King's Meſſage upon it.

'His Majeſty being inform'd that the Houſe 'of Peers have under Conſideration the State 'of the Peerage of Great Britain, is graciouſly 'pleas'd to acquaint this Houſe, That he has 'ſo much at Heart the ſettling the Peerage of 'the whole Kingdom, upon ſuch a Foundation, 'as may ſecure the Freedom and Conſtitution 'of Parliament, in all future Ages: That he 'is willing that his Prerogative ſtand not in 'the way of ſo great and neceſſary a Work.'

A Motion being made for an Addreſs of Thanks, the Earl of N—— objected againſt it, ſaying, 'it was unuſual for the King to take 'Notice of any thing depending in Parliament, 'before

A.D. 1719 'before the ſame was laid before His Majeſty in 'a parliamentary way.' But the Duke of Buckinghamſhire overrul'd this Objection, and ſaid 'It could not be ſuppos'd, that the King 'alone ſhould be ignorant of what every body 'elſe knew; and that ſince His Majeſty was 'pleas'd (for the Good of his Subjects) to ſuf- 'fer his Prerogative to be reſtrain'd, they ought 'readily to accept, and thankfully to acknow- 'ledge, ſo great and ſo gracious a Condeſcenti- 'on.' The Addreſs was agreed to, without 'dividing.

The Lords Addreſs.

At the opening the Debate upon this Bill, the Earl of Sunderland, in a Speech that laſted near an Hour, ran over the ſeveral Changes that have happen'd in the Peerage ſince the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, at what Time there were but 59 Peers in England.

Peers in Queen Elizabeth's Reign.

16 Earls.
2 Viſcounts.
40 Barons.

And King James the Firſt created as many new Peers; beſides reſtoring and placing others upon Claims; but even all that was done very ſparingly, in Compariſon of the Creation of the twelve Lords at once, ſoon after Sacheverel's Sedition. The Earl of Sunderland propos'd the Scheme beforemention'd, both with relation to the Engliſh and Scotch Peers. The Earl C—— anſwer'd his Speech by another of about the ſame Length, wherein his Lordſhip chiefly endeavour'd to ſhew, 'That what was inten- 'ded to be done with relation to the Scotch 'Peerage, was a manifeſt Violation of the 'Treaty of Union, and the higheſt Piece of In- 'juſtice; for it was no leſs than to deprive 'People of their Right, without being heard, 'and without any Pretence of Forfeiture on 'their Part.' But whatever Arguments cou'd be urg'd by Engliſh Peers, in Behalf of the Scotch, loſt a great deal of their Weight, by being oppos'd by Scotch Lords themſelves; whom the Engliſh could not but think the beſt Judges of their own Intereſts and Rights; and it was averr'd and acknowledg'd, that there was no Intention to include the preſent ſixteen Scotch Elective Peers in the twenty-five Hereditary Peers, in the before mention'd Scheme. The Duke of R——, the Duke of M——, the Marquis of A——, and the Earl of J—— (I can go no farther than my Line) alledg'd, 'That the ſettling the Peerage in the manner 'propos'd, was rather a Benefit than a Diſad- 'vantage to the Scotch Peerage, whoſe Repre- 'ſentatives were thereby encreas'd by nine, 'and all made Hereditary; and for thoſe Peers 'who for the preſent would be excluded, they 'would afterwards have a Chance to come in, 'upon Failure of any of the twenty-five: That 'this Regulation could not be look'd upon as a 'Violation of the Union; two Things only be- 'ing made unalterable by that Contract, Reli- 'gion, and the Proportion of publick Taxes.' The Earl of J—— repreſented, 'That the 'bringing in a Number of Peers into that 'Houſe by Election, was certainly derogatory 'to the Dignity of that auguſt Aſſembly, and 'of the higheſt Tribunal in the united King- 'dom; and therefore he had long before wiſh'd 'to ſee this Defect in the Union rectify'd, and 'the Scotch Peers freed from that ignominious 'Mark of Diſtinction, which made them be 'look'd upon as dependant on the Court and 'Miniſtry, and not at Liberty to vote like the 'other Members, for the good and Intereſt of their 'Country.' The following Reſolutions with Reſpect to the Peers of both England and Scotland, were carri'd by a Majority of 83 Voices againſt 30. A.D. 1719

Reſolutions about the Peerage as to Scotland

I. As to Scotland, in lieu of the ſixteen Elective Peers, to ſit in this Houſe on the Part of Scotland, twenty-five Peers to be declar'd by His Majeſty, ſhall have Hereditary Seats in Parliament, and be the Peers on the Part of the Peerage of Scotland.

II. That ſuch twenty-five Peers ſhall be declar'd by His Majeſty, before the next Seſſion of Parliament.

III. That nine of the twenty-five ſhall be appointed by His Majeſty to have immediate Right in ſuch Hereditary Seat in Parliament, ſubject to the Qualfications requiſite by the Laws now in Being.

IV. That none of the remaining ſixteen, ſo to be declar'd by His Majeſty, or their Heirs, ſhall become ſitting Peers of the Parliament of Great Britain, after the Determination of this preſent Parliament, except ſuch as are of the Number of the ſixteen Peers now ſitting in Parliament, on the Part of Scotland, and their Heirs.

V. That if any of the twenty-five Peers, ſo to be declar'd by His Majeſty, and their Heirs, ſhall fail, ſome one or other of the Peers of Scotland, ſhall be appointed by his Majeſty to ſucceed to every ſuch Peer ſo failing; and every Peer ſo appointed, ſhall be one of the Peers on the part of the Peerage of Scotland, in the Parliament of Great Britain; and ſo, toties quoties, as often as any ſuch Failure ſhall happen.

VI. That the Hereditary Right of ſitting in Parliament, which ſhall accrue to the twenty five Peers of Scotlaud, to be declar'd by His Majeſty, ſhall be ſo limited, as not to deſcend to Females.

As to England, I. That the Number of Peers of Great Britain, on the part of England, ſhall not be enlarg'd with precedent Right beyond ſix, above what they are at preſent: But if any of the ſaid preſent Peers, or ſuch ſix new Peers, in Caſe they be created, ſhall fail, their Number may be ſupply'd by new Creations of Commoners, natural born Subjects of this Kingdom; and ſo, toties quoties, as often as ſuch Failure ſhall happen.

II. That no Perſon be at any time hereafter created a Peer by Writ, nor any Peerage granted by Patent, for any longer Eſtate than for the Grantee, and the Heirs Male of his Body.

III. That there be not any Reſtraint on the Crown to create any of the Princes of the Blood Peers of Great Britain, with Right to ſit in Parliament.

IV. That whenever any of the Lords now ſitting in Parliament, whoſe Sons have been call'd by Writ, ſhall die, then it ſhall be lawful for His Majeſty, His Heirs and Succeſſors, to create a Peer, to ſupply the Number ſo leſſen'd.

V. That every Creation of a Peer hereafter to be made contrary to theſe Reſolutions, ſhall be null and void, to all Intents and Purpoſes.

The Judges were order'd to bring in a Bill purſuant hereunto, which was read the firſt Time,

A.D.1719 Time, March the 14th, and order'd a ſecond Reading.

In the mean Time the Diſpute without Doors continu'd with great Warmth, by the Advocates Pro and Con. The ſtrongeſt on the Negative Side ſeem'd to refer to the ſecret Meaning before ſpoken of, which was interpreted to be a Deſign to put a Reſtraint on His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, when his Succeſſion ſhould take Effect; which it was thought the then Miniſtry did not promiſe themſelves much from, and had little Reaſon ſo to do. This was taken to be ſuch a Diſregard and Injuſtice to His Royal Highneſs, whoſe late Adminiſtration in His Majeſty's Abſence had given univerſal Content, that all Parties ſeem'd reconcil'd in their Reſentment of it. It has produc'd, (ſays the Author of a Pamphlet, entit'led, The Thoughts of a Member, &c.) a never before known Unanimity amongſt the Great Men. It has yok'd the Lion with the Lamb; the Whigs with the Tories; Men in Power with thoſe they have turn'd out of it: Miniſters of State are become Patriots; complain of their own Power, and join with their profeſt Enemies in leſſening that Prerogative they have ſo often Occaſion for. This Controverſy was ſpun out to ſo great a Length, that conſidering the Matter drop'd at laſt, we cannot keep it Company: Only I can't omit a few Lines out of the Plebeian, which ſhews the vain Pretences of Men to Honour and Dignities by unjuſt and unwarrantable Means, ſuch as that ſpoken of in the firſt Mention of this Bill. The greateſt Traytor to Civil Society that ever yet appear'd, will be the Man, if ſuch a One can be found, who ſhall contend for ſuch a Bill, ſhould it be propos'd among the Commons, with the Aſſurance in his Pocket of being a Peer, as ſoon as the Bill paſſes. What follows is a terrible Memento to all thoſe that are conſcious of holding their Dignities unjuſtly. And ſhould he ſucceed, which God forbid, that Honour which is to be the Reward of ſo baſe a Treachery, will be a laſting Mark of Infamy to the Family that bears it, whilſt any Notion of Honour remains among Mankind.

A Reflection on the Affirmatives.

Rumours of an Invaſion from Spain.

During this Diſpute, People all over England, eſpecially in the Weſt, were kept in continual Alarms, with Rumours of an Invaſion from Spain. The Pretender poſted away from Rome for that Court, accompany'd by two fugitive Traitors, Mar and Perth, who parting with him on the Road, left him to purſue his Journey to Madrid, while they went upon his important Commiſſions elſewhere: Himſelf got on board a ſmall Veſſel at Nettuno, in the beginning of February; but it was above a Month before he got to Madrid; where he made his Entry in one of the King's Coaches, attended by his Life-Guards; and was receiv'd by King Philip with all the Honours that can be ſhewn a Crown'd Head; tho' his was a preſcrib'd one: And if it had been better than it was, he muſt have ſmil'd at the Folly of thoſe who put themſelves to ſo much fruitleſs Expence, to dreſs up a Pageant, that could be of no more Service to them, than what they could make of his Name among a Crew of deſperate Wretches in Great Britain and Ireland.

The Pretender in Spain.

On the 6th of March, Captain Gardiner arriv'd from France, being ſent Expreſs by the Earl of Stairs, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador at Paris, with an Account that the Preparations of the Spaniards at Cadiz, were certainly deſign'd againſt England: The Tranſports there took on board 13 Battalions, and a Regiment of Dragoons, all or moſt of them Iriſh Papiſts: Ormond was to head them, and Sarsfield went to Ireland to ſee what could be done in that Kingdom in favour of the Pretender. Four Days after His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and having given His Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Acts, was pleas'd to ſay, He had given Orders to my Lord Chancellor to declare to both Houſes, in his Name and Words, a Matter His Majeſty thought of the greateſt Importance. Then His Lordſhip read the Speech, beginning thus:

A.D.1719

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

Having receiv'd from our good Brother and Ally, the moſt Chriſtian King, repeated Advices that an Invaſion will ſuddenly be attempted from Spain againſt my Dominions, in favour of the Pretender to my Crown, I have judg'd it convenient to make you acquainted with it; and ſhall on my Part take all the neceſſary Meaſures to defeat the Deſigns of our Enemies, &c.

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, it was mov'd, 'That an humble Addreſs be 'preſented to His Majeſty, to return him the 'dutiful and unfeigned Thanks of this Houſe, 'for having graciouſly communicated to his 'Parliament, that he has receiv'd Intelligence 'of an Invaſion intended from Spain againſt 'theſe Kingdoms; and to aſſure His Majeſty, 'that this Houſe will ſupport him with the ut-'moſt Vigour and Efforts, to defeat ſo extraor-'dinary an Attempt: And to deſire that His 'Majeſty would give the neceſſary Orders to 'ſtrengthen and augment his Forces by Sea and 'Land, in ſuch a manner, as he in His Great 'Wiſdom ſhall think fit; aſſuring His Majeſty, 'that this Houſe will effectually make good any 'Encreaſe of Expence that ſhall ariſe from ſuch 'an Augmentation, and effectually enable His 'Majeſty not only to diſappoint the Deſigns 'of his Enemies both at Home and Abroad, 'but, by the Bleſſing of God, turn them to 'their own Confuſion.

The Houſe of Commons addreſs againſt him.

This Motion could not with any Degree of Modeſty or Sobriety be directly oppos'd; but ſomething was ſaid by Mr. P—— againſt ſending a Fleet into the Mediterranean, whilſt Great Britain was left naked and expos'd to the Attempts of a provok'd Enemy. It will be found preſently, that there was no want of the Ships in the Mediterranean, to oppoſe our Enemies by Sea; and the mentioning of the Peerage Bill, then in the Houſe of Lords, did not ſeem to have much relation to the Preparation of the Spaniards at Cadiz. What Mr. Secretary Craggs ſaid in Anſwer, has a Spirit in it which could not but make its way in that Aſſembly. 'That as to what had been ſuggeſted about the 'Peerage Bill, that Affair being yet depending 'in the other Houſe, it was unparliamentary 'to take Notice of it before it came regularly 'before them: But that however he would be-'forehand adventure to ſay, that as it was a 'moſt gracious Condeſcenſion in his Majeſty to 'ſuffer a Branch of His Royal Prerogative to 'be reſtrain'd, in order to ſecure the Liberty of 'Parliament, ſo he doubted not that when that 'Bill came down to them, it would be unani-'mouſly approv'd. That as to the Advices the 'King had communicated to his Parliament of

Mr. Craggs's Speech about it.

A.D.1719 'the Invaſion with which his Dominions were 'threatned, though it was unuſual for the So- 'vereign to declare his Intelligence, yet His 'Majeſty had been moſt graciouſly pleas'd to 'tell them from whence he receiv'd his Infor- 'mation; that therefore it would be want of 'Reſpect, to queſtion His Majeſty's Intelligence, 'and he was ſure no Member of that Houſe 'had Authority to do it. That he hop'd there 'was no great Danger from the Invaſion with 'which they were threatned: but that it would 'be the higheſt piece of Imprudence not to take 'all the neceſſary Precautions to repel any In- 'ſults from the Spaniards, and to defeat all the 'Deſigns of His Majeſty's, and the Nation's 'Enemies, both at Home and Abroad. And as 'to the Conduct of His Majeſty's Miniſters, on 'which the Member who ſpoke laſt was pleas'd 'to reflect, if a Motion were made for ap- 'pointing a Day to inquire into the ſame, he 'would readily ſecond it.

The Addreſs paſt without farther Oppoſition; and the Lords preſented another to the ſame Purport: To both which His Majeſty return'd a moſt gracious Anſwer.

Sir John Norris was before this ſet out for Chatham, and Rear Admiral Mighels for Portſmouth, to forward the fitting out of, and to command the Ships that were at thoſe Stations. Three Troops of the Royal Regiment of Blue, Horſe, with Wade's and Pitt's Regiments; Kerr's, Evans's, Gore's and Honeywood's Dragoons; and three Battalions of the Foot Guards, were order'd to march immediately towards the Weſt of England, where it was thought moſt likely the Enemy intended to land; and where the four Regiments of Major General Sabine, Colonel Egerton, Colonel Chudleigh, and Lord Hinchinbroke's, arriv'd from Ireland at Minehead and Briſtol, ſometime after. Two Swiſs Battalions from Holland arriv'd in the River of Thames, and were quarter'd in Eſſex; and three Dutch Battalions landed in the North of England: All theſe foreign Troops were under the Command of Major General Keppel, Brother to the late Earl of Albemarle. The latter, with ſome other Regiments of Engliſh Foot and Dragoons, were order'd to march into Scotland. Sir George Byng, on the firſt News of the Spaniards intended Invaſion, ſent away the Regiments of Okara and Sankey from Minorca. His Cruizers took one Spaniſh Man of War of 50 Guns, and burnt another. Sir John Norris put to Sea March the 11th, from St. Hellens, with His Majeſty's Ships the Prince Frederick, Windſor, Centurion, Salisbury, Lancaſter, Flamborough, Gibralter, which were join'd by the Wincheſter and Kinſale: And on the 29th, the Earl of Berkley ſail'd from St. Hellens Weſtward, with the Dorſetſhire, Hampton Court, Medway, Weymouth, Durſley Galley, Rye and Hind, to join Sir John Norris, who was ſtation'd between Scilly and the Lizard. Theſe Preparations by Sea and by Land, were ſo ready, and ſo ample, that the Apprehenſions of Danger from the Spaniards ceas'd, even before there was Advice of the Diſperſion of their Fleet, and the Ruin of their Enterprize.

Preparations againſt the Spaniards.

Cammock, mention'd in the Account of the Defeat of the Spaniſh Fleet off Sicily, was doubtleſs to have born a Part in it, as well as James Butler and the other Fugitives: He ſail'd from Meſſina the 29th of January in a Spaniſh Man of War of 22 Guns, and 180 Men, call'd the Little St. John, which was taken the next Day by the Royal Oake, one of Sir George Byng's Squadron; but Cammock eſcap'd, by taking, in time, to his Boat, and making to Calania: He left behind him the moſt valuable Piece in his Treaſury, the Pretender's Commiſſion to be Admiral of the White; for this Shadow of a King took upon him to make Generals, Admirals, Dukes, Biſhops, and whatever his Followers had a mind to, though leſs in Reality than the Beings of ſo many Puppets.

A.D.1719

Cammock's Commiſſion taken.

The Earl of Berkley, with the Men of War under his Command, having been off Cape-Cleer in Ireland, return'd to the Britiſh Court, April 4th, and having detach'd Admiral Mighels to the Coaſt of Gallica, for Intelligence, with the Windſor, Monmouth, and Antelope, his Lordſhip left the Command of the Fleet to Sir John Norris, and return'd himſelf to London. Sarsfield made his Eſcape out of Ireland, by taking Shipping at Killicolgan, within ſix Miles of Gallway: But three of the Scotch Rebels Seaforth, Mariſchal, and Tullibardine, landed in the beginning of April with about 400 Men, at Kintail, in the Shire of Roſs, in Scotland, from on board two Tranſports. Theſe Deſperadoes were by their Inſtructions to remain at Kintail, till they heard of Ormond's Landing in England; that Outlaw being the Soul of this Expedition, for the Deſtruction of theſe Kingdoms out of which his Treaſons had expell'd him.

Mariſchal, and other Rebels, land in Scotland.

Ormond the arch Traitor.

The Spaniſh Fleet conſiſted of about 50 Tranſports, having on board 5000 Men, and Arms for twice that Number; they were convoy'd by four Men of War; and about 50 Leagues off Cape Finiſtre met with a violent Storm which laſted 48 Hours, and the Commodore of 64 Braſs Guns having thrown all of the upper Quarter Deck over-board and loſt all his Maſts, made for the Coaſt of Spain, as did the other Ships with the Soldiers and what remain'd of them and their Horſes for the moſt part Sick and Unſerviceable. The Ships we had at Sea and the Forces a-ſhoar, would certainly have given a very good Account of theſe Formidable Invaders had they eſcap'd the Storm. Their Intention was to have made up the Briſtol Channel, and to have landed at or near that City, where the Dregs of the People ſhew'd great willingneſs to receive them, as did ſome of their Leaders and Idols in Somerſetſhire and Glouceſterſhire; but tho' they could talk big over their Cups, the Well-affected were no farther afraid of the Miſchief they cou'd do, than ſober Men are afraid of Thieves, Madmen, and Drunkards. In the mean Time, James Butler's Houſe in St. James's Square, was ſold for 7500 l. to one Mr. Hacket, an Iriſh Gentleman, and his Houſe at Richmond for 6000 l. the latter for the Uſe of His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales. His Majeſty's Ships on the Coaſt of Scotland, were ſo ſtation'd, as to cut off all Supplies by Sea, that might be ſent to the Rebels from Spain; and the Spaniards that came with Mariſchal, and the other Traitors, ſix Companies, and 300 Men, ſoon found they were in a Net, and could not get out of it, but at Diſcretion of the King's Forces. About 50 of them got into Donan Caſtle; and as ſoon as the Engliſh Men of War, the Worceſter and Flamborough, came up to it, and cannonaded it, they ſeiz'd their Officers, and ſurrender'd themſelves, with what Stores of Ammunition and Proviſion they had there. This Blow oblig'd the Rebels

The Spaniards in Scotland ſurrender Donan Caſtle.

A.D.1719 bels to ſhift their Quarters; they were follow'd cloſely by Major General Wightman, and pretended to defend the Paſs of Glenſhill; but upon his Approach they deſerted that Poſt, June 10th, being their Maſter the Pretender's Birth-day: The Major General found them more advantagiouſly poſted at Strachill; and tho' they were near 2000 in Number, and the King's Troops not a 1000, yet the latter, by the Conduct and Bravery of their Officers, General Wightman, Colonel Clayton, Lieutenant Colonel Laurence, Lieutenant Colonel Reading, Major Robertſon, Mr. Monroe of Culcairne, and other gallant Gentlemen, and their own Intrepidity, drove the Rebels from all their Faſtneſſes, and diſperſt them; the Spaniards, 270, ſurrender'd Priſoners at Diſcretion, and deliver'd up their Arms; the arch Traitors Mariſchal, Seaforth, and Tullibardine, got away to the Iſlands, and from thence made their Eſcape by Shipping.

The Scots Rebels and Spaniards diſperſt by General Wightman.

While the Spaniards were in theſe doughty Expeditions, the French Troops were advancing beyond their Frontiers, and Monſieur De Silly, who commanded them, after a ſhort Diſpute, made himſelf Maſter of Port-Paſſage, where he found ſix large Men of War, on the Stocks, very near finiſh'd, which he deſtroy'd. Then the Mareſchal De Berwick, who commanded the French Army in Chief, form'd the Siege of Fonterabia, and took it, the 5th of June. The King of Spain made an unſucceſsful Attempt to relieve the Place, and approach'd with an Army of 9000 Foot, and 4000 Horſe; but it was in the Hands of the French before he could draw near enough to it; ſo he march'd back to Pampeluna, doubly diſappointed, both of raiſing the Siege, and of the French Forces Deſertion: For he depended as much on an Inſurrection in France, as on a Rebellion in England; upon both which his chimerical Projects were founded; and in both which he was alike baffled and abus'd, by the Credulity and Raſhneſs of a proud obſtinate Prieſt, Cardinal Alberoni, whoſe Head being as full of Viſions, and his Heart of Rancour, as the King of Sweden's, there had been a perfect Harmony in Counſels between their Agents in favour of the Pretender: And the Regent of France was too wiſe a Prince not to foreſee that the King of Spain's Miniſter had as much at Heart the diſpoſſeſſing him of the Regency, as the putting the Pretender in Poſſeſſion of the Crown of Great Britain; two Schemes as Romantick as ever enter'd into the Head of Don Quixote.

The French deſtroy the Spaniſh Ships at Port-Paſſage.

King Philip abus'd by Cardinal Alberoni.

His Majeſty in his Speech at the Prorogation of the Parliament, April 18th, told them,

'By the Bleſſing of God on our Endeavours, 'we have hitherto diſappointed the ill Deſigns 'of our Enemies, who flatter'd themſelves 'with Succeſs from our unhappy Diviſions.

'We perceive by the raſh and wicked Counſels which have lately prevail'd in the Court 'of Spain, that the deſperate and extravagant 'Projects of one ambitious Man, tho' not capable 'of giving Fears to their Neighbours, may occaſion them ſome Expence and Trouble.

'That Court being influenc'd by Counſels 'odious and deſtructive to the Spaniards, who 'find themſelves neglected and oppreſs'd, after 'having endeavour'd to foment Conſpiracies 'and Seditions both here and in France: and 'ſtoop'd to Practices unuſual, accompany'd by 'Manifeſto's, of a Stile unheard of among 'great Princes, has at laſt proceeded to acknow- A.D.1719 'ledge the Pretender.

'As this News has given great Surprize to 'all Europe, I queſtion not but it will be re'ceiv'd by every good Briton, with Indigna'tion and Contempt.

'It is our Happineſs at this Juncture to find 'our ſelves aſſiſted by the greateſt Powers of 'Europe, againſt an Enemy that has no Allies, 'but thoſe who would betray the Government 'under which they live, and are protected.'

King's Speech of Philip's owning the Pretender.

In what follows, His Majeſty ſpeaks more in the Spirit of a true Briton, than any of the modern pretended Patriots and Cato's have done, ſince they made it a Pretence to foment Factions and Diviſions amongſt us.

'I have always look'd upon the Glory of a 'Sovereign, and the Liberty of a Subject, as in- Liberty. 'ſeperable; and think it is the peculiar Happi'neſs of a Britiſh King, to reign over a free 'People: As the Civil Rights therefore, and 'Privileges of my Subjects, and eſpecially of 'my two Houſes of Parliament, do juſtly 'claim my moſt tender Concern; if any Pro'viſion deſign'd to perpetrate theſe Bleſſings to 'your Poſterity, remain imperfect, for want 'of Time during this Seſſion, maturely to diſcuſs and ſettle Matters of ſo great Importance, 'I promiſe my ſelf, you will take the firſt 'Opportunity to render my Wiſhes for your 'Happineſs compleat and effectual, and to 'ſtrengthen the Union which is of ſo much 'Conſequence to the Welfare of this Kingdom.

In an Addreſs of the grand Jury of the Iſland of Barbado's to Robert Lowther, Eſq; their Governor, now made publick, there's a Paragraph which then made ſome Noiſe.

'We look upon our ſelves under a more than 'ordinary Obligation to your Excellency, for 'your generous Care in protecting us againſt an 'Eſtabliſhment of an Eccleſiaſtical Court, 'which hath been lately attempted; a Juriſdi'ction no leſs inconſiſtent with the Intereſt and 'Conſtitution of this Iſland, than it is univer'ſally feared and deteſted by the Inhabitants.

A Paragraph in the Barbado's Addreſs againſt Spiritual Courts.

Though this Governor, Mr. Lowther, was doubtleſs guilty of much Male-Adminiſtration, as was prov'd upon him the next Year in England, by Jonathan Belman, Eſq; the preſent Atte-

A.D.1719 Attorney General of that Iſland, who with great Hazard, Expence and Loſs, made a Voyage home, on purpoſe to ſerve that Colony, in delivering them from him, yet 'tis certain his protecting them againſt a Spiritual Court, ought to be reckon'd one good Deed, were there no other to be remember'd in his Favour. A Complaint againſt him, ſign'd by Sir Robert Davers, Sir Charles Cox, Abel Alleyne, Eſq; William Walker, Eſq; John Walter, Eſq; Thomas Pindar, Eſq; John Alleyne, Eſq; and Edward Morgan, Eſq; was preſented to the Lord Preſident of the Privy Council; and it had its Effect not long after. However, to find a Vindication of a Spiritual Court in a Repreſentation, by way of Anſwer to the Addreſs of the Grand Jury, is a Novelty much more extraordinary than Extortion and Corruption in Governors of American Iſlands; not of late ſo much a Grievance as formerly. And the Iſland of Barbados is now happy in the Government of a noble Lord, who abhors thoſe mean and ſordid Views, and takes Pleaſure in Acts of Juſtice and Goodneſs.

On the 9th of May, His Majeſty in Council declar'd his Intention to go out of the Kingdom in a ſhort Time; and was pleas'd to name the Lords Juſtices, in whoſe Hands His Majeſty had thought fit to entruſt the Government during his Abſence.

About this Time there aroſe a Diſpute and Difference between the Diſſenting Miniſters in about London, about Subſcribing, and Non-ſubſcribing, Articles of Advice, for the Conduct of their Brethren, and their Congregations in other Places. Some were for inſerting in thoſe Articles, the firſt Article of the Church of England, about the Divinity of Our Bleſſed Saviour; others were for leaving the Sacred Doctrine as the Scripture had left it, and not explaining it in humane Words: An Explanation which many believe it is not capable of; and then the attempting it muſt be without Warrant or Succeſs. But others thought the omitting a poſitive Declaration of their Faith in the Point of the Trinity, wou'd give a Handle to Gainſayers to ſuſpect, if not to charge them with, Arian Opinions, then growing up faſt, as do all ill Roots, if Mr. Whiſton does not deceive us in ſaying, moſt of his Acquaintance in the Univerſity of Cambridge, were no more Orthodox than himſelf in the Doctrine of the Trinity, or to that Effect. Hiſtory excludes all Controverſy, and therefore I ſhall keep

A Difference between Diſſenting Miniſters.

A.D.1719 keep close to the Facts, in a very short Narrative.

The Dissenters at several Places, but more especially at Exeter, being jealous that their Ministers were not as Orthodox as themselves, in the Article of the Trinity, had demanded of them a Confession of Faith; and upon Advice of the Differences between their Pastors and them, on this Occasion, the dissenting Ministers in and about London, held a Synod, to consult of Articles of Advice for Peace. They met at Salters-Hall; and there was seen the Effect which Nazianzen complains of, in ancient Councils, that they produc'd nothing but Wranglings and Dissentions. The main Debate was about inserting in the Advice, the first Article of the Church of England, of Faith in the holy Trinity; and the Answer to the fifth and sixth Questions in the Assembly's Catechism; which, by the way, will appear to be no fit Meat for Babes. But upon the Question, it was carry'd by a Majority of 57 against 53, That no humane Compositions or Interpretations of the Doctrine of the Trinity, should be made a part of these Articles of Advice, which they were met to draw up. How far the Heats carry'd them on both Sides, may be seen by what happen'd at the Division. One of those who were against humane Compositions, saying, as he went out, You that are against Persecution, come up Stairs; and another, who was for them, You that are for the Doctrine of the Trinity, stay below: Both which seems to be equally unfair: For the subscribing the Advice with the humane Words, was not Persecution in the literal Sense; neither was the Non-subscribing, a Denial of the Doctrine of the Trinity.

The following Ministers subscrib'd to the Article of the Church of England, and the two Answers in the Assembly's Catechism in their Advice.

This so plainly shewing a Division in the Synod, it must be remember'd, that the Subscribers withdrew from the Assembly, notwithstanding the Question had been carry'd against them, and set their Names to a Paper containing the first Article, and the two Answers beforemention'd.

The first Article of the Church of England.

'There is but one living and true God everlasting, without Body, Parts, Passions, of infinite Power, Wisdom, and Goodness; the Maker and Preserver of all Things, both visible and invisible. And in the Unity of this Godhead, there be three Persons of one Substance, Power and Eternity; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.'

The Subscribers Declaration.

The Answer to the fifth and sixth Questions in the Assembly's Catechism.

'There is but one God only, the living and true God. There are three Persons in the Godhead, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost;

A.D.1719 'Ghoſt; and theſe Three are one God, the 'ſame in Subſtance, equal in Power and Glory.

The Declaration of the Miniſters Non-ſubſcribing.

The Non-Subſcribers Declaration.

'We freely declare that we utterly diſown 'the Arian Doctrines, and ſincerely believe the 'Doctrine of the Trinity, and the proper Divi-'nity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which we ap-'prehend to be clearly reveal'd in the Holy 'Scriptures; but are far from condemning any 'who appear to be with us in the main, tho' 'they chuſe not to declare themſelves in other 'than Scripture Terms, or not in ours.'

Which they farther explained thus.

'The humane Words, Trinity and proper 'Divinity, in this Declaration of our Faith, 'are us'd only to notify the Things we ſpeak 'of; and we do not preſume in the way of 'Teſt to go into any particular Explanations 'of thoſe Things, either in our own, or other 'Mens Words: But for that we refer to the 'Holy Scriptures, whence it may appear, that 'we take the Scripture Account of thoſe Things, 'to be the beſt and fitteſt we can uſe on ſuch 'Occaſions.' And truly, 'tis very much out of the Gravity, both of Divinity and Hiſtory, to ſay, there's a better Account than the only Account we have of it.

Miniſters excluded at Exeter.

While theſe Matters were tranſacting at London, three Congregations at Exeter, proceeded to the actual Excluſion of their Paſtors, Mr. Pierce, Mr. Withers, and Mr. Hallet, for refuſing to ſubſcribe certain Articles of Faith, which had been prepar'd for them. Theſe three Miniſters were Men of diſtinguiſhed Merit, and the Treatment they met with, made a very great Noiſe; and is thought to have ſtuck ſo to the Heart of Mr. Pierce, of ſpecial Note among the Learned, that it ſhortned his Days. Having Occaſion to conſult him three Years after upon the Deſign of the Critical Hiſtory of England, his Anſwer was, The World is not worthy of it; and the Pains you muſt be at, would be thrown away upon them. He meant the Friends to our preſent Conſtitution: And whether he was a Prophet, as well as a Prieſt, let others determine.

It is not unlikely that a leading Man or two, among the Subſcribers, had private Encouragement from a great Prelate, to proceed as they did; but as I have not ſufficient Proof of its being true, I ſhall not dwell upon hear-ſay.

Mr. Addiſon's Death.

I have avoided entring into Biography, or Life Writing, as too particular for general Hiſtory, and beſides, would take up too much of my room; but I cannot omit mentioning the Death of Mr. Addiſon, who dy'd at Holland-Houſe in Kenſington, the 17th of June, of an Aſthma and Dropſy. He was a Gentleman of excellent Endowments: He had an exquiſite Taſte in all Parts of polite Literature, had a great Stock of uſeful Learning, a juſt and fine Elocution, a true Genius in Poetry, a beautiful Imagination, and an exact Judgment.

He took a great deal of Pains for his Productions, tho' they ſeem to have been written with the greateſt Eaſe; and could hardly ſatisfy himſelf in them, when all the World was ſatisfy'd.

He was one of the Sons of Lancelot Addiſon, D. D. Dean of Litchfield, and was born at Alſton near Amesbury in Wiltſhire, of which Place his Father was then Rector. He had his Education at the Charter-Houſe School in London, where he made Acquaintance with two Perſons, for whom he had ever after an entire Friendſhip, Stephen Clay, Eſq; of the Inner Temple, Author of the Epiſtle, in Verſe, from the Elector of Bavaria to the French King, after the Battle of Ramelies; and Sir Richard Steele, whom he ſerv'd both with his Pen and his Purſe: He went from the Charter-Houſe, to Magdalen College, Oxon; and in his Youth admitted Henry Sacheverel, afterwards famous, or rather infamous, as an Incendiary, into ſome Intimacy with him, as appears by his Epiſtle to Mr. H. S. in the fourth Miſcellany Poems, printed by J. Tonſon, beginning thus: A.D. 1-19

Since deareſt Harry you will needs requeſt,
A ſhort Account of all the Muſe poſſeſt.

But he broke off all Correſpondence with him, as ſoon as he began to diſtinguiſh himſelf by his ſeditious Practices. He wrote this Poem in 1694. His Tranſlation of part of Ovid's Metamorphoſes, in thoſe Miſcellanies, gain'd him the good Opinion of Mr. Dryden, as a Poet. In the Year 1695, he wrote a Poem to His Majeſty King William, and preſented it to the Lord Keeper, Sir John Sommers, to whom he was introduc'd by Mr. Tonſon; and this was the firſt Step he took in the way of his future Fortune: Let us not forget the following Lines of this Poem.

Some Account of Mr. Addiſon, and his Works.

The Race of Naſſau was by Heav'n deſign'd
To curb the proud Oppreſſors of Mankind;
To bind the Tyrants of the Earth with Laws,
And fight in ev'ry injur'd Nation's Cauſe:
The World's great Patriots, they for Juſtice call,
And as they favour, Kingdoms riſe or fall.

He was very ſoon taken under the Patronage of Mr. Montagu, afterwards Earl of Halifax; and being recommended to His Majeſty King William, by thoſe two great Men, he was enabled, by a Penſion of 300*l.* a Year, to poliſh by Travel, the Knowledge he had acquir'd by Study. From Italy, in 1701, he ſent that admirable Poem, prefix'd to his Remarks on ſeveral Parts of that beautiful Country, which is of equal Beauty with it.

He was in his Travels in the Year 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, and when he return'd, had what he call'd his Little Thing, given him, the Place of one of the Commiſſioners of Appeal in the Exciſe. He took upon himſelf the Care of the Education of the young Earl of Warwick; and that gave him Opportunity to render himſelf acceptable, by his Services, to the Counteſs, that Lord's Mother; tho' ſeveral Years paſt in great Intimacy between them, before ſhe cou'd think of admitting him for her Husband: The Diſparity in Rank and Fortune, was a Morſel of too hard Digeſtion with her: But his Patience and Perſeverance, and the many charming Letters and Poems he addreſs'd to her, (not yet printed) remov'd in Time, whatever Difficulties the Difference in their Condition had thrown in his way. He was in the mean while made Under-Secretary of State, when Sir Charles Hedges was Principal Secretary. Upon my Lord Wharton's being appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, he was appointed Secretary for that Kingdom, having been choſen a Member of the Houſe of Commons for Leſtwithiel in Cornwal, ſome time before, as

A.D. 1719 as he was in the next Parliament, 1710, for Malmsbury in Wiltshire, by the Lord Wharton's Interest; and he was chosen for that Borough to his Death. 'Tis now well known that most of the Spectators were written by him, as were many of the Tattlers and Guardians; but the greater part of the Burthen of the Spectators lay upon him; the Product of the Sale, being the only way Mr. Steele had, to disengage him from a Debt of a large Sum of Money, he had incurr'd on that Gentleman's Account. Several of his Spectators were taken from Manuscript Essays, which Mr. Addison intended to publish as Essays in Prose, and were afterwards put into the Form we see them in, for the Use of that Paper, particularly the Treatise of the Pleasures of the Imagination; which I saw in Manuscript, a Year or two before the Spectator was publish'd, in the Form of an Essay; and there were two or three pretty large Quarto Manuscripts, full of such Essays. He abhorr'd the Devices of the Harleian Ministers, and voted always in Parliament like a true Lover of his Country. Upon the Demise of the Queen, the Regency, before His late Majesty's happy Arrival, appointed him to be their Secretary; and after that he was made one of the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations: It must be confess'd, that Mr. Addison in this Instance shew'd, that he was not perfectly disinterested: For having been desired to write a political Paper in Vindication of the Constitution, against its Enemies, the Tories, he insisted upon it, that he shou'd first be made a Commissioner of Trade; and he was so made, before he publish'd his Paper, call'd the Freeholder, which contributed not a little to keep the Affections of many People steady to the present happy Settlement. Not long before the Queen's Death he brought the Tragedy of Cato upon the Stage: He took the Hint of it from a masterly Piece representing the Death of that Roman Patriot, which he saw in the Stadt-House at Amsterdam, when he set out upon his Travels. He wrote two or three Acts of it abroad, and had so little Inclination to finish it, that being press'd by Mr. John Hughes, Author of the Siege of Damascus, a Tragedy, to fit it for the Stage, he excus'd himself; but added, he should be well pleas'd, if Mr. Hughes would do it for him; and rather than the four Acts he had written should remain imperfect, and the World be depriv'd of the Pleasure of seeing that Tragedy, Mr. Hughes offer'd to undertake it; but continuing to solicite Mr. Addison to do himself Justice, by finishing his Piece himself, he at last prevail'd, the rather becaus the great Danger the Nation was brought into by the above-mention'd Ministry, of losing their Religion and Liberty, made it necessary to inspire the People with Roman Sentiments, and Roman Courage, for the Defence of them. This Mr. St. John then Secretary of State was so sensible of, that to prevent its having any such good Effect, he declar'd loudly in Favour of Cato; as if he and the Roman had been in the same way of thinking; and that while himself was contriving to enslave his Country, by imposing a Popish bigotted Pretender upon it, he was himself a Patriot of the Stamp of Cato, ready to be a Sacrifice in the glorious Cause of Liberty. Mr. Addison, besides the Excellence of his Genius, and other Perfections of Mind, had a most modest engaging Behaviour, and such a Diffidence of himself, that he cou'd never so far overcome it, as to bring himself to speak in the House of Commons, for want of a Quality which his Friend Mr. Steele did by no means want, even in his own Opinion, and which in publick Assemblies goes very far in forming of Orators. Mr. Addison had a Brother in the East-Indies, who by his Interest became Governor of Fort St. George, but did not live long after his being put into that lucrative Employment. Mr. Addison made 6 or 7000 l. of the Effects that were left him in India, which was the greatest part of his Capital at his Death: For though a late Writer speaks of his raising a considerable Fortune by his Industry, 'tis certain, that what Fortune he rais'd, was owing more to the Industry of others, than to his own. He was ill almost all the Time that he liv'd after he marry'd the Countess of Warwick; and his Marriage had been too long depending to give him so fine a Relish of its Happiness as he conceiv'd in the Idea of it. He was so chagrin'd before he dy'd, whatever was the Occasion, that he had Recourse to L'eau de Barbade for Relief; and 'tis thought the frequent Use of it shorten'd a Life, on which ev'ry one seem'd to set a greater Value than himself. Will it be believ'd by Posterity that so good and so great a Man, taken in what View we will, should be follow'd to his Grave by a mean Lampoon, written by A. P. whom he had highly oblig'd. He had Issue by the Countess a Daughter only, and seem'd, as he worded his Will, to be apprehensive that his own Estate would not be sufficient for her, without the Mother's augmenting it. Whatever is said of a Person of Mr. Addison's Character, cannot justly be thought a Digression in History, considering him as a Secretary of State, as well as a Poet.

The Occasion of his writing Cato.

Whatever Pretence or Cry the Rabble have had since Sacheverel's Condemnation, the Pretender has been at the bottom. If when the last Uproar about the Excise was spreading, it shou'd have been said, that it was rais'd by Jacobites, he who said it, wou'd have been hooted as a Dreamer. One wou'd think the Journeymen Weavers who were now grown mutinous about Womens wearing Calicoes, and met tumultuously to insult them, and tear their Gowns off their Backs, had as little Relation to Jacobitism, as any People in Britain: But where and whenever the Multitude have been in a Ferment for above twenty Years past, the Pretender's Faction have had the chief Hand in working it up. In June there was a great Riot rais'd by the Journeymen Weavers about Bishopsgate and Aldgate; the Militia was order'd out to suppress the Rioters, of whom John Humphreys, Samuel Baines, George Picket, Thomas Hardy, and Charles Child, were taken: Of these John Humphreys was prov'd to have been one of the Captains of the Mob in Salisbury-Court, and had been convicted for saying, King James is the true Heir to the Crown, and for drinking the Pretender's Health by that Title: Humphreys, Baines, Picket and Hardy, were condemn'd to stand in the Pillory for the Riot, and Child recommended to the Favour of the Court at Hickes-Hall.

The Parliament of Ireland meeting on the first of July, the Duke of Bolton, Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, made an excellent Speech.

Late Earl of Marr ſeiz'd at Geneva.

His Majeſty having Information from the Count De Marſey, his Reſident at Geneva, that the late Earl of Marr, and Mr. Stuart, had been arreſted there, the King wrote a Letter to that Republick to continue the two Perſons under Confinement.

Proclamation againſt Tullibardine, Mariſchal, and Seaforth.

A Proclamation was iſſu'd, July 20, for apprehending William Murray, commonly call'd Marquis of Tullibardine, George Keith, late Earl Mariſchal, and William Mackenzie, late Earl of Seaforth, with a Reward of 2000 l. for every one of them.

Sir George Byng was all this while in the Streights with a Squadron of Men of War, to facilitate the Reduction of Sicily, by Count Merci, General of the Emperor's Forces in that Iſland, where an Action happen'd between them and the Spaniards, June 21, near Franca Villa, which is moſt remarkable for the different Accounts of it, given by the Generals of the two Armies, German and Spaniſh: The Marquis De Lede, General of the Spaniſh Army, wrote to the Count De Montemar, Governor of Palermo, 'I deſire you will order 'that in Thankſgiving for the Victory with 'which God has bleſſed our Arms, Te Deum be 'ſung.' The Count De Merci, the Imperial General, wrote to Sir George Byng, 'Yeſter-'day I took Poſt above the Enemy's Camp, 'and am poſſeſt of all the Eminencies of it, 'having beaten them from ſeveral.'

Lord Carteret in Sweden.

The Lord Carteret, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the Queen of Sweden, arriv'd at Stockholm in June. Not long after a Treaty was concluded and ſign'd at London, by the King of Great Britain, and the Queen of Sweden's Miniſters, by which the Diſtricts of Bremen and Verden were yielded for ever to the Houſe of Hanover, in Conſideration of a Sum of Money to be paid to Sweden, to confirm His Majeſty's former Purchaſe. The Queen of Sweden having deſir'd that an Engliſh Man of War might carry Count Bielke, her Ambaſſador to the Emperor, to ſome Port in Germany, Sir John Norris receiv'd Orders to accommodate her Majeſty in it. The King continuing ſtill at Heren-Hauſen, the Duke of Holſtein Gottorp waited on His Majeſty there; as did ſeveral other German Princes.

Bremen and Verden yielded to the El. of Hanover.

Mr. Benſon, Surveyor General of His Majeſty's Works, reſigns that Office; and why.

About this Time, Mr. Benſon, Surveyor General of His Majeſty's Works, reſign'd that Employment. He had diſpleas'd the Miniſtry, in particular the Earl of Sunderland, not only in oppoſing the Peerage Bill, of which Notice has been already taken, but likewiſe in ſeveral other Matters of the greateſt Conſequence to the Nation, which it is hop'd will be diſcover'd to the World in a proper Time.

The Earl of Sunderland adviſ'd the King to ſay to the Houſe of Lords, in Anſwer to an Addreſs, (very much wonder'd at by thoſe who knew nothing of that Miniſter's Intentions) that His Majeſty had given Orders to ſuſpend Mr. Benſon from his Office; but his Lordſhip's Warmth had carry'd him too far in that Affair; for when he came to conſult His Majeſty's Council, he was inform'd that Mr. Benſon could not be ſuſpended from his Office upon any ſuch ſlight Pretence as was alledg'd. This put his Lordſhip under a Neceſſity of making the Matter up with Mr. Benſon, by getting him to reſign his Office, which was agreed to for a reaſonable Satisfaction; and the rather becauſe Mr. Benſon found that as Matters ſtood betwixt him and the Miniſters, it wou'd not be poſſible for him to do the King that Service in his Office, which he very much deſir'd. However, he had made ſo great a Progreſs in this Reſpect, that he had brought the ordinary Repairs of His Majeſty's Palaces to be undertaken at about 8000 l. a Year leſs than before. This the Lord Sunderland highly approv'd of at firſt, and repreſented it to His Majeſty as a very great Service, as indeed it was; but afterwards, when his Lordſhip came to differ with Mr. Benſon, he chang'd his Language, and told the King, that Mr. Benſon had certainly ſome under-hand private Dealings with the Contractors, and that he deſign'd to impoſe upon His Majeſty in that Matter. The King told the Counteſs of Darlington, who was very much Mr. Benſon's Friend, what Lord Sunderland had ſaid to him; and at the ſame time added, with a Smile, that he wiſh'd all his other Officers would impoſe upon him in the ſame manner.

A.D. 1719

Thomas Hewet, Eſq; afterwards Sir Thomas, ſucceeded Mr. Benſon in this Office, which was granted to him only during Pleaſure, and not for Life, as it had been to his Predeceſſor, and to all other Surveyors General ſince the firſt Inſtitution of the Office, except Sir Chriſtopher Wren.

The King of Spain continuing obſtinate in his Refuſal to enter into the Quadruple Alliance, the Duke of Berwick, with the French Army, took St. Sebaſtian; for which Te Deum was ſung at Paris; and a Party of French, join'd by 200 Engliſh Seamen, made themſelves Maſters of Port San-Antonio, at the bottom of the Bay of Biſcay, where they burſt and nail'd down 47 Pieces of Canon, and deſtroy'd a 70 Gun Ship, juſt Deck'd on the Stocks; and two 60 Gun Ships, quite built up, but not deck'd; with a vaſt Quantity of the fineſt Plank, newly brought from Holland, ſufficient for building five or ſix Men of War: All the Naval Stores there, and much more Timber for building Ships, were burnt by the Engliſh Seamen. Colonel Stanhope, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador in Spain, finding the French Troops were averſe to this Undertaking, inſomuch that they were with great Difficulty prevail'd with to go into the Boats prepar'd for it, and when they were there, hardly kept from returning to the Ships; himſelf ſuddenly leap'd into the Water, ſaying, He would land, let the Event be what it would; and was immediately follow'd by Mr. Duvernet, who had ſerv'd in his Regiment, and Mr. Burton, an Engliſh Gentleman; upon which the French, aſham'd of leaving ſuch gallant Men in ſo daring an Enterprize, follow'd his Example, and landed their Men. Captain Johnſon, and the other Commanders of the Britiſh Men of War that were in this Expedition, behav'd with great Bravery and Activity on this Occaſion.

The Ravages and Depredations of the Muſcovites in Sweden, were as barbarous as any of the Acts of the Northern Barbarians, in the Days of Pagan Darkneſs, and doubtleſs they would have continued plundering and burning Towns and Palaces with the like Fury, had not the late Treaty, concluded between the King of Great Britain and the Queen of Sweden, and

A.D.1719 and Sir John Norris's Squadron, reinforc'd by Admiral Hoſier from England, been a Check to their Fury. The Lord Carteret having by a Memorial offer'd His Majeſty's Mediation for concluding a Treaty of Peace between the Crowns of Sweden and Denmark, Her Swediſh Majeſty accepted of it, which his Lordſhip communicated to the Czar of Muſcovy, by a Letter that was ſent to him by Mr. Berkely, Son to the Lord Berkely of Stratton. In this Letter there is a Dignity and Spirit worthy the Majeſty and Greatneſs of the Prince whoſe Miniſter the Lord Carteret was. 'The King, my 'Maſter, has commanded Sir John Norris, his 'Admiral, to come with the Fleet under his 'Command upon this Coaſt, to protect the 'Trade of his Subjects, as well as to give Weight 'and Support to his Mediation; and His Ma'jeſty has taken Meaſures with the moſt Chriſti'an King and his other Allies, among which Swe'den is compris'd, not only to procure to his 'Mediation the Succeſs His Majeſty ought to 'expect from it, but ſpeedily to put an End 'to the War, which has ſo long diſturb'd the 'North.' And the Appearance of the Britiſh Fleet there, was of ſo great Weight in the Determination of the Czar's Counſels, that he ſoon after caus'd his Forces to withdraw from Sweden, tho' it did not conſiſt with the grand Airs he had lately aſſum'd upon the Encreaſe of his Maritime Power, to make any Shew of changing his Conduct, on the Approach of Sir John Norris. The Czar's Plenipotentiaries at Aland, to whom Mr. Berkely apply'd for Diſpatches for Petersburg, or to have the Lord Carteret's Letter forwarded to the Czar, refus'd both the one and the other, in as civil Terms as they cou'd, the Ruſſian Fleet being return'd to their Ports from the Coaſts of Sweden, and, as it was reported and believ'd, upon an Apprehenſion that Force would be us'd againſt them, by the united Fleet of Great Britain and Sweden, the Muſcovite Agents caus'd another Account of the Retreat of that Fleet to be printed in French at the Hague, entitul'd, A true Relation of the Return of the Ruſſian Fleet to Revel and Cronſlot, publiſh'd to confute falſe Reports of thoſe that envy the Glory of his Czariſh Majeſty's Arms, and had ſpread a Report as if the ſaid Fleet had fled upon the Advice of the joining of the Engliſh and Swediſh Fleets. But whatever was ſaid in that Piece, it was the general Belief that it was that Junction which oblig'd the Czar to quit Sweden ſooner than he intended. The Lord Polwarth, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the King of Denmark, concluded a Convention with that King's Miniſters, by which His Britannick Majeſty's Mediation for a Peace between Denmark and Sweden was accepted, a Ceſſation of Arms agreed on, and a Free Commerce, without Diſtinction, for ſix Months, from the eighth of October. And by this Convention, the King of Denmark agreed to reſtore Pomerania and Rugen to Sweden, for an Equivalent.

While His Majeſty's Endeavours to reſtore Peace in the North, were thus ſucceſsful, His Royal Care was extended to procure Redreſs of the Grievances of the Proteſtants in the Palatinate; to this end His Majeſty wrote an affecting Letter to the Elector Palatine, and order'd Mr. Haldane, his Miniſter at the Court of the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, to go to that of Heidelberg, where, after having conferr'd with the chief of the Reform'd about the State of their Affairs, and notifi'd his Coming to the Miniſters, he had Audience of the Elector, October 18, N. S. wherein he laid open the Grievances of his Proteſtant Subjects: His Highneſs receiv'd him very favourably, and gave him Reaſon to hope, that, in Conſideration of His Majeſty's Interpoſition, he would redreſs whatever had been done contrary to the Tenour of the publick Treaties. Mr. Haldane deliver'd Letters from the Landgraves of Heſſe-Caſſel and Heſſe-Darmſtadt, who had impower'd him to acquaint the Elector, that thoſe Princes would go into whatever Meaſures the King of Great Britain ſhould think fit to take to maintain the Proteſtant Religion in the Empire. This Interpoſition had in a great meaſure the deſir'd Effect, after many Delays.

James Butler, once Duke of Ormond, continuing his Solicitations at the Court of Madrid for Aſſiſtance, to make a Deſcent in ſome Part of Great Britain or Ireland, King Philip's Miniſters comply'd with them ſo far, as to have ſeven Ships fitted out at St. Andero, to convoy Tranſports with 2000 Men on board, and 10000 Arms. But theſe Men were to try firſt what could be done in France towards raiſing a Rebellion; and accordingly ſome of their Officers went a-ſhoar in Brittany, and made ſome vain Attempts to engage the Bretons to take Arms, in which not ſucceeding, they made off again. In the mean while, the Lord Viſcount Cobham prepar'd to put in Execution, an Expedition that had been before concerted, againſt the Spaniards, and the Scheme of it laid before His Majeſty in June. Purſuant to which, 50 or 60 Tranſports were hir'd in July, and 4000 Men order'd to be in a Readineſs for Embarkation, viz.

James Butler's traiterous Deſign againſt his Country.

Lord Viſcount Cobham's Expedition to Vigo.

Seven Companies out of each of the three Regiments of Guards; Colonel Chudleigh's Regiment, Lieutenant General Wills's Regiment, Lord Hinchinbrook's Regiment; and the Regiments of Howard, Grove, Hurley, and Barrel, and 50 Dragoons.

The Lord Cobham was appointed to command in Chief, with the Title of Captain General, having under him, Major General Wade, the Lords Mark Kerr, and Dunmore, Colonel Honeywood, Brigadier General; Colonel Armſtrong, Quarter-Maſter General; and Colonel Ligoniere, Adjutant General.

The Land Forces encamp'd in the Iſle of Wight, and were put on board about the Beginning of September: The Convoy was commanded by Vice Admiral Mighels, who ſail'd from St. Hellens, September, 21, and in eight Days made the Coaſt of Gallicia, enter'd the Harbour of Vigo, and the Lord Viſcount Cobham landed with the Grenadiers on the South Side of the River the ſame Evening; and the reſt of the Troops were got on Shore the next Morning. On the firſt of October, my Lord Cobham ſummon'd the Town of Vigo to ſurrender; upon which Deputies came out, the Governor being rettir'd unto the Citadel. Theſe Deputies not only offer'd to ſurrender at Diſcretion, but to conduct the Forces into the Town under Cover from the Shot of the Citadel, into which the Engliſh threw ſome Bombs from their Ships. The next Morning a Detachment of 800 Men, unber Command of Brigadier Honeywood, took Poſſeſſion of Vigo. The third of October the Troops march'd and incamp'd at Bocos, and Colonel Beauregard having carri'd his ſmall Mortars into the Town, began to bombard the Citadel, which he con-

*A.D.*1719 tinu'd to do the next Day; and on the fifth, a Detachment of 500 Men was ſent to burn the Town of Redondella. The next Day the Garriſon in the Citadel of Vigo beat the Chamade, and Hoſtages being exchang'd, a Capitulation was agreed upon; and on the 10th of October the Garriſon march'd out. They were in the whole as follows:

Officers and Soldiers that march'd out	319
Peaſants	148
Kill'd in the Citadel	80
Wounded	225
Deſerted, moſt Peaſants	135
Total for Defence of the Citadel	907

Two Days after 1000 Men were order'd on board four Tranſports, under the Command of Major General Wade, to ſail to the upper End of the Bay of Vigo, and to march from thence to Pont a Vedra, ten Leagues off: The Magiſtrates of the Town met them with the Keys, and there were found in the Place, two 48 Pounders, four 24 Pounders, ſix 8 Pounders, and four Mortars, all Braſs; beſides 70 Pieces of Iron Canon, 2000 ſmall Arms, ſome Bombs, &c. The Biddeford Man of War, and two Tranſports, were ſent thither, to bring away the Braſs Cannon, Arms and Stores; after which the Detachment under Major General Wade was order'd on board their reſpective Ships; and the Major General return'd to Vigo, the 23d of October. The next Day the Troops began to reimbark, and were all on board by the 26th, without the leaſt Oppoſition from the Spaniards. On the 27th the Fleet put to Sea to return Home. The Arms which were taken at Vigo and Pont a Vedra, were the ſame that had been provided for the Pretender's Uſe, in the intended Invaſion of Great Britain.

Captain Johnſon's Succeſs at Ribadeo.

While the Engliſh were at Vigo, Captain Johnſon, Commander of the Weymouth, the Winchester, and another Engliſh Man of War, came up with a Portugueze Carval from Ribadeo, and being inform'd that there were two Spaniſh Men of War in that Port, about 16 Leagues to the Eaſt of Cape Ortegas, he made thither; ſent the Boats in a Head to ſound, and follow'd with the Ships. He anchor'd within Muſket Shot of the Enemy's Ships, and a Battery of eight Guns fir'd on both, and ſoon beat the Spaniards out of the Battery, which he took Poſſeſſion of, and entirely demoliſh'd. In the Interim the two Spaniſh Men of War blew up; and after ſome ſmall firing on the Town, he ſail'd out of the Harbour, taking with him a Spaniſh Merchant Ship which he found there.

While His Majeſty was at Hieren Hauſen, he wrote a Letter to the King of Poland, in Behalf of the Proteſtants of that Kingdom, then under Oppreſſion by the Papiſts: In which Letter His Majeſty expreſſes his Sentiments not only with the Goodneſs of a moſt gracious Prince, but with the Wiſdom and Moderation of a Spirit truly Royal and Chriſtian: As thus,

His Majeſty's Letter to the King of Poland, in favour of the Proteſtants, and Liberty of Conſcience.

That they may enjoy for the future, their former Liberty of Conſcience, which cannot be forc'd by any humane Power, and over which God hath reſerv'd to himſelf the ſole Command. Which however the perſecuting Prieſthood have uſurp'd, where they have Influence, and broken in upon it in Schiſm Bills, Teſt Bills, and other ſuch Uſurpation of the Divine Prerogative, the Command over Conſcience.

The King of Pruſſia arriv'd at Hanover the 30th of October, and their Britannick and Pruſſian Majeſties had frequent Conferences: The latter ſtaid there till the 5th of November, and then ſet out for Berlin; as the King of Great Britain did for Holland, two Days after. *A.D.*1719

His Majeſty embark'd on the Carolina Yatcht at Helvoet-Sluyce, the 13th of November, and arriv'd at Graveſend the next Day, about one a-Clock in the Afternoon; and at London in the Evening. On Monday, November the 18th, His Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, accompany'd by the Biſhops of London, Salisbury, Norwich, Ely, Chicheſter, Glouceſter, Bangor, Litchfield and Coventry, Carliſle, and Dr. Boulter, the new Biſhop of Briſtol, (conſecrated the Day before) congratulated His Majeſty on his ſafe Arrival, and the Succeſs of his Affairs Abroad. His Grace in the Name of himſelf and his Brethren, return'd His Majeſty their moſt humble Thanks for his gracious Favour to the poor Proteſtants in the Palatinate. The Archbiſhop ſaid, 'I am alſo directed by my 'Lords the Biſhops, to return our moſt humble 'Acknowledgment to your Majeſty, for the 'Protection your Majeſty hath been pleas'd to 'give to our Brethren, the Proteſtants of the 'Palatinate, and of Poland and Lithuania, perſe'cuted for the Faith of Chriſt: We are perſwa'ded that this Royal Charity will draw down 'innumerable Bleſſings from Heaven, upon the 'Perſon of your ſacred Majeſty, and your Af'fairs, &c.'

The King returns to England.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c. thank the King for his Favour to foreign Proteſtants.

My Lord Archbiſhop, and the Biſhops, were very graciouſly receiv'd by His Majeſty, who expreſs'd great Satisfaction in the affectionate Concern they ſhew'd for the diſtreſs'd Proteſtants abroad, and their grateful Acknowledgment of what he had done in their Favour. Let us in this Place form an Idea of the Piety and Purity of the true Church of England, and its ſacred Governors and Paſtors, ſo agreeable to the Principles and Practice of the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors, in Primitive Chriſtianity; and not from the lordly, worldly, and cruel Examples of ambitious perſecuting Prelates; ſuch as Laud, Coſins, Wren, Sheldon, Gunning, Atterbury, &c. The Addreſs from the Univerſity of Cambridge, preſented by Dr. Gooch, Vice-Chancellor, and other Doctors, is in the ſame pious and charitable Spirit. 'Tis with parti- cular Pleaſure we behold your Majeſty in Conjunction with other Powers aſſerting the Cauſe of Liberty, and ſupporting the Intereſt of our Proteſtant Brethren abroad, whoſe deplorable Condition every Day convinces us, that the Proteſtant Profeſſion muſt ſtand or fall, with the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Theſe truly pious Sentiments are the more remarkable, becauſe the Proteſtants of the Palatinate were Presbyterians, whom Dodwel, and others of the High-Church Faction, did not allow to be Chriſtians; for which they themſelves forfeited all Pretences to Chriſtianity. His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Cambridge Addreſs, muſt gladden the Heart of every good Briton that reads it. I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Addreſs; and ſhall be glad to find ſuch Doctrines and Principles taught in the Univerſity, as tend to preſerve the Freedom of our happy Conſtitution, and to the Support of the Proteſtant Religion.

Good Addreſs from Cambridge.

His Majeſty's gracious Anſwer.

The Parliament met the 23d of November, and His Majeſty, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor, made a moſt affecting Speech; of which, the following Paſſages cannot be omitted.

'The

A.D. 1719

King's Speech of the Glory of Britain.

'The Satisfaction with which I always meet 'you, is very much encreas'd at this Time, 'when it has pleas'd Almighty God to 'ſtrengthen the Arms of Great Britain, and 'our Confederates, and ſo to proſper our ſeve-'ral Negotiations, that by his Bleſſing on our 'Endeavours, we may promiſe our ſelves to 'reap very ſoon the Fruits of our Succeſſes. I 'am perſwaded, it will be accounted by all 'my Subjects, a ſufficient Reward for ſome ex-'traordinary Expence, that all Europe, as well 'as theſe Kingdoms, is upon the Point of being 'deliver'd from the Calamities of War, by the 'Influence of Britiſh Arms and Counſels: One 'Proteſtant Kingdom has already been reliev'd 'by our ſeaſonable Interpoſition; and ſuch a 'Foundation is laid by our late Treaties for an 'Union among other great Proteſtant Powers, 'as will very much tend to the Security of our 'Holy Religion. I believe you cannot but be 'ſurpriz'd at the Continuation of War, where 'our Enemies have nothing to hope, and ſo 'much to fear. It is indeed difficult to frame 'any Judgment of thoſe Counſels which have 'broke out of late in ſo many raſh and ill con-'certed Meaſures. If they depend upon our 'Diviſions at home, I doubt not but in a very 'ſhort Time, their Hopes, founded upon this 'Expectation, will prove as vain and ill ground-'ed, as any of their former Projects.'

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'You muſt all be ſenſible of the many unde-'ſerv'd and unnatural Troubles I have met with 'during the Courſe of my Reign. Our Diviſi-'ons at home, have been magnified abroad; 'and by inſpiring into foreign Powers a falſe 'Opinion of our Force, have encourag'd them 'to treat us in a manner which the Crown of 'Great Britain ſhall never endure, while I 'wear it. The Trouble and Expence which 'this hath brought upon us, have been the moſt 'loudly complain'd of, by thoſe who were the 'Occaſion of them. But by your Aſſiſtance I 'have hitherto got through all theſe Difficul-'ties, and, by the Continuance of your Help, 'I hope very ſoon to overcome them; ſince the 'Hand of God hath ſo viſibly been with us in 'all our Undertakings, &c.'

As ſoon as the King was withdrawn from the Houſe of Lords, the Duke of Mancheſter made a Motion for an Addreſs of Thanks and Congratulation to His Majeſty; and being ſeconded by the Earl of Holderneſs, the ſame was unanimouſly agreed to; only the Archbiſhop of Canterbury deſir'd that a Clauſe might be inſerted to acknowledge His Majeſty's ſeaſonable Interpoſition in favour of the Proteſtants abroad, which was readily comply'd with.

Lords and Commons Addreſſes.

At the ſame Time the Earl of Hertford made the like Motion in the Houſe of Commons; and Mr. Shippen objected to that Paſſage of His Majeſty's Speech which related to altering ſome Parts of our Conſtitution, and was in theſe Words: 'As I can truly affirm, that no Prince 'was ever more zealous to encreaſe his own 'Authority, than I am to perpetuate the Li-'berty of my People, I hope you will think 'of all proper Methods to eſtabliſh and to tranſ-'mit to your Poſterity, the Freedom of our 'happy Conſtitution, and particularly to ſe-'cure that part which is moſt liable to Abuſe. 'I value my ſelf upon being the firſt who hath 'given you an Opportunity of doing it; and 'I muſt recommend to you, to compleat thoſe 'Meaſures which remain'd imperfect the laſt 'Seſſion.' The abovemention'd Member ſaid, 'That 'twas plain enough thereby was meant 'the Bill of Peerage; but it was ſurprizing that 'this Affair ſhould be brought again upon the 'Stage, after it had miſcarry'd the laſt Seſſion 'in the other Houſe, and that the major part 'of this Houſe had expreſs'd ſuch an Averſion 'to it; concluding with a Motion to congratu-'late His Majeſty on his ſafe Return, and to 'give him Thanks for part of his Speech, and 'appoint a Day to take the reſt into Conſidera-'tion.' Mr. Herne ſeconded Mr. Shippen; but Mr. Hungerford foreſeeing that if the Houſe ſhould divide, a Negative was like to be put upon Mr. Shippen's Motion, was for the Addreſs, as a Cuſtomary Compliment; and as to the Bill of Peerage in particular, ſince the Court ſeem'd to have it at Heart, he doubted not but it would ſoon paſs the other Houſe, and be ſent down to them; and then, and no ſooner, he hop'd to ſee a great Diviſion in that Houſe. So Mr. Shippen wav'd his Motion. To this Article the Lords ſaid in their Addreſs,

A.D. 1719

'We ſhould be wanting in our Duty to your 'Majeſty and our Country, if we did not re-'turn your Majeſty our moſt hearty Thanks 'for that tender and unprecedented Care and 'Concern your Majeſty has been pleas'd to ex-'preſs in your moſt gracious Speech from the 'Throne, for the Liberties of your People, and 'the Freedom of our happy Conſtitution; 'which muſt neceſſarily draw all ſuitable Re-'turns of the utmoſt Gratitude from all your 'Majeſty's faithful Subjects, who have a true 'Value for ſuch ineſtimable Bleſſings.'

The Commons in their Addreſs did not enter ſo far into that Particular.

'We further aſſure your Majeſty, we will 'concur in all proper Methods to eſtabliſh and 'preſerve the Freedom of our happy Conſtitu-'tion, for which your ſacred Majeſty has given 'ſo many tender Proofs of your Care and Af-'fection.' The Peerage Bill was drop'd by the laſt Prorogation; and on the 20th of November the Duke of Buckinghamſhire brought it into the Houſe of Lords, where it was read the firſt Time; and the ſecond Time the next Day.

Sir Richard Steel's Letter to the Earl of Ox--d.

The moſt extraordinary Piece that was publiſh'd upon the Revival of the Debates about the Peerage Bill, was a Pamphlet entiul'd A Letter to the Earl of Ox——d, concerning the Bill of Peerage, by Sir Richard Steele; which was not ſo ſurprizing to People that knew the Author intimately, as to ſuch as had no Knowledge of him but by his Works, his Tattlers, Guardians, Lover, Criſis and Brickduſts, where the Perſon and Family of his Patron, make as ridiculous and contemptible a Figure, as his Wit and Reſentment cou'd produce; and this ſame Patron of his, had ſince done nothing to deſerve the Glory he beſtows on him, beſides lying in Priſon two Years, under an Impeachment of High Treaſon: But whoever knew the Author intimately, were not at all ſurpriz'd at this new Inconſiſtency in his Conduct, whoſe Precepts and Practices were a continual Series of Inconſiſtencies and Contradictions. He tells the Earl of Oxford in this Letter, that when he was libelling and lampooning him, he thought his very Virtue dangerous; and in the ſame Period remembers, that this virtuous Man made twelve Peers in a Day: He tells him this too in a Letter againſt a Bill, the chief Deſign of which was to prevent the like Invaſion of the Con-

A.D. 1719 Conſtitution and Liberty for the future. There's nothing more ſolid in this Epiſtle than theſe few Lines. The former Conduct of the Houſe of Peers, of admitting or oppoſing Creations of the Crown, ſhews, That they well know they have a Power of doing it, when the Reaſon of the Thing gives them Authority for it; much more when Reaſon dictates that their very Exiſtence, as a Houſe of Parliament, is ſtruck at; as is the Caſe of pouring in new Members, in the midſt of their Debates. It was freſh in ev'ry one's Memory, that when his new Patron made, as he ſ[illegible] the twelve Lords in a Day, there was no opp[illegible] And as there never was before ſuch an amazing Inſtance of pouring in new Members in the midſt of their Debates, 'tis very odd that he ſhould ſtart this as a Reaſon againſt taking away from the Crown, or rather, in his Senſe of it, the Miniſter, the Prerogative of doing ſo again. This Letter was publiſh'd the very Morning when the Debate about committing the Peerage Bill was expected to come, and did come on accordingly on Dec. 8. This Knight was the firſt who ſpoke on the Negative Side; ſaying, I am againſt committing the Bill, becauſe I think it would be committing of Sin. A Pun that had more Succeſs there at that Time, than his Arguments. This Bill was ſent by the Houſe of Lords to the Houſe of Commons, by the Lord Chief Juſtice King, and the Lord Chief Baron Bury; and having been read twice, Lord William Pawlet made a Motion for committing it, and was ſeconded by Sir Charles Hotham. This Motion occaſion'd a warm and long Debate: The principal Perſons who ſpoke for and againſt it, were,

Pro's and Con's as to the Peerage Bill.

Mr. Pitt, Mr. Horatio Walpole, and Sir Wilfred Lawſon, ſpeaking after Sir Richard Steele againſt committing the Bill, were anſwer'd by Colonel Moreton: After whom ſpoke Sir John Packington, and, in the Cloſe of his Speech, urg'd an Objection againſt the Bill, which none of the Members who were for it did ſufficiently clear it of: 'I hope this Houſe will never 'concur in depriving of ſo bright a Jewel of 'the Crown, the Prince, who, in his proper 'Turn, is to wear it, and who is ſo worthy of 'it, by all the Royal Virtues that ſhine in his 'Perſon, and which, during his Regency, had 'gain'd him the Hearts and Affections of all 'true Engliſhmen. Some Perſons have thro' 'their Indiſcretion occaſion'd an unhappy Dif-'ference: And I am apprehenſive, that if this 'Bill, ſo prejudicial to the Rights of the pre-'ſumptive Heir, ſhould paſs into a Law, it 'might render that Difference irreconcileable.' There was too much Truth in what Sir John Packington ſaid, of the Indiſcretion of thoſe that had occaſion'd that unhappy Difference; and doubtleſs he ſpoke this of a certain Peer, who puſh'd this Bill forward with the greateſt Eagerneſs; and ſometimes at the Expence of Decency as well as Diſcretion. Mr. Secretary Craggs, ſpeaking for the Bill, urg'd, 'That 'His Majeſty ſince his Acceſſion to the Throne, 'had had no other View than to procure the 'Good and Happineſs of his Subjects, and to ſe-'cure their Rights and Liberties. That having 'in his Royal Wiſdom conſider'd the Abuſe 'that was made in the laſt Reign of that Branch 'of the Prerogative relating to the Creating of 'Peers, which Abuſe had brought the Liberties 'of Great Britain, and of all Europe, into 'imminent Danger, His Majeſty, through a 'Condeſcenſion, worthy of a Prince truly mag-'nanimous, had graciouſly been pleas'd to con-'ſent, That ſuch Bounds ſhould be ſet to that 'part of the Prerogative, as may prevent any 'exorbitant and dangerous Exerciſe of it, for 'the time to come.' The Abuſe mention'd can never be enough condemn'd, but tho' it will be the greateſt Reproach that will lie upon this Age, to all Poſterity, yet there ſeems to have been more ways than one of guarding againſt it for the future, without prejudicing the Right of the preſumptive Heir, as Sir John Packington ſaid, inſtead of Heir apparent. It was more than whiſper'd at that Time, that Mr. Secretary Craggs, or his Father, was to have been made one of the ſix Engliſh Peers, to be created after the paſſing of this Bill; and conſequently, if his Reaſons for it had been of more Weight, they would have loſt much of their Grace, coming from a Perſon who was ſaid to be ſo particularly concern'd in it. The Subſtance of all that was ſaid againſt the Bill, was contracted in that of Mr. Robert Walpole's Speech, at the Cloſe of the Debate, which was to this Effect.

Sir John Packington's Speech in Behalf of His Royal Highneſs.

Mr. Secretary Craggs reflects on the twelve Creation.

Mr. Robert Walpole's Speech againſt the Bill.

'That among the Romans, the wiſeſt Peo-'ple upon Earth, the Temple of Fame was 'plac'd behind the Temple of Virtue, to de-'note, that there is no coming to the former, 'without going through the latter: But that 'if this Bill paſt into a Law, one of the moſt 'powerful Incentives to Virtue would be taken 'away, ſince there would be no coming to Ho-'nour but through the Winding-Sheet of an old 'decrepit Lord, and the Grave of an extinct 'Family. That 'twas Matter of juſt Surprize, 'that a Bill of this Nature, ſhould either have 'been projected, or at leaſt promoted, by a 'Gentleman, who, not long ago, ſate amongſt 'them; and who, having got into the Houſe of 'Peers, would now ſhut up the Door after him. 'That this Bill would not only be a Diſcou-'ragement to Virtue and Merit, but alſo endan-'ger our excellent Conſtitution: For as there 'was a due Ballance between the three Branches 'of the Legiſlature, if any more Weight were 'thrown into any one of thoſe Branches, it 'would deſtroy that Ballance, and conſequent-'ly ſubvert the whole Conſtitution. That the 'Peers were already poſſeſt of many valuable 'Privileges, and to give them more Power and 'Authority, by limiting their Numbers, 'would, in Time, bring back the Commons in-'to the State of ſervile Dependency, when they 'wore the Badges of the Lords. That he could 'not but wonder, that the Lords would ſend 'ſuch a Bill to the Commons. For how could 'they expect, that the Commons would give 'their Concurrence to ſo injurious a Law, by 'which they and their Poſterity are to be ex-'cluded from the Peerage? And how would 'the Lords receive a Bill, by which it ſhould be

A.D.1720 'be enacted, that a Baron ſhould not be made 'a Viſcount, nor a Viſcount be made an Earl, 'and ſo on? That beſides all this, that Part 'of the Bill which related to Scotland, would 'be a manifeſt Violation of the Act of Union 'on the part of Scotland, and a diſhonourable 'Breach of Truſt, in thoſe who repreſented the 'Scotch Nobility. That ſuch an Infringement 'of the Union, would endanger the entire Diſ-'ſolution of it, by diſguſting ſo great a Num-'ber of the Scotch Peers, as ſhould be excluded 'from ſitting in the Britiſh Parliament: For as 'twas well known, that the Revolution Settle-'ment ſtood upon the Principle of a mutual 'Compact, if we ſhould break firſt the Arti-'cles of Union, it would be natural for the 'Scots to think themſelves thereby freed from 'all Allegiance: And then for what had been 'ſuggeſted, That the Election of the ſixteen 'Scotch Peers was no leſs expenſive to the 'Crown, than injurious to the Peerage of Scot-'land, it might be anſwer'd, That the making 'twenty-five hereditary Scotch Peers, would 'ſtill encreaſe the Diſcontents of the electing 'Peers, who thereby would be cut off of a va-'luable Conſideration for not being choſen.'

The Debate having laſted near eight Hours, the Queſtion was put upon Lord William Pawlet's Motion, and carri'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 269 Voices againſt 177; by which it appears, that including the Tellers on each Side, there were 450 Members in the Houſe.

John Matthews the Printer condemn'd to be hang'd.

Before His Majeſty's Return to England, John Matthews, a Printer in Little-Britain, was try'd at the Old-Baily, before the Lord Mayor and Ten of the Judges, for Printing and Publiſhing a Treaſonable Libel, intitul'd, Vox Populi, Vox Dei, his Indictment was founded on a Statute of the 4th of Queen Anne, for ſtrengthning and Confirming the Act of Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, which makes it High Treaſon to affirm, either by Writing or Printing, that the Pretender, or any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever has any Right or Title to the Crown of theſe Realms; which was done with great Aggravation in this Libel, and Matthews being fully prov'd to be the Printer of it, was found Guilty by a very ſubſtantial Jury, and receiv'd Sentence of Death; a Week after he was Executed at Tyburn, Nov. the 6th. He confeſs'd ſome Days before to Mr. Skirret a Divine, who attended him in Newgate at the Deſire of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, That he had been inveigled and ſeduc'd by the Nonjurors: He own'd the Juſtice of his Sentence, and the Right of King George; but render'd himſelf unworthy of Mercy by his obſtinate refuſal to diſcover thoſe that employ'd him. It had been a long practice in his Father's Printing-Houſe to print ſeditious and treaſonable Pamphlets; and this was by no means the Young-man's firſt Offence of this kind. The Pretender and his Followers made a dreadful Clamour about the bloody Laws againſt him in England and Ireland, as if the Rewards to ſeize him, if he attempted to Land in theſe Kingdoms were to excite People to aſſaſſinate him, tho' himſelf will never pretend to Land there, but with a Deſign to murder all that oppoſe him. The Miniſtry in England ſhew'd at this time that if he did not venture upon forbidden Ground, no Britiſh Arm wou'd be lifted up againſt him: If he did, the Laws were known by him, and the peril of his own ſeeking. A.D.1720

Paul Miller a private Trooper in the Firſt Troop of Horſe Grenadiers, having made a propoſal to Mr. Secretary Craggs to go and Aſſaſſinate the Pretender, was, by that Secretary's Warrant, preſently taken into Cuſtody of Mr. Bill the Meſſenger, and he was order'd to be immediately diſcharg'd out of His Majeſty's Service, and proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity, to prevent which Miller made his Eſcape.

The King of Spain having, to make way for his acceding to the Quadruple Alliance diſmiſs'd Cardinal Alberoni his Service, and commanded him to leave that Kingdom in three Weeks, the Abbot Du Bois ſent a Letter of Advice of it to Earl Stanhope, in which is this paſſage: His Royal Highneſs the Duke of Orleans is full of the Acknowledgment due to you, and none can be more ſenſible of the Glory which the King your Maſter, and your whole Nation, acquire in Circumſtances which decide the happineſs of Europe. Upon the receipt of this Letter His Majeſty thought fit to ſend Earl Stanhope with all ſpeed to Paris, where he had ſeveral Conferences with the French Miniſters, with the Imperial Ambaſſador and the King of Sardinia's, who agreed upon, and ſign'd a Declaration, notifying to the Court of Spain, that if they did not accede to the Treaty of London, the Quadruple Alliance, within the Time ſtipulated, their Maſters would forthwith nominate the Princes which are to ſucceed to the Dominions of Tuſcany and Parma, to the Excluſion of the Princes of Spain. This Declaration was ſign'd by the Baron Benterrieder the Imperial Miniſter, by Earl Stanhope, and the Earl of Stairs, by the Abbot Du Bois, and Monſieur Du Vernon, the 19th of January, 1720; and the next Day Earl Stanhope left Paris, embark'd at Calais the 24th, and came to London the Day following. The King of Spain not thinking fit to let the Time limited for his acceding to that Treaty run out, a Courier arriv'd at Paris from Madrid, with Letters of the 26th of January, notifying his Catholick Majeſty's Acceptance of the ſaid Treaty in all the Parts and Contents thereof.

The moſt remarkable Affairs in Agitation in the Houſe of Commons at this Time, were the Negative put on the Bill, for a Reward for finding out the Longitude, and the Affirmative on the Bill for the further preventing Robbery, Burglary, and Felony, and for the more effectual Tranſporting Felons. several Proposals to the House of Commons toward the Redemption and sinking of the publick Debts, on certain valuable Considerations, in which the Proposals of the Bank outbid those of the South-sea Company about two Millions, for the Advantage of the Government; of which we shall have Occasion to speak more largely hereafter.

At the latter End of January, News came to London of an Engagement between three English Men of War, the Dover, Advice, and Norwich, under the Command of Commodore Cavendish, near Cape St. Vincent, and three large Spanish Men of War, December the 23d. The Fight lasted three Hours; and then the English made off, not being able to make Use of their lower Tire of Guns, by Reason of bad Weather: And People did not generally make due Allowance for the Disproportion in Rate between the English and Spanish Ships, the latter being bigger, and having more Guns than the former, tho' the Number of both was equal.

The Czar's Projects in Favour of the Pretender.

About Christmas last the Sieur Wesselowsky, Resident from the Czar of Muscovy, at London, presented a long Memorial to His Majesty, complaining of those Things which the King was oblig'd to act in Germany as Elector of Brunswick, and Director of the Circle of lower Saxony, to procure the Evacuation of the Dutchy of Meclenburgh by the Russians, which had no manner of Relation to the King of Great Britain. But the Czar, whose Heart was set upon Footing in the Empire, took the King's Measures to free that Dutchy from his Troops so ill, that he soon entertain'd Thoughts of making a seperate Peace with the King of Sweden; and to that end, not only forbore continuing Hostilities against that Prince, but encourag'd his Invasion of Norway, tho' he was then in the strictest Alliance with the King of Denmark, and had brought the Russians into Germany, under Pretence of having them at hand, to transport them to the Assistance of His Danish Majesty, in his War with Sweden; and at the same time demanded of the King of Great Britain, as an Ally of Denmark, 15 Men of War of the Line, to act against the Swedes, under Direction of the Russian Admiral: Which Demand being evaded, the British Ministers knowing it was made with a Design only to exasperate the King of Sweden, and excite him to conclude a seperate Treaty on the Czar's own hard Terms, was the Cause of further Complaint against His Britannick Majesty's Disposition to break off good Correspondence with the Czar, who was then secretly concerting Measures with the Pretender's Agents, for some Enterprize in his Favour.

In Order to bring on the seperate Treaty between him and the King of Sweden, he admitted Baron Gortz, who had been enlarg'd from his Confinement in Holland on the Discovery of Gyllenburgh's Treason, to Conferences at Loo, where the Czar resided sometime in his Way to France, in the Year 1717; and at these Conferences, the Negotiations of the seperate Peace was determin'd, which produc'd the Treaty of Aland, carri'd on by the Ministers of Russia and Sweden, without the least Concert or Communication with the Ministers of the King of Denmark, or any other Potentate, except the King of Prussia, who was flatter'd with the Hopes of having a good Part of the Province of Livonia deliver'd up to him, in Exchange for the Town of Stetin, in Pomerania, tho' the Steps taken by the Russian Ministers towards a seperate Peace, were not unknown to those of Great Britain; and tho' the Russian Ministers afterwards found that Charge against them to the full; and tho' it appear'd incontestably by Gortz's Papers after his Execution, yet did the Czar order his Resident Wesselewsky to say in the beforemention'd Memorial, A.D. 1720

Good Faith, which his Czarish Majesty esteems a principal Virtue in a Great Monarch, his steadiness in maintaining the Alliances he had contracted, made him absolutely reject all seperate Measures. He chose rather to sacrifice all the Advantages he might have reap'd from them, than to expose himself to the Reproach of having ever in the Course of his Reign deserted his Allies, &c.

The Czar so highly resented His Britannick Majesty's Opposition to his ambitious Projects against Germany, that he was more forward than even the King of Sweden in promoting the Interest of the Pretender. To this end James Butler once Duke of Ormond came to Courland, to confer with His Ministers, and would have gone to the King of Sweden's Court with the Czar's Approbation, but that King would not suffer him to appear there, Matters not being so ripe for an Invasion of Great Britain in his Counsels, as they were in the Czar's; who, when he was in Holland, permitted his Ministers to have Conferences with one Fernegham, an English Papist, and Sir Hugh Paterson, Brother in-Law to the Arch-Rebel Marr, who were introduc'd by Dr. Areskin, the Czar's Physician, a Kinsman's of Marr's, very zealous in the Service of the Pretender. Wou'd James Butler have taken so long a Journey as from Madrid to Mittau, on the Borders of Muscovy, if he had not had good Assurance that the Czar was dispos'd to undertake the desir'd Invasion of Scotland, and the Protection of the Pretender? Wou'd the Pretender have given Fernegham Credentials to authorize his Negotiations at the Court of Russia, if he had not been sure of his being welcome there? The late Duke of Ormond stay'd some time incognito at Mittau; and was so weak as to propose the Pretender's Marriage with a Niece of the Czar's, which that Prince would by no means give Ear to; and when he understood that the King of Sweden would not suffer Ormond to come near him, the Czar also forbid his Coming to Petersburgh, where his Presence would have too much laid open his favourable Intentions for the Pretender. Marr himself was got as far as Liege, in Hopes of having Admittance to the Czar, while he was in those Parts; and another Kinsman of his, Sir Henry Stirling, was sent to Petersburg, to assist Fernegham and Paterson, when the Czar return'd thither, in their Endeavours to engage him to put their clandestine Projects in Execution. All these Traitors, Ormond, Fernegham, Paterson, Stirling, had free Access to Areskin, who communicated their treasonable Schemes to the Czar, who also took into his Service a great Number of Scots, Irish, and some English fugitive Rebels, to whom he gave all manner of Encouragement. Bruce, Master of his Ordnance, was one of his Plenipotentiaries for the seperate Treaty of Aland, on which the Invasion of Scotland by the Swedes and Russians, was to be founded; which Invasion was first propos'd to the Court of Madrid by his Direction, and that Proposal

A.D. 1720 pour'd in the Jacobites upon him, from Spain, and other Places. While theſe Meaſures were purſuing, Weſſelewsky, his Reſident at London, continued to propoſe Plans for Operations againſt Sweden, and to profeſs His Czariſh Majeſty's Deſire of living with the King of Great Britain in the moſt ſtrict Friendſhip. His Majeſty taking theſe Profeſſions in the beſt Senſe, order'd Mr. Jefferies, his Reſident at Denmark, to repair to Petersburgh, where he made the moſt obliging Return to the Advances of Weſſelewsky: He ſhew'd the Unſeaſonableneſs of conſulting about Operations for War againſt Sweden, when all the World knew, the Treaty between that King and the Czar, was as good as concluded. He modeſtly complain'd of the favourable Reception the Jacobites ſtill found at the Ruſſian Court, who employ'd ſeveral of them in the Navy, and augmented their Pay: And alſo the Czar's Miniſter at Paris, doing his utmoſt Endeavours to hinder the Regent from ſigning the Quadruple Alliance; as Prince Kurakids had done in Holland, to hinder the States from acceding to it. He alſo expoſtulated a little with the Ruſſian Miniſters, on their endeavouring to form Engagements between their Court and that of Spain. In the mean time, Dr. Areskin, the great Patron of the Jacobites, at Petersburgh, dy'd; yet ſtill Sir Henry Stirling remain'd there, on Pretence of claiming the Doctor's Eſtate: But tho' Areskin's Death was a great Blow to the Jacobites, that of the King of Sweden's at Norway, ſoon after, was a greater: It broke all their Meaſures, and gave a new Aſpect to the Affairs of the North.

Theſe Facts are not only a ſufficient Anſwer to the Sieur Weſſelewsky's Memorial, wherein Endeavours are us'd to have it believ'd that His Britannick Majeſty had chang'd Conduct with Regard to the Court of Ruſſia, from that of his Royal Predeceſſors, without juſt Reaſon given him by the Czar; as alſo to the falſe Inſinuations of the Diſaffected at home, as if the Expence of the Armaments for the Security of our Trade in the North, was needleſs; and that Great Britain being in no Danger from the Ruſſians and Swedes, theſe Armaments were made on another Account, and to ſecure other Dominions, which were certainly in no Degree of Danger equal to thoſe of Great Britain.

Before we ſay any thing of the South Sea Scheme, it will be proper to take Notice, that the Hint of it ſeems to be taken from that of the Miſſiſipi Company in France, which was form'd by Mr. Law, a Scotchman of Note, chiefly for having kill'd Beaux Wilſon, as he was call'd, in a Duel, not very fairly, if Mr. Wilſon's Relations give a true Account of it, and for his good Fortune in gaming at Bruſſels and Paris. He had ſometime before been privately in England, and inform'd himſelf fully of the Management of the two great Companies, the Bank, and Eaſt India Company. As ſoon as he return'd to France, he ſet up the Bank at Paris, under the Protection of the Duke Regent; and after three ſeveral Subſcriptions, more than all the Money in France was ſaid to be ſubſcrib'd to it: For by the end of the Year, 1719, Bills were given out for 640 Millions of Livres, which exceeds the Value of the Bills circulated by all the Banks in Europe, put together: There was added to that a Circulation of 360 Millions, and the whole amounted to 1000 Millions of Livres, making above 38 Millions of Pounds Sterling, at the Exchange, then current; the French Crown being worth but 4*s.* and 1 d. ½ Engliſh Money. This ſeems monſtrous; but the Miſſiſipi Scheme is ſtill much more ſo. The Subſcriptions for this Stock, were at ſeven ſeveral times 300 Millions of Livres, about ten Millions of Engliſh Money, according to the above Calculation. This Company gave out, that for their 300 Millions, they ſhould get 106 Millions a Year. A.D. 1720

Thus the Yearly Profit of the Company was to be 131 Millions for 300 Millions Stock. This Chimera was thought ſo ſubſtantial, that after ſeveral Aſtoniſhing Riſes, the Stock grew to a Prodigy of 2050; which makes above 6000 Millions of Livres; for the Original 300 Millions, comes to 228 Millions Sterling: Twice as much as all the Money in Europe. 'Twas this flattering Dream that led the South-ſea Men in England into the like viſionary Hopes, founded on groundleſs Schemes, which prevail'd to Infatuation, if not to Madneſs: In which the Engliſh were the more inexcuſable, becauſe they had the Example of the French Folly before them. The State indeed got prodigiouſly by it in France, paying off immenſe Sums with Bank Bills and Stocks, which coſt them nothing: People being glad to have ſo flouriſhing a Credit in Lieu of publick Debts worth nothing. But when the Fall came, great it was indeed, and for a few mighty Fortunes made, there was almoſt a general Ruin through the whole Kingdom.

The Riſe of the South-Sea Scheme

A Scheme being laid in England, to reduce all the publick Funds into one, for diſcharging the publick Debts. The South Sea Company and the Bank of England, preſented their ſeveral Propoſals to the Houſe of Commons. The publick Debts, according to the South Sea Eſtimate, ſtood there in Groſs, Near 31 Millions well provided for, whereas the 38 Millions, the French Stock reduc'd to Engliſh Money, were ſo ill provided for, that their publick Bills were at leaſt at 70 per Cent. Diſcount, in moſt of the Branches. I ſhall not enter into the Particulars of the two Companies Propoſals to the Parliament, but only mention that which contains their ſeveral Offers for Advantage to the Publick by them.

And by the third Article of their ſecond Propoſal, 500000 l. more; in all 4000000 l.

And by the firſt Article of their ſecond Propoſals, 3300000 l.

By which it appears, that the South Sea Propoſal was 700000 l. more for the Advantage of the Publick, than that of the Bank. But then it was objected in Favour of the Bank, that by prompt Payment, and ſeveral Advantages to the Proportion of the Funds, their Propoſal was more preferable. But the apparent Encreaſe of the Sum, offer'd to the Publick by the South Sea Company, above the Offer of the Bank, had its intended Effect in the Houſe of Commons, who accepted their Propoſal.

South Sea Company's Propoſal accepted.

We have mention'd the King of Spain's acceding to the Quadruple Alliance, which was done in form at the Hague, February 17th, N.S. when the Earl of Cadogan, Count Windeſchrats, Count Marcilli, and the Marquis Beretti Lande, Ambaſſadors and Plenipotentiaries from Great Britain, France and Spain, met at Prince Maurice's Houſe, and ſign'd that Treaty, which had been concluded at London, the 2d of Auguſt, 1718. Not many Days after, the Miniſters of Great Britain, France, and Spain, ſign'd a Convention for a Ceſſation of Arms, which was proclaim'd at London the 28th of February. About which Time the Marquis De Seneterre, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the moſt Chriſtian King, arriv'd there, and had private Audience of His Majeſty; as had Monſieur Le Cog, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Poland. On the 17th of the ſame Month, one of the King's Meſſengers diſpatch'd by the Lord Carteret from Stockholm, brought the Inſtrument of the Treaty of Friendſhip and Alliance, concluded between His Majeſty and the Crown of Sweden, which contributed very much towards preſerving the Peace of the North, and the Security of the Engliſh Navigation and Commerce in thoſe Parts. The Lords having paſt a Bill for the better ſecuring the Dependency of the Kingdom of Ireland upon the Crown of Great Britain, it was ſent to the Commons, and read a firſt and ſecond Time. A Debate aroſe after the ſecond Reading, which was begun by Mr. Pitt, who ſpoke againſt the Bill, becauſe it ſeem'd calculated for no other Purpoſe than to increaſe the Power of the Britiſh Houſe of Peers, which in his Opinion was already but too great. He was ſeconded by Mr. Plummer, who excepted in particular againſt the Preamble of the Bill, which was afterwards left out, as inconſiſtent with the enacting Part. This was partly own'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll, who however, in the main, ſpoke for the Bill; and was oppos'd by Mr. John Hungerford, who endeavour'd to ſhew, that Ireland was ever independent with Reſpect to the Courts of Judicature. He was ſupported by the Lord Moleſworth, the Lord Tyrconnel, two Peers of Ireland, and ſome others. The Weight of theſe Arguments was taken off by what was alledg'd to the contrary by the Learned and Ingenious Philip Yorke, Eſq; who was back'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll; and the Queſtion being put for committing the Bill, it was carri'd in the Affirmative, March 5th, by a Majority of 140 Voices againſt 83.

Peace between England and Sweden.

The Bill for the Dependency of Ireland upon England.

This Bill took its Riſe from an Appeal of Maurice Anneſley, Eſq; to the Houſe of Peers in England, againſt a Decree of the Houſe of Peers in Ireland, which the Britiſh Houſe of Peers receiv'd, and order'd the Barons of the Exchequer in Ireland, to cauſe the ſaid Anneſley to be forthwith put in Poſſeſſion of certain Lands in the County of Kildare, of which he had been diſpoſſeſs'd by Virtue of a Decree of the Houſe of Peers in Ireland. The Barons of the Exchequer in that Kingdom iſſu'd an Injunction to Alexander Burrows, Eſq; Sheriff of the County of Kildare, purſuant to the Order of the Britiſh Houſe of Peers, and ſet ſeveral Fines upon him for refuſing to put it in Execution; which the Houſe of Peers in Ireland diſcharg'd; and voted that Jeffery Gilbert, Eſq; Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, John Pocklington, Eſq; and Sir John St. Leger, the other Barons of the Exchequer in Ireland, had acted in manifeſt Derogation to, and Diminution of, the King's Prerogative, in his High Court of Parliament in Ireland, as alſo of the Rights and Privileges of this Kingdom, and of the Parliament thereof. Theſe Barons were alſo order'd to be taken into Cuſtody of the Uſher of the Black Rod. But ſeveral Lords diſſented from theſe Reſolutions, as,

Barons of the Exchequer in Ireland in Cuſtody of the Black Rod.

The Houſe of Peers in Ireland drew up a long Repreſentation to be tranſmitted to His Majeſty, ſetting forth their Right to the final Judicature of Cauſes in that Kingdom; and the Duke of Leeds, in a Proteſt againſt a Vote paſt in the Houſe of Peers in England, gave 15 Reaſons to ſupport the Claim of the Houſe of Peers in Ireland. But the Houſe of Lords in England reſolv'd, January 28, That the Barons of the Exchequer in Ireland had acted with Courage according to Law, in Support of His Majeſty's Prerogative, and with Fidelity to the Crown of Great Britain; and order'd an Addreſs to the King, for confering on them ſome Marks of his Royal Favour, as may be a Recompenſe for the ill Uſage they have receiv'd, by being unjuſtly cenſur'd, and illegally impriſon'd, for doing their Duty. Then alſo was the abovemention'd Bill order'd to be brought in.

About this Time, a Miſunderſtanding happen'd between Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; Attorney General, and Sir William Thompſon, Solicitor General, which was carri'd ſo far, that the Solicitor charg'd Mr. Lechmere, 'with 'Breach of his Truſt and Duty as a Privy-'Counſellor, urging, that he acted as Council, 'and receiv'd Sums of Money for his Advice, 'in Matters refer'd to him by the Privy Coun-'cil, as Attorney General.' After this he proceeded to the Reading of ſeveral Reports, made either by the Attorney General or himſelf, but was interrupted by Mr. Secretary Craggs, who ſaid, 'They were not there to examine who 'was the beſt Lawyer; but an Accuſation ha-'ving been rais'd againſt a Gentleman of diſtin-'guiſh'd Merit, and in very eminent Stations, 'it was incumbent upon the Accuſer to produce 'clear Evidence to make good his Charge.'

Sir Wm. Thomſon accuſes Mr. Lechmere of Corruption.

Upon

A.D.1720 Upon which Mr. Lechmere ſtood up in his own Defence, and ſaid, 'That he had the Honour to 'be a Privy Counſellor, Chancellor of the 'Dutchy, Attorney General, a Member of that 'Houſe, and a Gentleman. That he own'd 'himſelf liable to a great many humane Frail-'ties and Imperfections, but as his Conſcience 'entirely acquitted him of the Crimes laid to 'his Charge, ſo he defi'd all the World, and 'worſt of his Enemies, to prove him guilty of 'Corruption, or any unwarrantable Practices: 'That tho' he was thus wrongfully accus'd in 'ſo ſolemn a manner, he did heartily forgive 'his Accuſer; and he was willing to believe, 'that he was prompted to this raſh Action ra-'ther by Miſtake or Ignorance, than Malice; 'concluding, with deſiring that Honourable 'Houſe to lift and weigh the whole Matter 'with their uſual Candour, Impartiality, and 'Equity, and to excuſe any unguarded Expreſ-'ſions that might eſcape him in vindicating his 'Innocence.' This Accuſation was made to a Committee who had in Conſideration the Bubbles then on Foot, to enrich ſome, by beggaring others. They examin'd ſeveral Witneſſes produc'd by the Accuſer, and among them, ſome Attornies or Solicitors, as Mowbray, Metcalf, Johnſon; and ſome Traders, as Sir Alexander Cairnes, Sir James Hallet, Sir William Chapman; but tho' it appear'd that the Fees given to the Lawyers, at the Hearings for Charters, were exorbitant to a ſcandalous Degree, and ſeem'd rather to buy their Intereſt than get their Opinion, being ten Guineas apiece at a Hearing, and 50 Guineas for a Reference: Yet upon a full Examination of all the Witneſſes, the Houſe of Commons reſolv'd, March the 18th, That the Accuſation was falſe and ſcandalous, and that the Attorney General had diſcharg'd his Truſt in the Matters refer'd to him by His Majeſty's Council, with Honour and Integrity: Tho' the taking fifty Guineas for a Reference, was certainly too much for a Fee, if too little for a Bribe.

Mr. Lechmere ſpeaks.

In the mean time, the Bill for ingrafting the Annuities on the South Sea Stock, and making one Capital, was going thro' the Houſe of Commons; and the Stockjobbers in Exchange-Alley, were in a perpetual Hurry, being toſs'd about between Hopes and Fears, upon the different Accounts they receiv'd from their Friends and Agents at Weſtminſter, almoſt every Minute. But as ſoon as it was known, that the Clauſe offer'd to cramp the Company's Project was rejected, the Stock 'roſe from 130 to near 400, on no better footing than the Example of the Miſſiſſipi Company in France, for every Penny above 130, which was more than the intrinſick Value.

Bill againſt Duels.

On the 21ſt of March, Sir Joſeph Jekyll preſented to the Houſe, a Bill to prevent the impious Practice of Duelling. A Vile Cuſtom grown up in the Riot and Lewdneſs of the Times, after the Reſtoration; and eſtabliſh'd among the vain and raſh Youth of the Age, as the Chief Point of Honour; tho' very often this Point came in Conteſt when the Duelliſts had loſt their Senſes, which were drown'd in their Cups; as was the Caſe of Owen Buckingham, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Reading, and Mr. Aldworth of Windſor: The latter had invited the other to his Houſe, and quarrelling with him after they had both been too free with Wine, they fought in the Dark, and Mr. Buckingham was kill'd, which was the Occaſion of the bringing in this Bill; tho' what was the Occaſion of its not paſſing, is difficult to diſcover: For one cannot ſuppoſe it to be poſſible that ſo great and wiſe an Aſſembly as the Parliament of Great Britain, could be in the leaſt influenc'd by ſuch as preferr'd Punctilio to Principle, and Conceit to Conſcience. Being unwilling to interrupt the general Narration with particular Incidents, we defer ſpeaking of Honours and Preferments, till we come to a proper Period, where it may be done with the leaſt Prejudice to Connection. A.D.1720

Honours and Preferments.

In the beginning of the Year, Coniers Darcy, Eſq; Brother to the Earl of Holderneſs, was made Comptroller of His Majeſty's Houſhold; Benjamin Mildmay, Eſq; Brother to the Lord Fitz-Walter, was appointed one of the Commiſſioners of the Exciſe, Robert Baylis, Eſq; a Commiſſioner of the Salt Duties; Captain Onſlow, was made Treaſurer of the Poſt-Office; Sir Robert Corbet, one of the Clerks Comptrollers of His Majeſty's Houſhold; Edward Horner, Eſq; one of the Serjeants at Arm to His Majeſty, in the room of Joſeph Hall, Eſq; who was remov'd for writing a Pamphlet, entitul'd, A ſober Reply to Mr. Higgs's merry Argument of the Light of Nature, for the Tritheiſtick Doctrine of the Trinity; which a Serjeant at Arms had no call to meddle with; but perhaps what follows in the Title, did not a little help to ſharpen the Proſecution againſt Mr. Hall; With a Poſtſcript to Dr. Waterland. The ſober Reply was burnt by the common Hangman, at the uſual Places, as will be ſeen in the ſequel.

Mr. Hall, a Serjeant at Arms, turn'd out for a Pamphlet.

On the 22d of March William Earl of Coventry was ſworn of the Privy Council: The next Day Philip Yorke, Eſq; was appointed His Majeſty's Solicitor General: And a few Days after Sir Robert Raymond was made Attorney General. About the ſame Time Sir Robert Sutton was appointed His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinsry at the Court of France, in the room of the Earl of Stairs. It was then thought a little odd, that he took Mr. Ayerſt, the Earl of Strafford's Chaplain, and Secretary at Utrecht, to be his Chaplain, the Merit of that former Service ſeeming not to deſerve it. Colonel Stanhope went to the Court of Madrid with a publick Character. John Lord Carteret, His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Sweden, having finiſh'd his Negotiation there, with great Wiſdom and Succeſs, was recall'd; and William Finch, Eſq; Son to the Earl of Nottingham, was appointed to ſucceed him. We cannot paſs over the 28th of March, without a mournful Remembrance of the Death of George Dodington, Eſq; Lord Lieutenant, and Caſtos Rotulorum, of the County of Somerſet, and Repreſentative of the Borough of Bridgwater: A Gentleman of a very ancient Family of Dodington, in that County; who, prefering a Life of Buſineſs and Action, to the Indolence of Retirement, paſt thro' ſeveral eminent Stations in the publick Service; in all which he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by a perfect Knowledge, and moſt exact Execution. He left his Eſtate, which was very conſiderable, to his Nephew George Bubb, now George Dodington, Eſq; who, when very young, had diſcharg'd the Office of Envoy Extraordinary at the Court of Spain, in a Time of much Difficulty, with great Wiſdom and Reputation: To him alſo he left the

Earl Stanhope, His Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State, having been lately in France, and going thither again in the beginning of March, occaſion'd various Speculations; but thoſe that refer'd theſe Journeys to the Negotiations with Spain, to put an End to the War between that Crown and the Emperor, were probably the beſt grounded.

On the 22d of April, the Bill for enabling the South Sea Company to increaſe their Capital Stock, paſt the Houſe of Commons, by a Majority of 172 againſt 55; and being ſent up to the Lords, was read the firſt and ſecond Time: But upon a Motion for its being committed, it occaſion'd a great Debate. The Lord North and Grey ſpoke firſt againſt the Bill, which promis'd no great Succeſs to the Oppoſition. His Lordſhip ſaid, (arbitrarily enough) 'it was unjuſt in its Nature, and 'might prove fatal in its Conſequence, ſince 'it ſeem'd calculated for the enriching of 'a few, and the impoveriſhing of a great many; and not only made way for, but coun- 'tenanc'd and authoriz'd, the fraudulent and 'pernicious Practice of Stockjobbing; which 'produc'd an irreparable Miſchief, in diverting the Genius of the People from Trade and 'Induſtry.' The Lord North and Grey was back'd by the Duke of Wharton, who endeavour'd to evince, 'that the South Sea Project 'might prove of infinite Diſadvantage to the 'Nation, Firſt, As it gave Foreigners an Opportunity to double and treble the vaſt Sums 'they had in our publick Funds, which could 'not but tempt them to withdraw their Capital Stock, with their immenſe Gains, to 'other Countries, which might drain Great Britain of a conſiderable part of its Gold 'and Silver. Secondly, That the artificial and 'prodigious Riſe of the South Sea Stock, was 'a dangerous Bait, which might decoy unwary People to their Ruin; and allure 'them, by a falſe Proſpect of Gain, to part 'with what they had got by their Labour and 'Induſtry, to purchaſe imaginary Riches: 'And, in the Third Place, that the Addition 'of above 30 Millions, new Capital, would 'give ſuch a vaſt Power to the South Sea Company, as might endanger the Liberties of the 'Nation, and, in Time, ſubvert our excellent 'Conſtitution; ſince, by their extenſive Intereſt, they might influence moſt, if not all, 'the Elections of the Members, and conſequently overrule the Reſolutions of the 'Houſe of Commons.' Earl Cowper ſpoke alſo againſt the Bill, which, like the Trojan Horſe, was uſher'd in and receiv'd with great Pomp and Acclamations of Joy, but which was contriv'd for Treachery and Deſtruction. His Lordſhip added, 'That in all publick 'Bargains, it is a Duty incumbent on them, 'who are entruſted with the Adminiſtration, 'to take Care that the ſame be more advantagious to the State than to private Perſons; 'but that a quite contrary Method ſeem'd to 'have been follow'd in the Contract made 'with the South Sea Company: For if the 'Stocks were kept up to the advanced Price, 'to which they had been rais'd, by the ob- 'lique Arts of Stockjobbing, either that Com- 'pany, or its principal Members, would gain 'above 30 Millions Sterling, of which they 'gave but one fourth Part towards the Diſcharge of the national Debts. That tho' this 'Scheme carri'd the Face of publick Good, 'yet nothing cou'd be ſo that was founded on 'Injuſtice, as his Lordſhip took this Bill to be. 'That he apprehended, in particular, that the 'main publick Intention of it, viz. the Repurchaſe of Annuities, would meet with inſuperable Difficulties; and that, in ſuch a 'Caſe, none but a few Perſons, who were in 'the Secret, and had early bought Stocks at a 'low Rate, and afterwards ſold them at a 'high Price, would, in the End, be Gainers by 'this Project.' The Duke of Buckinghamſhire, and ſome other Peers, ſpoke on the ſame Side. But the Earl of Sunderland anſwer'd moſt of their Objections, and ſaid, 'That they who 'encourag'd and countenanc'd the Scheme of 'the South Sea Company, had nothing in their 'View but the eaſing the Nation of part of 'that heavy Load of Debt it labours under. 'That, on the other hand, the Managers for 'that Company, had undoubtedly a Proſpect 'of private Gain, either to themſelves, or to 'their Corporation; but that, when that 'Scheme was accepted, neither the one nor 'the other could foreſee, that the Stocks 'would have riſen to the Price they were 'now advanc'd to: That if they had contin- 'nu'd as they were at that Time, the Publick would have had the far greater Share of 'the Advantage accruing from that Scheme; 'and if the Stocks were kept up to the Price 'they had been rais'd to, which was not un- 'likely, it was but reaſonable that the South 'Sea Company ſhould enjoy the Profits pro- 'cur'd to it by the wiſe Management and In- 'duſtry of its Directors; which would enable 'it both to make large Dividends among its 'Members, and thereby compaſs the Ends 'intended by this Sheme.' Theſe Reaſons, fallible as they prov'd to be, gave ſo much Satisfaction, that the Queſtion for committing the Bill being put, it was carri'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 83 Votes againſt 17; and the next Day, April the 6th, it paſt, without any Amendment or Diviſion.

On the 7th of April the King gave the Royal Aſſent to

An Act for enabling the South Sea Company to increaſe their preſent Capital Stock and Fund, by redeeming ſuch publick Debts and Incumbrances, as are therein mention'd; and for raiſing Money to be apply'd for leſſening ſeveral of the publick Debts and Incumberances, and for calling in the preſent Exchequer Bills remaining uncancell'd, and for making forth new Bills in Lieu thereof, to be circulated and exchang'd upon Demand, at or near the Exchequer.

An Act for the better ſecuring the Dependency of the Kingdom of Ireland, upon the Crown of Great Britain.

And to ſeveral other publick, and 27 private Acts.

On the 2d of April the States of Sweden came to the unanimous Reſolution to confer the Royal Dignity of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, upon the hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, who had marri'd the late King of Sweden's Siſter. That Prince immediately diſpatch'd

About this Time the King of Great Britain, who always had at Heart the Preſervation and Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Protection of all that profeſt it, did, by his Miniſter at Heidelberg, James Haldane, Eſq; intercede with the Elector Palatine, for the Redreſs of the Grievances of the Reform'd of that Electorate: But tho' the King of Pruſſia, and the States General, did the ſame by their Miniſters, yet they procur'd only an imperfect Relief to the perſecuted Proteſtants. The Church of the Holy Ghoſt, at Heidelberg, which had been taken from them, was reſtor'd, but the Revenues, which they had been poſſeſt of in ſeveral Places, were left in a State of Litigation.

The Neceſſity of having a ſufficient Force in the North, to guard againſt the ſecret and dangerous Deſigns of the Czar, and make good the late Alliance with Sweden, occaſion'd the Equipment of another ſtout Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of Sir John Norris, who ſail'd from the Nore for the Baltick, April the 14th, with the following Ships.

Admiral Byng remain'd ſtill with his Squadron in Sicily, and very much forwarded the Negotiations between the Imperial and Spaniſh Generals, for a Ceſſation of Arms in that Iſland, in order to conclude a Peace. The King of Sardinia now alſo gave a ſignal Inſtance of his great Regard to the King of Great Britain. Mr. Oglethorpe, a younger Son of the late Sir Theophilus O ——, one of the Pretender's Adherents, who was at the Court of Turin three Years before, and had been ſince at Naples, Malta, and Rome, being come back to Turin, the 25th of March, upon the firſt Notice, his Sardinian Majeſty receiv'd of his Arrival, he ſent him Orders not to appear at Court, but forthwith to depart the Country; and accordingly he went away the next Day.

The Stockjobbers continu'd to make their Market of the Infatuation of the People in their Bargains for South Sea Stock, and, among other Rumours to raiſe the Credit of it, 'twas given out, that Earl Stanhope had receiv'd Overtures in France, to exchange Gibraltar and Port-Mahon for ſome Places in Peru, for the Security and Enlargement of the Engliſh Trade in the South Sea in America; which had its Effect in Exchange Alley: Whereas in Truth Earl Stanhope had made the Regent of France ſenſible, that the Britiſh Nation had ſhewn ſuch an Averſion to the Reſtitution of Gibraltar, that the Parliament would never be brought to conſent to it: Upon which the Duke Regent promis'd not to inſiſt upon it, in Conjunction with the Court of Spain, in the enſuing Treaty of Peace. But this and other falſe News ſo blew up the Grand Bubble, that South Sea Stock was 310, before the Royal Aſſent was given to the Bill for enabling the Company to encreaſe their Capital, and on the 12th of April the Directors open'd their Books for a new Subſcription of a Million, at the Rate of 300 for every 100 Pounds Capital Stock; upon which there was ſuch a Concourſe of Perſons of Quality, and others of both Sexes, that the Subſcription was found to amount to above two Millions of Original Stock. This firſt Subſcription was to be paid in five Payments, of ſixty Pounds each, for one Share of 100*l.* Original Stock; which was thought ſo advantagious, that many murmur'd and reflected on the Directors, for not being admitted to ſubſcribe. All Party Diſtinction was loſt in this Hurry of Jobbing for a Fortune: Whigs and Tories made their Court to Robert Knight, Treaſurer of the South Sea Company, and Sir John Blunt, the Chief Contrivers of the Scheme, with more Aſſiduity and Complacency, than we ſee at the Levees of Prime Miniſters: Nay Prime Miniſters themſelves condeſcended to be in the Confidence of Blunt and Knight. In a few Days the Stock advanc'd to 340, and the Subſcriptions were ſold for double the Price of the firſt Payment. This did not ſatisfy the Avarice of thoſe that were in the Secret and Direction, and in order to another Start, the General Court declar'd a Dividend of 10 per Cent. and that all Subſcription Money ſhould be intit'led to the ſame Dividend till Midſummer; which anſwering the End deſign'd, the Directors, to follow their Blow, open'd their Books for a ſecond Subſcription of another Million, a Fortnight after, at the Rate of 400 for each Share of 100 Pounds, the ſeveral Payments to be made in three Years; and ſo great again was the Concourſe of People, that in a few Hours the Subſcriptions amounted to above one Million 400 Thouſand Pounds of Capital Stock: But what is yet more ſtrange, the Money'd Men had ſo great Confidence in the Directors of the South Sea Company, who five or ſix Months after were ſtigmatized as Villains and Scoundrels, that many depoſited into their Hands their Annuities, without knowing

The Fortunes that were made daily by Bargains for this Stock, multiplied as it was by Subscriptions, and Ingraftments of imaginary upon real Stock, were so many Prodigies to Men of Sobriety and Discretion. Clerks in Offices, Runners in Exchange-Alley, Bookkeeperrs to Merchants, Coffee-Men and Coffee-Boys, were seen ev'ry where either in fine Cloathes, or in lac'd Coats and Velvet. The Wrong-heads (as was the Saying) had the better of the Long-heads: The Desperate and the Rash, took up the Cards at first, and many of them went off Winners; and the Wiser gave way at last to the Temptation, and many of them were left with the Loss.

Nothing could have suspended the General Concern which People were in, to have a Share of the Golden Showers, that fell on Particulars so much, as did the joyful News of the happy and long wish'd for Reconciliation of the Royal Family, brought about in a great Measure by the earnest and continual Endeavours of those illustrious Patriots, the Duke of Devonshire, and Robert Walpole, Esq; who had several Conferences for that Purpose with the Ministers, with so good Success, that on the 23d of April, the Lord Lumley, one of the Gentlemen of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's Bedchamber, waited on His Majesty to know his Pleasure, when His Royal Highness should attend him: He was answer'd, immediately: And Mr. Secretary Craggs having accompany'd the Lord Lumley to Leicester-Fields, to acquaint the Prince with it, His Royal Highness immediately went to St. James's House, and was half an Hour in private Conference with the King: After which he went to see his eldest Daughter the Princess Anne, who five Days before was taken ill of the Small-Pox, which had no other Effect on Her Royal Highness, than to make Her natural Beauty the more remarkable.

The Reconciliation of the Royal Family.

His Royal Highness at his Return to Leicester House, was, by the King's Command, attended by a Party of the Yeomen of the Guard, and of the Horse-Guard, and the Foot-Guard began also that Day to mount the Guard at His Royal Highness's House. In the Evening the Princess of Wales had an Interview with the King, and the next Morning, Sunday April 24. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, Earl Cowper, the Lord Viscount Townshend, Mr. Robert Walpole, Mr. Methuen, and Mr. Pulteney, were admitted to kiss the King's Hand, and the Duke of Devonshire had the Honour to carry the Sword of State before the King to the Royal Chapel, the Prince of Wales accompanying His Majesty thither; and at their Return, the Officers and Retainers to the two Courts Kiss'd, Embrac'd, and Congratulated one another upon this auspicious Reconciliation. The next Day the Great Officers and Ministers of State, and of the Houshold, and other Persons of Distinction, waited on His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who, in the Evening, went with his whole Court to the Apartments at St. James's, and had a long Conference with His Majesty. Most of the Foreign Ministers residing here had also, on this Occasion, a private Audience of the Prince of Wales, being introduc'd by the Master of the Ceremonies in the following manner: On Monday the 25th of April, Don Borges Periera a Castro, Envoy Extraordinary from Portugal, Mr. Wallenrodf Envoy Extraordinary from Prussia: On the 26th, Baron Spar, Envoy Extraordinary from Sweden; on the 27th the Count De Seneterre, Ambassador Extraordiuary from France, and Mr. Le Cog, Envoy Extraordinary from Poland; on the 28th Count De Beque, Envoy Extraordinary from Lorrain, Mr. Hopman Resident from the Duke of Holstein, Signior Pucci Secretary from the Grand Duke of Tuscany, Signior Riva Secretary to the Duke of Modena, and the Marquis De Cortanse Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Sardinia.

Mention has been made of the wonderful Effects of Mr. Law's Money Scheme in France, where the Actions of the Mississipy Company were 7000 Livres a Share in May, but before the Month was out all Things relating to Stocks fell into the greatest Confusion at Paris, occasion'd by an Arret to reduce Bank Notes and Actions of the Company. Commissaries were sent to the Bank, and Seals put on their Coffers, but taken off again six Days after. The next Day Mr. Law resigned to the Duke Regent his Employment, as Comptroller General of the Finances; and he had two Swiss Officers given him for his Guard. Yet this Revolution in the Stocks at Paris, and the Disgrace of the first Projector, did not open the Eyes or Understandings of the People of Great Britain, who were as Mad as a Man wou'd be thought, who seeing another fall from a Precipice should run after him and perish in the like manner.

Rise and Fall of Stocks in France.

Tho' a Cessation of Arms had been agreed upon by the Ministers of the Emperor, Great Britain, France and Spain, and the King of Spain had sign'd the Quadruple Alliance, as his General the Marquis de Lede, who commanded in Sicily, acknowledged to the Emperor's General Count Merci and Admiral Byng, yet the Marquis would not evacuate Sicily, under Pretence that he had no Orders from the King his Master; and he held out against all Proposals for evacuating that Island, till the Imperial Army was come within Cannon-shot of his Camp near Palermo, and Sir George Byng was approaching the Harbour with the British Men of War. The Imperialists took a Redoubt near the Spanish Lines, May 2. N.S. and had the Marquis de Lede supported the Ground it wou'd probably have drawn on a general Battle, but soon after this Action he receiv'd, by a Felucca, the King of Spain's Order, and full Powers to treat, of which he gave General Merci notice immediately by a Trumpeter, and dispatch'd a Letter to Admiral Byng, who sent Captain Saunders to assist in forming the Treaty; and all Things being adjusted a Convention for a suspension of Arms, and for the Evacuation of Sicily and Sardinia was sign'd by the Count de Merci the Imperial General, Sir George Byng Admiral of the British Fleet, and the Marquis de Lede the Spanish General the 6th of May. And it was chiefly owing to the Assistance of that Fleet that the Island of Sicily was partly conquered, and at last yielded up to the House of Austria, after a prodigious Expence of Blood and Treasure. And while the maritime Power of Great Britain was exerting itself so gloriously for the support of its Allies in the Mediterranean, Sir John Norris render'd it equally formidable in the North, where he arriv'd at Elsinore the 27th of April, and on the first of May he had Audi-

A.D. 1720 Audience of the King at Copenhagen; after which he had ſeveral Conferences with the Daniſh Miniſters, together with the Lord Polworth; in purſuance of the Meaſures there concerted, the Britiſh Admiral wrote the following Letter to Prince Dolhorouki the Czar's Ambaſſador at the Court of Denmark.

Sir John Norris's Letter to the Muſcovite Ambaſſador.

SIR,

'The King, my Maſter, has order'd me to 'come into theſe Seas with a Squadron of 'his Ships, to procure a juſt and reaſonable 'Peace, between the Crown of Sweden and 'that of Ruſſia; and His Majeſty having at 'Heart the Welfare of his Subjects, as alſo 'the Concerns of ſuch Nations as live in 'Amity with him, ardently wiſhes that this 'Affair may be accompliſh'd in a chriſtian, 'effectual, and ſpeedy manner: For this End 'I am commanded to notify to the Miniſters, 'Generals, and Admirals, of the Czar, the 'repeated Offers of His Britannick Majeſty's 'Mediation for a Peace, between the two 'foremention'd Crowns, and that his Czarian 'Majeſty, duly conſidering the preſent State 'of Affairs, will liſten to reaſonable Conditi-'ons for an Accommodation; and leſt, for 'want of full Powers, this Affair ſhould be 'obſtructed, the ſame are ſent to his Envoy 'at Stockholm, and likewiſe to me, his Ad-'miral, to the End, jointly, or ſeparately, 'we may act in the Quality of his Plenipo-'tentiaries, in order to effect a Peace between 'the two Crowns. Sir, I deſire you to com-'municate all this to his Czarian Majeſty, 'and to aſſure him, that I ſhall think it an 'Honour to receive Orders from him.'

Prince Dolhorouky's Anſwer.

SIR,

The Muſcovite Ambaſſador's Anſwer.

'I have receiv'd the Letter which you ſent 'this Morning by your Secretary; from which 'I perceive, that the King, your Maſter, has 'ſent you into theſe Seas with his Squadron, 'to mediate a Peace between his Czarian Ma-'jeſty, my Maſter, and the Crown of Sweden: 'All the Anſwer I can return, is, that the 'Czar has nothing more at Heart than Peace 'and Tranquility, of which he has given 'clear Proofs during this War; but becauſe 'Sweden never expreſs'd the like Sentiments, 'the Continuation of the War can be impu-'ted only to that Crown. As for the Ex-'preſſions in your Letter about the Means of 'a Peace, I can return no Anſwer to that: 'And in Caſe His Britannick Majeſty has any 'Propoſals to make to the Czar, I hope you 'will excuſe me from doing it, ſince it can 'be done a more compendious Way.'

Falſe Pretences of the Ruſſian Court.

The Court of Muſcovy had, it ſeems, learnt the Stile of the more Southern Courts, and profeſs to have Peace at Heart, when their Arms were deſtroying in a moſt miſerable manner, the Coaſt Provinces of Sweden. About the middle of May the Britiſh Fleet got into the Road of Copenhagen, from whence they ſail'd into the Grounds towards Stockholm; where Sir John Norris was, at the Time the Solemnity of the King's Coronation was perform'd.

His Majeſty having appointed the Earl of Rothes to be his High Commiſſioner for the holding the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, that Synod met the 12 of May; but their Acts like thoſe of the Convocation in England, conſiſting chiefly in Matters of Form, I leave them to their Church Hiſtorians. The moſt remarkable Particular in their Regiſters at this Time, was the Report of James Young of Killicanty, Collector of the Contribution for the Suffering Proteſtants in Lithuania, that he had remitted 4100*l.* Sterling to the Sufferers, notwithſtanding many Pariſhes had been deficient in paying in their Contributions: An Inſtance of Charity the more laudable, for that High-Church in England had lately cenſur'd the like charitable Diſpoſition there, towards ſuffering Proteſtants in the Palatinate, who had taken Refuge among them. A.D. 1720

Charity of the General Aſſembly in Scotland.

According to the Fluctuation of the South Sea Stock, was that of the Minds of the Money'd Men: Not much unlike that of the Rack, which lifts the Wretches that are faſten'd to it to a great Height, and lets them down with equal Pain and Precipitation. Stock was about 390 moſt part of this Month, with daily Riſes and Falls; and the Company, before May was out, by tempting Propoſals, and the Arts of the Connoiſſeurs in ſuch Matters, having found Means to raiſe their Stock to above 500, it was computed that two Thirds of the Proprietors of the long Annuities, the nine per Cent. Annuities, and the Lottery Tickets, 1710, were ſubſcrib'd. After which the Stock continu'd Riſing more or leſs ſome Months longer. And it ceas'd to be a Wonder to ſee that Man in his fine Chariot to Day, who in January would have gone on a Twelve-penny Errand, from one End of the City to the other: As had been ſeen in France.

Prodigious Riſe of the South Sea Stock.

In the mean time the Bill to prevent the impious Practice of Duelling, paſt the Houſe of Commons, and was ſent to the Lords, where it was laid by, and no more heard of. And it far'd not much better with the Bill againſt Printed or Painted Calicoes; which was put off, May the 3d, for ſix Weeks. But to allay the Murmurs of the Silk-Weavers, who were growing mutinous, their Lordſhips reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to His Majeſty, to order the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations to prepare a Scheme againſt the next Seſſion of Parliament, for the more effectual preventing the wearing and uſing of Printed or Painted Calicoes: To which the King return'd a moſt gracious and prudent Anſwer. And the Lords order'd their Addreſs, and His Majeſty's Anſwer, to be printed: But the Weavers were in too high a Ferment, to be brought into Temper by ſuch healing Methods: They flock'd down to Weſtminſter with their Wives and Children, to the Number of about 3000, crowded the Paſſages to the Houſe of Peers, and demanded Juſtice of their Lordſhips as they paſt by. They tore the Callicoe Gowns off the Womens Backs in the Streets, cut ſome, burnt others, and did a great deal of Miſchief. But a Detachment of the Life-Guard and Horſe-Grenadiers being order'd to mount, and take proper Stations to diſperſe the Mutineers, they return'd home to Spittle-Fields, and were for ſome Days kept quiet, by the Train'd-Bands of the Tower-Hamlets, tho' they continu'd to tear, cut and ſpoil, the Womens Calicoe Gowns; and the hot Fit returning upon them, they threaten'd to demo-

The Seaſon for Projects was now at the Height, and ſome very whimſical ones met with more Encouragement than many ſolid and beneficial ones have done: Money came in ſo faſt, and in ſuch Torrents, on the fortunate Jobbers, that they knew not what to do with it; every Stock roſe in ſome ſmall Proportion with South Sea Stock; and the Sellers out had all the Benefit Tickets in this univerſal Lottery, if they were paid in any thing that was paſſable. No body expected Specie for his Stock: All the Money in the Kingdom, whether in Caſh or in Bills, and half of the Lands and Houſes, would not at 500 per Cent. have purchas'd all the South Sea Stock, and Subſcriptions. This made every Project that cou'd make its way into the World take with Multitudes of Jobbers, that bought in to ſell out; and it was enough for the Projector, if his Project ſucceeded ſo far as to have Books open'd for it. I ſay the leſs of the two Projects for inſuring Ships, not only becauſe two noble Lords were pleas'd to lend their Names to them, but becauſe it is certain that a good Scheme for eaſy and ſafe Inſurance, would be the greateſt Advantage that could happen, to all that Trade by Sea; and no Doubt it was this Conſideration that procur'd the Eſtabliſhment of the two Companies of the Royal Aſſurance, and London Aſſurance; which, like almoſt all other Projects, being form'd for private Intereſt, as ſoon as that was anſwer'd, fell into the State of Neglect and Decay; which befalls every Thing that has nothing but a General Good to ſupport it. The Projectors propos'd to raiſe no leſs than 600000*l.* towards the Diſcharge of the Civil-Liſt Debt, which otherwiſe muſt have been made good by ſome new Fund; and the diſcharging of ſuch a Debt, without putting the Subject to any new Expence, was a Propoſal that could not but be acceptable to the Miniſtry. Mr. Secretary Craggs acquainted the Houſe with it; and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer deliver'd a Meſſage to them from His Majeſty, concerning it; which was ſo well receiv'd, that May 4th, a Bill was brought in to enable His Majeſty to grant Letters of Incorporation, to the Uſes and Purpoſes mention'd in His Majeſty's moſt gracious Meſſage; which paſt both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent. On the 6th of May Sir William Wyndham made a Motion to addreſs for an Account of the Debts which were owing to the ſeveral Heads of Expence for His Majeſty's Civil Government at Lady-Day; and alſo an Account of the Arrears of the Civil-Liſt Fund, to pay the ſame. But, ſays the Annaliſt, (pag. 545) ſuch an Addreſs being directly levell'd againſt the Miniſters, the Queſtion being put, paſt in the Negative; and Henry Pelham, Eſq; mov'd for an Addreſs to return His Majeſty Thanks for his gracious Condeſcenſion, in deſiring the Advice of this Houſe, upon a Matter of ſuch Importance, as the Inſurance of Ships, &c. Robert Walpole, Eſq; ſeconded his Motion; and an Addreſs being reſolv'd, It was, in the Words of the Annals, the firſt viſible Effect, in the Houſe of Commons, of the late happy Reconciliation of the Royal Family, and, in Conſequence of it, of the Whig Party. King of Pruſſia makes Reprizals for the Proteſtants in the Palatinate.

We have mention'd the powerful Interpoſition of the King of Great Britain with the Elector Palatine, in favour of the Reform'd in the Palatinate. The King of Pruſſia, the States General, and the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, interpos'd alſo in their Behalf; and his Pruſſian Majeſty finding that Meaſure not ſo ſucceſsful as might have been expected, from the Juſtice and Reaſon of the Thing, and the Dignity of the Powers interpoſing, took a ſhorter Courſe to obtain Satisfaction, by ordering the Convent of Hamerſleben, in the Principality of Halberſtadt, to be ſhut up by way of Reprizal, for the Seizing of the Church of the Holy Ghoſt at Heidelberg, by the Papiſts; and not long after that Church was, by the Elector Palatine's Order, reſtor'd to the Proteſtants: But High-Church in England, was by no means pleas'd with His Majeſty's good Offices in favour of the Presbyterians in the Palatinate; and printed in Miſt's, now Fog's Journal, ſeveral Scandalous Reflections, both on the Proteſtants in that Country, and on the generous Interpoſition of the Proteſtant Powers in their Behalf; which the Lord Biſhop of Briſtol complain'd of in the Houſe of Peers: Where ſeveral Paragraphs of that factious Paper, containing the ſaid ſcandalous Reflections, being read, His Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury made a very pathetick Speech on the deplorable Condition of the Proteſtant Religion in the Palatinate, where, in the Days of the pious and ever-belov'd Princeſs the Queen of Bohemia, our moſt gracious Sovereign's Great-Grandmother, it was almoſt generally profeſt in great Purity; His Grace then took Notice of the Inſults lately offer'd to the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Powers, Mr. Haldane, and Baron Spina, Envoys of England and Holland. My Lord Archbiſhop added, 'That Great 'Britain was ever look'd upon as the prin-'cipal Part and Support of the Reformation, 'and therefore urg'd that it was incumbent on that illuſtrious Aſſembly to come to ſome vigorous Reſolutions in favour of the oppreſs'd and perſecuted Proteſtants, contrary to the moſt ſolemn Treaties; which was the more neceſſary at this Juncture, becauſe ſome 'Princes

His Majeſty's Speech againſt Partialities and Animoſities.

'I could wiſh that all my Subjects, con-'vinc'd by Time and Experience, would lay 'aſide thoſe Partialities and Animoſities, which 'prevent them from living quietly, and en-'joying the Happineſs of a mild legal Go-'vernment: It is what I chuſe to recommend 'at this Time, when I am ſenſible that all 'Oppoſition to it is become vain and uſeleſs, 'and can only end unfortunately, for thoſe 'who ſhall ſtill perſiſt in ſtrugling againſt it. 'I am perſwaded that during my Abſence, 'every one of you will take particular Care 'to preſerve the Peace in your ſeveral Coun-'tries, and that I ſhall find you at my Re-'turn, in ſuch a State of Tranquility, as 'will ſhew Mankind how firmly my Govern-'ment is eſtabliſh'd; which I chiefly deſire, 'becauſe I think the Security and Preſervation 'of my People, and of this happy Conſti-'tution entirely depends upon it.

The ſmaller Bubbles.

The ſame Day was publiſh'd a Proclamation againſt unlawful Projects, call'd Bubbles, which were encreaſs'd to near 100 of different Kinds; and it was computed, that above a Million and a half Sterling, was won or loſt by them. All theſe Bubbles grew up out of the Corruption of the Grand one, the South Sea Stock, which, by the 2d of June, was got up to 890, and continu'd riſing or falling till it reach'd 1000: At which Time Bank was about 260, and Eaſt-India 440.

James Craggs, Esq; one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

To be Lords Justices for the Administration of the Government, during His Majesty's Absence.

The King goes to Hanover.

On Wednesday the 15th of June, His Majesty embark'd at Greenwich on board the Carolina Yatcht, and landed the next Morning near Helvoet-Sluyce; from whence he proceeded to Kibl, Schoonhoven, and Warth, by Water; and thence to Hanover by Land. His Majesty stopp'd two Days at Osnaburgh, to make a Visit to his belov'd Royal Brother, Bishop of that Place, and Duke of York, a Prince of excellent and amiable Qualities, and Endowments. The King of Prussia having express'd a great Desire to see His Britannick Majesty, Earl Stanhope was sent to Berlin, from Hieren-Hausen, the 26th of June, to make a Compliment to his Prussian Majesty, and to settle an Interview between the two Monarchs, after His Britannick Majesty's Return from Pyrmont, where the King began to drink the Water the first of July, and on the 16th return'd to Hieren-Hausen, in perfect Health. On the 9th of June, the Lord Carteret, Ambassador from England to the Court of Sweden, had Audience of Leave of that King and Queen, at Carelberg, where His Excellency had the Honour to dine with their Majesties, who express'd their high Esteem for him in the most gracious and obliging Terms. Four Days after His Excellency set out for Denmark, accompany'd by Major General Lewenhor, the Danish Minister: They arriv'd at Helsingbergh the 18th, cross'd the Sound, landed at Elsinore, and proceeded in the Evening to Fredericksburgh, where, the next Morning, his Lordship had his first Audience of the King of Denmark, by whom he was receiv'd, with those Marks of Favour and Distinction, which were due to the good Offices of a Minister, who brought with him the Treaty of Peace, between Denmark and Sweden, agreed to and sign'd on the part of Sweden, as it was, on the 22d of June, by the Minister Plenipotentiary of Denmark: And this Treaty being ratified by both Parties, the King of Denmark, began immediately to evacuate Pomerania. The Peace between the two Northern Crowns, was owing entirely to the Interposition of His Britannick Majesty; and the Muscovites after this made no great matter of their Armaments to insult the Coasts of Sweden. They committed some Devastations; but on the Approach of Sir John Norris, with the British Squadron, their Galleys retir'd towards Wybourg and Petersburgh, and the British Men of War came to an Anchor at the Dahlers, near Stockholm; where, three Months before, the new King Frederick, Prince of Hesse-Cassel, sign'd an Instrument of Assurance, by which the States of that Kingdom were restor'd to their ancient Rights and Privileges, which had been betray'd by their Predecessors, and detain'd by the late King and his Father. The Contents of the VII. Article of this Instrument of Assurance, explains the manner of his doing it.

Lord Carteret brings to Denmark the Treaty of Peace between that Crown and Sweden.

A.D. 1720

'I cannot give the States of the Kingdom 'and its Inhabitants, a stronger and more 'convincing Proof of these my sincere and 'good Intentions, than that I do, jointly with 'them, demonstrate a real Aversion for Sove- 'reign Power, or an unlimited regal Authori- 'ty, which has by many Ways so fatally in- 'jur'd, diminish'd, and visibly weaken'd the 'Kingdom: Wherefore, to the End such arbi- 'trary Power may for ever be extinguish'd 'and rooted up, I declare in the same manner 'as the States have already done, that he 'ought to forfeit the Royal Throne, and be 'esteem'd an Enemy to the Kingdom, who, 'either by open Violence, or secret Machinations, 'shall endeavour to make himself an arbitra- 'ry Sovereign; and whatever Person is con- 'victed of the like Contrivances, shall be 'deem'd a Traytor to this Country, and 'punish'd accordingly. Wherefore no Person 'shall be admitted into any Employment 'within the Kingdom, or any of the Provin- 'ces, be he either Spiritual or Temporal, 'High or Low, who does not beforehand, 'by solemn Oath, according to the due 'Form prescrib'd, abjure such pernicious ar- 'bitrary Government, as destructive of, and 'incompatible with, the Kingdom's Happi- 'ness and Prosperity.' The very reverse to what the Swede, Sir Jacob Banks, made his Burgesses of Minehead say, in their Address to the Queen, in the Days of Messieurs Harley and St. John.

The King of Sweden restores that Country to its Liberty.

CHAP. IV.

From the South-Sea Company's Scheme for incorporating the publick Funds into their Stock, to the Treaty of Vienna, between the Emperor and King of Spain.

Containing the Space of Five Years.

A.D. 1720

IT would be a Task equally difficult and irkſome, to attend all the Proceedings of the Managers of the South-Sea Project, which were ſo fatal to themſelves, and others.

There had been a firſt, ſecond, and third Subſcription, when the Managers open'd Books for receiving Subſcriptions of the Lottery Tickets, and ſhort Annuities, to the Amount of ſix Millions Sterling, and gave out that there would be a fourth Subſcription in Money, at the Rate of One Thouſand for every 100*l.* Capital Stock, the moſt impudent Impoſition that ever was attempted on the Underſtandings and Intereſts of Men; and yet the Subſcription was full in leſs than three Hours, Auguſt 24; and that very Afternoon, this fourth Subſcription was ſold in Exchange-Alley at 30 or 40 per Cent. Premium; and yet in four or five Days South-Sea Stock was little above 700; upon which the Directors came to this enormous Reſolution, 'That thirty per 'Cent. in Money ſhould be the Half-year's Di- 'vidend, due at Chriſtmas next; and that 'from thence, for twelve Years further, not 'leſs than fifty per Cent. in Money ſhould be 'the yearly Dividend on their Stock:' Than which, nothing more monſtrous was ever known in Bedlam. Yet the Reſolution of the Directors was confirm'd by the General Court of the South-Sea Company, who, upon the Motion of Mr. Craggs, Senior, voted Thanks to theſe Directors for their prudent and ſkilful Management. At this Court were preſent many Perſons of the higheſt Quality, as the Duke of Portland, Earl of Orkney, &c. And Mr. Hungerford made a Set-Speech in Praiſe of their worthy Managers. 'I have 'ſeen, ſaid he, the Riſe and Fall, the Decay 'and Reſurrection, of many Communities of 'this Nature, but, in my Opinion, none ever 'form'd ſuch wonderful Things in ſo ſhort 'Time, as the South-Sea Managers had brought 'about. They have done more than the Crown, 'the Pulpit, and the Magiſtrate, could do: 'For they have reconcil'd all Parties in one 'common Intereſt, and thereby laid aſleep, if 'not wholly extinguiſh'd, our Domeſtick Jarrs 'and Animoſities. By the Riſe of our Stocks, 'the Money'd Men have vaſtly encreas'd their 'Fortunes, the Country Gentlemen have ſeen 'their Lands doubled and trebled in their 'Hands, and they have at the ſame time 'done good to the Church, not a few of the 'Reverend Clergy having got great Sums by 'this Project. In ſhort, they have enrich'd the 'whole Nation, and I hope they have not for- 'got themſelves.' The Duke of Portland ſpoke on the ſame Side, and ſaid, he did not know what Reaſon any body had to be diſſatisfi'd. But His Grace in a few Weeks, and perhaps Days, found by woful Experience, in the Loſs of a great Part of his Fortune, that every body had Reaſon to be diſſatisfi'd, at the Conduct of the Directors, whom they were about to thank, thoſe only excepted, who came firſt in for the Plunder, and carri'd it off.

The enormous Propoſal of the South Sea Directors.

Who are thank'd by the Company.

Mr. Hungerford highly extolls them.

A.D. 1720

But Stocks continuing to tumble daily, there was a Motion by Mr. Walker, in the next General Court, a Month after, That a Committee be appointed to addreſs the Parliament, to bring to Juſtice the Betrayers of their Country: Upon this Captain Meggot ſaid, That one of the Directors had ſold above 50000 Pounds of the third Subſcription, at 230 per Cent. and ſeveral calling on him to name the Perſon, he ſaid, it was Mr. Ambroſe Page. In the mean time South-Sea Stock continu'd ſinking till Michaelmas Day, when it was about 150, which Price it bore on the 2d of February, the Day after the Houſe of Commons accepted of the Propoſal of the South-Sea Company: Their Bonds payable at Michaelmas, 1721, were at above 25 per Cent. Diſcount. Thus in the Compaſs of eight Months, we have ſeen the Riſe and Fall of that mighty Fabrick, which being wound up by myſterious Springs, and artful Machines, to a ſtupendous Height, had fix'd the Eyes and Expectations of all Europe; but whoſe main Foundation being Fraud, Illuſion, Credulity, and Intoxication, fell to the Ground, as ſoon as the fraudulent and ſelfiſh Management of the principal Projectors was diſcover'd. With its Fall Multitudes of unwary, but covetous Perſons, were unfortunately cruſh'd; and not a few antient and honourable Families almoſt entirely ruin'd. In this Calamity People had little room left for Compaſſion: It being of the Loſer's own ſeeking, contrary to Knowledge, in moſt of them, and without any Poſſibility of Succeſs, there not being Specie enough in Europe, to make good the Payments of all the Subſcriptions, and the Dividends of 50 per Cent. Yearly. Before the general Tumble of that and other Stocks, that of the South Sea was ſold at 1100: I knew 2000*l.* Capital ſold at that Rate. Now the united Stock of the Company being 40,854,100, wou'd at 1000 amount to above 400 Millions, at 500 to 200 Millions, which ſhews that there was no manner of Poſſibility of making the Capital good with the whole Specie of the Kingdom, and all the Gold and Silver, Jewels and Merchantable Wares, then in it. This almoſt every one of the Jobbers was ſenſible of; yet they all ventur'd their Ruin on the ſame Lay, as a Man, who ſhould throw himſelf into a Houſe on Fire, in Hopes that he might get out firſt. Beſides this Grand Bubble, there were as many other airy Projects, as were intended to raiſe 300 Millions Sterling by them, of which the following Propoſal was one, and not the moſt extravagant one, For carrying on an Undertaking of great Advantage, but nobody to know what it is. A Fellow in Exchange-Alley, the Scene of all this Impoſture having,

South Sea Stock falls to its former Price.

Extravagant Bubbles.

A.D. 1720 having obſerv'd that ſeveral of his old Companions had ſlip'd into Coaches, while he was drudging for a Livelihood, in an honeſt way of buying and ſelling, turn'd his Shop into an Office, and with the Help of ſome of his Neighbours, form'd a Project for half a Million, or more, by which ev'ry Subſcriber, paying down two Guineas for ſubſcribing, was to have 100 l. a Year for ev'ry 100 l. ſo ſubſcrib'd: But then how the Money was to be rais'd, did not appear in his Propoſals, where 'twas ſaid only, that in a Month, or thereabouts, the Particulars of the Scheme ſhould be laid open, and the Money ſubſcrib'd was then to be paid in. The Subſcribers were earneſtly deſir'd to enter down in the ſame Book, where they wrote their Names, the Places of their Abode, that in caſe of Mortality, or otherwiſe, Notice might be given to their Relations and Friends, to ſecure to themſelves the Benefit of the Subſcription. This extraordinary Care and Caution gave an Air of Subſtance to this Shadow; and in a Forenoon the Projector had 1000 Subſcriptions, with which, amounting to 2000 Guineas, he march'd off in the Afternoon; and what, at another Time, when People were in their Senſes, and knew what to do with their Money, wou'd have occaſion'd a Hue and Cry after the Cheat, was then only a matter of Laughter, and the Crime and the Sum hardly thought worth taking Notice of.

The South Sea Company were alarm'd at the prodigious Increaſe of the inferior Bubbles, which they look'd upon as ſo many Drains from their Grand Channel of Stock and Subſcriptions in their Books; tho' for ev'ry Penny above 150 per Cent. and even much leſs, their own Subſcriptions were no better founded than the Fellow's in Exchange-Alley, before-mention'd: However, as the publick Funds and Credit were become involv'd in their Stock, their Excellencies the Lords Juſtices granted an Order, which was publiſh'd in the Gazette of Auguſt the 20th, notifying, that they had given expreſs Directions to bring Writs of Scire Facias againſt the Charters or Patents of the Companies following, York Buildings Company, Lutſtring Company, Engliſh Copper, Welſh Copper and Lead. Before the Lords Juſtices caus'd this Order to be publiſh'd, in Confirmation of the Proclamation againſt theſe ruinous Projects, their Excellencies ſent a Compliment to the Prince of Wales, that the Company of Engliſh Copper, of which His Royal Highneſs had been pleas'd to be choſen Governor, being illegal, they were forc'd to involve it in the ſaid Order; which Compliment His Royal Highneſs receiv'd very graciouſly, and ſent a Meſſage to the ſaid Company, deſiring them to chuſe another Governor.

It will eaſily be imagin'd, that during this Fluctuation of Stocks and Fortunes, Matters of State were left entirely to thoſe to whom they appertain'd: For inſtead of the Citizens turning Politicians, the Politicians turn'd Stockjobbers. The Court was no more crowded at Levees and Couchees; the Crowding was in and about Merchant-Taylors-Hall, where the Buſineſs of the South-Sea Company was tranſacted.

The King of Great Britain and Pruſſia at Hieren Hauſen.

In the mean time His Britannick Majeſty remain'd in good Health at Hieren-Hauſen, where His Pruſſian Majeſty arriv'd, Auguſt 18th, N. S. and ſtaid there eleven Days. About the ſame time the King of Great Britain A.D. 1720 was pleas'd to appoint Earl Stanhope, the Lord Carteret, and Sir Robert Sutton, to be his Ambaſſadors, Plenipotentiary Extraordinary at the Congreſs at Cambray; and to advance the Lord Polwarth from the Character of Envoy Extraordinary to that of Ambaſſador to the King of Denmark. On the 21ſt of Auguſt, O. S. Sir George Byng having ſeen the Evacuation of Sicily and Sardinia by the Spaniards, and the latter put in Poſſeſſion of the King of Sicily's Commiſſaries, arriv'd at Hanover in eight Days from Genoa, and His Majeſty was pleas'd to beſtow upon him the Place of Treaſurer of the Navy. The Earl of Stairs arriv'd there alſo, as did Count Sparr, Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from the King of Sweden.

Notwithſtanding King Philip's acceding to the Quadruple Alliance, there was Jealouſy conceiv'd at the extraordinary Armaments he caus'd to be made by Sea and Land, in Andalouſia: Upon which the Marquis De Grimaldo, Secretary of State at Madrid, wrote a Letter to Colonel Stanhope, His Britannick Majeſty's Miniſter, to aſſure him, that thoſe Preparations were not intended againſt Great Britain, or any Place belonging to it; and the Marquis de Louvigny, General of the Spaniſh Troops in Andalouſia, having ſtop'd ſome Cattle, which Major Elrington had bought for the Uſe of the Garriſon of Gibraltar, Colonel Stanhope upon Information of it, communicated it to the Secretary at War, and was aſſur'd by him, that the Marquis De Louvigny had no Orders for what he had done, and that he would repreſent the ſame to his Catholick Majeſty, and procure all the Satisfaction that could be deſir'd: Two Days after, that Secretary deliver'd Colonel Stanhope an Order to the General of Andalouſia, not only to ſuffer the Cattle beforementioned to paſs to Gibraltar, but alſo to permit the free Entring of all ſorts of Proviſions, with a ſtrict Order to maintain a friendly Correſpondence with the Governor for the future. The Duke of Leeds, who was then at Madrid, having deſir'd leave to wait on the King at the Eſcurial, to offer him his Service for the reeſtabliſhing of his Marine, and ſent His Majeſty a Plan upon that Subject, the King of Spain excus'd himſelf from accepting his Offer, and ſent him Word, that he would not have him give himſelf the Trouble of repairing to the Eſcurial. Notwithſtanding the Aſſurances given Colonel Stanhope, by the Marquis De Grinaldo, their Excellencies the Lords Juſtices of Great Britain, took the neceſſary Precautions for the Security of ſo important a Place as Gibraltar; and gave ſtrict Orders to all the Officers belonging to that Place, and Port-Mahon, immediately to proceed to their reſpective Poſts; and directed the Lords of the Admiralty, to cauſe a Squadron of ten or twelve Men of War forthwith to be fitted out, and to rendezvous in the Downs. The Earl of Portmore Governor of Gibralter, ſet out for Portſmouth, where Colonel Cotton, the Deputy Governor, had repair'd before, with ſeveral other Officers, in order to embark for Gibralter, as did Colonel Otway, and other Officers bound for Port-Mahon.

Proceedings againſt Mr. Lowther, Governor of Barbados.

Mention has been made of the Miſbehaviour of Mr. Robert Lowther, Governor of Barbados, for which he was now call'd to account by the Privy

A.D.1720 Privy Council in England, particularly in that Inſtance of his Injuſtice and Oppreſſion, the ſending Jonathan Blenman, Eſq; a Barriſter at Law, to Priſon, and obliging him to enter into a Recognizance of 1000 l. which was forfeited on his flying hither to complain; but it was now vacated, and all Proceedings thereupon, by an Order of Council, that if any Levy were made, it ſhould be forthwith, and without Delay, paid to him, or his Agents, in the Iſland. 'This Piece of Juſtice, ſays the Anna-liſt, was the more pleaſing, becauſe the Gentleman to whom it was done, was well known to have been remarkably zealous for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, at a Time when it was made criminal to be ſo; and was beſides Author of ſeveral ſmart Pieces on that Side; and more than once, at the Hazard of his Life, was very inſtrumental in giving a Check to the Rage and Inſolence of the Jacobite Rabble, when they were moſt mutinous and miſchievous.' The Lords Juſtices, upon a Petition of Sir Charles Cox of Southwark, Mr. Cox, and Mr. Salter, of Barbados, after examination of the Caſe, adjudg'd Mr. Lowther's Reaſon for ſuſpending Mr. Cox groundleſs, and order'd that Mr. Cox, and Mr. Salter, be reſtor'd to the Council of that Iſland. Mr. Cox was alſo intruſted with the Government there; and Mr. Frere, Nephew to the late Governor, ſent for home. On the Petition of Sir Robert Davers, Mr. John Waller, and Mr. Alleyne, their Allegations againſt Mr. Lowther were heard, and it appear'd, he had taken from the Aſſembly above 28000 l. Barbados Money, for which, and other Miſdemeanors, he was order'd to be taken into Cuſtody, and proſecuted; and about a Month after, the Lord Viſcount Irwin was appointed Governor of Barbados.

Duke of Liria in England. On the 8th of September, the Duke of Liria, Eldeſt Son to the Duke of Berwick, and a Grandee of Spain, arriv'd at London, and the next Morning made a Viſit to his Grandmother, Mrs. Godfrey, Siſter to the Duke of Marlborough, and Mother to the Duke of Berwick, by the late King James. He afterwards waited on the Duke and Dutcheſs of Marlborough, at Windſor; and five Days after had the Honour to be introduc'd to their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, at Richmond. He ſtay'd a few Days longer at London, and then ſet out for Ireland, to viſit his own Mother's Relations. His Conduct in Spain, and all other Countries, ſince that Time, with reſpect to the Britiſh Fugitives abroad, has not been anſwerable to the fair Reception he met with at the Court of England.

'Twill be obvious to all Readers, that as I had little Inclination to enter into the Hiſtory of Stockjobbing at this Time, ſo I had no room for it, and therefore contented my ſelf with a ſhort View of the South-Sea Scheme, and its Conſequences. After the Stock was ſunk to its real Value, or very near it, ſo many Hundreds, if not Thouſands, of Jobbers fell with it, that Bankruptcy became as common as empty Houſes, and thoſe that ſtood their Ground, were left in the greateſt Affliction and Confuſion; inſomuch, that at a General Court held by the Company at Salters-Hall, October the 17th, the Diſtraction and Clamour were ſo mutinous, that William Billers, Eſq; then one of the Sheriffs of London, was oblig'd A.D.1720 to tell them, If they did not immediately diſperſe, he would read the Proclamation againſt Riots. This Uproar happen'd when Mr. Euſtace Budgell, of Note ſince for the Concern he had in Dr. Tindal's Will, was Chairman, being, it ſeems, then concern'd in that Company alſo. Mr. Billers having acquainted the Government with what he had done on this Occaſion, his Conduct, as we read in the Annals, was highly applauded and approv'd.

The Diſcontents of the People, occaſion'd by the Fall of the Stocks, were too great to be cur'd by common Remedies. The Application of the Miniſters of State, and the Directors of the great Companies, conjunctly, and ſeparately, to prevent the Growth of this Evil, were ineffectual; and His Majeſty's Royal Wiſdom was the only Refuge the Sufferers had Hopes in. Expreſs after Expreſs was ſent to Hanover, to give His Majeſty Information of the preſent State of Affairs, which was ſo urgent, that the King departed from Hanover ſooner than he intended, and arriv'd at Helvoet Sluyce, on the 5th of November; but being detain'd by contrary Winds, he did not land at Margate till the 10th. The next The King returns to Day, about nine in the Evening, he came by Lambeth to St. James's Palace. The People England. every where expreſſing the greateſt Joy for His Majeſty's ſafe Return, Upon which His Majeſty receiv'd the Compliments of His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, and a numerous Appearance of Perſons of the firſt Rank. South-Sea Stock, which was 210 at His Majeſty's Arrival, fell again, upon the Prorogation of the Parliament from the 25th of November to the 8th of December, to 135: But on a Report that the Miniſtry had agreed with the Principal Directors of the South-Sea, the Bank, and Eaſt-India Company, upon a Project which would very much conduce to the Reſtoration of the publick Credit, it roſe again to about 210. But whatever the Miniſters concerted for that good End, was of little Effect, while the Managers of the South-Sea Company, did, by their Management, put every Thing of that Kind backwards. They now publiſh'd an Advertiſement in the London Gazette, That the Bonds of the South-Sea Company would be taken in Repayment of the Money on all Loans made by the ſaid Company. That the ſaid Bonds would be likewiſe taken in all future Payments on the Subſcription Receipts: And that all Perſons who were willing to make their Subſcription Capital Stock, might do the ſame, by making the remaining Payments in the Bonds of the ſaid Company. 'Which Advertiſement, ſays the Annaliſt, was 'generally look'd upon as a moſt egregious 'Piece of IMPUDENCE, it being altogether 'unreaſonable to expect, either the Borrowers 'of Four Hundred Pounds on One Hundred 'Pounds Capital Stock abſolutely transfer'd, 'or Subſcribers at Four Hundred Pounds, 'ſhould make Repayments and remaining Pay- 'ments, at a Time when South-Sea Stock was 'under Two Hundred Pounds.

The Baltick Squadron under Sir John Norris arriv'd at Orford Neſs, Nov. the 20th, all but the Monk, a 50 Gun Ship, which ſtruck on the Colſton Sand near Yarmouth, and was loſt, but moſt of her Crew were ſav'd by Boats from Colſton.

On the Day appointed, Dec. 8. the Parliament met, and great were the Expectations of the People, of ſome Relief in the Calamity of the Stocks, from what His Majeſty wou'd ſay in his Speech: But thoſe who conſider'd in what Difficulty and Perplexity the Fall of them had left all Matters of Credit, did not imagine there cou'd be a great deal offer'd to them from the Throne on this unhappy Occaſion. What relates to this Affair is as follows:

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

The King's Speech about Stocks

'I do moſt earneſtly recommend to you, that 'you conſider of the moſt effectual and ſpeedy 'Methods to reſtore the National Credit, and 'fix it upon a laſting Foundation. You will, 'I doubt not, be aſſiſted in ſo commendable 'and neceſſary a Work, by every Man that 'loves his Country, and eſpecially by the ſe-'veral Great Societies of this Kingdom. I hope 'you will, on this Occaſion, remember that all 'your Prudence, your Tempers and Reſoluti-'on, are neceſſary to find out and apply pro-'per Remedies to our Misfortunes, which will, 'if you ſucceed, ſerve to encreaſe that Repu-'tation you have ſo juſtly acquir'd; particu-'larly if you ſhall be able, notwithſtanding 'theſe Difficulties, to diſcharge a Part of the 'Publick Debt.

My Lords and Gentlemen, A.D. 1720

'I am glad to obſerve to you, that Our 'Trade does appear to have been more extended 'this Year than in the preceeding one. We have 'the moſt flouriſhing Navy of any Nation 'whatſoever to protect it. And I hope you 'will turn your Thoughts to the beſt Methods 'for the Security and Enlarging of our Com-'merce. You may depend upon my hearty 'Concurrence to all ſuch Proviſions as ſhall ap-'pear to you Neceſſary for the Good of my 'People.'

The Lords Addreſs of Thanks was ſuited to His Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech; and Mr. Pulteney made the following Motion in the Houſe of Commons.

Mr. Pulteney's Motion for an Addreſs.

'That an humble Addreſs be preſented to 'His Majeſty, to return him the Thanks of this 'Houſe for his moſt Gracious Speech from the 'Throne, to expreſs the Satisfaction of his 'Faithful Commons at the near Proſpect there 'is of Peace being eſtabliſhed throughout Eu- 'rope, by the Succeſs of His Majeſty's Endea-'vours. To acknowledge His Majeſty's great 'Goodneſs in his tender Concern for the Miſ-'fortunes of his People, occaſion'd by the un-'happy Turn of Affairs that hath ſo much af-'fected the Publick Credit of this Kingdom: 'To aſſure His Majeſty, that this Houſe will, 'at this critical Conjuncture, wherein His Ma-'jeſty's Government and the Intereſt of his 'People are ſo highly concern'd, proceed with 'all poſſible Care, Prudence and Temper, to 'inquire into the Cauſes of theſe Misfortunes, 'and apply the proper Remedies for reſtoring 'and fixing Publick Credit, upon ſuch ſolid and 'laſting Foundations as may effectually give 'Eaſe and Quiet to the Minds of His Majeſty's 'Subjects, and this Houſe will with Readineſs 'and Chearfulneſs grant the Supplies neceſſary 'for the Service of the enſuing Year, and con-'ſider in what manner the Trade and Commerce 'of the Nation may be beſt ſecur'd and exten-'ded.' Mr. Pelham ſeconded this Motion, and other Members back'd it; but Mr. Shippen offer'd a Clauſe to be added, after the Words for Reſtoring and Fixing Publick Credit; 'As far 'as is conſiſtent with the Honour of Parlia-'ments and the Intereſt of the Nation.

Objections to the Motion.

Mr. Shippen was ſeconded by Mr. William Bromley and Sir William Wyndham, who ſaid, 'It would be a Diſgrace to a Britiſh Houſe of 'Commons, to ſhew on this Occaſion leſs Vi-'gour than the Parliament at Paris then ſitting 'at Pontoiſe: That that Parliament were juſtly 'look'd upon as the Shadow of an Engliſh Par-'liament, and yet that very Parliament had, 'by their Firmneſs and Reſolution, carry'd their 'Point ſo far as to get that Perſon remov'd 'from the Adminiſtration, whom they look'd 'upon as the Author of the preſent Misfortunes 'of France.' It were to be wiſh'd, that in all Enquiries into Publick Grievances Gentlemen wou'd have more Regard to Things than to Perſons, and to the Cure of the Evil than to the Diſgrace of the Authors of it. The Lord Moleſworth ſaid in his Speech, 'It has by ſome 'been objected, that there is no Law to puniſh 'the Directors of the South-Sea Company, who 'were juſtly look'd upon as the immediate 'Authors of the preſent Misfortunes: But in 'my Opinion we ought, on this Occaſion, to 'follow

The Lord Moleſw. Speech againſt the South-Sea Directors.

A.D. 1720

'follow the Example of the ancient Romans, 'who having no Law againſt Parricide, be-'cauſe their Legiſlature ſuppos'd, no Son 'could be ſo unnaturally wicked, as to em-'brew his Hands in his Father's Blood, made 'one to puniſh ſo heinous a Crime, as ſoon 'as it happen'd to be committed, and ad-'judg'd the guilty Wretch to be thrown a-'live, ſew'd up in a Sack, into the Tyber: 'And as I look upon the Contrivers of the 'South-Sea Scheme as the Parricides of their 'Country, I ſhould be ſatisfied to ſee them 'undergo the ſame Puniſhment.' Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Mr. Grey Nevill, Mr. Pitt, and other Gentlemen, ſpoke for the above-mention'd Clauſe, and were anſwer'd by Mr. Secretary Craggs, Mr. Solicitor General, and Mr. Robert Walpole, who in this perilous Time of publick Credit, was generally look'd upon as the Perſon who by his great Capacity and Experience was the moſt likely to find out the propereſt Method for reſtoring it. This Gentleman declar'd, 'That for his own Part, 'he had never approv'd the South-Sea Scheme, 'and was ſenſible it had done a great deal 'of Miſchief: But ſince it could not be un-'done, he thought it the Duty of all good 'Men to give their helping Hand towards 'retrieving it; and that with that View he had 'already beſtow'd ſome Thoughts on a Propo-'ſal to reſtore publick Credit, which in a pro-'per time he would ſubmit to the Wiſdom of 'that Houſe.' And with him the Majority of the Aſſembly acquieſc'd: And Mr. Shippen's Clauſe being put to the Queſtion, it was carri'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 261 Voices againſt 103: But Mr. Milner's Motion for inſerting theſe Words in the Addreſs, And for puniſhing the Authors, was carri'd in the Affirmative, without dividing.

Mr. Robert Walpole never approv'd the South-Sea Scheme

In the Debate about the Inquiry into the South-Sea Affair, December the 12th, it was carry'd, that the Company ſhould be order'd to lay an Account of their Proceedings before the Houſe of Commons, which was done the 15th of December; and after the Reading of their Paper, which laſted ſeveral Hours, Mr. Sloper, Mr. Plummer, Mr. Milner, Sir Richard Steele, and Sir Wilfred Lawſon, made ſeveral Exceptions to the Conduct of the South-Sea Directors, particularly to their lending out vaſt Sums of Money belonging to the Company, without being duly authoriz'd for that Purpoſe; and they were order'd to produce what Authorities and Powers they had for ſo doing.

South-Sea Papers laid before the Houſe.

There was a Debate, December the 19th, about the Number of Forces to be continu'd in Great Britain; Mr. Shippen repreſented that a General Peace being ſo near a Concluſion, part of the Land Forces might be ſpar'd. He was back'd by Sir William Wyndham and Mr. Hungerford, but was oppos'd by Mr. Robert Walpole, Mr. Horatio Walpole, Mr. Smith, and other Gentlemen, who ſhew'd, 'That the Number of our Forces was ſo 'moderate, that it could hardly be leſſen'd, 'even although a General Peace was conclu-'ded, without expoſing the Nation either to 'foreign Inſults, or domeſtick Factions; and 'therefore it was highly imprudent to make 'any Reduction in the Army before the 'Concluſion of the Peace. That on the other 'hand the Sum that might be ſav'd by diſ-'banding 3 or 4000 Men, was very inconſi-'derable, and ought not to come in Compe-'tition with the Advantage of being in a 'Poſture of Defence: Since nothing contri-'butes more to the publick Credit of a free 'Nation, than the being in a Condition not 'to fear any thing either at Home, or Abroad.' Theſe Reaſons had ſo much Weight, that Mr. Shippen's Motion paſt in the Negative without dividing. Mr. Sloper making a Speech, wherein he ſhew'd that the preſent Calamity was mainly owing to the vile Arts of Stock-jobbers, it was reſolv'd, That nothing can tend more to the Eſtabliſhment of publick Credit, than the preventing the INFAMOUS Practice of Stockjobbing. After which Mr. Robert Walpole acquainted the Houſe, 'That 'as he had hinted ſome Days before, he had 'ſpent ſome Time upon a Scheme for reſtoring 'publick Credit: But as the Execution 'of all depended upon a Poſition, which had 'been laid as a Fundamental, he thought it 'proper before he open'd the ſaid Scheme, to 'be inform'd, whether he might rely upon 'that main Foundation, viz. Whether the 'Subſcription of publick Debts and Incum-'brances, Money Subſcription, and other Con-'tracts, made in the South-Sea Company, 'ſhould remain in the preſent State?' Which occaſion'd a Debate, and was carri'd in the Affirmative; Yea's 259, No's 117. On the 21ſt of December Mr. Robert Walpole laid his Scheme before the Houſe; which was in Subſtance, to ingraft nine Millions of South-Sea Stock into the Bank of England, and the like Sum into the Eaſt-India Company, upon the Conditions to be ſpecify'd hereafter; and a Committee was impower'd to receive Propoſals from the Bank, the South-Sea Company, and Eaſt-India Company, towards reſtoring publick Credit. Mr. Shippen mov'd, That the Directors of the South-Sea Company do lay before the Houſe, the Calculations and Inducements, on which they took in the Third and Fourth Money Subſcriptions, at a Thouſand per Cent. and alſo the Scheme or Calculation, or other Inducements, upon which they grounded the Reſolutions of making a Dividend of 30 per Cent. at Chriſtmas, and of no leſs than 50 per Cent. per Annum. for twelve Years after. This was probing the Sore, and going to the bottom of the Wound. The laſt Scheme was, as Mr. Shippen obſerv'd, the moſt villainous Contrivance, whereby they enſnar'd unwary People, and impos'd on the Underſtanding of all ſuch as depended on the Wiſdom and Integrity of the Directors; and occaſion'd the Ruin of many Thouſands of Families. Mr. Shippen was ſeconded by Sir William Wyndham; and the Motion was too good to meet with Oppoſition. He then mov'd again; and it was order'd, That the Sub-Governor, and Deputy-Governor, of the ſaid Company, do lay before the Houſe, a Liſt of the Directors of the ſaid Company, together with the Names of the Treaſurer, Secretary, and Accomptants of the ſaid Company, with the Minutes of the Committee of Treaſury of the ſaid Company, ſince the 25th of December, 1719: All which boded not well to the Perſons therein concern'd.

Mr. Robert Walpole's Scheme.

Mr. Shippen's good Motion carri'd.

Tho' the Plainneſs of Mr. Walpole's Scheme recommended it above all other Schemes, and enough were offer'd from ſeveral Hands at that Time, yet it met with ſome Oppoſition in the General Courts of the Great Commu-

Speeches againſt the Forces.

And for them.

A.D. 1720 munities, who met to give Powers to their Directors to bring this Matter to Perfection; and agreed that ſuch Powers ſhould be given.

Earl of Ilay approves Mr. Walpole's Scheme.

At a General Court of the South-Sea Company, the Earl of Ilay ſpoke in Commendation of the Scheme, which his Lordſhip ſaid, would redound to the Honour of the Author. But in order to clog the Wheels, in the forwarding of this Matter in that Court, Sir George Caſwall, Mr. Ferdinando Nunez, Mr. Pitt, Mr. James Colebrook, Sir Henry Bateman, Mr. Edward Seamor, and Mr. Humphrey Thayes, demanded a Ballot, which was dropt afterwards, and the Queſtion carri'd for impowering the Directors to make a Propoſal to the honourable Houſe of Commons; which Queſtion was alſo carri'd in the other General Courts. When it was in Debate in the Eaſt-India Company Court, Sir Matthew Decker ſpoke with a true publick Spirit, to the great Reproach of ſuch as ſet their Hearts entirely on Revenge, to the Deſtruction of the South-Sea Directors, and ſeem'd careleſs in the Conſideration of the main Point, the reſtoring Credit. At firſt truly, (ſaid Sir Matthew) I did not like this Propoſal; but when I ſaw the Ruin that was ſpread over our Country; when I conſider'd the Diſtreſſes of the Poor People; when the Nation and the Parliament call'd upon us to ſupport the publick Credit; I thought it would become no Man to be againſt it. I would, I declare, part with all my Property in the Company, and I think I have as much as any body here: Nay, with all I have, to a bare neceſſary Subſiſtence, to deliver the Kingdom from the Miſeries that have befallen it. Inſtead of theſe juſt and generous Sentiments, the pretended Cato publiſh'd a virulent Paper, call'd, A Supplement to the London Journal, on the very Day of the Meeting of the General Court of the Eaſt-India Company; and as if he was a better Judge of the Intereſt of that Company, and had it more at Heart, than Sir Matthew Decker, who probably had the Value of ſeveral Qualifications for a Shire Knight in it, he labours to ſet the Proprietors againſt coming into this Scheme; and them, and the whole Nation, againſt the late Managers of the South-Sea Stock, by declaiming thus: What Briton, bleſt with any Senſe of Virtue, or with common Senſe! What Engliſhman! animated with a publick Spirit, or with any Spirit, but muſt burn with Rage and Shame, to behold the Nobles and Gentry of a Great Kingdom, Men of Magnanimity, Men of Breeding, Men of Underſtanding and of Letters, to ſee ſuch Men bowing down, like Joſeph's Sheaves, before the Face of a dirty Stockjobber, and receiving Laws from Inſects bred behind Counters; and the Diciſion of their Fortunes from Hands ſtill dirty with ſweeping Shops. This is an Inſult on Trade and Induſtry it ſelf, as well as Stockjobbing, and ſerv'd only to touch the Sore of the Sufferers, and make them wince, without bringing the leaſt Relief to their Sufferings.

Cato againſt it.

And againſt Tradeſmen.

Sir Matthew Decker's generous Speech

When the Parliament met after Chriſtmas, and went into a Grand Committee to take into further Conſideration the preſent State of publick Credit, Sir Joſeph Jekyll repreſented in his Speech, that before they proceeded any further, they ought to ſecure the Perſons and Eſtates of thoſe they had Reaſon to look upon as the Authors of the publick Misfortunes; and therefore he mov'd, that Leave be given to bring in a Bill to reſtrain the Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, Directors, Treaſurer, Under-Treaſurer, Caſhier, Secretary and Accomptants, of the South-Sea Company, from going out of this Kingdom, for the Space of one Year, and until the End of the next Seſſion of Parliament, and for diſcovering their Eſtates and Effects, and for preventing the tranſporting and alienating the ſame. He was ſeconded by Mr. Horatio Walpole, who gave ſome Inſtances, both of the unfair Methods by which the South-Sea Directors and their Officers had got immenſe Riches, and of their Pride and Inſolence, inſeperable from upſtart Fortunes. Sir Joſeph Jekyll's Motion was carri'd Nemine Contradicente; and it was order'd, That the Maſter of the Rolls, Mr. Horatio Walpole, Mr. Serjeant Pengelly, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Jefferies, and Mr. Cowper, do prepare and bring in the ſaid Bill. Mr. Shippen having ſaid, that in his Opinion there were ſome Men in Great Stations, whom in Time he would not be afraid to name, who were no leſs guilty than the Directors, Mr. Secretary Craggs ſaid, he was ready to give Satisfaction to any Man that ſhould queſtion him either in that Houſe or out of it. This raſh Saying gave no ſmall Offence: And the Lord Moleſworth Spoke thus: 'I have had the Honour to 'have been a Member of this Houſe upwards 'of Thirty Years, and never before now 'knew any was bold enough to challenge 'the whole Houſe of Commons, and all Eng-'land beſides: For my Part, though paſt 'Sixty, I will anſwer whatever he has to 'ſay, within the Houſe; and hope there are 'young Members enough, that will not be 'afraid to look Mr. Secretary in the Face, 'out of the Houſe.' Secretary Craggs ſeeing the Houſe in a great Ferment, roſe again, and modeſtly ſaid, He meant clearing his Conduct. Upon which it went no further: And the Houſe debated in what manner they ſhould proceed in the intended Inquiry; whether in a grand or ſelect Committee; and the latter being reſolv'd, the following Members were choſen to be of it, by Ballot.

On the 5th of January, 1721, it was reſolv'd, by a Majority of 173 Voices againſt 130, 'That an Ingraftment of Part of the 'Capital of the South-Sea Company, into 'the Capitals of the Bank of England, and 'the Eaſt-India Company, purſuant to the 'ſeveral

Mr. R. Walpole's Scheme approv'd by Parliament.

A.D 1721 'several Propoſals of the ſaid Companies, 'will contribute very much to the reſtoring 'and eſtabliſhing publick Credit.' On the 19th of January, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, from the Committee of Secrecy, made a Motion, That Sir Robert Chaplin, Sir Theodore Janſſen, Francis Eyles, Eſq; and Jacob Sawbridge, Eſq; four of the Directors of the South-Sea Company, might attend the ſaid Committee, and be examin'd in the moſt ſolemn manner: Which was order'd accordingly. The Houſe of Peers being upon the State of the Nation, with reſpect to publick Credit, the Lords in the Miniſtry were the firſt that complain'd of the Miſmanagement of the South-Sea Directors; and Earl Stanhope ſaid, The Eſtates of the Criminals, whether Directors or not Directors, ought to be confiſcated, to make good the publick Loſſes. The Lord Carteret ſpoke to the ſame Effect; ſo did the Earl of Sunderland, who own'd, indeed, 'That he 'had been for the South-Sea Scheme, becauſe 'he thought it calculated for the Advantage 'of the Nation, in order to leſſen the pub-'lick Debt, and, in particular, to take off 'the heavy Incumbrances of long Annuities; 'and no Man could imagine that ſo good a 'Deſign would have been ſo perverted in 'the Execution: But, in his Opinion, no 'Act of Parliament had ever been ſo much 'abus'd as the South-Sea Act, and therefore 'he would go as far as any body to puniſh 'the Offenders.' The Duke of Wharton, the Lord North and Grey, and the Earl of Abingdon, urg'd the ill Effects of the South-Sea Project, which Biſhop Atterbury compar'd to the Peſtilence, then raging in South-France. Earl Cowper blam'd thoſe 'who by the Act of Par-'liament were appointed to overlook and 'check the South-Sea Directors, and who, in 'Diſcharge of that Truſt, ought to have pre-'vented their jumping from a Subſcription 'of 400 to a 1000, which was the main 'Cauſe of the Misfortunes that enſu'd.' The Earl of Sunderland finding himſelf, and the other Lords of the Treaſury, thus attack'd, ſpoke in his own, and their Vindication, and ſaid, 'That by the South-Sea Act they were 'directed to appoint ſuch Perſons as they 'ſhould think fit, to be Managers and Dire-'ctors on the part of the Treaſury, for the 'due Execution of the ſaid Act: That as 'they had Reaſon to look upon thoſe Per-'ſons who had the principal Share in fram-'ing this Scheme, as the moſt able and proper 'to execute it, they had accordingly ap-'pointed ſome of the South-Sea Directors to 'be Managers and Directors for the Treaſury, 'concluding, that in this they had follow'd 'former Precedents.' And the Queſtion being put, after a long and warm Debate, That the Commiſſion granted by the Lords Commiſſioners of His Majeſty's Treaſury, to three of the Directors of the South-Sea Company, was according to former Precedents, and legal, it paſt in the Affirmative; Yea's 63 Voices, No's 28. The Lord Harcourt's giving his Opinion in the Affirmative, had great Weight with many of the noble Members.

The Lords in the Miniſtry firſt complain of the S. S. Management.

Earl Cowper ſpeaks againſt the Lords of the Treaſury.

They are vindicated by the Earl of Sunderland.

On the 12th of January, the Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, about 24 of the Directors, Mr. Robert Knight Treaſurer, Mr. Surman his Deputy, and ſome other inferior Officers, attended the Houſe of Lords, and were examin'd; after which their Lordſhips reſolv'd, That the Sub-Governor and Directors of the South-Sea Company had prevaricated with them, in giving falſe Repreſentations of ſeveral Matters of Fact: That by lending Money on Stocks and Subſcriptions, they were guilty of a notorious Breach of Truſt, and that they ought to make good the Loſſes which the Company had ſuſtain'd by their fraudulent Management. Some Lords were willing not to involve all the Directors in this Cenſure, and to diſtinguiſh the innocent from the guilty: But they were told, that the whole Court of Directors were guilty, either in Acting or Aſſenting. If there was one amongſt them, who was ſo far from Aſſenting, that he always proteſted and exclaim'd againſt it, the Caſe as it was ſaid of Mr. W. T. doubtleſs that auguſt Aſſembly had not full Information of that favourable Circumſtance; for we find his Name in the Act for reſtraining the Sub-Governor, &c. from going out of the Kingdom, and tranſporting or alienating their Effects. As to Sir John Fellows, the Sub-Governor, I had it related to me, by the Perſon whom it concerns, who having a Sum of 2 or 3000 l. by him to diſpoſe of, and being Sir John's Neighbour, apply'd to him for Advice, how to do it to the moſt Advantage; propoſing South-Sea Stock, then about 500, and riſing. The Sub-Governor adviſ'd him by all means not to meddle with it, for 'twas all Gaming; and had he foreſeen it would have come to that, he would have had nothing to do with it.

All the Directors not alike guilty.

The Lords order'd a Bill to be brought in, To diſable the Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, and Directors of the South-Sea Company, to enjoy any Office, Place, or Employment, in the ſaid Company, the Eaſt-India Company, or Bank of England; and for voting upon Elections in the ſaid Company. The Sub-Governor, &c. petition'd their Lordſhips to be heard by their Council againſt this Bill; but this Petition was rejected, and the Bill paſt. When Mr. Knight the Treaſurer attended the laſt time at the Houſe of Lords, a noble Peer ſpoke to the Earl of Sunderland, that a Motion might be made to ſecure him immediately; for it was ſtrongly ſurmis'd that he would ſoon make off. The Earl agreed in that Surmiſe, but ſaid, Earl Cowper ſhould be conſulted before any ſuch Motion was made, for without his joining in with it, there was no Likelihood of its paſſing; and then Knight would be alarm'd to no Purpoſe. The other Lord apply'd to Earl Cowper, who ſeem'd very averſe to the taking any ſuch Step, till upon Knight's further Examination, the Houſe ſhould come to a Reſolution, particularly with Relation to him: Upon which the Motion drop'd; and it was ſuſpected, that the Earl of Sunderland knowing Earl Cowper's Sentiments, refer'd that other Peer to him, on purpoſe to prevent the Motion's being made then; and a Day or two after Knight abſented himſelf from his Houſe, embark'd on Monday Morning, January the 23d, in the River, on board a Veſſel, that carri'd him the ſame Evening to Calais. By what has been here ſaid, and much more, that every one knows, who liv'd at that Time, 'tis plain, Knight had no Quarter to expect, and every Thing to fear, from the publick Reſentment, he having been

A.D. 1721 been in the deepeſt of this dark Deſign, and the prime Mover in the whole Machine. His Levee, as has been already hinted, being adorn'd ſome Weeks before, with Stars and Garters, the Street where he liv'd, and the Avenues to it, ſo crowded with Coaches, that Gold had been given to gain Paſſage to his Houſe. In the Letter he left for Mr. Surman, there are a notorious Truth and Falſhood: The Falſhood is, I have taken with me but little more than a Sufficiency to maintain my ſelf. The Truth is, It would have been impoſſible for me to have avoided the Appearance and Charge of Perjury. Upon his running away, the Houſe of Commons voted two Addreſſes to His Majeſty, the one for apprehending him, the other for ſtopping the Ports, to prevent his getting off: But he was out of Reach. General Roſs, and other Members of the ſecret Committee, acquainted the Houſe, 'That they had already diſcover'd a 'Train of the deepeſt Villany and Fraud, 'that Hell ever contriv'd, to ruin a Nation; 'and thought it highly neceſſary to ſecure the 'Perſons of ſome of the Directors, and Prin-'cipal South-Sea Officers, and to ſeize their 'Papers.' Upon which it was order'd, that Mr. Wortley, Mr. Hutcheſon, and Mr. Clayton, go immediatly and ſecure the Books and Papers of Mr. Robert Knight, Mr. Robert Surman, and Mr. John Grigsby; and Mr. Surman and Mr. Grigsby be taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe: That Mr. Roſs and Mr. Sloper go immediately and ſecure all ſuch Books and Papers, belonging to Elias Turner, Sir George Caſwel, and Company, as they ſhall think neceſſary to be ſecur'd: That Sir John Blunt, Baronet, Sir John Lambert, Baronet, two of the Directors, Sir John Fellows, Baronet, Sub-Governor of the South-Sea Company, be taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. Mr. Sawbridge and Sir Theodore Janſſen being come into the Houſe, a Motion was ſeverally made, That they were guilty of a notorious Breach of Truſt, as Directors of the South-Sea Company, and thereby occaſion'd very great Loſs to great Numbers of His Majeſty's Subjects, and had highly prejudic'd the publick Credit; which was carri'd in the Affirmative, Nemine Contradicente, after they had been ſeverally heard in their Places; and they were both expell'd the Houſe, and taken into Cuſtody; as were alſo Sir Robert Chaplin, and Francis Eyles, Eſq; two other Directors of the South-Sea Company, and Members of Parliament.

Sir R. Chaplain, Mr. F. Eyles, Sir Theodore Janſſen, and Mr. Sawbridge expell'd, and taken into Cuſtody.

The ſame Evening His Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to be iſſued out, with a Reward of 2000 l. for Apprehending and ſecuring Mr. Robert Knight. And in that Council John Aiſlabie, Eſq; Chancellor of His Majeſty's Exchequer, reſign'd his Place, as alſo that of one of the Lords of the Treaſury. Orders were given for removing all South-Sea Directors from any Place they had in the Government; Mr. Edmondſon was accordingly removed from that of Purſer to the Royal Anne, a Firſt Rate Man of War, and was ſucceeded therein by Mr. Salter; Francis Hawes, Eſq; Receiver General of His Majeſty's Cuſtoms; Sir Harcourt Maſters Receiver General of the City of London; Mr. Reynolds, Commiſſioner of the Victualling-Office; Mr. Houlditch, Treaſurer of the Stamp-Office; Arthur Ingram, Eſq; Treaſurer of the Duty on Salt; were all remov'd from their Employments. Five of the South-Sea Directors, Sir William Chapman, Bart. Robert Cheſter, Eſq; Edward Gibbon, Eſq; Francis Hawes, Eſq; and Richard Houlditch, Eſq; were ordered by the Houſe of Peers, on the Motion of Earl Stanhope, to be taken into Cuſtody of the Uſher of the Black-Rod. South-Sea Directors turn'd out of Places.

On the 26th of January the Lords, in a Grand Committee, Examin'd ſeveral of the S.S. Directors, particularly Mr. Aſtel and Sir Harcourt Maſters, who made very ingenuous and large Diſcoveries, and nam'd ſeveral Perſons, both in the Adminiſtration and the Houſe of Commons, to whom large Sums in South-Sea Stock had been given for procuring the Paſſing of the South-Sea Act. After this Examination, which laſted above four Hours, Earl Stanhope made a Motion, ſeconded by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend and Earl Cowper, and it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, 'That the Tak-'ing of Stock, the Transferring of Stock belonging 'to the South-Sea Company, or giving Credit for 'the ſame, without a valuable conſideration actu-'ally paid, or ſufficiently ſecur'd, or the Pur-'chaſing Stock by any Director or Agent of the 'South-Sea Company for the Uſe or Benefit of 'any Perſon in the Adminiſtration, or any 'Member of either Houſe of Parliament, du-'ring ſuch time as the Bill relating to the 'South-Sea Company was depending laſt Year 'in

A.D.1721 ‘ in Parliament, was a notorious and dangerous ‘ Corruption.’ Which Reſolution was order’d to be Printed and Publiſhed. A.D.1721

On the 31ſt of January, Samuel Tuffnel Eſq; and Colonel Monroe, complain’d to the Houſe of Commons of a ſcandalous Liſt which was handed about, and in which their Names were inſerted, ſuppos’d to be of the Members of that Houſe who receiv’d South-Sea Stock for giving their Votes for that Bill? Of which falſe Imputation they offer’d to clear themſelves. But were given to underſtand, That if a Motion were made and ſeconded for Examining into that Affair, a Day might be appointed for it. But no ſuch Motion being made that Matter dropt. In theſe Enquiries there was no Party nor Denomination free from the general Charge of Fraud and Corruption in the Management of South-Sea Stock, Whigs and Tories were alike involved in it; nay, it was well known that ſome of the Leaders among the latter were as deep in the Loſs, if not in the Gain, as any among the Whigs. It was reported, that ſome of the Chief Managers of the South-Sea Company, in order to ſecure the paſſing of their Bill, the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, did give a very buſy puſhing Tory, or rather Jacobite, a Tool of the late Lord Bolingbroke, a large Sum in Stock, to engage ſeveral Tory Members to give their Votes for the Bill; and that he drew them into the Scheme with hopes of dividing the Spoil, wherein ſome very ſtaunch Weſt Saxons ventur’d ſo much, that their landed Intereſt ſuffer’d extreamly; though the Perſon who was put upon them, to engage them for the Bill, ſo much better’d his Money Intereſt, that he was rais’d to a chief Seat in the Magiſtracy, from a Birth among the loweſt Dregs of the People.

Whigs and Tories alike concern’d in the S. S. Stock.

The Reſolution of the Houſe of Peers, January the 31. lets us very much into the Diſcoveries their Lordſhips made, by their Examinations of the South-Sea Directors, and others.

Reſolv’d, ‘ That the Directors of the South-Sea Company having order’d great Quan- ‘ tities of their Stock to be bought for the ‘ Service of the ſaid Company, when Stock ‘ was at a very high Price; and on Pretence ‘ of keeping up the Price of the Stock, and ‘ at the ſame time ſeveral of the Directors ‘ and other Officers belonging to the ſaid ‘ Company, having in a clandeſtine manner ‘ ſold their own Stocks to the Company, ‘ ſuch Directors and Officers are thereby guil- ‘ ty of a notorious Fraud, and Breach of ‘ Truſt; and their ſo doing, was one great ‘ Cauſe of the unhappy Turn of Affairs, ‘ that has ſo much affected publick Credit.’

Vote of the Lords concerning the S. S. Management.

In the Month of January, the Earl of Sutherland, and Sir George Byng, were ſworn of the Privy Council; and the Earl of Stairs was appointed Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal of Scotland, in the room of the Marquis of Annandale, deceas’d.

Mr. Stillingfleet, Mr. Robinſon, Mr. White, Mr. Gardiner, and Mr. Woolley, were elected Fellows of New-College in Oxford, and were all Gentlemen well affected to His Majeſty’s Perſon and Government. On the 14th of January, His Majeſty was pleas’d to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Captain George Walton, Commander of the Canterbury, in Conſideration of his eminent Services in the Mediterranean. He had before given ſignal Proofs of his Bravery on many Occaſions, and in particular was almoſt the only Captain who diſcharg’d his Duty faithfully under Admiral Bembow, in the Weſt-Indies. New S. S. Directors.

On the 3d of February Mr. Robert Walpole preſented to the Houſe of Commons the Bill for Ingrafting Part of the Capital Stock of the South-Sea Company, into the Stocks of the Bank of England, and the Eaſt-India Company, which was read the firſt time, and order’d a ſecond Reading.

The next Day the Houſe of Peers deſign’d to have Examin’d Sir John Blunt, the chief Proſecutor of the South-Sea Scheme, who, from a petty Scrivener in Birching-Lane, where part of his Buſineſs was to write Letters for a Groat or Six-pence, had heap’d together above 200000 l. by very unwarrantable Means. Inſtead of making Diſcoveries he would not ſo much as be ſworn to anſwer ſuch Interrogatories as ſhould be put to him, alledging, that he had already been examin’d before the ſecret Committee of the Houſe of Commons, and to ſuch Extent of Affairs, that unleſs he had a Copy of the former Examination, he could not remember every

A.D.1721 Particular; and as no Man is oblig'd to accuſe himſelf, he would not run the Hazard of prevaricating. Their Lordſhips were not a little ſurpriz'd at this extraordinary Proceeding; but on a Surmiſe that Sir John Blunt might thereby deſign to break the Harmony that had hitherto been preſerv'd in this nice Affair, between the two Houſes, they thought fit not to ſhew immediately their Indignation againſt his Obſtinacy.

In the Debate which this Incident occaſion'd, a noble Duke made uſe of ſome Expreſſions againſt the Miniſtry, which Earl Stanhope highly reſented, particularly the Example of Sejanus, who had made a Diviſion in the Imperial Family, and render'd the Reign of the Emperor odious to the Romans. Earl Stanhope undertook to vindicate his Colleagues, and ſpoke with ſo much Vehemence, that finding himſelf taken ſuddenly with a violent Head-ach, he went home, and was cupp'd, which gave him a little Eaſe; the next Morning he was let Blood, and continu'd pretty well, till about ſix a-Clock in the Evening, when he fell into a Drowſineſs, and then into a Suffocation, in which he inſtantly expir'd. The Annaliſt ſays, 'The News of his Death 'being brought to the King, His Majeſty 'was ſo ſenſibly touch'd with it, that he 'could not eat his Supper, and retir'd for 'two Hours into his Cloſet to lament the 'Loſs of a Miniſter, of whoſe Service His 'Majeſty had ſo great Need, at this Criti-'cal Juncture.' Two Days after, February the 7th, Mr. Secretary Craggs was taken ill of the Small-Pox, a Diſtemper ſufficient to kill a Man, without adding the Apprehenſion he was in, of his Father's and his being involv'd in the odious Affair of the South-Sea. He dy'd of that Diſeaſe the Ninth Day, February the 16th, about four a-Clock in the Afternoon, at the very time the Report of the ſecret Committee was reading in the Houſe of Commons. And thus in the Space of eleven Days, England loſt two Secretaries of State: And the Annaliſt aſcribes it to the Effects of a merry Meeting the Day before Earl Stanhope fell ill; in which 'twas ſaid there was too great Uſe made of Burgundy, Champagne, and Tockay Wines; and that two other Lords, who were of the Company, were alſo taken ill, and had a very narrow Eſcape; which, if true, might well juſtify his Reflection, This ought to be a ſtanding Caution againſt Exceſſes of that Nature. But the merry Meeting is little conſiſtent with the doleful Apprehenſions the Enemies of thoſe great Men repreſent them to be in, of what wou'd befall them on the Diſcoveries made by the ſecret Committee.

Dies.

Mr. Secretary Craggs's Death.

A Motion was made in the Houſe of Commons, February the 13th, which ſhew'd that the very great Rage of ſome Perſons againſt the Managers of the late South-Sea Scheme, was not particular againſt the Offenders of that Company, but againſt the Trade Intereſt in general: For one of the Gentlemen who was of the Side that aſſum'd the Name of the Country Party, mov'd for excluding the Directors not of the South-Sea only, but of the Bank of England, and Eaſt-India Company, from being Members of any Parliament for the future. And notwithſtanding the apparent Infirmities of this Motion, it was carri'd in the Negative only by a Majority of 47, Yea's 164, No's 211. This Attempt takes off very much from the Veneration one had before for the Perſons that appear'd moſt zealous for reſtoring publick Credit, by ruining thoſe that had ruin'd it. There are many Things to be excepted againſt in the Courſe of the Proceedings with Reference to the late odious South-Sea Scheme, which loſt all their Force for want of the major Vote; and therefore muſt be left to every Reader's Conjecture. A.D.1721

A Motion againſt the Directors of the Bank and Eaſt-India Company ſitting in Parliament.

The Report of the ſecret Committee was read by Mr. Broderick, the Chairman, Thurſday the 16th of February, and was order'd to be taken into Conſideration the next Saturday. We read in the Annals,

'It imports in particular, that the follow-'ing Parcels of South-Sea Stock, were taken 'for ſeveral Perſons.'

For the latter's two Nieces. ——	10000 l.

I copy the Annals, the Ground we tread upon being very treacherous.

On the 18th of February, the Houſe of Commons, taking into Conſideration the Report of the ſecret Committee, came to ſeveral Reſolutions.

Reſolutions againſt the S. S. Management.

I. Againſt lending out the Company's Money, as upon Stock and Subſcriptions, without other Security.

II. Againſt ſelling or diſpoſing of Stock or Subſcriptions, transferr'd or depoſited, as Security for Money lent.

III. Againſt taking in or holding Stock for the Benefit of any Member of Parliament, or Perſon in the Adminiſtration, while the South-Sea Bill was depending.

IV. Againſt the Directors ſelling their own Stock at high Prices, at the ſame time that they gave Orders for buying Stock on Account of the Company.

V. Againſt declaring the Dividend of 30 per Cent. at Chriſtmas, and 50 per Cent. for twelve Years after; an infamous Contrivance to give His Majeſty's Subjects falſe Notions of the Value of the Stock.

VI. Againſt the ſelling the South-Sea Stock by Subſcriptions at a high Price above the intrinſick Value, &c.

Upon all which, and other Reſolutions, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, for the Relief of the unhappy Sufferers in the South-Sea Company, and that Mr. Broderick, Mr. Pulteney, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord Moleſworth, Mr. Attorney General, Maſter of the Rolls, Mr. Ward, Mr. Smith,

A.D. 1721 Smith, Mr. Horatio Walpole, Mr. Lowndes, Mr. Roſs, Lord Barrington, Mr. Serjeant Pengelly, Mr. Solicitor General, Mr. Jeffries, and Mr. Talbot, do prepare and bring it in.

On the 25th of February Mr. Broderick read the Report of the Committee of Secrecy, relating to great Quantities of Stock and Subſcriptions, which appear'd to have been taken in for Mr. Aiſlabie, late Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Charles Stanhope, Eſq; one of the Secretaries of the Treaſury, and both Members of the Houſe of Commons, who inſiſted on their Innocence, and preſt that a ſhort Day might be appointed to examine that Matter, that they might have an Opportunity to clear themſelves: Accordingly, Tueſday, the laſt Day of February, was appointed for that Purpoſe: And it was order'd, That Mr. Charles Joye, Mr. Edward Gibbon, Mr. Robert Cheſter, Mr. Richard Houlditch, Sir John Blunt, Baronet, Mr. Robert Surman, Mr. Jacob Sawbridge, Mr. Elias Turner, Mr. Henry Blunt, Mr. Daniel Watkins, Mr. Robinſon Knight, Mr. Richard Fenton, Mr. John Maddy, Mr. John Mount, ſhould attend the Houſe that Day. When ſeveral of them were examin'd relating to the Charge againſt Mr. Charles Stanhope, which conſiſted of two Articles; Firſt, That 10000*l.* South-Sea Stock was taken in for his Benefit by Mr. Knight, without any valuable Conſideration; and that the Difference ariſing by the advanc'd Price thereof, was paid him out of the Caſh of the South-Sea Company. Secondly, That Turner and Company had bought 50000*l.* Stock at a low Price of the South-Sea Company, in the Name, and for the Benefit, of Mr. Stanhope, the Difference of the advanc'd Price whereof amounting to 250000*l.* had been paid to the ſaid Charles Stanhope, Eſq; by Sir George Caſwell and Company. But upon Re-examination of the Perſons whom the ſecret Committee had examin'd, ſome of them rather weaken'd than corroborated their former Depoſitions. Sir John Blunt ſaid, Mr. Knight ſhew'd him a Letter, which he told him, was ſign'd by Mr. Stanhope, deſiring him to take 10000*l.* Stock for him; but he knew not whether that Letter was genuine, nor what was become of it; and his Evidence was thought by many to want every Circumſtance of legal Proof. As to the 50000*l.* Stock, transfer'd to the Sword-Blade Company, in Mr. Stanhope's Name, Mr. Sawbridge and Mr. Turner own'd, they had made Uſe of Mr. Stanhope's Name, without his Privity or Conſent. Mr. Stanhope being heard in his Place, ſaid, that for ſome Years paſt, he had lodg'd all the Money he was Maſter of, in Mr. Knight's Hands, and whatever Stock Mr. Knight had taken in for him, he had paid a valuable Conſideration for it: And as to the 50000*l.* Stock, he could not anſwer for what had been done without his Conſent. And when the Queſtion was put as to his being concern'd in the manner the two Articles againſt him repreſented, it was carry'd in the Negative, by three Voices, 180 againſt 177: Of theſe three Voices, Mr. P——, Member for B——— in the County of S———, was one; and it was the more remarkable, A.D. 1721 becauſe that Gentleman was well known to be of a Party that had always been oppoſite to the Adminiſtration whenever it was in Whig Hands, and he very much offended them by this Vote.

Mr. Charles Stanhope accus'd.

About the ſame time the Lords examin'd Mr. Grigsby, Accomptant General of the South-Sea Company; and order'd Mr. Waller, Son in-Law to Mr. Aiſlabie, into the Cuſtody of the Uſher of the Black Rod. (I now copy the Annals.) 'The ſame Day 'their Lordſhips examin'd alſo John Bar- John Barber, the Printer, examin'd. 'ber, a Printer, a private Agent of ſome 'late leading Directors, who was ſhrewdly 'ſuſpected of having been employ'd in deal-'ing out South-Sea Stock to ſome Members, 'while the South-Sea Propoſals and the Bill 'thereupon, were depending.'

On the 28th of February their Lordſhips committed Earl Coningsby to the Tower, for being deficient in Proof to a Charge he brought againſt Mr. Witherſton, High Sheriff of the County of Hereford, for Diſaffection to His Majeſty's Perſon and Government; the contrary of which was made appear, by three Addreſſes to the King in his Behalf: One from the Biſhop, Dean, and Prebendaries of the Cathedral Church of Hereford: Another from the Mayor, Aldermen, and Chief Citizens of the City of Hereford: And a Third, from the Repreſentatives in Parliament for the County and City of Hereford, and Boroughs within the ſame. Earl Coningsby ſent to the Tower.

The Conduct of the Czar and his Miniſters continu'd to give Jealouſy to the Court of Great Britain, and the following Declaration, ſign'd by the Czar, and publiſh'd in the Holland Prints, ſhew they miſt no Opportunity to foment Sedition, and raiſe Trouble in England.

Petersburgh, January 29th, $17\frac{1}{2}\frac{2}{T}$.

'It is notorious in what an unjuſt and in-'jurious manner our Reſident was ſent Czar's Declaration to foment Sedition in England. 'away from the Court of England; which 'having done us a great and ſenſible Wrong, 'ought naturally to have engag'd us to uſe 'Repriſals, according to what is practis'd 'every where elſe. But as we perceive that 'all this is done without any Regard to the 'Intereſt of England, and only in favour 'of the Hanoverian Intereſt; for which the 'Miniſters of Great Britain not only neg-'lect the Friendſhip of Foreign Powers, but 'do not even ſpare their own Country, 'which more nearly, and more ſenſibly, con-'cern them; we were unwilling that the 'Engliſh Nation which has no Share in that 'Piece of Injuſtice, ſhould ſuffer for it; and 'therefore we grant to them all manner of 'Security and free Liberty to trade in all 'our Dominions.'

This Paper was deliver'd to the Engliſh Factory at Petersburgh, and was maliciouſly levell'd againſt the late Earl Stanhope, who with a true Britiſh Spirit had vindicated the Dignity of His Majeſty's Crown.

In the beginning of February, the Lord Chief Juſtice Pratt, was ſworn in Chancellor of His Majeſty's Exchequer; the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, one of His Majeſty's Principal

*A.D.*1721 cipal Secretaries of State; Horatio Townſhend, Eſq; was made one of the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations; the Earl of Tankerville, Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Thiſtle.

The Bill for enabling the South-Sea Company to ingraft Part of their Capital Stock and Fund into the Stock and Fund of the Bank of England, and another Part thereof into the Stock and Fund of the Eaſt-India Company, was read the third time, paſt and ſent up to the Lords, March the 2d.

The next Day after Sir George Caſwal had been heard in his Place, it was reſolv'd, Proceeding againſt Sir George Caſwal. 'That it appears to this Houſe, that Sir 'George Caſwal, Knight, one of the Co-'partners of Turner and Company, and a 'Member of this Houſe, did, in or about the '14th Day of December, 1720, after this 'Houſe had begun to inquire into the Con-'duct of the late Directors of the South-Sea 'Company, order Daniel Watkins, one of 'the Bookkeepers of the ſaid Turner and 'Company, to eraſe in ſeveral Places of the 'Books of the ſaid Turner and Company, 'the Name of Stanhope, and to make the 'ſame Stangape; which was accordingly done.' And after the Houſe had come to ſeveral other Reſolutions concerning him, Mr. Broderick, Lord Moleſworth, Mr. Hutcheſon, and Mr. Ward, were order'd to bring in a Bill to make the Eſtates Real and Perſonal of the ſaid Caſwal, Jacob Sawbridge, and Elias Turner, anſwerable for 250000 l. to the South-Sea Company, the advanced Price of the 50000 l. South-Sea Stock beforemention'd. But Earl of Sunderland clear. when the Caſe of the Earl of Sunderland was taken into Conſideration, and a Motion was made that 50000 l. Capital Stock had been taken in by Robert Knight, late Caſhier of the South-Sea Company, upon Account of Charles Earl of Sunderland, it was, upon the Queſtion, carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 233 Voices, againſt 172; but it Mr. Aiſlabie ſent to the Tower far'd not ſo well with Mr. Aiſlabie, againſt whom the Houſe came to ſome Reſolutions, expell'd him, and committed him Priſoner to the Tower: In which the Senſe of the Houſe was more unanimous within Doors than without.

About the middle of February, Miſt the Jacobite Printer, who not long before was either preſs'd or liſted in the Sea Service, receiv'd Judgment at the King's-Bench Bar, Weſtminſter, for Reflections caſt upon His Majeſty's Interpoſitions on Behalf of the Proteſtants in the Palatinate, printed in his Weekly Journal, (now continu'd under the Title of Fog's, by a Jacobite Prieſt, and others) Miſt, the Printer, in the Pillory. Miſt was ſentenc'd to ſtand in the Pillory at Charing-Croſs and the Royal-Exchange, to pay a Fine of Fifty Pounds, and give Security for his good Behaviour for ſeven Years, after three Months Impriſonment. This notorious Offender was ſo far from learning more Wiſdom and Modeſty by his Puniſhment, that two Months after, Mr. Lechmere complain'd of other Treaſonable Papers of his under the Title of his Weekly Journal, particularly that of Saturday May the 27th; ſeveral Paragraphs of which were read in the Houſe of Commons, and Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Sir David Dalrymple, Mr. Yonge, Colonel Bladen, Mr. Pulteney, the Attorney General, Serjeant Pengelly, Sir William Thompſon, Mr. Sloper, and Mr. Hungerford, expreſs'd great Indignation againſt the vile, falſe and traiterous Inſinuations contain'd in them, and the Houſe unanimouſly Reſolv'd, 'That the 'Paper call'd the Weekly Journal, &c. of May '27. 1721. is a falſe, malicious, ſcandalous, 'and traiterous Libel, tending to alienate the 'Affections of His Majeſty's Subjects, and to 'excite the People to Sedition and Rebellion, 'with an Intention to ſubvert the preſent 'happy Eſtabliſhment, and to introduce Po-'pery and arbitrary Power. Vote againſt his Journal, now call'd Fog's.

It is now fourteen Years ſince this Loyal and Affectionate Vote paſs'd the Houſe of Commons with the greateſt unanimity, and that infamous Weekly Journal is at this time continu'd to be publiſh'd in ſupport of the ſame Faction, and with the ſame Tendency as is here expreſs'd by Parliament. Miſt was ſent to Newgate by Order of the Houſe, 'and it was Reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, 'That an Humble Addreſs be preſented to And an Addreſs to the King. 'His Majeſty, expreſſing the Commons utmoſt 'Abhorrence of the ſcandalous, infamous and 'traiterous Libel, entitled the Weekly Journal, '&c. and their Deteſtation of the Authors 'of it, and to aſſure His Majeſty, that this 'Houſe will ſtand by and ſupport His Ma-'jeſty and His Royal Family, againſt all 'Traiterous and Seditious Attempts that ſhall 'be made againſt His Sacred Perſon and Go-'vernment.

I avoid entering into a Narrative of the many Petitions that came from Penryn in Cornwal, and ſeveral other Boroughs at great Diſtance from Exchange-Ally, for Juſtice to an injur'd Nation, againſt the South-Sea Directors, that Affair being in the beſt Hands, and the Petitioners, in all probability, being the very leaſt of all the Sufferers on the prodigious Fall of Stocks, occaſion'd by the corrupt Management of the South-Sea Scheme; but it was generally believ'd, that this Cry of Juſtice, contributed as much to ſhorten the Days of Mr. Craggs, ſenior, as the Death of his Son, the late Secretary of State, deceas'd; the Father dy'd March the 16th, in a Lethargick Fit, after having (as is ſuppos'd) taken too large a Compoſition of a Compoſing Draught, leaving his very great Eſtate among his three Daughters, marry'd to three Members of Parliament, Mr. Trefuſis, Mr. Elliot, and Mr. Newſham.

In the mean time, the great Criminal Mr. Robert Knight, being got into the Nether-Knight protected by the States of Brabant. lands, made Application to the States of Brabant, for the Protection of their Conſtitution; and tho' Mr. Leathes, the Britiſh Reſident at Bruſſels, made preſſing Inſtances with the Marquis De Prie, Governor of the Auſtrian Netherlands, to have him deliver'd up, yet the Greffier, or Recorder, of Brabant, repreſenting to him, that according to one of the Articles of the Joyful Entry granted them by the Emperor Charles the Fifth, Sworn to by all his Succeſſors, as the Magna Charta of that Province, no Perſon apprehended there for any Crime, can be try'd out of it, and the Deputies of the States inſiſting upon that Article, the Marquis De Prie could proceed no farther in that Matter, without particular Inſtructions from Vienna, concerning which Colonel Churchil was ſent to that Court, where

A.D. 1721 where every one thought, the Privileges of the States of Brabant would be look'd upon as too ſacred to be violated for the delivering a ſingle Perſon to the Britiſh Reſident, and tho' there was doubtleſs ſome management in the States continuing to inſiſt upon the Article of the Joyful Entry, yet, as long as they did inſiſt upon it, the Governour of the Netherlands was warranted to connive at Knight's having the Benefit of it.

The Houſe of Commons, in the following Reſolutions, ſhow'd the great Regard they had to the Support of the Britiſh Commerce in the Eaſt-Indies, which was then threaten'd with ſome Interruption by the new Eaſt-India Company ſet up at Oſtend.

The Parliament's Care of the East-India Trade.

'That the carrying on of any Trade, by 'His Majeſty's Subjects to the Eaſt-Indies, 'under Foreign Commiſſions, or in Conjunctiⁿ 'on with Foreigners, is of pernicious Conſe- 'quence to the Commerce and Welfare of this 'Kingdom, and that an effectual Stop ought 'to be put thereto.

'That the clandeſtine putting of Unli- 'cenſed Goods on Board any outward Bound 'Eaſt-India Ships, and the taking any ſuch 'Goods out of the Homeward Bound Ships, 'is a pernicious Practice, and highly Detri- 'mental and Injurious to His Majeſty's Cuſtoms.

'That the Allowing the Importation of 'Tea by Certificates from Oſtend, and other 'Foreign Places, not being the Place of its 'Growth, tends to promote the illegal Trade 'carry'd on by His Majeſty's Subjects to the 'Eaſt-Indies under Foreign Commiſſions and 'in Conjunction with Foreigners, and is very 'prejudicial to the Trade and Navigation of 'theſe Kingdoms, &c.

The ſame Day, March 23. the Royal Aſſent was given to An Act to enable the South-Sea Company to ingraft Part of their Capital Stock into the Bank of England and Eaſt-India Company.

The Inventories of the South-Sea Directors Eſtates

A.D. 1721

By this it appears, that of about 2014000 l. only 334000 l. the odd Pounds omitted, was left to the Proprietors of thoſe Eſtates.

To ſet theſe Matters as near together as may be, we muſt report how theſe Allowances came to be made, though ſome Weeks after.

The Houſe began with Sir John Fellows, the Sub-Governor; in whoſe Behalf Mr. Sloper mov'd, 'That ſince it did not appear 'that he had been ſo active in the late vile 'and pernicious Practice, as ſome others, '(owing perhaps rather to the Heavineſs 'than to the Purity of his Mind,) he 'might be allow'd 20000 l. out of his Eſtate.' Mr. Hungerford reduc'd it to 15000 l. others to 12000 l. and Mr. Robert Walpole having at laſt propos'd 10000 l. it was agreed to, without any Diviſion. There was no Debate about Mr. Joye, the Deputy-Governor, for it appearing that he had been deeply concern'd in the Guilt, it was agreed to allow him only 5000 l. The ſame Sum was allow'd Mr. Aſtel: And the Queſtion being put, to allow Sir Lambert Blackwel 10000 l. ſome propoſing only 5000 l. it was carry'd for the former, by a Majority of four Voices, 112 againſt 108. The Allowance to Sir John Blunt occaſion'd a long Debate, not becauſe he had been a Tool to the Harleian Miniſtry, and had (like ſome of them) been a Frequenter of Conventicles, as High-Church call them, but becauſe he had been the moſt buſy Man in this wicked Project, and the moſt inſolent on the Succeſs of it. Mr. Laurence Carter mov'd to allow him One Shilling only: The Lord James Cavendiſh, 1000 l. Mr. Plummer, 5000 l. Sir Joſeph Jekyll, 10000 l. which was ſeconded by General Roſſe, the Lord Moleſworth, Mr. Jeffries, and Mr. Windſor; but Mr. Sloper, Mr. John Smith, Mr. Horatio Walpole, and Mr. Milner, were of Opinion he ought to be moſt ſeverely puniſh'd. Mr. Sloper ſaid, 'He was grown 'to that Height of Pride and Inſolence, that he 'could not give a civil Anſwer to Perſons far 'above him, inſtancing in his Behaviour, one 'Day at the Treaſury, when a Relation of a 'Great Man aſking Sir John, in his (Mr. Slo- 'per's) Hearing, for a Subſcription, the upſtart 'Knight, with a great deal of Contempt, 'bid him go to his Couſin Walpole, and de- 'ſire him to ſell his Stock in the Bank, and 'by that Means he might be ſupply'd.' This daring Affront cou'd not but be reſented by Mr. Robert Walpole, who, in a pathetick Speech, let the Houſe fully enough into Blunt's Life and Character, ſhewing, He was a Projector of many Years ſtanding, and had been the Author of ſeveral fallacious Schemes, by which unwary People had been drawn into their utter Ruin; particularly in a Project for the Linnen Manufacture. To this Mr.

Blunt's Inſolence.

A.D. 1721 Horatio Walpole added, 'That was not the 'first: For there was a Gentleman who ſate 'next to him, meaning Mr. Jeſſop, whom 'Sir John Blunt had drawn into a Project, 'for bringing Water to London, from a great 'Diſtance; which was to out-do the New- 'River Water; by which the Subſcribers loſt 'all their Money, though Sir John himſelf 'got ſome Thouſands by it:' Which Mr. Jeſſop confirm'd. However, Lord Hinchinbroke mov'd for allowing Sir John Blunt 10000*l.* but the Queſtion being put for allowing him 1000 Pounds, it was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 138 Voices againſt 94.

The Annaliſt tells us, 'It was obſerv'd, 'that Mr. Lechmere, Mr. Hutcheſon, and Ser- 'jeant Pengelly, went out of the Houſe be- 'fore the Debate about particular Perſons 'came on; and that Mr. Lechmere only took 'Notice, That the late Directors were all e- 'qually guilty of a Breach of Truſt, and 'therefore ought all to be puniſh'd: But that 'their Crimes not being equally flagrant, he 'thought there ought to be a Difference in 'the Puniſhment.' The Annaliſt perhaps is miſtaken here: For it could not juſtly be ſaid, that the late Directors were all equally guilty, though they were all guilty: For the Directors who projected the 50 per Cent. Dividend for 12 Years, to draw in Subſcribers, were certainly more guilty of a Breach of Truſt, than thoſe who were not in the Contrivance of this villainous Propoſal. The next Allowance in Debate was that for Sir Robert Chaplin; for whom the Lord Moleſworth, Sir John Eyles, and other Members ſpoke; and it was agreed, without dividing, to allow him 10000*l.* The ſame Allowance was given to Sir William Chapman, Mr. Cheſter, and Mr. Child. A Motion being made to give Mr. Delaporte the like Sum, the Lord Moleſworth was for reducing it to 7000*l.* but upon the Queſtion it was carry'd for 10000*l.* by a Majority of 150 Voices againſt 69. The Caſe of Francis Eyles, Eſq; appear'd in ſo favourable a Light, that he was allow'd 20000*l.* without dividing: But then it was ſaid without Doors, if his fair Dealing in the Direction deſerv'd a Conſideration of 20000*l.* it ſeem'd the more difficult to account for the taking away 14000*l.* Mr. Edmondſon's Eſtate amounting to little more than 5000, it was mov'd to allow him the whole, and leave him out of the Bill: But after ſome Debate, it was agreed to allow him only 3000*l.* The Queſtion being put to allow Mr. Gibbon 15000 or 10000*l.* it was carry'd for the latter, without dividing. It appearing that Sir William Hamond, and Mr. Gore, had little or no Share in the fraudulent Contrivances of the leading Directors, ſuch as Blunt, Hawes, &c. Mr. Gore was allow'd 20000*l.* and Sir William Hamond 20000*l.* It was propos'd to give Mr. Hawes, late Receiver General of the Cuſtoms, 1000*l.* But Sir Nathaniel Gould, and ſome other Members having obſerv'd that he was very active in the late vile Practices, and had occaſion'd the Ruin of many People, Mr. Docminque mov'd, and it was agreed, to allow him only 31*l.* the odd Money of his Inventory. Several Members ſpoke in favour of Mr. Horſey; particularly the Lord Hinchinbroke, and Sir Robert Rich, who mov'd for allowing him 10000*l.* which was carry'd without a Diviſion. A.D. 1721

It was then debated, whether to allow Mr. Holditch 500*l.* 1000*l.* or 5000*l.* The Voices were equally divided, 86 and 86: Upon which Mr. Clayton the Chairman gave the caſting Vote for 5000*l.* which met with general Approbation. Mr. Horatio Walpole, and Sir Richard Steele, ſpoke in favour of Sir Theodore Janſſen, and were anſwer'd by General Roſſe, and the Maſter of the Rolls; but after a ſmall Debate, Mr. Trenchard mov'd for allowing him 50000*l.* which was carry'd by a Majority of 134 Voices againſt 118. Sir Jacob Jacobſon's Caſe coming next under Conſideration, Mr. Hungerford mov'd for allowing him 11000*l.* which was all his Eſtate, except 481*l.* and it was agreed to without a Negative. Mr. Ingram's Caſe being much the ſame, Mr. Pulteney mov'd for allowing him 12000*l.* near three Parts in four of his Eſtate; and being ſeconded by the Lord Hinchinbroke, it was carry'd without dividing. Sir John Lambert, was allow'd 5000*l.* without a Diviſion, as was Sir Harcourt Maſters; and Mr. Morley 1800*l.* near his whole Eſtate. Mr. Page had an Allowance of 10000*l.* without dividing. Mr. Heyſham mov'd for allowing Colonel Raymond 30000*l.* and being ſeconded by Mr. Tuffnel, the Attorney General, and Mr. Hungerford, no Oppoſition was made to that Motion. Mr. Sloper mov'd for allowing Mr. Read 10000*l.* He was ſeconded by Sir John Ward, and Mr. Docminque, and the Motion carry'd without a Debate: As was the Allowance of 14000*l.* to Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Hungerford mov'd for allowing Mr. Sawbridge 10000*l.* and was oppos'd by Mr. Lowndes, the Lord Moleſworth, Sir Adolphin Oughton, and Mr. Horatio Walpole: But another Member moving for 5000*l.* it was agreed to without a Diviſion. Mr. Tillard had in like manner an Allowance of 15000*l.* and Mr. Turner 800*l.* which was near his whole Eſtate; which ſhew'd plainly enough that he had no Share of the Plunder: And then the Queſtion in common was, why the remaining 80*l.* being the Total of his Capital, was not alſo allow'd him? The Caſe of Robert Surman, the Deputy Caſhier, occaſion'd a Debate of about an Hour and Half: He had not the beſt Character among the Offenders; but acting only as a Servant, and by the Command of Mr. Knight, or the Directors, ſeveral worthy Members thought there ſhould be a Mitigation in his Puniſhment, as there was in his Crime. Mr. Grey Neville ſtrenuouſly inſiſted that he might be left out of the Bill: Another Member mov'd to allow him 30000*l.* Mr. Hungerford wou'd have reduced it to 20000*l.* Mr. Lechmere to 12000*l.* and two other Members to 10000 and 5000*l.* all theſe were oppos'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Serjeant Pengelly, and Mr. Horatio Walpole, who would not have allow'd him above 20 or 30*l.* but at laſt the Queſtion being put for allowing him 5000*l.* it was agreed without dividing. Mr. Arthur Moore mov'd for allowing John Grigsby, the Coffeeman, Accomptant to the South-Sea, 10000*l.* But another

A.D.1721 other Member ſaid, 'That ſince that Upſtart 'was once ſo prodigally vain, as to bid his 'Coachman feed his Horſes with Gold, no Grigsby's Inſolence. 'doubt but he could feed on it himſelf; 'and therefore he mov'd he might be allow'd 'as much Gold as he could eat, and that 'the reſt of his Eſtate might go towards the 'Relief of the Sufferers.' However a Motion being made for allowing him 2000 l. it was carry'd without dividing.

Mr. Aiſlabie's Caſe. When Mr. Aiſlabie's Caſe came under Conſideration, it was mov'd, that ſo much of his Eſtate be allow'd him, as he was poſſeſs'd of towards the end of the Year 1719, before the South-Sea Bill was brought in; and this Motion was back'd by Mr. Earl, Sir Charles Hotham, Mr. Lowndes, Mr. Lechmere, Mr. Ward, Mr. Palmer, and ſome others; in Oppoſition to whom, Mr. Freeman mov'd, That all he had got ſince the Year 1714, might be confiſcated, and apply'd to the Uſe of the Publick. He was ſupported by Sir Joſeph Jekyll, who urg'd, that it was in the Power of the Lords of the Treaſury to have prevented the Miſchief that had been done by the Directors. Mr. Broderick, Mr. Sloper, Sir William Wyndham, and other Members, ſpoke on the ſame Side; and the Queſtion being put, that all the Eſtate which Mr. Aiſlabie was poſſeſs'd of in the Year 1719, be left for him and his Family: It was, upon a Diviſion, carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 18 Voices. Then another Motion was made, and the Queſtion put, for allowing him and his Family all the Eſtate he was poſſeſs'd of on the 20th of October, 1718, which was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 113 Voices againſt 95.

The bringing over Mr. Knight was inſiſted upon with the more Earneſtneſs, the more Difficulty there was met with in the Endeavours that were us'd for it; and ſome Perſons who had heard the Joyful Entry of Brabant, call'd the Magna Charta of that Province, did not think the Brabanters inſiſting on the Preſervation of it a frivolous Pretence. They put the Caſe to our ſelves, ſuppoſing any Foreign Power ſhould require of our Court to give up Magna Charta in any one Article, which the Parliament at the ſame time aſſerted to be their Right, and adher'd to it againſt all Interpoſition, ſhou'd we have thought it a frivolous Pretence? The Suſpicion of Management in the Affair, might excite Peoples Curioſity and Reſentment, but without evident Proof, could not be equivalent to the Conſtitution and Right of a Country.

The Brabanters excus'd in Knight's Caſe.

Debate about Mr. Knight. It was ſaid in the Houſe of Commons, that unleſs Mr. Knight was brought back, the Perſons in the Adminiſtration, who had been nam'd in the Courſe of the Examination of the South-Sea Directors and Officers, would, though acquitted, be look'd upon as criminal; which did no manner of Honour to the Determinations of Parliament. Sir Richard Steele's offering ſomething againſt obliging Mr. Knight to be an Evidence, whether he would or no, was juſtly diſregarded: For in the Caſe of National Juſtice, the Legiſlature might doubtleſs require any one to give what Light he could towards Proof of a Crime.

After another Debate on this matter Mr. A.D.1721 Lechmere mov'd, 'That an humble Addreſs 'be preſented to His Majeſty, returning the Mr Lech- 'Thanks of this Houſe for the Inſtances he mere's 'has been pleas'd to make, by a Letter under Motion for 'his Royal Hand to His Imperial Majeſty, for an Addreſs 'obtaining the Delivering up of Mr. Knight, 'purſuant to the Addreſs of this Houſe; and 'for communicating to this Houſe the Steps 'which have been taken relating thereto; and 'to repreſent to His Majeſty the Diſſatis- 'faction which his Commons have at the 'Obſtacles which they find have been rais'd, 'under the Pretence of the Privileges of the 'States of Brabant, againſt a Compliance with 'His gracious Endeavours.

'And alſo to repreſent, That this Houſe is 'every Day more convinc'd of the high Im- 'portance it is to the Juſtice due to His 'People, that effectual meaſures be ſpeedily 'taken for bringing over Mr. Knight.

'And earneſtly to beſeech His Majeſty to 'employ His moſt preſſing Endeavours, in 'ſuch manner as in his Great Wiſdom ſhall 'be thought proper for attaining the juſt 'Deſire of His Commons.

His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Anſwer was, I am very well pleaſed that the Inſtances which I have made for the obtaining the delivering up of Mr. Knight, have given you Satisfaction, I ſhall continue to employ my utmoſt Endeavours for obtaining what you Deſire, and hope they will prove effectual.

This tireſome Subject is much dwelt upon by the Writers of that Time, but the little Pleaſure that Writers and Readers can take in it obliges me to abridge it.

About the latter end of March a full Convocation of the Univerſity of Oxford unanimouſly Reſolv'd, That the ſolemn Thanks of the Univerſity ſhould be return'd to the Right Honourable the Earl of Nottingham, for his moſt Noble Defence of the Chriſtian Faith, contain'd in his Lordſhip's Anſwer to Mr. Whiſton's Letter to him, Concerning the Eternity of the Son of GOD, and of the Holy Ghoſt. But this was not all the Univerſity did in Convocation, they decreed, That ſolemn Thanks ſhould be return'd to the Right Reverend Father in God Francis Lord Biſhop of Cheſter, on Account of his having ſo fully aſſerted the Rights, Privileges and Dignity, belonging to Univerſity Degrees, in his Book intitl'd, The Biſhop of Cheſter's Caſe relating to the Wardenſhip of Manchester College. It was here alſo unanimouſly agreed by them, That the Reverend Dr. Shippen Vice Chancellor, with the Honourable William Bromley, Eſq; and the Honourable George Clarke, Eſq; Repreſentatives of the Univerſity in Parliament, ſhould wait upon the ſaid Earl of Nottingham, and the ſaid Lord Biſhop of Cheſter, and preſent their Lordſhips the aforeſaid Thanks. Nor was yet this all, For the Clergy at the ſeveral Viſitations held for the Dioceſe of Oxford, at Witney, Chipping-Norton, and Henley; as alſo the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Cheſter, unamimouſly preſented their Thanks to the Right Honourable the Earl of Nottingham, for his late Anſwer to Mr. Whiſton, which the ſaid Whiſton anſwer'd again and again, Univerſity of Oxford, and the Clergy, thank the Earl of Nottingham, and Biſhop of Cheſter.

A.D. 1721 again, but had no Thanks for it from any Person or Persons whatsoever. The Archdeacon of Hereford, and forty-five of the Clergy, sign'd a sort of an Address to the Earl of Nottingham, to thank his Lordship for answering Mr. Whiston, wherein they give a hint that his Lordship had asserted the Convocation to be a Part of the Parliament. The Archdeacon and Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Salop, thank the Earl in another such Address, for his Answer to Mr. Whiston's impious, heretical, and damnable Doctrines: But they add something, which was so far from being true, that at the very Instant, when they said the Common and Primitive Faith of Christians was attack'd with Impunity, Joseph Hall, Esq; Macebearer to His Majesty, and a Justice of Peace, was sentenc'd to stand in the Pillory, to pay 200*l.* Fine, to lie three months in Prison, and to give Security for his good Behaviour for seven Years, for the Sober Reply to Mr. Higgs's Merry Argument for the Tritheistical Doctrine of the Trinity, beforementioned; and Mr. Wilkins the Printer was Fin'd 100*l.* to suffer three months Imprisonment, and to find Security also for Seven Years: Which shews, that the Zeal of the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Salop had led them into an Expression that did not consist with their Duty to the Government, which, according to their Insinuation, suffer'd Attacks against the Christian Faith to pass off with Impunity.

Something not true in their Address.

Mr. Hall and Mr. Wilkins the Printer punish'd.

Let us here subjoin the Proceedings against other Writers and Printers for State Offences. About the beginning of June Mr. Lechmere complain'd to the House of a Paper printed by N. Mist, Intitl'd, the Weekly Journal of May 27. as has been already related, and a Committee was appointed to enquire into the Authors, Printers, and Publishers of Seditious Libels, by whom Mist was Examin'd, but gave unsatisfactory Answers. The Committee sent for J. Peele the Publisher of the London Journal, wherein were several Letters sign'd Cato, which gave great Offence; and Mr. —— the reputed Author of those Letters, was also sent for by the Committee, but they both kept out of the way. These Letters were full of Insinuations against the Administration, and odious Parallels from Classical and other History, to misrepresent some Men in Power; an Example which the Authors of the Craftsman, a Libel set up soon after Cato laid down, have industriously imitated.

Proceedings against others for Libels.

An Address against Libellers.

The Address of the House of Commons against Libellers being presented to His Majesty, Mr. Comptroller reported the King's Answer to this effect: That His Majesty thank'd this House for their most dutiful and loyal Address, and wou'd immediately give the necessary Order for Prosecuting and Punishing the Authors, Printers and Publishers of all scandalous and seditious Libels.

The Lord Hinchinbroke acquainted the House, from the Committee, appointed to enquire into the Authors, Printers, &c. of seditious and traiterous Libels, That Charles Molley, Esq; Samuel Forster, Esq; and Mr. Thomas Gordon, had been summon'd to attend them, but had in Contempt of the Authority of the House neglected to attend upon Summons: For which Contempt, the said Molley, &c. were order'd to be taken into Custody of the Serjeant at Arms.

His Majesty's Message to the House of Commons, of June the 16th, by Mr. Comptroller, explains the Occasion of setting it out.

GEORGE R.

'His Majesty having taken the first Opportunity upon the Death of the late 'King of Sweden to renew the ancient Alli- 'ances between this Kingdom and Sweden; 'and having stipulated by a Treaty to pay 'a Subsidy to that Crown, hath ordered that 'Treaty to be laid before the House of Com- 'mons, and hopes from their known Zeal 'and Affection for the Protestant Religion, 'and the true Interest of their Country, that 'they will enable him to make good the 'Engagement he has enter'd into upon this 'Occasion.'

The King's Message about the Subsidy to Sweden.

In the same Message was mention'd, the making Satisfaction to the Owners and Freighters for the two Ships, Bristol Merchant, and Turkey Merchant from Turkey, which were order'd to be burnt with their Cargoes, as coming from Places infected with the Plague.

Upon a Motion for a Supply, pursuant to the Message, it was oppos'd by Mr. Shippen, Sir William Wyndham, Sir Joseph Jekyll, the Lord Molesworth, Mr. Butler, and other Members; though the Subsidy amounted to no more than 72000*l.* And what would not good Britons have given for such a Treaty with

A.D.1721 with Sweden in the Life-time of the late King Charles XII, when they were alarm'd with Rumours of an Invaſion by him. It was urg'd againſt this Supply, 'That be-'fore this laſt Treaty there had been a 'Rupture between the two Nations, and 'Hoſtilities and great Depredations commit-'ted by the Swediſh Privateers on our Mer-'chants; ſo that before any Subſidy be given 'to that Crown, Accounts ought firſt to be 'ſettled, and it might appear upon the Bal-'lance, that Sweden is indebted to us.' To this it was anſwer'd by Mr. Robert Walpole, Mr. Horatio Walpole, Mr. Lechmere, Lord Barrington, and others, 'That the Subſidy al-'low'd to Sweden, by the laſt Treaty, and the 'Squadron ſent to their Aſſiſtance, was no 'more than had been ſtipulated by former 'Engagements. But the ſaid Subſidy was not 'likely to be demanded any more, the Preli-'minaries of the Peace between the Czar of 'Muſcovy and the Crown of Sweden, being 'in a manner ſettled:' And the Motion for a Supply was carry'd by a Majority of 197 Voices againſt 136. The 72000*l.* to Sweden, and 23935*l.* for Satisfaction to the Owners of the two Ships to be burnt, were granted in a Grand Committee, June 21ſt.

The Honours and Preferments diſtributed ſince mention was laſt made of them, are theſe.

Honours and Preferments.

The two Vacancies occaſion'd by the Death of Earl Stanhope, and Mr. Secretary Craggs, Secretaries of State, being happily fill'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and the Lord Carteret, that of Chancellor of the Exchequer was given to the noble Perſon whoſe long Experience in the Affairs of the Revenue, had render'd him moſt fit for it, Robert Walpole, Eſq; who was alſo appointed Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury: The other Commiſſioners were George Bailie, Eſq; Sir Charles Turner, Richard Edgecombe, Eſq; Henry Pelham, Eſq;. His Grace the Duke of Grafton, and the Earl of Lincoln, were choſen Knights Companions of the Garter: Hugh Forteſcue, Eſq; of Filly in the County of Devon, was call'd up to the Houſe of Lords by the Title of Baron Clinton. Horatio Walpole, Eſq; was made one of the Secretaries of the Treaſury: Charles Stanhope, Eſq; Treaſurer of the Chamber to His Majeſty: Edward Carteret, Eſq; Uncle to the Lord Carteret, and Galfredus Walpole, Eſq; Joint Poſt-Maſters General. The Lord Cornwallis, Pay-maſter General of His Majeſty's Forces; Benjamin Mildmay, Eſq; a Commiſſioner of the Exciſe; Thomas Woodcock, Eſq; James Condonnel, Eſq; Thomas Milner, Eſq; Sir Thomas Rous, William Churchil, jun' Eſq; were appointed Commiſſioners of the Salt-Duties; the Lord Belhaven Governor of Barbados, in the room of the Lord Irwin deceas'd, whoſe Regiment of Horſe was given to the Lord Viſcount Irwin. His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Dignity of a Baronet on William Codrington, Eſq; of Dodington, in the County of Glouceſter, to whom Colonel Codrington, late Governor of the Leeward Iſlands, left the greater part of his great Eſtate. The Earl of Ilay was made Keeper of the Privy-Seal of Scotland; and the Earl of Bute one of the Lords of the Bedchamber.

About the beginning of May, the King in Council, an Order was made and publiſhed againſt Scandalous Clubs, Impiety and Prophaneneſs, as were His Majeſty's Directions to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops for the Preſervation of Unity in the Church, and the Purity of the Chriſtian Faith, particularly in the Doctrine of the Holy Trinity. But ſuch was the Malice and Madneſs of the Enemies to the Government, that theſe Pious Endeavours of His Majeſty and His Miniſters to ſuppreſs Infidelity and Irreligion, were miſrepreſented as the effect only of Conſtraint and the Clamour of the People. A.D.1721

The King's good Order concerning Doctrine.

As one of the Inducements to His Britannick Majeſty to renew the old Alliances with Sweden, was to preſerve that Proteſtant Kingdom from the further Inſults, Depredations, and Devaſtations of the Muſcovites; ſo was it His Majeſty's principal View in ſending his Fleet into the Mediterranean, to prevent the Territories diſmember'd from the Spaniſh Monarchy by the Treaty of Utretcht, from returning under the Obedience of Spain; both which was ſo far accompliſh'd, that about this time Captain Brimmer a Livonian Gentleman, diſpatch'd by the King of Sweden, arriv'd at London, to communicate to the King of Great Britain the Preliminaries of the Peace ſettled between the Czar and the King of Sweden; and a few Days after Mr. Holzendorf, Secretary to Colonel Stanhope, the Britiſh Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at the Court of Madrid, arriv'd at Whitehall with the Treaty of Peace and Commerce agreed between His Majeſty and the Catholick King, and the Schedules authorizing the South-Sea Company to carry on their Trade with New Spain. Thus did His Majeſty, by his Armaments for the Service of the Mediterranean and the Baltick, obtain the great Ends he propos'd to himſelf, by the maintaining and preſerving the Ballance of Power in Europe, and the Navigation of his Subjects in thoſe Extremities of it: In which were equally conſulted the Safety, the Intereſt, and the Glory of the Realm.

The general Calamity of the South-Sea Scheme was ſomewhat alleviated by a Publick Bleſſing, for on Saturday the 15th of April Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales was happily deliver'd of a Prince at Leiceſter-Houſe, there being then preſent in the Room His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, the Dutcheſs of Dorſet, the Dutcheſs of Shrewsbury, the Counteſs of Pembroke, the Counteſs of Grantham, the Counteſs Cowper, the Counteſs of Briſtol, Ladies of Her Royal Highneſs's Bedchamber, the Counteſs of Picbourg, the Women of Her Royal Highneſs's Bedchamber, Sir David Hamilton, and Mrs. Crane Her Royal Highneſs's Midwife: The Lord Herbert was immediately diſpatch'd to acquaint His Majeſty with it, who was pleas'd to ſend Colonel Negus, Commiſſioner for executing the Office of Maſter of the Horſe, with His Compliments to Their Royal Highneſſes; and the Joy on this happy Occaſion was as univerſal as had been the Concern of the South-Sea Sufferers. The Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London preſented a Congratulatory Addreſs to His Majeſty upon it; who was pleas'd to ſay, in His moſt gracious Anſwer, The Zeal and Affection you have upon all Occaſions ſhewn to my Perſon and Government, leave me no room to doubt of your Joy at this happy Increaſe of my Family. I cannot omit taking this Opportunity of assuring you that I am truly concern'd at the Calamity brought upon you by the wicked Management of the South-Sea Company. I have, however, this Comfort, that the Report of any Part of this Misfortune cannot with the least justice be imputed to Me. Nothing will give me more Ease and Satisfaction than the seeing you deliver'd from your present Sufferings, your Trade reviv'd, and Publick Credit re-establish'd. Which Declaration was made necessary by the base and groundless Insinuations of factious and disaffected Persons.

A.D 1721

On the 17th of April the House of Commons unanimously Resolv'd, 'That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty to 'Congratulate His Majesty on the Princess of 'Wales's being happily deliver'd of a Prince, 'to the unspeakable Joy of His Majesty's 'faithful Subjects, and to express the great Satisfaction and Comfort we have, in seeing 'the Protestant Interest of this Kingdom more 'firmly establish'd and secur'd, by the Increase 'of His Majesty's Royal Family; and that 'the said Address be presented to His Majesty by the whole House: Also, 'That a congratulatory Message be sent to their Royal 'Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, 'on this happy Occasion.' And it was order'd that the Earl of Hertford, Sir Robert Rich, the Master of the Rolls, Mr. Neville, and Mr. Gibbon, should attend Their Royal Highnesses with the said Message. His Majesty return'd a most gracious Answer; and His Royal Highness was pleas'd to say, The Satisfaction the House of Commons have shewn on the Occasion of the Birth of my Son, is a certain Proof of the Continuance of that Duty to the King, and that Affection to his Family, which has so conspicuously appear'd in all their Proceedings; and I look upon this Congratulation as a particular Mark of their Regard to me; and I return my Thanks to the House for it; as did also Her Royal Highness; which was reported to them by the Earl of Hertford.

To give an Instance of the Ingenuity and Honesty of modern Cato's, and how watchful they are of the publick Good, we must not omit the Turn they gave to the Order of the King in Council, publish'd in the Gazette, the 29th of April, (just mention'd) against Blasphemous and Scandalous Clubs and Societies; such as the Hell-Fire Club, and others of a less shocking Name, though not less shocking Nature. These lewd young Rakes were branch'd out from the Stowrers and Mohocks before spoken of, and were guilty of the like Extravagancies. Several Persons of Quality, particularly the Duke of Wharton, were mark'd out as Members of the Hell-Fire Club; and the coming to Particulars seem'd to give greater ground to the Belief of such a wicked Society, than perhaps there was Cause for; though then, as well as at other Times, there was found enough for Complaint against the Wickedness of the Age; and His Majesty, in Consequence of such Complaint, commanded the Publishing of the abovemention'd Order; wherein it is said, that His Majesty is determin'd to shew all Marks of Displeasure and Discouragement to any, who may even lie under the Suspicion of such destructive Practices. He was also pleas'd to give Orders to the Principal Officers of his Household, to make strict and diligent Inquiry, whether any of His Majesty's Servants are guilty of such horrid Impieties, &c. This good Order, so necessary for the reforming Manners by the Example of the Court, and to check the Spirit of Profaneness and Immorality, which is at all Times too predominant, did Cato, as Mr. Trenchard or his Accomplice, call'd himself, endeavour to depretiate and ridicule, because the Ministry was not tack'd to it, on a Supposition they were such Men as he labour'd to make them in his Libels. This happening at the Time of the South-Sea Affair, he takes hold of the Opportunity, confounding the Innocent with the Guilty, to load the Government with all the bad Consequences of that Scheme, which he treats as an Act of the Ministers, and not as an Act of a Parliament. A little of his Declamation will not be improper, to shew his Manners, his Temper, his Ingenuity, and his happy Talent, in stringing of Epithets and Phrases. He who talks profanely of Things sacred, is a wicked Man; and as ill bred as he is wicked: But he who wantonly fills a Country, a glorious happy Country, with Want, Woe, and Sorrow; a griping Want, dismal Woe, and piercing Sorrow; what Name, what Torture, what Death, does he not deserve? He is a Destroyer General! He is a mad Dog, with ten thousand Mouths, who scatters Poyson, Wounds, and Death, all around him! The same Day that the Order was publish'd, Notice was taken in the House of Lords, that little or nothing had yet been done towards punishing the Author and Printer of the Libel, entituled A sober Reply to Mr. Higg's merry Argument for the Tritheistical Doctrine of the Trinity, while other meaner Offenders had been prosecuted and punish'd; alluding to Mist the Printer's being pillory'd for his seditious Journal. The Earl of Nottingham, who answer'd Mr. Whiston's Arian Tenets, complain'd of the Growth of Atheism, Profaneness, and Immorality; and Dr. Verney, Lord Willoughby of Brook, Dean of Windsor, brought in a Bill for the more effectual suppressing of Blasphemy and Profaneness; in which it was to be enacted, that whatever Author of a Book should deny the Divinity of Our Saviour, or the 39 Articles of the Church of England, &c. should, over and above the Penalties inflicted by a former Statute, be imprison'd, unless he not only recited but sign'd the following Creed.

The King's Order about Profaneness abus'd by Cato's.

A new Law for Authors to sign a Creed.

I A. B. do solemnly profess, and sincerely declare, that I do believe there is but One Living and True God Everlasting, the Maker and Preserver of all Things, both Visible and Invisible; and that in the Unity of the Godhead, there be Three Persons of One Substance, Power, and Eternity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and I do acknowledge the Scripture to have been written by divine Inspiration.

All Bishops were to be impower'd by this new Act, to summon any Minister of the Church of England, to appear before them, to sign this Profession of Faith, or Creed; and all Justices of the Peace, to do the same by dissenting Ministers; and those Church of England Ministers that refus'd, were to forfeit their Benefices; and dissenting Ministers, the Benefit of the Toleration. After the second Reading

A.D.1721 Reading of this Bill, the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury mov'd that it might be committed: Upon which the Lord Onſlow ſaid, 'He was 'as much againſt Blaſphemy, and for promo- 'ting Religion, as it is profeſt in the Church 'of England, as any body; but that he could 'not be for any Law that was for Perſecution, 'of which Nature he took this Bill to be, and 'therefore he mov'd that it might be thrown 'out.' His Lordſhip was ſeconded by the Duke of Wharton, who ſaid, 'He was not 'inſenſible of the common Talk and Opinion Debate about it. 'of the Town concerning him; and there- 'fore he was glad of this Opportunity to 'juſtify himſelf, by declaring, That he was 'far from being a Patron of Blaſphemers, or 'an Enemy to Religion: But that, on the 'other hand, he could not be for this Bill, be- 'cauſe he conceiv'd it to be repugnant to the 'Holy Scripture: Saying which, he pull'd an 'old Family Bible out of his Pocket, and read 'ſeveral Paſſages of the Epiſtles of St. Paul 'and St. Peter, concluding, that the Bill ought 'to be thrown out.' The Annaliſt writes, 'His Grace was back'd by the Duke of 'A——le, and the Earls of S——d and 'I—y; the Lord Viſcount T——d, the Earl 'C——r, and the Earl of P——w.' The laſt noble Peer ſaid, (wittily) That tho' he was for a parliamentary King, yet he did not deſire to have a parliamentary God, or a parliamentary Religion; and if the Houſe were for ſuch a one, he wou'd go to Rome, and endeavour to be choſen a Cardinal; for he had rather ſit in the Conclave, than with their Lordſhips upon thoſe Terms. The Lord Biſhop of Peterborough ſpoke alſo on the ſame Side, and ſaid, That neither himſelf, nor, he hop'd, any of that Bench, would be Executioners of ſuch a Law, which ſeem'd to tend to the ſetting up of an Inquiſition.

On the other hand, the Lord Bathurſt, the Biſhops of London, Wincheſter, Litchfield and Coventry, and the Lord Trevor, ſpoke for the Bill: And one of their Lordſhips ſaying, He verily believ'd that the preſent Calamity occaſion'd by the South-Sea Project, was a Judgment of God on the Blaſphemy and Profaneneſs the Nation was guilty of, the Lord O——w very ſmartly reply'd, That noble Lord muſt then have been a great Sinner; for he heard he had loſt conſiderably by the South-Sea. The Bill, upon the Queſtion, was put off to a long Day, by a Majority of 60 Voices againſt 31.

Votes againſt Mr. James Craggs ſenior. In the beginning of May, the Houſe of Commons having examin'd ſeveral Perſons about Mr. James Craggs, ſenior, concern'd with Mr. Robert Knight, came to ſeveral Reſolutions upon it, and cloſ'd them with this, That all the Eſtate Real and Perſonal, of which the ſaid James Craggs was ſeiz'd or poſſeſt, from and after the firſt Day of December, 1719, over and above what he ſtood ſeiz'd and poſſeſt of on the ſaid firſt Day of December, be applied towards the Relief of the unhappy Sufferers in the South-Sea Company.

Debate about remitting ſeven Millions to the South-Sea Company. On the 2d of May there was a pretty warm Debate in the Houſe of Commons about remitting the Seven Millions due from the South-Sea Company, as a method to give ſome Relief to the Money-Subſcribers this was mov'd by Mr. Milner, a Merchant, and the Motion was ſtrenuouſly oppos'd by Mr. Smith, who was anſwer'd by Mr. Horatio Walpole, the Lord Tyrconnel, Mr. Pulteney, Colonel Bladen, and others, who back'd him; againſt it ſpoke Mr. Shippen and Serjeant Pengelly; but the Queſtion for remitting part was carry'd in the Affirmative by 221 Voices againſt 194. And ten Days after the Houſe being in a Grand Committee on the State of the Publick Credit, Mr. Yonge mov'd, that two of the Seven Millions due from the South-Sea Company to the Government might be apply'd towards reducing the Publick Debts and ſinking ſome of the moſt heavy Duties, and that the other Five Millions be remitted towards the Relief of the Sufferers by the South-Sea Scheme; Mr. Pulteney ſpoke on the ſame ſide, as did alſo Sir Joſeph Jekyl and ſome others; Mr. Robert Walpole gave very ſtrong Reaſons for remitting the whole Seven Millions, and was ſeconded by the Lord Barrington, Mr. Grey Nevil, Mr. Tuffnel, and others; but the Queſtion was carry'd againſt it by a majority of 68 Voices, 206 againſt 138. After which it was agreed that Five Millions only ſhould be remitted.

A.D.1721

It has been obſerv'd elſewhere, that the Diſaffected and Diſguſted in the Reigns ſince the Revolution, made uſe of Scraps of Hiſtory both ancient and modern, to paſs off their impudent and lying Scandals, on Kings, Queens, and their Miniſters, in groundleſs and infamous Parallels; the Libellers in the late Miniſtry's Time took little pains to conceal the Perſons intended. The Examiner laid his Lies as bare as if he had nam'd Names; and the Cato's that came after him in the ſame Diſguiſe of a Patriot, rather went farther in their Copies than came ſhort of the Original. Of this Kind was a villainous Libel publiſh'd about this Time, call'd the Conſpirators, or the Caſe of Cataline; of which, read what the Annaliſt ſays: 'It will be no diffi- 'cult Matter to find out the Perſons meant by 'the fictitious Characters of Cataline, Horten- 'ſius, Cethegus, Craſſus, Verres Father and Son, 'to any one who knows the Earl of S—— 'the Lord C——, the Earl C——, the 'Duke of M——, and Young Craggs, the 'Lord M——th, Mr. Charles St——pe, &c. But the following Paſſage wou'd have been ſo well underſtood, in any Government leſs mild and patient than that of Great Britain, that it would have ſent the wicked Authors of it to the Galleys or Gallows. 'Amongſt the in- 'famous Scum of the Conſpirators, I cannot 'help taking notice that there were ſome Wo- 'men who, by proſtituting themſelves, were 'ſupported at a moſt expenſive and extrava- 'gant Rate. In this Number, of moſt Emi- 'nence, were Aurelia, Oriſtella, Semphronia, 'and her two Nieces, and Fulcia, a kind of 'Bawd or Procureſs: Theſe were all Foreign 'Concubines, but Inmates in Rome; and 'came either from Gaul or Belgia. Cataline 'had alſo let into the Secret, a Number of 'other Foreigners, who he knew would rea- 'dily enter into any Deſign againſt the Ro- 'mans, partly on account of the eſtabliſh'd 'Hatred between them and that City, and 'partly on the Proſpect of enriching them- 'ſelves by the illegal Plunder.' This daring Abuſe of Hiſtory, and the Lenity of the Government, was a Leſſon to our Enemies to imitate it on other Occaſions. To inſtance in one, taken from the Annals, the moſt remarkable Paſſage in the Debate, was 'Mr. Sh——. 'naming

The diſaffected Libel againſt the Government in odious, groundleſs Parallels.

A.D.1721 'naming a great Lady, who had a conſidera-
'ble Quantity of South-Sea Stock given her,
'and afterwards telling a Story of Alice Pierce,
'a celebrated Miſtreſs of Henry III. (a Blunder
'for Edward III.) who having made a Breach
'between the King and the Black Prince, was
'twice remov'd from Court, by the Interpoſi-
'tion and Solicitations of the then Speaker of
'the Houſe of Commons.' This Story being look'd upon as implying an odious Parallel, Colonel Bladen animadverted upon it with ſome Warmth.

On the 8th of May Sir Joſeph Jekyll acquainted the Houſe from the Committee of Secrecy, that Thomas Vernon, Eſq; a Member of that Houſe, had made Application to General Roſſe, a Member of that Committee, in Behalf of Mr. Aiſlabie. Mr Vernon own'd he had told General Roſſe, if he would do Mr. Aiſlabie any Service, that Gentleman would acknowledge it in any manner he ſhould think fit; but did not mention or pretend any thing of Money; that he acted in it only on account of Friendſhip, being Mr. Aiſlabie's near Relation: However Mr. Vernon was expell'd the Houſe, and General Roſſe thank'd for the Juſtice he had done to the Houſe, in laying the Application made to him by Mr. Vernon before them. The Bill for the Relief of the South-Sea Sufferers going forward, ſeven Perſons were appointed to be Commiſſioners for diſpoſing of the Forfeitures intended by it, who were Sir John Eyles, Sub-Governor, Mr. Rudge, Deputy-Governor, Sir Thomas Croſs, Mr. Lade, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Halſey, Mr. Hudſon, and Mr. Lant, Directors of the South-Sea Company. On the 15th of May the Houſe of Commons was call'd over, and ſeveral abſent Members whoſe Excuſes were not allow'd, were order'd to be taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms; as Sir William Courtenay, Sir William Blacket, Sir Harvey Eliver, Sir Edward Williams, Sir Charles Keymiſh, and Sir Edward Stradling, Baronets.

Mr. Vernon expell'd, on an Information of General Roſſe.

Commiſſioners of the South-Sea Forfeitures.

Abſent Members order'd into Cuſtody.

On the 2d of May, the young Prince William Auguſtus was chriſten'd at Leiceſter-Houſe, by Dr. Harris, Chaplain to His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales: The King of Pruſſia, repreſented by the Earl of Grantham; and His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, by the Lord Viſcount Lumley, being Godfathers; and the Queen of Pruſſia, repreſented by the Dutcheſs of Dorſet, being Godmother. The Lord Cobham's Regiment of Dragoons was given to Sir Charles Hotham, and Colonel Pocock ſucceeded Sir Charles Hotham in the Command of his Regiment of Foot. Edward Hopkins, Eſq; was declar'd Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of Horatio Walpole, Eſq; Military Promotions.

On Monday the 22d of May, the laſt Day of the Term, Colonel Mackintoſh who had been confin'd 18 Months in Newgate, on Suſpicion of his being concern'd in the late Rebellion in Scotland, was diſcharg'd without Bail.

One of the moſt reaſonable and feazable Schemes to relieve the Proprietors of the publick Debts, and the Money Subſcribers to the South-Sea Company, was propos'd by General Wade, and was in Subſtance, 'That the 11
'Millions, or ſo much as the ſaid Company had
'got by Subſcriptions, ſhould be equally di-
'vided among the ſeveral Subſcribers. 2. That 'the old Proprietors ſhould pay nothing of the 'ſeven Millions due from the Company to the 'Government. 3. That the Forfeitures of the 'Directors, &c. ſhould go towards paying off
'the Company Bonds.' The dropping of this Scheme, which was generally reliſh'd as equally equitable and plauſible, was but too plain a Demonſtration of a Truth obſerv'd in that Houſe by an honourable Member, who lamented the ill Diſpoſition of ſome Perſons, who inſtead of concurring with others in remedying the preſent Diſtemper, us'd all poſſible Means to irritate and exaſperate the Minds of the People; which all that read the Annals of theſe Times, cannot but take notice of. A.D.1721

Deſign to irritate rather than remedy.

When the Motion for conſolidating the Bill for Reſtraining John Aiſlabie, Eſq; from going out of this Kingdom, &c. and for diſcovering his Eſtate and Effects, was made in the Houſe of Commons, ſeveral Members repreſented it would ſeem hard to put a Perſon of Mr. Aiſlabie's Eminence on the ſame level with the Directors, and that ſuch a Precedent might be of dangerous Conſequence. But Mr. Lechmere, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, the Lord Moleſworth, Mr. Broderick, Mr. Shippen, and ſome others, ſpeaking for the Motion, it was carried for Conſolidating. Mr. Serjeant Pengelly mov'd, that his Eſtate Real and Perſonal might be ſubjected to the ſame Purpoſes to which the Eſtates of the late South-Sea Directors are ſubjected by the Bill for the Relief of the Sufferers. Mr. S——— in his Speech reflected on the Propoſal for reſtoring Credit as a Palliative, which had rather inflam'd than alleviated the Diſtemper, and made a Motion for an Inſtruction to the Committee of Secrecy to inquire what Officers concern'd in the Receipt of the Publick Money, or Perſons in Truſt for them, had bought Stock or Subſcriptions in the South-Sea, or any other Company. Sir William Wyndham ſeconded this Motion, and added, That there was Reaſon to apprehend that the Publick Money had not been adminiſter'd with due Oeconomy, particularly in relation to ſome foreign Troops that were in the Pay of England and Holland, during the late War, to whom great Sums had of late been allowed on Account of pretended Arrears. That Word Pretended is of infinite Uſe in Oppoſitions, turns Reaſon into Nonſence, and Truth into Falſhood. If there was Pay due to thoſe Troops the Arrears were not pretended: If there was none due there was none paid: What follow'd was the more extraordinary, becauſe it put the Houſe in mind of the late Duke of Ormond's deſerting the Confederates by Order of the Government, when that Gentleman was in the Adminiſtration, after they had ſeparated from the Engliſh; He therefore mov'd, that the Commiſſioners for ſtating the Army Debts be order'd to lay before the Houſe, Copies of the ſeveral Warrants by virtue of which they iſſued any Certificates of the Demand of Foreign Princes and States. Mr. Walpole ſaid, 'He wonder'd
'to hear of ſuch a Motion in that Houſe,
'when a little after the King's coming to the 'Crown an Act of Parliament had been made
'for Payment of thoſe Arrears, and that the 'Commiſſioners of Accounts had undoubtedly
'acted according to the Intent and Meaning of
'that Act; and indeed no body, who was a Friend to the late Confederacy againſt France, ever harbour'd the leaſt thought to the contrary. However, there were ſome who had been hearty Well-wiſhers to the Confederacy, that were willing enough then, from particular motives, to encourage any one that was

Diſ-

A.D. 1721 Diſguſted or Diſaffected under the preſent Adminiſtration. Mr. Lechmere anſwer'd, 'That 'he was not againſt the Motion that Honourable Gentleman had made (meaning Sir William Wyndham), neither, on the other hand, 'was he about to juſtify it; but he would 'freely tell the Gentleman who oppos'd it, 'that while the Nation was under the Preſſure 'of heavy Taxes he muſt expect that many 'ſuch Motions would be made, in order to 'find out Methods to eaſe the Publick Burthens: That as he was now in a higher Poſt 'than formerly, ſo a great deal more was expected from him than others, becauſe the 'Scheme which he had propos'd at the beginning of this Seſſions, for the raiſing of the 'Stock and reſtoring Publick Credit, had not 'had the deſir'd effect.' This Reproach was the more ungenerous, becauſe it could not be unknown to Mr. Lechmere, what Obſtacles had been thrown in the way of that Scheme, out of Envy or Jealouſy to the Promoter of it.

Mr. Lechmere anſwer'd by Mr. Robert Walpole.

Mr. Walpole reply'd with ſo much Moderation and Truth, that it ſilenc'd ſuch as were ready to have back'd the Chancellor of the Dutchy, ſaying, 'It was known to every body, that he 'ever was againſt the South-Sea Scheme, and 'had done all that in his Power lay, to hinder 'its taking Place; but now the Miſchief was 'done, and Things were brought to ſuch Extremities, he thought it his Duty, and therefore 'was willing to try the beſt Method he could 'think of, to extricate the Nation out of the 'Difficulties into which they were plung'd. He 'did not pretend to work MIRACLES; but only 'to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours towards retrieving the late Misfortunes: That with this honeſt Intention, he had promoted a Scheme, 'that had been laid before them, and appear'd 'the moſt plauſible of any then propos'd, for 'reſtoring publick Credit. That it could not be 'deny'd, that when that Scheme was purſu'd, 'it had done ſome Good, and kept up the Price 'of Stocks; and that they fell ſince it had been 'laid aſide: That, however, he never intended 'to raiſe Stocks above the intrinſick Value; for 'that would bring us again into the ſame unhappy Circumſtances, which the raiſing of 'them had before occaſion'd, &c. He afterwards 'lamented the ill Diſpoſition of ſome Perſons, 'who, inſtead of concurring with others in remedying the preſent Diſtemper, us'd all poſſible Means to IRRITATE and EXASPERATE the 'Minds of the People; concluding with a Motion, That a Day be appointed to conſider of 'the State of the publick Credit of the Kingdom;' which was unanimouſly agreed to: And afterwards, when an Addreſs was reſolv'd to be preſented to His Majeſty, humbly repreſenting the State of the publick Credit of this Kingdom, and to lay before His Majeſty the ſeveral Reſolutions of this Houſe, relating thereto; and a Committee was appointed to draw up the ſaid Addreſs; Robert Walpole, Eſq; was choſen Chairman.

The Hiſtory of the Schemes, Stocks, Jobbing, Calculations, Computations, Alterations, and Fluctuations, in the Money Trade in theſe Times, would take up much more room than I have to ſpare for this Reign; and therefore I cannot enter into the Detail; neither is the Subject ſo delightful as to tempt any one to write or to read it: For this Reaſon I have avoided mentioning the Caſes of ſome of the South-Sea Directors. and their Petitions to the Parliament; the Bill paſſing againſt them, and their Endeavours to procure a Mitigation of Puniſhment, by mitigating their Crimes, having prov'd ineffectual. But an Hiſtorian ought not to forget, that, notwithſtanding the many Petitions from Counties, Cities and Boroughs, great and ſmall, nearer or farther from Exchange-Alley, crying for Juſtice, there were many impartial Perſons, who did not give into the Severity of the Proſecution againſt all the Directors alike, nor againſt the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Aiſlabie; No, nor againſt Mr. Craggs ſenior, deceas'd: And theſe were of Opinion, that the Heat with which ſome Men puſh'd that Proſecution, and the Indifference, if not the Averſion, with which they heard all Propoſals for remedying the Evil, did not favour alike of a publick Spirit: Nay, it was compar'd to the ſetting a Houſe on Fire, and, inſtead of joining all in endeavouring to put it out, to run all away after the Incendiary. A.D. 1721

Speech in Mr. Aiſlabie's Caſe.

In the middle of July there was handed about a Speech upon the conſolidating Bill in Mr. Aiſlabie's Caſe, which in Parliament was ſpoken by Grey Neville, Eſq; Burgeſs for Berwick.

SIR,

'The Charge in the Bill before us, againſt 'the Honourable Perſon, who is the Subject of 'this Debate, conſiſts of theſe two Articles, 'Breach of Truſt, and Corruption. The Breach 'of Truſt is grounded upon the 8th, 9th, and '10th Reſolutions of this Houſe; upon which 'the Bill was order'd to be brought in. Theſe 'Articles contain the ſeveral Accuſations of his 'having been privy to the Snare of the Exchequer Bills upon Stock: His adviſing or approving the firſt Money Subſcription, at 300 per 'Cent. His encouraging the third Money Subſcription, by ſending in a Liſt. I ſhall not enter into any Diſpute whether theſe Facts can 'be prov'd or not, but taking them for granted, I am extreamly at a loſs to find any Breach 'of Truſt in the Chancellor of the Exchequer, for 'having had any Share in theſe Matters.

'Does the Act of Parliament direct the Treaſury to take Care in what manner the Company employ'd the Exchequer Bills? There is 'not one Word in the Act relating to it.

'Does the Act direct the Treaſury to take 'Care what Subſcriptions the Company took in, 'and at what Rate? If the Act had repos'd 'ſuch a Truſt in the Treaſury, this Honourable 'Perſon, and ev'ry other Officer in it, would 'have been highly to blame, if they had not 'kept a watchful Eye upon the Company in 'theſe Tranſactions: But if the Act leaves theſe 'Matters entirely to the Manngement of the 'Company, whoſe Concern alone it was, where 'can the Breach of Truſt be in the Treaſury?

'The Directors and the Company acted under the Authority of an Act of Parliament; 'has any body ever heard that a Chancellor of 'the Exchequer, or the Lords of the Treaſury, 'or the Lord High Treaſurer, had Power to 'controul or diſpence with, or give Direction 'to an Act of Parliament? If any body had 'any Power to controul them, we had, and 'we alone; I mean the whole Parliament then 'ſitting: The Exchequer Bills were iſſu'd and 'lent by the Company, and the firſt and ſecond 'Subſcriptions taken in, long before the Houſe 'roſe. One cannot be of Opinion there is no 'thought in this Reaſoning: We ſaw what they

*A.D.*1721 Two first S. S. Subscriptions approv'd by Parliament.

'were doing, did we find Fault with it? No: 'quite contrary. We approv'd of the two first 'Subscriptions, by another Act of Parliament, 'even in the same Session. And is this Honourable Person now to be punish'd in a most severe 'manner for what the Directors did, by Vertue 'of a Law of our making, and confirm'd by 'another Law, after these Matters were over? 'If there was any Breach of Trust any where, 'it was certainly in Us, who alone had the 'Power of putting a stop to any pernicious 'Practices of the Directors, whilst we our selves 'were sitting.

'But, Sir, we were not to blame for not having obstructed what they did at that Time; 'nor was the Treasury to blame, or were the 'Directors themselves to blame, or guilty of 'any Breach of Trust, on these Accounts: The 'taking in of Subscriptions, and the raising their 'Stock, was lawful in it self, and absolutely 'necessary to execute the Scheme, from which 'the Publick was to reap so great Advantage. 'But the Breach of Trust, the pernicious Pra- 'ctices from whence all these Calamities have 'flow'd, were the making use of the many 'Millions that they had got, only to raise their 'Stock to an imaginary Height, by lending out 'to Gamesters and Favourites, and even without any reasonable Security at all: They who 'advis'd and encourag'd these Practices, have 'been the Directors in their own Wrong, and 'to the manifest Wrong of many Thousands of 'Families.

'But upon this Head this Honourable Person 'is not accus'd by any body whatever.

The second Accusation in this Bill brought against him, is the Charge of Corruption, which is grounded upon the Resolution that declares, Mr. Knight had 20000 l. South-Sea Stock for this Honourable Person, whilst this Bill was depending, without any Money paid, or Security given, for the same.

'As for this Article, I must own, I am under great Concern for the Dignity of this 'House It is certain that the Zeal which 'has been shewn to do Justice upon Offenders, 'and to relieve unhappy Sufferers, is very commendable; but whether that Zeal has not 'carry'd us something too far in this Matter, 'I confess I very much fear. It is not to be 'expected, that when this Honourable Person 'made his Defence, what he said in his own 'Justification, could be perfectly understood, 'especially on this Head; it being the Result 'of several Accounts, which very few People 'can carry along with them in a Debate. I 'must own, I was not capable of doing it: 'And I could not help being extreamly surpriz'd, to find when that Matter came to be 'stated in the Votes, that by those very Reso- 'lutions, upon which the Houourable Person 'was condemn'd, his Innocence of this Crime, 'is as clear as it is possible to make it. This, I 'believe, every one, tho' ever so prejudic'd, 'will be satisfy'd of, that takes but the Pains 'of considering two or three of the Resolutions together.

'By the first Resolution we declare, Mr. 'Knight bought in December, 1719, 22000 l. 'Stock for this Honourable Person, who paid *A.D.*1721 'him, as appears by the same Account, 27800 l. 'for it.

'By the third Resolution we declare, Mr. 'Knight in February 1719, by the Hand of 'Surman and the Broker, sold 20000 l. of the 'same South-Sea Stock, for the Use and Bene'fit of Mr. Aislabie, at 130 per Cent. So that 'then Mr. Knight had 26000 l. of Mr. Aislabie's 'Money in his Hands; and likewise the re'maining 2000 l. South-Sea Stock, mention'd 'in the said Resolutions; which, at 170 l. the 'then Market Price, was worth 3500 l. both 'Sums together making 29500 l. which Sum 'was certainly a sufficient Security for the '35000 l. paid by Mr. Knight on the 4th of 'March following, for the 20000 l. South-Sea 'Stock remaining in his Hands, till the Ho'nourable Person paid him the rest of the 'Money, about 6000 l.

'There could not possibly be any Accident, 'by Fall of the Stocks, that cou'd render this 'a bad Security: But it is very well known 'that this was not all that the Honourable Per'son prov'd Mr. Knight had in his Hands at the 'Time he paid for the 20000 l. Stock. Mr. 'Surman prov'd at the Bar of the House, that 'Mr. Knight had 10000 l. East-India Stock, 'belonging to the Honourable Person, at that 'Time, which Wymondsel prov'd he bought for 'him; 9000 l. of which Mr. Surman sold on 'the 9th of March, for 18900 l. the whole at 'that Time being worth 21000 l.' So far the Case. The Arguments founded upon it, against the consolidating Bill, are many and strong, but must be left where we found them, for want of room here.

When the Preamble was read, Mr. Giles Earl mov'd, that the hard Epithets, Pernicious Practices, Infamous Corruption, &c. might be left out, or, at least, soften'd; urging, among other Reasons, that the same wou'd leave an indelible Blot upon his Son, a worthy Gentleman, and a Member of that House, and his Family, to whom the House had thought fit to allot a considerable Estate. Mr. Grey Neville spoke yet more at large in favour of Mr. Aislabie, alledging, that the Facts charg'd upon Mr. Aislabie, were not supported by sufficient Evidence. Sir Joseph Jekyll, Mr. Freeman, and others, insisted on the contrary; and this Reason was made use of, That though the Facts could not be legally prov'd, yet the House being satisfied in their Consciences of the Truth of those Facts, from the Evidences that appear'd before them, the same was sufficient for that House. Upon this, let us turn to the fifth Resolution: 'That the aforesaid 20000 l. South-Sea Stock, 'was Stock taken in, and held, by the said 'Robert Knight, for the Benefit of the said 'John Aislabie, Esq; after the Proposals of 'the South-Sea Company were accepted by 'this House, without any Money paid, or Se'curity given, by the said Mr. Aislabie.' And the sixth Resolution declar'd this an infamous Corruption.

In the Speech, of which I have given a short Extract, the Account is thus stated.

The Annaliſt writes, 'Sir Joſeph Jekyll having ſpoken with ſome Vehemence upon that 'Head, Mr. Neville made ſome ſmart Reflections upon him: But tho' Mr. Lechmere ſpoke 'likewiſe in Behalf of Mr. Aiſlabie, yet were 'they not able to ſtem the Tide, which ran ſo 'ſtrong againſt him, that it was carry'd, to let 'the Words in the Preamble relating to him 'continue.'

When the Houſe went upon the Bill, June 27th, for inveſting the Eſtates of the forfeiting Perſons in Truſtees, for the Uſe of the Publick, Mr. Arthur Moore mov'd for an Alteration of that Clauſe, and was ſeconded by Mr. Hungerford: They were anſwer'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll, and the latter by Mr. Lechmere; to whom the Lord Moleſworth reply'd. John Lade, Eſq; one of the Truſtees nam'd in the Bill, ſeem'd to decline that Office, ſaying, 'He was very 'eaſy in his Fortune, and therefore wiſh'd he 'might be excus'd from engaging in a Buſineſs, 'which he foreſaw would be attended with 'great Difficulties: That he knew not what 'the Houſe might expect from them; and that 'in ſo extenſive and perplex'd an Affair, it was 'impoſſible to pleaſe every body.' To this the 'Lord Moleſworth reply'd, with his former 'Vehemence, animadverting upon them who in ſo important an Affair appear'd Lukewarm in the Service of their Country. Mr. Grey Neville, and ſome others, ſpoke for the Motion: But tho' their Deſign, as we read in the Annals, in getting the Clauſe alter'd, was to mulct the Directors and others, inſtead of confiſcating their Eſtates, yet they did not mention it directly, only inſinuated, they would offer a Clauſe at the end of the Bill, which would more effectually anſwer the Purpoſes. Then the Houſe gave further Allowances to four of the late Directors.

Mr. John Lade deſires to be excus'd from being a Truſtee for S. S. Forfeitures

Mr. Aſtell had 10000 l. inſtead of 5; Sir John Blunt 5000 l. inſtead of 1; Sir Lambert Blackwell 15000 l. inſtead of 10; Mr. Hawes 5000 l. inſtead of 31 l.

Severe Motion againſt Sir Theodore Janſen.

It was mov'd to reduce Sir Theodore Janſſen's Allowance from 50 to 30000 l. a motion which will confirm every one in their Opinion, who think there was a mixture of ſome Prejudice, Reſentment, and even Envy in the vehemence of ſome Perſons in this Proſecution, for near 250000 l. was to be taken from him, who doubtleſs was worth ſeveral Thirty Thouſand Pounds before the South-Sea Scheme was thought of, having been a very conſiderable Merchant thirty or forty Years. This cruel Motion was rejected, and the 50000 l. Allowance agreed to by a great majority. In the 31 l. Allowance to Hawes, and the 1000 l. to Blunt, Men of Phlegm thought there was not Temper equal to the Dignity of Legiſlature.

A Propoſal to mulct the S. S. Directors.

The Clauſe hinted to be offer'd at the end of the Bill was prepar'd by Mr. Hutcheſon and was for a Mulct on the late Directors Eſtate, inſtead of a Confiſcation, Mr. Hutcheſon propos'd 1500000 l. Sir Thomas Croſs 1400000 l. Mr. Hungerford, Mr. Lowndes, Serjeant Pengelly, Mr. Yonge, Sir Robert Raymond, Mr. Robert Walpole, Mr. Lechmere, Mr. Milner, Sir John Eyles, Mr. Lade, and ſome others, were for the Mulct; but the Bill paſs'd as it was drawn, with a new Title, A Bill for raiſing Money upon the Eſtates of the late Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, Directors, &c. The Lords read the Bill the firſt time July the 8th; two Days after a Petition of John Aiſlabie, Eſq; was preſented to the Lords, praying to be heard by his Council: He was himſelf heard at their Bar, and made an eloquent pathetick Speech, which met with more Applauſe than Succeſs; it is long, and I can only give a few Paragraphs of it a place here.

Mr. Aiſlabie's Speech in the Houſe of Lords.

'For this Reaſon, my Lords, I have humbly 'repreſented to you the Difficulties I lay under 'in reſpect to my Defence, from the uncer- 'tainty of my Charge, for want of Facts ſtated 'to ſupport it, and without which it is pro- 'perly no Charge at all.

'Your Lordſhips have thought fit to deſire, 'at a Conference with the Commons, to have 'this Defect ſupply'd, and they have according- 'ly deliver'd to your Lordſhips a Paper, a 'Copy whereof you have been pleas'd to give 'me, in order to my Defence; upon Peruſal 'of which, I find only two Facts mention'd, 'which, if prov'd, are no Crimes, and of no 'relation to the Preamble of the Bill: For as, 'in the Preamble, there were Crimes alledg'd 'without Facts, ſo in this Paper there are Facts 'without Crimes. Your Lordſhips upon this 'extraordinary Occaſion deſir'd this Conference 'with the Commons, in order to be inform'd 'of the Facts that were the grounds of this 'Charge. They have been pleas'd to refer your 'Lordſhips to that Part of the Preamble rela- 'ting to the Directeors, by which they ſay, the 'Charge againſt me is to be explain'd. I have 'examin'd this Part of the Preanble, and am 'entirely at a Loſs to find one Fact ſtated in it: 'The whole is general, and moſt uncertain, 'and amounts to no Charge at all. That Part 'of the Preamble relating to me, is ſo far from 'being explain'd by it, that it is made more 'perplext and unintelligible.

'My Lords, it is a ſtrange Circumſtance that 'attends my Caſe: I ſtand here accus'd, and 'ready to make my Defence, before your Lord- 'ſhips,

'ſhips, my Judges; your Lordſhips are at a 'Loſs to know upon what Facts to try me: You 'have inquir'd of the Commons, my Accuſers, 'and are no better inform'd: But on my Part, 'my Lords, it is yet more extraordinary; the 'Accuſed is put under a Neceſſity to find out 'Facts to ſupport the Charge of his Accuſers. 'Was any Proceeding like this ever known be'fore? No, my Lords: The Bill of Attainder 'againſt my Lord Strafford, was extorted from 'the Legiſlature by Force and Violence, and, in 'ſome Reſpect like this, under Colour of appeaſ'ing deluded People. Vain Imagination! This 'Conceſſion of your Anceſtors made way for all 'the Miſeries that follow'd. But cruel and un'juſt as it was, there were Facts ſtated in that 'Bill, to charge that noble Lord; and his Ac'cuſers came LIKE MEN to this Bar, to make 'them good: But, where are my Accuſers, 'my Lords! Where are their Facts! And 'where is their Evidence! Was there ever any 'Accuſation that proceeded from a ſecret Com'mittee before, that was not made good at 'this Bar, by thoſe who are ſuppos'd to know 'the Facts beſt, and who have oblig'd the 'Publick with their Diſcoveries? Why do they 'decline to give your Lordſhips and the Pub'lick, this Satisfaction? My Lords, I find, to 'ſave this Trouble, they refer you to the No'toriety of the Facts. Strange Notoriety of 'Facts, that are not yet reveal'd, and to which 'there is no Evidence! Was this Expreſſion 'ever us'd before at any Conference? In any 'Act of Parliament? Or did it ever appear at 'this Bar before? Pray, my Lords, what does 'it mean? If it means Common Fame, or Pub'lick Clamour, Thanks to the Arts of my Ene'mies; I have had my full Share, and felt the 'cruel Effects of it: But if Fame is to be a 'Guide in judicial Proceedings, and in criminal 'Caſes, there is no Head ſafe; we are all in the 'Power of Whiſperers and Defamers.'

He then proceeds to the Allegations in the Bill againſt him, and defended himſelf in the like manly and eloquent manner. But the Charge was not clear'd away to their Lordſhips Satisfaction; and a ſecond moving Speech made by Mr. Aiſlabie hinder'd not the paſſing the Bill with the conſolidating Part in it, relating to him; and the Clauſe relating to James Craggs, ſenior, Eſq; paſt without any Negative.

A Tax on the Civil Liſt Revenues.

His Majeſty's Meſſage for a Tax on the Civil Liſt Revenues, being taken into Conſideration, July 12th, Mr. Robert Walpole ſhew'd the Occaſion and Reaſonableneſs of it, the Tenderneſs and Regard His Majeſty expreſt in it for the Eaſe of his Subjects, and the Neceſſity of complying with His Majeſty's Deſires. He was ſeconded by Mr. Lowndes, who ſaid, that Sixpence in the Pound on all the Civil Liſt Funds would anſwer the Purpoſe: But Mr. Pulteney, and Sir Joſeph Jekyll, mov'd for one Shilling in the Pound, adding, that if this was too much for the preſent Occaſion, the Overplus might go towards the Diſcharge of the publick Debts. Mr. Sloper mov'd for One Shilling and Sixpence, and that the Tax might extend to all military Officers, whoſe Pay was above Ten Shillings per Diem. This was oppos'd by Mr. Robert Walpole, who was anſwer'd by Mr. Sloper, as himſelf was by Mr. Lowndes: Mr. Herne, Mr. Arthur Moore, and ſome others, back'd Mr. Sloper's Motion; and their Arguments were anſwer'd by Mr. Robert Walpole and Mr. Lowndes: Upon which the Motion was drop'd. But the Queſtion being put, whether One Shilling or Sixpence in the Pound be laid on all Payments out of the Civil Liſt, it was carry'd for One Shilling, by one Voice, 111 againſt 110: But the next Day, July 13th, Mr. Lowndes mov'd that the Houſe do not agree with the Committee in the Reſolution of a Shilling, and the Tax be alter'd to Sixpence. Mr. Hungerford compar'd this Tax to that of 500000*l.* in the laſt Reign; which he ſaid was then call'd Robiniſm; and he fear'd this would bear the ſame Name; which in Truth he neither fear'd nor expected. Mr. Treby, Secretary at War, anſwer'd Mr. Hungerford; Mr. Pelham anſwer'd Mr. Clayton, and the Lord Stanhope, Mr. Pelham: Then Mr. Robert Walpole anſwer'd moſt of the Objections that had been offer'd on the oppoſing Side; to whom Mr. Pulteney reply'd; but in his Reply, left the Matter to come to the Man; which is too often done, in popular Aſſemblies, where perſonal and particular Reflections are below their Character, which is publick and general: 'He 'ſaid that Gentleman had not always been of the 'Opinion he now ſeem'd to be of; that his 'Mind alter'd as he was in or out of Place, and 'as he might be out in a Twelve-month's Time, '(this Prophecy makes but a very ill Figure 'thirteen Years after, when it is not yet com'pleated) ſo he might then be of another Opi'nion.' Mr. Walpole did not forbear retorting, 'That it was poſſible indeed he might be out 'again: But whenever that happen'd, he ſhould 'be glad to reſign to a Perſon of ſo much Merit 'as Mr. Pulteney.' The Maſter of the Rolls ſpoke for One Shilling, as it was reſolv'd by the Committee; but upon the Queſtion, the Houſe put a Negative upon it, 132 Voices againſt 83; and then it was reſolv'd, to raiſe 500000*l.* to diſcharge the Civil Liſt Debts, by deducting Sixpence in the Pound, out of Salaries, Wages, &c. A Motion being made for exempting the Duke of Marlborough's Penſion in the Poſt-Office, from this Tax, it miſcarry'd, and ſome thought it was made with too much Precipitation.

A.D. 1721

Carry'd for 12d. in the Pound on Civil Liſt Payments.

Alter'd to Sixpence.

Mr. Pulteney anſwer'd by Mr. Robert Walpole.

The Proprietors of the publick Debts, who had ſubſcrib'd their Annuities to the South-Sea Company, empower'd eighteen of their Number, of whom, Sir Thomas Abney, the Senior Alderman of London, and Sir Gilbert Heathcote, were the two firſt, to draw up a Petition to the King, repreſenting their deplorable Condition, and praying His Majeſty's moſt gracious Conſideration and Compaſſion: It was preſented by Juſtice Fuller, in the Abſence of the two abovemention'd Knights, introduc'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend; and His Majeſty moſt graciouſly anſwer'd:

His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Annuitants Petition.

'The Subject Matter of your Addreſs has 'lain ſome time before the Parliament: Your 'Profeſſions of Loyalty and Zeal for me and 'my Government, leave me no room to doubt 'of your readily acquieſcing, as good Subjects, 'in whatever the Parliament ſhall think juſt 'and reaſonable, and for the Good of the 'Publick.'

Parliament's Addreſs about publick Credit.

The whole Houſe of Commons preſented an Addreſs to the King, July 26th, repreſenting the State of the publick Credit, and their Reſolutions relating thereto: The Cloſe of which was:

'But as the antient Uſage and eſtabliſh'd 'Rules of Parliament make it impracticable for 'us to prepare Bills for the Royal Aſſent, du'ring

A.D.1721 'ring the preſent Seſſion of Parliament, for ſome 'of the Purpoſes contain'd in the Reſolutions, 'we have humbly preſum'd to lay the ſame be- 'fore your Majeſty, for your Royal Conſidera- 'tion; not doubting but that your Majeſty 'will, out of your great Wiſdom and accu- 'ſtomed Grace and Goodneſs to your People, 'as ſoon as the publick and private Bills, now 'depending in Parliament, ſhall be diſpatch'd, 'give us an early Opportunity of perfecting 'this great and neceſſary Work.'

His Majeſty's Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

I have ſuch an entire Confidence in this Parliament's Duty and Affection to me, and their Zeal for the publick Service, that I ſhall very readily comply with your Deſire; and will ſoon give you an Opportunity of doing what you propoſe, for ſettling and eſtabliſhing the Credit of the Kingdom.

This Addreſs and Anſwer were very neceſſary to quiet the Minds of thoſe Perſons that were very much diſcompos'd by their Impatience to have a Remedy for the South-Sea Evil, which was no eaſy Matter to be come at.

Three Days after the King came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to Acts paſſ. An Act for raiſing 500000 l. by a Tax of Sixpence in the Pound on the Civil Liſt Revenues.

An Act for raiſing Money upon the Eſtates of the Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, Directors, &c. of the South-Sea Company.

An Act for the King's moſt gracious, general, and free Pardon.

In the very time of paſſing the laſt Act, were Biſhop Atterbury, the Lord North and Grey, and others, conſpiring the Deſtruction of King and Country; as will appear in the Sequel. The Parliament was prorogu'd, after the paſſing of theſe Acts, and others, to the 31ſt of July.

Creations. Towards the end of July, William Ponſonbey, Eſq; was created Baron Besberow, of Beſberow in the County of Kilkenny.

James D'Arcy, Eſq; Baron of Navan, in the County of Meath.

John Blithe, Eſq; Baron Clifton, of Rathmore in the ſaid County. All in the Kingdom of Ireland.

On Monday the 31ſt of July, the King came again to the Houſe of Peers, and, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor, made the following Speech.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

'The Occaſion of my calling you together 'ſo ſuddenly, is to give you an Opportunity 'of reſuming the Conſideration of publick 'Credit.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons:

'The Progreſs that you made in this Affair, 'during the laſt Seſſion, has laid ſuch a Foun- 'dation of this neceſſary Work, that the World 'is fully appriz'd of what is reaſonably to 'be hop'd for at this preſent Conjuncture.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'I muſt recommend to you all poſſible Diſ- 'patch; and am perſuaded, that at this Sea- 'ſon of the Year, your Deliberations will be 'confin'd to what is abſolutely neceſſary up- 'on this extraordinary Occaſion.'

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, immediately reſolv'd themſelves into a Grand Committee, to take His Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration; and came to twelve Reſolutions. Thoſe which gave the greateſt Satisfaction, were the A.D.1721

1. For giving Relief to the South-Sea Company, with Regard to the Payment of Four Millions, 450000 l. &c.

3. That the Proprietors of Redeemables, and of the Second, Third, and Fourth Money Subſcription, have an additional Allowance of 33 l. 6 s. 8 d. per Cent. Reſolutions of the Houſe in favour of the S. S. Sufferers.

10. That no ſpecial Bail be requir'd for any Action brought upon any Contract, ſince the firſt of December, 1719, for the Sale of any Subſcription or Stock of the South-Sea Company.

11. That no Execution be awarded on any Judgment obtain'd upon ſuch Contracts.

12. That all ſuch Contracts unperform'd before the 1ſt of December, 1720, be null and void.

We have mention'd the Impatience of the Proprietors of the Annuities, and other Redeemables, for Relief; and great Numbers of them came in a rude and inſolent manner to the Lobby of the Houſe of Commons, to demand Juſtice of the Members as they went into the Houſe. They were ruder to Mr. Comptroller than any other Member; tearing part of his Coat as he paſt by: Of which the Houſe being inform'd, it was order'd, that the Juſtices of the Peace for the City of Weſtminſter, do immediately attend this Houſe, and bring the Conſtables with them. Annuitants mutinous to the Members.

Four of the Juſtices attending, Mr. Speaker acquainted them, 'That the Houſe was in- 'form'd, that there was a great Crowd of ri- 'otous People in the Lobby, and Paſſages lead- 'ing to this Houſe; and that he was command- 'ed by the Houſe, to direct them, the Juſtices, 'to go and diſperſe the ſaid Riotous Crowd, 'and to take Care to prevent the like Riots for 'the future.' The Juſtices caus'd the Proclamation againſt Riots to be twice read; and it had the Effect intended; the Rioters diſpers'd; but not without venting their Reſentments in hard Words.

The Act for reſtoring publick Credit being ready for the Royal Aſſent, the 10th of Auguſt, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and, having given it to the ſaid Act, made a moſt gracious Speech, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor; which was clos'd thus. 'You are all ſenſible that the Diſcontents occa- 'ſion'd by the great Loſſes that many of my 'Subjects have ſuſtain'd, have been induſtri- 'ouſly rais'd and inflam'd by malicious and 'ſeditious Libels; but I make no Doubt, but 'that by your prudent Conduct in your ſeveral 'Countries, all the Enemies to my Govern- 'ment, who flatter'd themſelves they ſhould 'be able to take Advantage from our Misfor- 'tunes, and blow up the Sufferings of my Peo- 'ple into popular Diſcontent and Diſaffecti- 'on, will be diſappointed in their wicked De- 'ſigns and Expectations.' His Majeſty's Speech at the Cloſe of the Seſſion.

The Parliament was prorogu'd to the 19th of October: At which Time they met; and His Majeſty, by the Lord Chancellor, made a Speech to them, the Contents of which will appear in the Parliaments Addreſſes.

The Commons being return'd from the Houſe of Peers to their own, Sir George Oxenden mov'd for an Addreſs of Thanks on the ſeveral Heads of His Majeſty's Speech, and

A.D. 1721 was seconded by Mr. Talbot; and an Addreſs being order'd to be drawn, when it was reported to the Houſe, Mr. Arthur Moore ſtood up and ſaid, 'He thought the Expreſſions relating 'to the preventing the Running of Goods, 'were too general; and that, in his Opinion, 'the beſt way to prevent that pernicious 'Practice, was to take off ſome of the high 'Duties, whereby the Temptation to ſmugling 'would very much abate, &c.' Mr. Moore had not probably found out Ways and Means how to raiſe Funds to ſecure the Payment of the Money for the Uſes to which the Cuſtoms were appropriated; and his Argument that the leſſening the Duties would leſſen the Running, was the very ſame that had made ſeveral Companies merry, to whom 'twas reported, that a certain Trader hearing a very warm Diſpute about the Allowances for Damages on Wines before the late Regulation to put an end to it, ſaid, he had thought of a way that would effectually remedy that Evil; and being ask'd with ſome Impatience what it was, ſaid, Take off the Duties, and there will be no Need of Allowances. When the Commons went upon the Navy Debt, which amounted to 17000000*l.* Mr. Freeman ſaid, with ſome Warmth, 'It was Matter of Wonder how ſo 'great a Debt could be incurr'd, when the Par-'liament had provided what had been deſir'd 'upon that Head.' And Mr. Shippen, ſeconding him, inſinuated, 'That ſuch extraordinary 'Expences could not be for the immediate 'Service of Great Britain, but, in all Probabi-'lity, for the Preſervation of ſome Foreign 'Acquiſitions.' Ungrateful and groundleſs Inſinuation! Was not the Charge the Nation had been at, to prevent an Invaſion by the Swedes and Ruſſians, and to ſecure their Trade to the North, for the immediate Service of Great Britain, tho' every one expected that the Diſguſted would never forget that His Majeſty had Foreign Dominions, whenever there was a Call for any Foreign Expence on that Side of Europe? Mr. Plummer anſwer'd them both with equal Warmth; and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer ſaid, 'He might 'aſſure them 1100000*l.* of the Debt was con-'tracted in the laſt Reign; and as the Perſons 'now in the Adminiſtration were not anſwer-'able for that Part, neither did they deſire that 'above one Million of it ſhould be this Year 'provided for:' Which was carry'd without dividing.

An ungrateful and groundleſs Reflection about the Navy Debt

Mr. Law comes to England.

When Sir John Norris return'd with his Squadron from the Baltick, there came in it the famous Mr. John Law, mention'd in the Affair of the Miſſiſſipi and Bank Projects in France; where he had been advanc'd to the high Station of Comptroller of the Finances; but his Project having gone near to compleat the Ruin of that Kingdom, he was at laſt forc'd to fly it, to avoid the Reſentment of the enrag'd Multitude, who had more than once attempted his Life. He ſpent ſome time at Venice, went to Rome, and, whether it was to diſguiſe his true Intention, or make his Coming grateful to the Pope, he paid a Viſit to the Pretender: But ſome time after, People were ſurpriz'd with the News of his being at Hanover, and deſigning ſhortly to come over to England. The Annaliſt writes, 'He was brought up to London by a Lord, with whom 'he had negotiated for great Parcels of South-'Sea Stock; was privately admitted at Court, 'and having taken a Houſe near Hanover-'Square, he was for ſome Days viſited by vaſt 'Numbers of Perſons of Quality and Diſtinc-'on. This gave ſo much Umbrage, that when 'the Lords met on Thurſday the 26th of Octo-'ber, the Earl Coningsby repreſented to that 'auguſt Aſſembly, how dangerous it might be 'on ſeveral Accounts to entertain and counte-'nance ſuch a Man as Mr. Law, and deſir'd 'that a Day might be appointed to take that 'Matter into Conſideration:' Which their Lordſhips did accordingly, a Fortnight after. The Earl Coningsby ſaid, 'For his own Part, 'he could not but entertain ſome Jealouſy of 'a Perſon who had done ſo much Miſchief in 'a neighbouring Kingdom, and who being ſo 'immenſly rich, as he was reported to be, 'might do a great deal more Hurt here, by 'tampering with many who were grown de-'ſperate, by being involv'd in the Calamity oc-'caſion'd by the fatal Imitation of his pernici-'ous Projects: That this Perſon was the more 'dangerous, in that he renounc'd not only his 'natural Affection to his Country, and his Al-'legiance to his lawful Sovereign, by being na-'turaliz'd in France, and openly countenan-'cing the Pretender's Friends, but, which was 'worſt of all, and weigh'd moſt with his Lord-'ſhip, that he alſo renounc'd his God, by 'turning Roman-Catholick: Concluding, That 'they ought to enquire, whether Sir John Nor-'ris had Orders to bring him over?' To this laſt Part of the Earl Coningsby's Speech, the Lord Carteret anſwer'd in Subſtance, 'That 'Mr. Law had many Years ago the Misfortune 'to kill a Gentleman in a Duel; but that hav-'ing at laſt receiv'd the Benefit of the King's 'Clemency, and the Appeal lodg'd by the Re-'lations of the Deceas'd being taken off, he 'was come over to plead His Majeſty's moſt 'gracious Pardon: That there was no Law to 'keep any Engliſhman out of his Country; 'and as Mr. Law was a Subject of Great Bri-'tain, it was not even in the King's Power to 'hinder him from coming over, if he thought 'fit.' To this the Lord Trevor reply'd, 'That 'Mr. Law was indeed a Subject of Great Bri-'tain, and therefore as ſuch had an undoubted 'Right to come over: But that the Circum-'ſtances of a Perſon of his Character, being 'brought over on board an Engliſh Admiral, 'and at this Juncture of Time, might deſerve 'the Conſideration of that Houſe.' The Earl Cowper ſpoke much to the ſame Effect; but the Matter drop'd; and Mr. Law pleaded his Pardon at the King's Bench Bar the laſt Day of the Term.

Earl Coningsby objects againſt his Coming.

Debates about him.

In the Debate upon that Part of the King's Speech which related to the Navy Debt, the Biſhop of Rocheſter mov'd for an Addreſs, That the Expences of the Navy do never exceed the Proviſion made for it by Parliament. This wild Motion was oppos'd by the Earl of Ilay, who urg'd, 'That the publick Good and 'the Safety of the Nation being the Grand Ob-'ject and Rule of Government, ſome Latitude 'muſt of Neceſſity be given, and Allowances 'made, to thoſe who are in the Adminiſtrati-'on, for extraordinary Expences upon unfore-'ſeen Exigencies: And therefore, if the Mini-'ſters, as they had promis'd it, gave the 'Houſe a ſatisfactory Account how the Debt 'in Queſtion came to be tranſacted, there was 'not (in his Lordſhip's Opinion) any Occaſion 'for ſuch an Addreſs.' The Lord Chancellor Parker,

A.D.1721 Parker, and ſome other Lords, ſpoke to the ſame Purpoſe: And the Queſtion being put upon the Biſhop of Rocheſter's Motion, it was carry'd in the Negative, by 64 Voices; among which the Lord Harcourt's was the more taken Notice of, for that till then he had ſeldom been on the contrary Side to the Biſhop of Rocheſter. His Lordſhip had been lately created a Viſcount, and as ſuch introduc'd into the Houſe of Peers, between the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and the Lord Viſcount St. John.

Lord Harcourt made a Viſcount.

Letters from Sir Robert Sutton, the Britiſh Miniſter at Paris, bringing Advice that the Peſtilence continu'd to rage at Marſeilles, and the South Parts of France, ſeveral Conſultations were held by a Committee of the Privy Council; to which three of the moſt eminent Phyſicians, Sir Hans Sloane, Dr. Mead, and Dr. Arbuthnot, were call'd and adviſ'd with: And it was reſolv'd, to uſe all poſſible Precautions, both to prevent the Infection being brought over, and to check its Progreſs in Caſe it ſhould pleaſe the Almighty to afflict this Nation with ſo diſmal a Calamity. A Proclamation was publiſh'd, requiring all Perſons coming from any Part or Place on the Coaſt of France, Northward of the Bay of Biſcay, to bring Bills of Health. And another for a General FAST, to be obſerv'd on Friday the 8th of December.

Phyſicians conſulted about the Peſtilence.

About the middle of October, Baron Sparr, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Sweden, notify'd the Treaty of Peace concluded between his Maſter and the Czar of Muſcovy; and the Marquis de Puozzo Bueno, Miniſter of the King of Spain, preſented to His Majeſty a Letter from his Maſter, notifying the Marriage of the Infanta of Spain with His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; and of the Prince of Aſturias with Madamoiſelle de Montpenſier, Daughter to the Duke of Orleans, Regent of France.

Mr. Knight taken, and eſcap'd.

In the mean time Mr. Robert Knight, who had at laſt been apprehended in the Netherlands, and confin'd to the Caſtle of Antwerp, made his Eſcape from thence, not without general Suſpicion of Connivance, purchas'd with Part of the Money, which he ſaid in his Letter beforemention'd was but juſt a Sufficiency for his Subſiſtance; but doubtleſs he ſpar'd ſome to ſubſiſt thoſe that conniv'd at his Eſcape, in a much better manner than ever they ſubſiſted before.

Honours and Preferments.

Honours and Preferments confer'd ſince Mention was laſt made of them: Sir Walter Yonge, Sir John Stanley, John Pulteney, Eſq; Thomas Walker, Eſq; Sir Charles Peers, Robert Baylis, Eſq; and Sir John Evelyn, were appointed Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms: Richard Plummer, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations. The Lord Clinton was made Lord Lieutenant of Devonſhire: The Duke of Chandos, Lord Lieutenant of the Counties of Hereford and Radnor. Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; was created Baron Lechmere, of Eveſham in the County of Worceſter. The Lord Chancellor Parker was created Earl of Macclesfield: Sir George Byng, Baron Byng, of Santhill in the County of Bedford; and Viſcount Torrington, in the County of Devon. His Grace the Duke of Portland, was made Governor of Jamaica. Dr. Benjamin Hoadly, Lord Biſhop of Bangor, was tranſlated to the See of Hereford; to which Dioceſe his Lordſhip endear'd himſelf by his Affability, Humanity, and other engaging Qualities; which render'd his Example as uſeful to the Clergy and Laity in the Conduct of this Life, as his Divine Leſſons were for that in their Preparations for another; and made ſome of the moſt partial of them aſham'd of the ill Impreſſions they had receiv'd of his Lordſhip's Character, from the ſcandalous and malicious Reports and Writings of his Enemies. Having heard this Declaration on the Spot, I thought it wou'd be Partiality to omit it. The Pious and Learned Biſhop Willis was tranſlated from the See of Glouceſter to that of Saliſbury. Dr. Wilcox, Chaplain to the Young Princeſſes, was promoted to the Biſhoprick of Glouceſter: Dr. Reynolds was made Biſhop of Bangor. The Duke of Chandos, the Earl of Portmore, and the Lord Cornwallis, were ſworn of the Privy Council: William Pulteney, Eſq; was made Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, and the Town and County of Kingſton upon Hull: Henry Worſely, Eſq; was appointed Governor of Barbados, in the room of the Lord Belhaven, who lately periſh'd in the Royal Anne Galley, in his Voyage thither, not far from the Lizard. Colonel Lumley, ſecond Son to the Earl of Scarborough, was appointed His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Portugal, in the room of Mr. Worſeley.

Biſhop of Bangor tranſlated to the See of Hereford.

The Navy Debt being much encreas'd within three or four Years, the Commiſſioners of the Navy were examin'd before the Committee of Lords, who had that Matter in Conſideration. By the Lord North and Grey's and the Biſhop of Rocheſter's Zeal in the Proſecution of this Inquiry, one cannot doubt of their Hopes of ſtarting ſomething in the Courſe of it, to caſt an Odium on the Government which at that very Time they were ſecretly undermining, and contriving its Deſtruction. Other Lords, who had no ſuch Views, and who were never ſuſpected to be in the Pretender's Intereſt, were as forward as they, in ſifting this Matter; as Earl Cowper, Earl Coningsby, as well as the Lord Trevor, and Lord Bathurſt: But when the Queſtion was put, 'That the Reaſon of the Increaſe of the Debt 'of the Navy, from the Year 1717, to September 1721, was becauſe there were more 'Seamen employ'd in the Service of the Navy, 'than were provided for by Parliament:' It was carry'd in the Negative, by 60 Voices againſt 21.

Vote concerning the Navy Debt

On the 7th of December His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Land Tax Bill; and being withdrawn, the Houſe of Lords went into a Committee on the Bill to prevent Infection from the Plague: A Caſe in which there could be little room for Party Debate; ev'ry one's Concern being alike; and it being a Caſe in which neither Ambition, Intereſt, nor Reſentment could be put in Competition with the common Safety of Life. However, we find in the Debate upon it, on one Side of the Queſtion, the Lord North and Grey, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, the Earl of Strafford, Lord Trevor, and Lord Bathurſt, Earl Cowper, and Earl Coningsby, who oppos'd the forcing Perſons to accept of Nurſes and Phyſicians appointed by the Government; and were for repealing as much of the Quarantine Bill, paſt laſt Seſſion, as impower'd the Government to remove any Perſons whatſoever to a Peſt-Houſe, Debate upon the Infection Act.

A.D.1721 Peſt-Houſe, if they were infected, and to draw Lines and Trenches round any City, Town, &c. But Earl Cowper's Reaſon, not to do it, becauſe it was done in France, does not carry with it ſo much Weight as his Lordſhip had been wont to throw into his Arguments. The Lords on the other Side of the Queſtion were the Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Viſcount Harcourt, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, the Lord Carteret, the Duke of Newcaſtle, and the Duke of Wharton. But the Queſtion being put on a Motion of Earl Cowper's to bring in a Bill to repeal the abovemention'd Clauſes in the Quarantine Act, it paſt in the Negative, by a great Majority.

On the 14th of December the Quakers Petition was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, praying that the Words, In the Preſence of Almighty God, might be, by a Bill for that Purpoſe, left out of their Solemn Affirmation. Sir John Ward, and Mr. Heyſham, two of the London Members, ſpoke to the Petition; as did alſo Lord William Pawlett, Mr. Sloper, Horatio Walpole, Eſq; and Sir Wilfred Lawſon: Upon which their Petition was granted, and a Bill order'd to be brought in; which was deny'd them in the Time of the Earl of Oxford's, and the late Lord Bolingbroke's Miniſtry.

Earl of Strafford's Speech againſt the late War and Treaty with Spain

The late Treaty with Spain being under Conſideration in the Houſe of Peers, Decemb. 19th, the Earl of Strafford ſuggeſted, 'That as the 'War with Spain was undertaken without Neceſſity, or a juſt Provocation, ſo the Peace 'was concluded without any Benefit or Advantage: That contrary to the Law of Nations, the Spaniſh Fleet was fallen upon without any Declaration of War.' This Argument was much inſiſted on every where by ſuch as bore no good Will to the Miniſters; and was very eaſily anſwer'd by thoſe that approv'd of what they had done. The Earl cloſing his Speech with a Motion for an Addreſs to have the Inſtructions given, Sir George Byng, now Lord Torrington, laid before the Houſe, He was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey, and back'd by the Archbiſhop of York, the Earls of Aylesford and Cowper, the Lords Guildford, Trevor, Bathurſt, and ſeveral others, who were anſwer'd by the Earl of Sunderland, the Duke of Wharton, the Lord Carteret, and other Lords. After which, the Earl of Strafford's Motion for the Addreſs was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 67 Voices againſt 24. But the Lord North and Grey moving for an Account of the diſpoſal of the Ships taken from the Spaniards, and the Earl of Aylesford ſeconding him, it paſt without a Diviſion. A Petition of the City of London referring to certain Clauſes in the Bill to prevent Infection having been rejected by the Peers, moſt of the ſame Lords who proteſted about the Repeal of the beforemention'd Part of the Quarantine Act, proteſted alſo againſt rejecting the City Petition.

His Motion carry'd in the Negative.

City Petition about the Quarantine rejected.

A.D.1721 The Mutiny and Deſertion Bill ſeldom came into Debate in Parliament, ſince the Treaty of Ryſwick, but the Forces in Great Britain and Ireland, call'd a Standing Army, were involv'd in it. When that Bill was read in the Houſe of Lords, December 22d, the Lord Trevor open'd the Debate upon it with a long Speech, againſt exerciſing Martial Law in Time of Peace: His Lordſhip own'd that ſuch a Law was neceſſary in the Time of the late Rebellion; but, added he, there being at preſent no ſuch Reaſon, and all being perfectly quiet and eaſy under His Majeſty's mild Government, there was now no Need of ſuch a Bill. In this very Time of Eaſe and Quietneſs were Biſhop Atterbury, Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Orrery, and others, caballing to get the Aſſiſtance of the Enemies of our Country, to invade it, to lay violent Hands on the Sacred Perſons of the King and the Prince of Wales, to ſubvert the Conſtitution, and place on the Throne a popiſh bigotted Fugitive.

There was at this Time much Clamour againſt the French building and buying Ships in England. Some were built for them at Briſtol, and more at London. When this Matter was taken into Conſideration in the Houſe of Lords, Earl Coningsby open'd the Debate againſt it, and was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey, and Earl Cowper. The Argument of the Danger of furniſhing Foreigners with Ships, that might one Day be employed againſt us, would be very ſtrong, if every one did not know, that the French cou'd have had Ships in Holland or Hamburgh; and, as the Lord Carteret and Lord Townſhend urg'd, It was better for us to get their Money than our Neighbours. The Judges declar'd their Opinion, That there was no Law whereby the King was impower'd to hinder any of his Subjects from building Ships for any one that would employ them, whether Natives or Foreigners. Upon which, Earl Cowper mov'd that a Bill be brought in for that Purpoſe. This Motion was oppos'd by the Earl of Sunderland; to whom Earl Cowper reply'd, in a long and vehement Speech; and the Debate was continu'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, the Duke of Argyle, and the Lord Carteret, on one Side; and the Lord Bathurſt, Earl Coningsby, and the Lord North and Grey, on the other: But at laſt Earl Cowper's Motion was carry'd, with this Proviſo, Except Licenſed by His Majeſty. If Merchants, who are like to be the firſt and greateſt Sufferers by the Ships of Enemies, are proper Judges in this Caſe, 'twas, and is, their general Opinion, 'That Mo'ney brought to Market ſhould never be 'refus'd, if the Seller can find his Account 'in taking it.' This was then the Talk at Briſtol, when the Ships were building there for the French; and unleſs one cou'd have hinder'd them from getting Ships elſewhere, which the Lord North and Grey had doubtleſs not very much at Heart, conſidering he was then in a Conſpiracy, to have Aſſiſtance from them againſt his King and Country, the wiſeſt Way was certainly to take their Money, ſince the Danger would be the ſame, if we ſhould let others take it.

Nothing more remarkable happen'd in the Parliament of Ireland at this Time, than the Houſe of Commons rejecting the Heads of a Bill for eſtabliſhing a Bank in that Kingdom.

On the 9th of January, a Bill was brought into the Houſe of Commons, for building an Exchange at Briſtol, and was read the firſt Time: Indeed there is great Want of ſuch a Thing in that City, where the Merchants ſtand in the middle of the Street, between the Council Houſe, and a ſhort Shed cover'd, which can't ſave a quarter Part of them from the Weather when rainy and windy.

Biſhop Atterbury againſt the Quakers.

The ſame Day, Jan. 9th, the Lords read the firſt Time the Quakers Bill, and a Motion being made for the reading it a ſecond Time, it was oppos'd by the Lord North and Grey, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter; 'tis worth obſerving, that the Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Enemies to Proteſtant Diſſenters, are every where the ſame Set of Men, The Biſhop of Rocheſter ſaid, the Quakers were hardly Chriſtians. He was Himſelf a rare Chriſtian, having moſt ſolemnly and religiouſly more than once abjur'd the Pretender, and ſworn Allegiance to his rightful and lawful Sovereign King George, and was at this Time conſpiring to bring in the Pretender, and with him his ſure Attendants, Popery and Slavery. Did he think Chriſtianity conſiſted only in Mitres, Croſiers, Cathedrals, Coaches, Equipage, Forms and Ceremonies. A noble Peer of North Britain anſwer'd: "He wonder'd that Reverend Prelate ſhould call in Queſtion whether the "Quakers were Chriſtians, ſince they were "ſo at leaſt by Act of Parliament, being in"cluded in the Toleration Act, under the "general Denomination of Proteſtant Diſſen"ters." The Biſhop in the Meekneſs of his Spirit reply'd; "It was againſt a ſtanding "Order of that Auguſt Aſſembly, to make "any Perſonal Reflection, and he thought it "a much greater Indecency, to make a Jeſt "of any Thing that was ſacred, that the call"ing the Quakers Chriſtians by Act of Par"liament, was a Sort of Side-wind Reflec"tion upon Chriſtianity itſelf." One can as ſoon queſtion the Being of ſuch a Perſon, as that he had the leaſt Doubt upon him, that his Right to a Seat in that Auguſt Aſſembly was Divine, and yet if he would have ſet aſide all Acts of Parliament, and inſiſted only on the Authority of Scripture, I believe he would have found himſelf to have been leſs a Peer than the Quakers are Chriſtians, without the Act here referr'd to. The Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Carteret, and the Lord Bathurſt, having ſpoken for a ſecond Reading, it was ordered for the next Monday, when it was committed. After this pious Prelate had endeavoured to prove that the Quakers were no Chriſtians, if it was not ſhocking to find that a Biſhop knows ſo little of the Chriſtian Religion, as to think that the believing and practiſing the Doctrine of the Goſpel is not Chriſtianity, one might divert the Reader and one's Self too a little with the whimſicalneſs of this Argument, but Hiſtory is not a Place for ſuch Things. He was ſeconded by the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Strafford, Earl Coningsby, and Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York, who ſpoke againſt the Bill, and were anſwered by the Earl of Sunderland, the Duke of Argyle, the Biſhop of Peterborough, the Earl of Ilay, and the Earl of Macclesfield. The Queſtion being put was carry'd in the Affirmative, by 64 Voices againſt 14. A very remarkable Majority. On Wedneſday, the 17th of January, the Lords had a Petition preſented to them from a few London Lecturers and Curates againſt the ſaid Bill. Dr. Moſs, Dean of Ely, the ſame who was ſuppos'd to have had a Hand in drawing up Sacheverel's Speech, was ſuppos'd alſo to have had a Hand in drawing up this Petition, which he ſet his Name to at the Head of.

Is it to be partial to bear Witneſs to the

A.D.1722 Glory of these great Names, who so distinguish'd themselves by this unparallel'd Instance of Christian Meekness and Charity. Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York, spoke in Behalf of this Petition, and mov'd that it might be receiv'd and read, which indeed would not have been much for its Honour. This was oppos'd by the Lord Visc. Townshend, and there ensued a long and warm Debate. The Lord North and Grey, Dr. Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester, the Earl of Strafford, the Earl of Coningsby, the Lord Trevors, the Lord Bathurst, and Earl Cowper supported the Archbishop of York's Motion.

Earl Cowper's Kindness to a Scrupulous Conscience.

Earl Cowper probably did it out of an Opinion that the Alteration of the Quakers giving Testimony by an Affirmation instead of an Oath, was a breaking in upon the Forms in Courts of Judicature, and the Practice of the Law. for it is certain, he did not do it as the Bishop of Rochester did, out of a Conceit that the Quakers were not Christians, and therefore ought to have no Favour: Being on this Subject, it will not be foreign to it, to remember the generous Behaviour of this great Lord and Lawyer, in the Case of a Protestant Dissenter, no Quaker who had a Scruple upon him about taking the usual Oath, requir'd by the Laws in England. This Person was a Preacher, and had a Meeting House in Southwark, the Landlord of which using him unjustly and unhansomely, he left it and hir'd Another. The Landlord thinking he might oblige him to keep it, or pay Rent for a longer Time, fil'd a Bill in Chancery against him, when Earl Cowper was Lord Chancellor. The Preacher drew up an Answer to it, which was a good one, if Reasoning would do the Business in a Chancery Suit, but he would not swear to his Answer. The Lord Chancellor having heard of this Man's Preaching and Scruple, was desirous to speak with him, which he was inform'd of by his Sollicitor. The Preacher, who wanted not a due Share of Confidence, waited on his Lordship, who was pleas'd to make him sensible of the Necessity there was for his putting in his Answer upon Oath. The Respondent then enter'd on the Argument of the Unlawfulness of such Oaths for Form and Lucre Sake, and it being a Topick he had a long while studied, he offer'd several Things against them to his Lordship, which he had not heard of before, and being soon weary of discussing a Matter which his Lordship thought so little needed it, he clos'd the Conference thus: You may be a better Divine than I am, but I am certainly the better Lawyer, and must tell you in a Word or Two, if you don't swear to your Answer, you will lose your Cause. My Lord parted with him very civilly, and finding the Minister was like to lose 40 or 50 l. on Account of this Scruple, he having Justice in his Case, Intimation was given to the Sollicitor on the other Side, that it would be well taken if some means were found out to put an End to that Affair, without taking Advantage of the Preacher's scrupling to swear to his Answer, which the Sollicitor soon effected to the great Ease and Comfort of the Respondent. The Reading of the London Lecturers and Curates Petition was warmly oppos'd by the Lord Townshend, Earl of Scarborough, Earl of Sunderland, Lord Carteret, Duke of Argyle, Earl of Ilay, and the Bishop of Peterborough. and the Question being put, it was carry'd in the Negative by 60 Voices against 24. Of this last Number were three Prelates, who were in so good Esteem with Protestant Dissenters, that it was no small Surprize to see their Names, Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishop of Oxford, and Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, with those of Dr. Atterbury, and Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York. All the other Bishops there present, were for rejecting the Petition. The Bishop of Salisbury propos'd, that the Petitioners might have Leave to withdraw their Petition, but this was oppos'd by a Lord in the Ministery, who said a Committee ought to be appointed, to inquire into the Authors and Promoters of it, for he look'd upon it to be no better than a Libel, and besides its being criminal as it was libellous, it came very irregularly into that most honourable House; for as another illustrious Peer observ'd, If it was a Petition of the London Clergy, it ought to have been offered, either by the Bishop of that Diocese, or the Archbishop of Canterbury, whereas it was presented by the Archbishop of York, who was Metropolitan of another Province. These Lecturers and Curates had not forgotten to express a proper Concern for the Danger of Tythes from the Quakers, and Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbishop of York, mov'd for a Clause that the Quakers Affirmation, should not go in any Suit at Law for Tythes, but it being put to the Question, it was carry'd in the Negative, by 52 Voices against 21.

A.D.1722

Three Bishops against the Quakers.

The Clergy's Petition rejected.

It appearing by the Account laid before the House of Lords, that some of the Ships taken from the Spaniards, were still at Port Mahon, and that others had been broken up, Earl Cowper found Fault that they were not either given to the Captains, or delivered again to the King of Spain. The Captains had made no Complaint of any Injustice done them, nor had the King of Spain made any reasonable Proposal for redeeming them, and this Objection was not equal to that noble Lords good Sense in other Cases. He was seconded and back'd by Dr. Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester, the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Coningsby, and the Earl of Strafford, who were oppos'd by the Duke of Wharton, the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Ilay, and the Lord Viscount Townshend; and the Bishop of Rochester, and the Lord North and Grey's Party having not been able to agree among themselves about the Question to be put, the Business was drop'd. But they agreed about the Question, That the Act of Settlement was broken by sending the Squadron into the Baltick. The Speakers for it were, the Lord North and Grey, the Bishop of Rochester, Earl Cowper, Earl of Strafford, Earl of Coningsby, and the Lord Trevor. Against it, the Earl of Sunderland, Lord Viscount Townshend, Duke of Argyle, Earl of Ilay, and the Duke of Newcastle: It was carried in the Negative by 60 Voices against 23. Then the Lord Carteret took Notice "That the "last Question, tho' exploded by a great "Majority, was yet a Reflection upon his "Majesty's Ministers, if not upon the King "himself." He was answered by the Earl of Strafford, and the Earl by the Lord Viscount Townshend, who shew'd that there was sufficient Reason for keeping the Seamen on Board

A Negative on the Question about the Breach of the Act of Settlement.

A.D.1722 Board the Baltick Squadron all the Year, and that what had been done by the Miniſtry with Reference to the Spaniſh and Northern Wars had been in Purſuance of Addreſſes of Parliament, and it was ſo reſolv'd by that Auguſt Aſſembly, without any Diviſion.

In the Houſe of Commons, a Motion was made by Mr. Hutcheſon, January 15th, for a Bill to repeal ſo much of the Quarentine Act paſt in the 7th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, as gives Power for drawing Lines round any City, &c. and for removing Perſons infected with the Plague, or healthy Perſon out of an infected Family, to a Ship or Peſthouſe. He was ſeconded by Mr. Godfrey. and Mr. Heyſham, City Members. As general Aſſemblies are fallible, as well as particular Perſons, tho' not equally ſo, 'tis no Wonder that Publick Counſels do ſome Times require Reviſal, and theſe Clauſes were in the Opinion of moſt People, ſuch Invaſions upon Liberty, that they could not imagine any Danger of the Plague ought to be more dreaded, than the Conſequence of putting their Perſons in the Power of others againſt their Will. 'Tis true the Motion was not lik'd the better for Mr. Hutcheſon's making it, and it met with Oppoſition. But it was obſerv'd that Mr. Robert Walpole, was ſilent in the Debate, and the Queſtion being put, it was carried in the Affirmative, by 115 Voices againſt 40: A very thin Houſe at that Time of the Year, but that Houſe had been very thin all this Seſſion, the laſt being ſo very long, that when the Members were got into the Country, they were willing to have as much of it as they could.

Clauſe in the Quarentine Bill repeal'd.

Honours and Promotions.

About the Middle of February, William Pulteny, Eſq: was appointed Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorſhire; the Duke of Mancheſter, and the Earl of Suſſex, were made Gentlemen of his Majeſty's Bedchamber; Coll. Armſtrong, was appointed Maſter Surveyor of the Ordnance; the Duke of Bolton, Lord Lieutenant of Dorſetſhire; the Earl of Scarborough, Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland: the Lord Hutchinbroke of Huntingtonſhire, and James Lord Waldegrave, of Chewton in Somerſetſhire, having qualified himſelf to enjoy his Privilege of ſetting and voting in Parliament, being before a Roman Catholick, took his Seat accordingly in the Houſe of Peers, being introduc'd between the Lord Delaware, and the Lord Teynham: Dr. Joſiah Hort, of Armagh in Ireland, was made Biſhop of Leghlin and Fernes. I have avoided particularizing all the Lords Proteſts in the Months of February and March, becauſe they were numerous. On the 27th of February, the Earl of Sunderland, took Notice in the Houſe of Peers; " That the Privilege " of entering Proteſts had of late been ſo " much abus'd, that in his Opinion, ſome Re- " ſtraint ought to be put to it, by limiting " the Time for entring Proteſtations, upon " aſking Leave of the Houſe, which was ne- " ver deny'd, and therefore he mov'd, That " ſuch Lords as ſhall enter their Proteſtations " with Reaſons, ſhall do the ſame before Two " a Clock the next ſitting Day, and ſign them " before the Houſe riſes." This was oppos'd by the Lord Cowper, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter ſaid " If Proteſts were limited to ſo " ſhort a Time, this was at leaſt, the Way to " make them crude and undigeſted. He was ſupported by the Lords Bathurſt, North and Grey, and Trevor, who were anſwered by the Lords Townſhend and Onſlow; the Earl of Sunderland, the Biſhop of Peterborough; the Lord Carteret, and the Duke of Argyle. The Queſtion being put upon the ſaid Motion, it was carry'd in the Affirmative by 48 Voices againſt 18. And upon a Motion, that the Order made in the Reſolution be a ſtanding Order of the Houſe, it was carry'd in the Affirmative by a great Majority. A.D.1722

This being the laſt Seſſion of this Parliament, his Majeſty clos'd it with a moſt gracious Specch, the following Paragraphs of which, expreſs not only his own Royal Sentiments, but thoſe of all true Britons, and are a good Leſſon to us, ſtill to be on our Guard againſt Faction, whether under the Diſguiſe of Church or Patriotiſm.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

His Majeſty's Speech about the Faction.

" I cannot in Juſtice part with this Parlia- " ment, without returning you my ſincereſt " Thanks for your ſteady and reſolute Adhe- " rence to my Perſon and Government, and " to the Intereſt of the Proteſtant Cauſe both " at Home and Abroad. The Enemies of " our happy Conſtitution, have given the " ſtrongeſt and moſt honourable Teſtimony " of your Behaviour in thoſe Particulars, by " the implacable Malice which they have " upon all Occaſions expreſſed againſt you. " You muſt all be ſenſible, that they are at " this Juncture, reviving with the greateſt " Induſtry, the ſame wicked Arts of Calum- " ny and Defamation, which have been the " conſtant Preludes to publick Troubles and " Diſorders; and ſuch is their Infatuation, " that they flatter themſelves the groſſeſt " Miſrepreſentations will turn to their Ad- " vantage, and give them an Opportunity of " recommending themſelves to the Favour " and good Opinion of my People; but I " have ſo juſt a Confidence in the Affection " of my Subjects, and in their Regard for " their own Welfare, that I am perſuaded " they will not ſuffer themſelves to be thus " impoſed upon and betrayed into their own " Deſtruction.

Is

*A.D.*1722 Is there any great Difficulty, to find out where to apply the wicked Arts of Calumny and Defamation? What are the Craftsmen and Foggs's, but open and avowed Broachers of Scandal and Sedition, to say nothing of the Virulence and Insolence of Popish and Factious Libellers and Rhimsters, under the Patronage of an attainted Traitor, whose Execution the Clemency of this mild and forbearing Government has suspended.

The Lecturers and Curates Petition against the Quakers.

We have mention'd the Petition of the London Lecturers and Curates against the Quakers, who said, They were mov'd with a serious Concern, lest the Minds of Good Men might be griev'd and wounded, and the Enemies of Christianity Triumph, when they shall see such Condescensions by a Christian Legislature, to a Set of Men who renounce the divine Institutions of Christ. By which they here make Infant-Baptism to be a Divine Institution of Jesus Christ himself, And who cannot on that Account, according to the Uniform Judgment and Practice of the Catholick Church be deem'd worthy of that sacred Name. I chose to reserve this Quotation for this Place where the Quakers Address to his Majesty comes in, that the Reader may be pleas'd with the Contrast in the Sentiments, which cannot but be agreable, considering the Lecturers and Curates had just said the Quakers were not worthy of the Name of Christians.

To George, King of Great-Britain, &c. The Humble Address of his Protestant Subjects, call'd Quakers in London.

Excellent and Renowned Prince,

The Quakers Address to the King.

The Gracious Favour and Legal Relief which hath so lately been granted to us, whereby such of our Friends, as were subjected to Difficulty, Suffering, or Hindrance in their Business or Civil Concerns, are now made easy, &c. lays us under the greatest Sense of Duty and Thankfulness to acknowledge the same. The Necessity of many of our Brethren, the mutual Desire of Peace and Harmony in All; Reasons in themselves powerful, when Exercis'd only in humane Affairs, but more so, when referr'd to Religious Concerns, were our common Inducement to petition this Relief, which the Legislature have been graciously pleased to grant us, and which, after putting up due Praises to Almighty God, highly calls for the Tribute of our humble Thanks to the KING, whom we justly do esteem Father of his Country, a Lover of Mankind, and Defender of their Civil and Religious Rights, not only in his own Dominions, but also by a Christian Interposition with other Princes, on the Behalf of their oppressed Subjects.

These are Princely Qualities, in themselves amiable, and which must render the King renowned in future, as well as present Annals, and give the glorious Satisfaction that herein he hath for Pattern, the Father of the Universe, the God of Peace.

Our Earnest Petitions to the Almighty are, that THOU GREAT PRINCE may'st long enjoy the Fruits of that Peace Thou hast been Instrumental to establish at Home and Abroad, and with Ease and Delight govern a Happy, Thankful and free People, and by the Royal Issue transmit these inestimable Blessings to latest Posterity.

His Majesty's most Gracious Answer. *A.D.*1722

I thank you for this Dutiful Address. I readily gave my Assent to the Act past in your Favour, being convinced in your Conduct that you would make no other than an Honest and Conscientious Use of farther Indulgence given you.

Friends to the Constitution no Party.

In the mean Time the Elections for Members of Parliament were carry'd on throughout the Kingdom with the usual Animosity among the contending Parties, if the Britons who are true Lovers of the Constitution, without affecting to distinguish it from the Government, and without Bias by Bigottry, Disgust or Faction, may be call'd a Party. Mr. Archibald Hutcheson, who had been some Time one of the Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, and gave so little Attendance to that Service, that the Notice which was taken of it, made him very uneasy, and oblig'd him at last to quit it, was over busy before the Election, and during that Time to stock Town and Country with Pamphlets and Papers, to create in the Minds of the Electors an ill Opinion of the Administration, and a good one of himself. The South-Sea Scheme had given too much Ground for Clamour against those that promoted it, and the Disaffected made it their Business, to have it understood, that all the Calamities that follow'd upon the ill Execution of it, were owing to the Ministers. Nay some of the new fashioned Patriots as Cato, did not stick to go higher, and in a very daring Manner to write His Majesty had condescended to tell the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, that he hath had no Share in the late wicked Management. This is a Piece of Royal Grace, with which, I believe never any Subjects were blest before. Quis te vituperavit? By these and the like malicious and insolent Suggestions, did the Disaffected and Disgusted endeavour to turn the Heads of the Electors, and get such Men to be chosen, as would serve the Purposes of the Faction that set them up. Mr. Hutcheson among others, was by this Means elected for Hastings, a Cinque-Port, and for Westminster as his Friends cast up that Poll, but they were wrong in their Figures as well as their Pretences. Wonderful were the Pretences of these Men to Love of their Country and Zeal for Liberty, they would have been thought to have been so many Curtij ready to leap into the gaping Earth, and be swallow'd up for the Safety of the Common wealth, and the Air they assum'd on the Foot of this Merit, was in all of them like this of Mr. Hutcheson; I will very freely and readily own, that the Happiness of my Country, according to my own private Views and Interest, is infinitely dearer to me than the Grandeur of Any One, or of all the Royal Families upon Earth. Such were the Modesty and Moderation of these Publick Spirits, and the same Measures will still be pursued under the same Disguises by all such as out of Pique and Prejudice against others, and a too fond Conceit of Themselves shall prefer Faction to Peace and their own base Ends to the Good of the Publick. By the Accounts from North Britain, the Election for the Sixteen Peers to represent the Scots Nobility in Parliament was not at all promising to these Prerenders to Patriotism.

Death of the Earl of Sunderland.

On the 19th of April dy'd Charles Earl of Sunderland, Groom of the Stole to his Majeſty, &c. At a Time when the Malice of his Lordſhips Enemies was at its Height in their Aſſaults on his Reputation, with Reſpect to the South-Sea Buſineſs, in which they ſeem'd to have little Regard to Truth or Decency. His Lordſhips youngeſt Son William, having had the ſmall Pox inoculated upon him a Week before, fell into Convulſions, and dy'd two Days after his Father. The Report of the Phyſicians Dr. Goodman and Dr. Mead, and the Surgeons Mr. Buſſiere, Mr. Amiens, and Mr. Aime, after the Diſſection of the Earl's Body, ſhew'd very plainly that he dy'd not of Poiſon, as was given out by ſome of his Lordſhips Ill-willers, and the Publick were inform'd in a News Paper, April 21, "that "as ſoon as the Lord Carteret, one of his "Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State had "acquainted the King with the Death of the "late Earl, his Majeſty ſent a Nobleman to "condole the Counteſs on her Loſs, and to "aſſure her of his Royal Favour to her and "the Children his Lordſhip had left behind. "It was alſo reported, that the Lord Biſhop "of Wincheſter, adminiſtred the Holy Sa-"crament to the Earl of Sunderland, ſome "few Hours before he expir'd." At the ſame Time that the Experiment of Inoculation for the Small-Pox was unhappily made on that Earl's youngeſt Son, it moſt happily ſucceeded with the two Princeſſes Amelia and Carolina, on whom that Diſtemper came out very favourably, and continued ſo in the Progreſs, and Thanks be to God, ended in a few Days in a perfect Cure.

The Two Princeſſes inoculated.

Biſhop Atterbury's Plot diſcover'd.

In the Beginning of May, the Conſpiracy known by the Name of Atterbury's Plot was diſcover'd, and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, by his Majeſty's Command, communicated in a Letter to the Lord-Mayor of London: That ſeveral of his Majeſty's Subjects had enter'd into a wicked Conſpiracy in Concert with Traitors Abroad, for raiſing a Rebellion in this Kingdom, in Favour of a Popiſh Pretender. The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen preſented a very Loyal Addreſs to his Majeſty the next Day, May 9th. of which the following excellent Paragraph, is by no Means to be omitted, "When we reflect on the ma-"ny Bleſſings which Britons enjoy under the "Protection of a Prince, who makes the "Laws of this Land his Rule for the Govern-"ment of his People; when we conſider that "neither the Civil or Religious Rights of "your Majeſty's Subjects have met with the "leaſt Inſtance of Violation, ſince your Ma-"jeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne of "theſe Realms." How do the Harangues of the Modern Cato's, and pretended Patriots agree with this Senſe of the great and good City of London: "When we recollect your "Majeſty's Royal Clemency and Benevolence, "ſince the laſt Rebellion, to Numbers of "thoſe who had offended in the higheſt De-"gree againſt their King, and the Laws of "their Country, We cannot but expreſs the "utmoſt Abhorrence of thoſe vile and deteſt-"able Perſons, Atterbury, &c. who ſhall "again conſpire and attempt to bring a free "and happy People under the Yoke and Ty-"ranny of Superſtition, and to involve this "Nation in a State of Blood, Miſery, and "the utmoſt Confuſion, &c.

Addreſs of the Lord-Mayor &c. againſt the Plotters.

His Majeſty's moſt gracious and affecting Anſwer.

His Majeſty's Anſwer.

Your Affectionate and candid Aſſurances upon this important Occaſion of an unſhaken Zeal and Fidelity to my Perſon and Government, give me the greateſt Satisfaction. Your Intereſt and mine are, and ever muſt be inſeparable, and I doubt not, but that, with the Bleſſing of God, the Precaution I have taken, and your firm Adherence to our juſt Cauſe, will ſoon convince our Enemies, that their wicked Deſigns can end in nothing but their own Confuſion.

You may depend upon my conſtant Care and utmoſt Endeavours to ſupport the Publick Credit, to protect the Privileges and Properties of this great and opulent City, and to maintain the Religion, Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom.

The ſame Day a Proclamation was publiſh'd for putting the Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts and Nonjurors. A Camp was mark'd out in Hyde Park for the Troops of the King's Houſhold. Lieutanant General Maccartney was diſpatch'd to Ireland, to bring over ſome Forces from thence, and Horatio Walpole, Eſq. who ſome Days before went to Holland, was inſtructed to deſire their High Mightineſſes the States General to keep in Readineſs the Guaranty Troops to be tranſported to England in Caſe of Neceſſity. Col. Churchil was diſpatch'd to France, to confer with the Miniſters on the preſent Juncture of Affairs; by all which wiſe Precautions the Publick Tranquility was preſerv'd in Great-Britain. The Diſaffected endeavoured to encreaſe the Diſorders they were contriving, by a Run upon the Bank, but as the Money Intereſt of the Nation is not in their Hands, they could do no great Miſchief that Way, and tho' South-Sea Stock fell, in the firſt Conſternation on the Diſcovery of the Plot, from 90 to 77. yet in a few Days it gradually roſe again to its former Value. The Court of Spain, who doubtleſs were not unacquainted with the Machinations carrying on in England, in Favour of the Pretender, were ſo far from giving their Publick Countenance, that Philip Vth, at this Time, ſent Orders for opening the Communication with Gibralter.

Precautions againſt the Plot.

I refer to the Trials of the Traitors, of which mention will be made in due Time, for Particulars of the Diſcovery concerning the Conſpiracy, and ſhall only obſerve here, that

*A.D.*1722 one Kelly, alias Johnſon, a Papiſt, was apprehended May 21, at his Lodgings in Bury-Street, by three Meſſengers for treaſonable Correſpondences; and having delivered his Sword and Papers to the Meſſengers, they plac'd them in a Window, and went in Search of other Things: Their Negligence gave Kelly an Opportunity of recovering his Sword, which he drew, and ſwore he would run the firſt Man through that diſturb'd him in what he was doing, which was burning his Papers in a Candle with his Left Hand, whilſt he held the drawn Sword in the Other. When the Papers were burnt he ſurrender'd himſelf.

The Duke of Marlborough's Death.

On the 16th of June, about Four a Clock in the Morning, dy'd at Windſor, Aged 73. the moſt noble and victorious John Duke of Marlborough, Captain General of his Majeſty's Forces, to whoſe great Character, as we cannot do Juſtice, ſo we forbear doing it an Injury, by enlarging upon it in this Place, where we are too much confin'd in Room, to open a Scene of ſo much Glory and Extent, as that of the Character of the Duke of Marlborough, which is form'd by illuſtrious Actions, that make the moſt ſhining Part of, not only the Period we write of, but of all the Britiſh, or any other Annals ſince Claſſical Hiſtory.

About this Time, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood on John Gonſon, of the Inner Temple, Eſq. who has ſince diſtinguiſh'd himſelf as Chairman at the Seſſions of the Peace, by ſeveral Charges to the Jury, which are in Print. The Earl of Peterborough was appointed General of the Marines, with, as the Annaliſt tells us, a Salary of 4000 l. a Year. Sir James Montague, was made Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, The Duke of Queensbury, Lord Admiral of Scotland. Bernard Hale of Lincolns-Inn, Eſq. Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland. The Lord Cornwallis, was appointed Chief Juſtice in Eyre, on the South Side of Trent. The Government and Propriety of the Iſlands of St. Lucia and St. Vincent in America, was granted to the Duke of Montagu. Theſe two Iſlands lying near Barbadoes, have been always reckon'd Part of that Government, but the French being ſtrong at Martineco, at a like Diſtance, have alſo reckon'd them Part of that Government, and pretended to the Propriety. If Poſſeſſion, gives Title, they may plead it, there being ten French Families there to one Engliſh; and not above 150 Families, Engliſh and French.

The Death of the Duke of Marlborough made Way for ſeveral military Promotions. The Earl of Cadogan was made Maſter General of the Ordnance, and Colonel of the Firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards. The Earl of Scarborough ſucceeded that Earl as Colonel of the ſecond Regiment of Foot-Guards. Major General Tatton, was made Lieutenant Colonel of the firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, and was ſucceeded as Major of the ſaid Regiment by Brigadier Ruſſel.

Mr. Serjeant Denton was ſworn one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas.

The Pyrates in the Weſt-Indies, and on the Coaſts of Guinea, continu'd ſtill to interrupt the Trade and Navigation of thoſe Parts, and the Spaniards at Cuba, were ſo inſolent that they boarded the Greyhound Man of War, *A.D.*1722 Capt. Walrond, Commander, kill'd the Captain, the Surgeon and 7 or 8 of the Men, and plunder'd the Ship to the Value of 10000 Pounds. The Greyhound being afterwards ſuffer'd to Sail, arriv'd at Carolina, and the Command of it was given to Capt. Solgard. Another Greyhound, a Merchant Ship of Boſton, Capt. Benjamin Edwards was attack'd in the Bay of Honduras by a Pyrate Ship call'd the Happy Delivery, formerly the Bumper Galley, of 250 Tons, Guns in Proportion, and 90 Men, commanded by George Lowder. The Greyhound made a ſtout Reſiſtance, but was at laſt taken, and the Men barbarouſly us'd. The Pyrates took alſo ſeven other Veſſels, two Brigantines of Boſton in New-England, which they plunder'd, and deſtroy'd Capt. Ayres's Sloop of Connecticut: They burnt Another, and carried of Capt. Hamilton's of Jamaica: They plunder'd a Virginia Sloop, and then gave her to the Maſter. They mounted a Sloop of 80 Tons belonging to Rhode-Iſland, with Guns; and did the ſame by another Sloop of 30 Tons, 25 Men. They forc'd away from the Greyhound the chief Mate and 2d Mate, with others of the Crew, and then burnt her. Lowder with his Ship and theſe Sloops, went afterwards to the Gulph of Maho in the Bay of Mortick, to careen, and having carry'd moſt of the Goods on Shore, the People of the Country came down and ſurpriz'd them, which made his Crew burn their Ships, and get off in their Sloops. In the mean Time Capt. Candler, Commander of the Lanceſter Man of War, ſtation'd at Jamaica, and the Seas adjacent, took a Sloop with 58 Spaniſh Pyrates on Board, and carry'd them to Jamaica, where the Governour Sir Nicholas Laws, with the Council, and the Commanders of his Majeſty's Ships, ſate two Days upon their Trial. They were proceeded againſt by the Attorney General Mr. Kelly, and Mr. Norris, Regiſter of the Court, moſt of them were convicted, and 49 of them hang'd. Capt. Ogle, Commander of his Majeſty's Ship the Swallow, did alſo good Service on the Coaſt of Guinea, where he had Notice that the famous Pyrate Roberts, was with two Ships of Force at Cape Lopez, on the Careen. A Third of 36 Guns, the Crew moſt French, was on the Cruize, Capt. Ogle lookt out for Her, and coming in Sight of her, the Pyrate took the Swallow for a Merchant-Man, and gave her Chace. Capt. Ogle made from him for ſome Time, till he ſaw a proper Opportunity, then tack'd and pour'd in a Broadſide. The Pyrate fir'd a few ſtragling Guns, and then ſtruck. Capt. Ogle having taken Poſſeſſion of his Ship, made for Cape Lopez, having hoiſted the black Flag on Board the Pyrate.

*A.D.*1722

Pyrates taken and Executed.

Capt. Ogle's Succeſs againſt them.

The Swallow follow'd her, and coming up with the two Ships on the Careen, fir'd a Broadſide from the Man of War, and another from the Pyrate Ship, by which Roberts was kill'd, and a great Number of his Men, who were at firſt overjoy'd at the Sight of another Ship with their own, thinking her to be a Prize. Capt. Ogle carried the three Pyrate Ships to St. Thomas, where he left theſe Ships, and made for Cape Coaſt Caſtle, with the Priſoners, in Number 170, ſeveral of 'em having made their Eſcape, but by theſe Succeſſes againſt thoſe Robbers, the Trade to Guinea,

A.D.1722 Guinea, and the West-Indies, was pretty well secur'd.

There had been several General Courts held by the South-Sea Company, about transferring two Millions of their Stock to the Bank of England, which was at last agreed on by those Two Companies, and upon this Agreement the Sub-Governour, Deputy-Governour, and Directors of the South-Sea Company, presented a very Loyal and Judicions Address to his Majesty, July 25, being introduc'd by the Right Honourable Robert Walpole, Esq. Chancellor of the Exchequer; it is of some Length, I shall therefore insert Part of it only, which will confirm what we have said of the wicked Attempts of Factious Men, to lay the Odium of the unfortunate South-Sea Scheme on the Administration; they say,

The South-Sea Company's Address to the King, on their Agreement with the Bank.

" The Enemies to your Majesty's Government, might probably take Encouragement " in their Designs, from the Anxiety and Uneasiness, which the particular Losses of " many of your Subjects in this Company, had " given us, and may hope to work and inflame " our Divisions to such a Degree, as to lead " unwary People from their Allegiance. But " vain were their Thoughts, if they imagin'd " that we, who at no Time forgot, that your " Majesty has greatly commiserated and re- " liev'd us, should act so inconsistently, as by " resenting Mischiefs which your Majesty nei- " ther caus'd, nor could possibly prevent, to " contribute and assist in Measures, that can " only tend to the Destruction of all Property, " the Preservation of which depends upon " your peaceable Enjoyment of the Throne.

" We should have been wanting to our own " Interest, as well as Duty to your Majesty " and our Country, if we had not taken the " first Opportunity of convincing the World, " of the Folly and Weakness of their Ex- " pectation, who thought our Divisions pro- " ceeded from, or could be rais'd up to Disaf- " fection to your Majesty.

These are the Sentiments of a Body of People, who had near 40 Millions Stock in the Publick Funds, and whose good Opinion of the Government, could not but be equally sincere and just, when they gave it a Pledge of twice as much Value as the whole Cash of the Kingdom. Such Interest as this cannot lie. And what then signifies the petulant Harangues of a few Malignants, who very absurdly and ridiculously, as well as seditiously and insolently represented the Money Interest of the Nation, as in a way of Destruction under his Majesty's Government, upon the Preservation of which in Peace, the money'd Men themselves acknowledge the Preservation of their Property entirely depends.

His Majesty's most gracious Answer will let the Reader into the further Contents of this Address.

His Majesty's Answer.

I cannot but be very well pleas'd with this seasonable Declaration of the Zeal, Fidelity and Affection of this great Body of my good Subjects.

I am fully perswaded, that my Enemies will find themselves mistaken, who look upon the Discontent of the unhappy Sufferers in the South-Sea Project, as Disaffection to my Person and Government. And you do but Justice in believing, that I did neither cause, nor had it in my Power to prevent the Mischiefs that have happen'd.

I hear with Pleasure, that this Company and the Bank of England are come to that Temper and good Agreement, which was absolutely necessary for their mutual Interest and the Publick Credit. A.D.1722

I have been all along sensibly affected with the great Losses and Sufferings of so many unhappy People, and saw with Concern all Methods propos'd for their Relief, disappointed and render'd ineffectual: And as the great Bulk of the Capital is found to be a Weight upon it Self, and detrimental to the Publick, whenever you apply to Parliament for Relief, in Regard to the Two Millions upon the Conditions mention'd in your Address, you shall have my Recommendation and Consent to the Parliaments taking it into Consideration.

The King was pleas'd to bestow the Honour of Knighthood on Richard Hopkins, Esq. one of the Directors.

Honours conferr'd on Ladies.

Some Weeks before this, it was declar'd that Charlotte Platen, Countess of Leinster, in Ireland, was created an English Peeress, by the Title of Baroness Blandford, and Countess of Darlington, in the Bishoprick of Durham; and Mademoiselle Schulembourgh Niece to the Dutchess of Kendal, was created Baroness of Aldborough, and Countess of Walsingham.

Having mention'd the Death of the Duke of Marlborough, we must not forget the great, but just Honours that were paid to his Memory in his Funeral Exequies. About half an Hour after 12, August 9th, the Procession past from Marlborough House, in St. James's Park, to the Upper Park, so to Hyde Park Corner, then thro' Picadilly, down St. James's Street, through the Pall-mall, and by Charing-Cross, thro' King-Street to Westminster-Abby.

First march'd a Detachment of Horse-Grenadiers, commanded by Coll. Fane.

Then a Detachment of the Horse Guards, commanded by the Lord Newburgh.

The Artillery, with Two Companies of Cannoniers and Bombardiers, commanded by Coll. Bourgard.

A Detachment of the Third Regiment of Foot-Guards, commanded by the Earl of Dunmore.

A Detachment of the Second Regiment of Foot-Guards, commanded by the Earl of Scarborough.

The First Regiment of Foot-Guards, commended by Major General Tatton.

Brigad. Stanwix.
Maj. Gen. Wyghtman. Brigad. Bowles.
Lieutenant Gen. Maecartney. Maj. Gen. Wade.
Lieut. Gen. Wills.

The Earl of Cadogan, General, and Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces.

Coll. Otway, as Quarter Master General.

Coll. Williamson, Adjutant General.

His Graces Six Aids de Camp.

Coll. Manning. Coll. Huske.
Coll. Morton. Coll. Morgan.
Capt. Maccartney. Lord Carmichael.

The Standard was carry'd by Major Gardiner.

The Guidon by Major Keightly.

The Banner of Woodstock, by Lieutenant Coll. Purcell.

The Banner of Prince of the Empire, by Lieutenant Coll. Petit.

His Grace's Surcoat of Arms, carry'd by Norroy, King at Arms:
The Body with the Suit of Armour, &c. as on the Bed of State, in an open Chariot, with Mr. Ridley and Mr. Mitchel, two Officers of his Grace's Bedchamber, ſitting at the Head and Feet in cloſe Mourning barchiaded. The Chariot had four Columns which bore up a black Velvet Canopy, lin'd with black Taffeta, with deep Gold Fringe and Taſſels at each Corner. On the Top were ſeveral black Plumes, with Trophies of War intermix'd. The lower Part of the Chariot was adorn'd on both Sides with ſeveral Shields, repreſenting his Grace's Victories and Conqueſts, under which was a Scroll with this Motto. Bello hæc & Plura. The Chariot was drawn by Eight Horſes, cover'd with Velvet, the Two Firſt capariſon'd with the Arms of his Grace, as Prince of the Empire; the next Two with his Grace's Full Arms, ſurrounded with the Garter, with the Supporters ſurmounted with the Ducal Coronet; the next Two with the ſame Arms as the Firſt, and the Two next his Body, with his Full Arms ſurrounded with the Garter as before. On each Side of the Chariot were Five Captains in their Military Mourning, carrying a Bannerol of the Arms of the Diſcent and Lineage of the Deceas'd. Each of the Eight Horſes was led by a Groom. The Coachman in deep Mourning.

The Duke of Marlborough's Funeral.

A Horſe of State capariſon'd with Cloth of Gold, led with a ſilken Rein by Capt. Read, his Grace's Maſter of the Horſe, in his military Mourning, walking on Foot, aſſiſted by Two Grooms.

Garter King at Arms, with the Rod of his Office in his Right-Hand, as Director of the Funeral.

His Grace the Duke of Montagu, Chief Mourner, in deep Mourning, with the Collar of the Order of the Garter, and the Star of the Order on his Cloak, in a Coach; Sir Robert Rich, his Train-bearer, ſitting over againſt him.

The Earls of Sunderland and Godolphin in the next Coach, as being Supporters to the chief Mourner.

In Five other Coaches follow'd.
The Duke of Somerſet. The Duke of Cleveland.
The Duke of Grafton. The Duke of St. Albans.
The Duke of Montroſe.
The Duke of Dorſet. The Duke of Kent.
The Earl of Strafford. The Earl of Peterborough.
The Duke of Newcaſtle.

All excepting the Duke of Montroſe, having the Collars and Stars, as Knights of the Garter. Theſe Ten being Aſſiſtants to the chief Mourner.

In the Two next Coaches came, A.D. 1722
The Earl of Cardigan. The Earl of Leiceſter.
The Earl of Briſtol. The Earl of Burlington.
Who were to Support the Pall in the Church.

Dr. Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter, as Dean of Weſtminſter, read the Office of Burial, which was probably the laſt publick Act of his Paſtoral Function, for five Days after, he was committed Priſoner to the Tower, for High-Treaſon.

On the News of the Duke of Marlborough's Death, the Emperor in a grateful Senſe of his Grace's great Services, to uſe the Words of the Annaliſt to the Auguſt Houſe of Auſtria, and the whole Empire, was pleas'd to beſtow the Title of Prince of Mindelheim, on the Marquiſs of Blandford, formerly Lord Rialton, his Grace's Heir at Law, The ſame Writer informs us, that on the 25th of Auguſt, Simon Lord Viſcount Harcourt, was ſworn one of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy-Council. And as a further Mark of Favour, his Majeſty was pleas'd to grant him an Annual Penſion of 4000 l. and to order, that he ſhould be ſummon'd to the Committee of Council, as the Lord Somers was.

About this Time Cato, as Mr. Trenchard was pleas'd to call himſelf, in Alluſion to the publick Spirit of the Roman Cato, to which he pretended, forgot his repeated Profeſſions of Zeal for Liberty ſo far, as to abuſe the Diſſenters in one of his Political Letters, particularly where he ſaid, " Not one Diſſenter in " England would be in any Office of Value, " if the Sacramental Teſt Act was repeal'd, " more than they are now, for they always " qualify themſelves, if they can get good " Places, and take Advantage of the Law to " keep themſelves out of chargeable ones." Both which is ſo notoriouſly falſe, that it is aſtoniſhing he ſhould imagine any one wou'd give Credit to what was ſo contrary to Every one's Knowledge. There were not twenty Diſſenters in England, that had qualify'd themſelves for what he himſelf would have thought a good Place; nor was there any chargeable Office, which they could clear themſelves of, by the Advantage of the Law. Were they not burthen'd every where with Pariſh Offices? Have they not been prickt for Sheriffs? and what Office of Expence has that Teſt clear'd them of, when their Adverſaries thought fit to put it upon them? But this ſhews the Falſhood of the Reaſoning, as well as the Facts in the Writings of the Diſguſted. What was ſaid in Anſwer to Cato, contains Truths that may be a Leſſon to all Proteſtant Diſſenters, when Craftſmen as well as Catos endeavour to delude and miſlead them.

Mr. Trenchard alias Cato, againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters.

" Before I conclude, ſays that Author, I " would in Behalf of the Diſſenters, with Cato's Leave aſk him, what has provok'd him " at this Time, to uſe them in the injurious " Manner he has done? If it ſhould be acknowledg'd, that he hath lately receiv'd ſome " Perſonal Disobligations from a few of them, " methinks however, he ſhould have conſider'd " that nothing but an infamous Behaviour in " the whole Body will ſo much as excuſe his " treating them as Hypocrites or Idiots. Do " They appear to him in that Light, when, " under the Weight of the Penal Laws in " King Charles the Second's Time, and under " Apprehenſions of greater Hardſhips, they " diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in the Cauſe of " Civil

" criſy or Infatuation, that prompted them to " appear in the ſame Cauſe at the Revolution,
" when King James would have been glad to Proclamations againſt John Semple and Thomas Carte.

The ſame Day that Dr. Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter, was impriſon'd for the Plot, one of his Fellow Plotters John Semple, formerly Servant to Sir Robert Sutton, his Majeſty's Miniſter in France, made his Eſcape out of the Houſe of the Meſſenger to whoſe Cuſtody he was committed for High Treaſon. A Proclamation with a Reward of 1000 l. was iſſu'd for apprehending him, and Another againſt Thomas Carte, a Nonjuring Prieſt. Three Meſſengers were turn'd out of their Places, on Suſpicion of being tardy in the Diſcharge of their Duty; and Mr. John Cotton, of Huntingtonſhire, one of the Preſton Rebels, who had been clear'd by the Act of Grace, was ſiez'd by ſeveral Meſſengers on Account of the Plot.

About the middle of Auguſt William Earl of Eſſex, was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Hertfordſhire. Henry, Earl of Thomond, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Eſſex. Dr. Thomas Bowers was made Biſhop of Chicheſter. Dr. Theophilus Bolton, Biſhop of Clonfert, in Ireland. Major General Evans, Governour of Chelſea Hoſpital.

At the latter End of Auguſt his Majeſty ſet out from Kenſington, for his Weſtern Progreſs, accompany'd by his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales. The King came to Hackwood, a Seat of the Duke of Bolton, near Baſingſtoke in Hampſhire, the 28th of Auguſt, lay there that Night, and the next Day arriv'd at Salisbury, being receiv'd every where with Demonſtrations of the greateſt Affection and Joy. On the 30th of Auguſt his Majeſty went to the Camp, near that City, and review'd the following Regiments. A.D.1722 The King's Progreſs to the Camp, near Salisbury.

Horſe Regiments.	Foot.
Lord Londonderry's.	Lieutenant Gen. Wills.

Major Gennral Evans's.	Brigadier Stanwix.
Brigadier Gore's.	Brigadier Grove.

	Coll, Clayton.

His Majeſty was pleas'd to declare his Satisfaction with the excellent Order in which they all appear'd. The Concourſe of People from all Parts to ſee the King at this Review, was exceeding great. His Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, return'd by the Way of Winchester, viſited Portſmouth, lay at Stanſtead, the Seat of the Earl of Scarborough, in Suſſex, and arriv'd at Kenſington, the firſt of September, having receiv'd very loyal Addreſſes from the Biſhop and Clergy of the Sees of Salisbury, Winchester and Chicheſter, and Marks of the greateſt Duty and Loyalty, from the vaſt Multitudes of People that crowded the Roads thro' which he paſt.

By this Time his Majeſty's Miniſters had made further Diſcoveries in the Conſpiracy, one Bingley and Neynoe, an Iriſh Prieſt and two other Plotters, were ſeiz'd at Deal and brought to London. Mr. Chriſtopher Layer, a young Counſellour of the Temple, of ſmall Note for any Thing but the Share he had in this Treaſon, was apprehended, and committed to the Cuſtody of Mr. Squire, the Meſſenger, from whoſe Houſe he made his Eſcape, by getting out of a back Window, two Stories high; he got to the Waterſide, and gave a Sailor Gold to carry him over to Southwark, but being diſcover'd upon his going off, by the Servant-Maid, he was immediately purſu'd, taken and brought back. The next Morning, September the 20th, he was committed Priſoner to the Tower. Three Days after, Mr. Shippen's Houſe in Norfolk-Street, was ſearch'd for Papers, that, as the Annaliſt ſays, might give Light into ſome Suſpicion. Warrants were iſſu'd for apprehending the Lord North and Grey, who conſcious of the Reaſon there was for it, was got away as far as the Iſle of Wight, and had put himſelf a Board a Smuggler's Sloop, after having been ſome Time at Mr. Holmes's Houſe in that Iſland. Coll. Morgan, the Deputy-Governour, having Information of his being aboard the Sloop, ſent Orders to a Captain of one of the King's Frigats, to have an Eye upon it, and ſo ſoon as it was preparing to ſail, to ſend his Long Boat aboard, and ſecure all the Paſſengers on Suſpicion, which being done, the Lord North and Grey, at firſt pretended to be another Perſon, but finding that did him no Service, he confeſt who he was, and he and the Reſt of the Paſſengers were carry'd to the Governour, who told them he muſt ſecure them till he could write to Court, and upon an Anſwer from thence, he had Orders to ſend them up in Cuſtody.

Lord North and Grey.

A.D. 1722 The Lord North and Grey's Houſe in Great Queen Street, being alſo ſearch'd for Papers, the Meſſenger found there Mr. Swathſuger, Secretary to the Earl of Orrery, who was ſiez'd and committed to Cuſtody, and the next Morning, September 27th, the Earl Himſelf was brought to Town from Buckinghamſhire, examin'd at the Cock-Pit by a Committee of the Privy-Council, and committed Priſoner to the Tower for High-Treaſon, as was the Lord North and Grey the next Day, being brought up from Portſmouth, by Lieutenant General Maccartney, Coll. Gordon, and a State Meſſenger, Mr. Fleetwood, a Papiſt, was taken into Cuſtody by a Meſſenger. And Mrs. Layer, who ignorant of her Husband's Fate, was coming over from France, was ſiez'd at Dover. On the 28th of Sept. Neynoe, the Iriſh Prieſt, found Means to eſcape from the Houſe of Hunford, the Meſſenger in Mancheſter-Court; near the Thames. He ty'd Blankets and Sheets together, got out of a Window two or three Story high to a Wall of a neighb'ring Garden adjoining to the River, but not knowing that the Tide was high, he leapt into the Water, and being unſkill'd in Swimming, was drown'd.

After Biſhop Atterbury, had lain a Fortnight in Priſon for this deteſtable Conſpiracy. Sir Con. Phipps, one of Sacheverel's Advocates, preſented a Petition to the Court atthe Seſſion's Houſe in the Old-Bailey, in the Name of Mrs. Morris, the Biſhop's Daughter, praying, that in Conſideration of the Biſhop's ill State of Health, he might be either brought to a ſpeedy Trial, be bail'd, or diſcharg'd, but the ſame was over-rlu'd, as were alſo the Petitions of two other Priſoners for the Plot, Cockram and Dennis Kelly. Under Pretence alſo of this Ill State of Health, Publick Frayers were put up for the Biſhop, in moſt Churches and Chappels in London and Weſtminſter; tho' it is very well known, that ſuch Acts of Piety and Devotion, were not Things which the Biſhop took much Delight in. However to ſerve the Turn of the Faction, his Print, looking thro' a Grate, with ſome Factious Doggril Rhimes under it. was hung up every where for Sale, the like Print of Sacheverel, having done Wonders among the High Church Mob, in ſtirring up a Spirit of Mutiny againſt the Miniſters and the Confederacy in the laſt Years of the Queen. The Rhimes were done by Edward Ward, who kept an Ale-Honſe near Bunhil Fields, and had before ſtood in the Pillory. He was now again taken hold of, and impriſon'd, as was Bowles, the Graver and Printſeller.

Towards the End of the Month September, the Emperor of Germany granted a Patent for the eſtabliſhing an Eaſt-India Company in the Auſtrian Netherlands, we read in the Annals: "They were impower'd to open Books of "Subſcription, wherein the Subjects of any "Nation were admitted to ſubſcribe. The "Company to be call'd The Imperial Company "of Commerce, eſtabliſh'd in Flanders. The "Fund to conſiſt of Eight Millions of Florins, "and Directors to be choſen once a Year. "The Nobility were to have the Privilege of "entring into it, without Derogation in the "leaſt from their Nobility." What wiſe Heads muſt be in the Legiſlature of any Country, where Induſtry, and the Encreaſe of Wealth, are a Stain to Nobility, and a Law is wanting to ſave the Rank of ſuch as are ſo eminently above all others ſerviceable to their Country. "Thoſe of any Nation who ſub- A.D. 1722
"ſcrib'd 20000 Florins, were to be naturaliz'd from that Subſcripiion, and any Perſon "had Privilege to ſubſcribe what Sum he "pleas'd above 1000 Florins, but nothing leſs. "The Settlement of this New Company, "was principally owing, continues the Annaliſt, "to the Indefatigable Care and Induſtry of Mr. Colebrooke, an Engliſh Mer-"chant. Who doubtleſs underſtood Trade better than Politicks, for his indefatigable Induſtry and Care, were very near ſetting the Chriſtian World in a Flame, that muſt have been fatal to all Nations.

There happen'd this Year in the City of London, a very great Conteſt about the Choice of a Lord-Mayor. Sir Gerard Conyers and Sir Peter Delme, were in Courſe next to the Chair, bnt High Church valuing themſelves very much on their Choice of Two Members for Parliament in the laſt Election, attempted to ſet aſide the two Aldermen next the Chair, Men of great Wealth, and put up two Others of their own Party againſt them. To accompliſh this, they publiſh'd Libels againſt Sir Gerard Coniers, aſſerting, that he was not duely elected an Alderman, but impos'd on the City by the Management of Sir Gilbert Heathcote, when he was Lord-Mayor, eleven Years before, whoſe Behaviour on that Occaſion, was wiſe, juſt and ſteady, and the Precautions he took to regulate the Votes of the Inhabitants of Broad-Street Ward, where Sir Gerard Conyers was choſen Alderman, and to determine the Scrutiny according to Law, and the ancient Uſage of the City were remarkable. At the ſame Time High Church charg'd him with Partiality and Injuſtice, and their Party prevailing in the Common-Council, procur'd an Order for carrying on a Suit againſt him for an undue Return of an Alderman for that Ward, in Favour of Sir Gerard Conyers, at the City Charge, and tho' the Suit was drop'd, much Money was expended on that Account, in Feaſting and Rioting at Weſtminſter. When the Scrutiny was to be declar'd, Sir Gilbert Heathcote was attended by the Recorder Sir Peter King, late Lord Chancellor, Duncan Dee, Eſq. Common Serjeant, one of Sacheverel's Advocates, and Mr. Smith, an eminent Attorney. The Two latter well known to be in a contrary Intereſt to Sir Gerard Conyers. The Attorney read the Objections and Anſwers to every conteſted Vote, without naming the Perſon objected to, that there might be no poſſibility of Partiality; and as Sir Peter King and Mr. Dee gave their Opinions that the Vote was good or bad, ſo it was inſtantly ſet down Allow'd or Diſallow'd, and after the Votes which the learned Council above-mention'd, declar'd to be Illegal, were diſallow'd on both Sides, a clear and undoubted Majority of Votes fell upon Sir Gerard Conyers and Sir George Newland, who were return'd to the Court of Aldermen, and they choſe Sir Gerard Conyers. This Sir Peter King Mr. Duncan Dee and Mr. Smith, declar'd upon all Occaſions, publick and private. Yet Sir William Withers, Sir Richard Hoar, Sir John Caſs, Sir William Lewen, and their Adherents in the Common-Council, not only proſecuted Sir Gilbert Heathcote, for making this legal Return, in a Law-Suit, but vilify'd him, or caus'd him to be vilify'd in Libels, with a wicked Charge of daring Lies and Falſe Oaths, and at this Time endeavour'd with all their

A.D.1722 Might to ſet aſide Sir Gerard Conyers from the Chair, to which he was next in Turn; under Pretence, that he was no legal Alderman; which had ſo little Effect on the Citizens of London, at this Time govern'd by Magiſtrates of great Worth, for Wealth, Loyalty and Virtue, that their Endeavours avail'd them little. Tho' the Common-Council had many among them of a different Character from thoſe worthy Magiſtrates, they wou'd now with Abhorrence have ſeen their Chair diſhonour'd, as it was lately by a Perſon more than once nam'd in this Hiſtory. Theſe Men were contented now, with putting up Sir George Mertins, and Sir Francis Forbes, againſt Sir Gerard Conyers and Sir Peter Delme for Lord-Mayor, and the Poll ſtood thus,

Priſoners for the Plot.

In the Beginning of October, one Plunket, an Iriſh Lawyer, was apprehended and examin'd by a Committee of Council, concerning the Plot, for which Biſhop Atterbury, Chriſtopher Layer, Kelly, and other Criminals were in Priſon. And giving no Satisfaction to their Lordſhips, both he and Layer were ordered to be laid in Irons. Thomas Duke of Norfolk, was brought up from the Bath to his Houſe in St. James's Square, in Cuſtody of one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers, and attended by Col. Huske, Aid de Camp to the Earl of Cadogan. The next Day, October 25th, he was examin'd by a Committee of Lords of his Majeſty's Council, and Two Days after committed Priſoner to the Tower, on Suſpicion of High Treaſon, as George Kelly, alias Johnſon, had been the Day before,

On the 9th of October, the New Parliament met, and having choſen the Right Honourable Spencer Compton, Eſq. their Speaker, on Mr. Pulteny's Motion, both Houſes attended his Majeſty, October 11th, and the Lord High Chancellor read to them a moſt Gracious and affecting Speech in his Majeſtys Name and Words, out of which I take the following Paragraphs.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech to the New Parliament.

" I am concern'd to find my ſelf oblig'd at " the opening of this Parliament to acquaint " you, that a dangerous Conſpiracy has been " for ſome Time form'd, and is ſtill carrying " on againſt my Perſon and Government, in " Favour of a Popiſh Pretender.

" The Diſcoveries I have made here, the " Informations I have received from my Mi- " niſters Aroad, and the Intelligences I have " had from the Powers in Alliance with Me, " and indeed from moſt Parts of Europe, have " given Me moſt ample and concurrent Proofs " of their wicked Deſigns.

" The Conſpirators have by their Emiſſaries " made the ſtrongeſt Inſtances for Aſſiſtance " from Foreign Powers, but were diſappointed " in their Expectations; However, confiding " in their Numbers, and not diſcourag'd by " their former ill Succeſs, they reſolv'd once A.D.1722 " more upon their own Strength, to attempt " the Subverſion of my Government.

" To this End they provided conſiderable " Sums of Money, engag'd great Numbers " of Officers from Abroad, ſecur'd large Quan- " tities of Arms and Ammunition, and thought " themſelves in ſuch Readineſs, that had not " the Conſpiracy been timely diſcover'd, we " ſhould without Doubt, before now have ſeen " the whole Nation, and particularly the City " of London, involv'd in Blood and Confuſion,

" The Care I have taken, has, by the Bleſ- " ſing of God, prevented the Execution of " their traiterous Projects. The Troops have " been encamp'd all this Summer, Six Regi- " ments, tho' very neceſſary for the Security " of that Kingdom, have been brought from " Ireland; the States General have given me " Aſſurances, that they would keep a conſi- " derable Body of Forces in a Readineſs to " embark on the firſt Notice of their being " wanted here, which was all I deſired of " Them, being determin'd not to put my " People to any more Expence than what was " abſolutely neceſſary for their Peace and Se- " curity.

" Some of the Conſpirators have been taken " up and ſecur'd, and endeavours are us'd for " apprehending others.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" Having thus in General laid before you " the State of the preſent Conſpiracy, I muſt " leave it to your Conſideration what is pro- " per and neceſſary to be done for the Quiet " and Safety of the Kingdom. I cannot but " believe the Hopes and Expectations of our " Enemies are very ill grounded, in flattering " themſelves, that the late Diſcontents, occa- " ſion'd by private Loſſes and Misfortunes, " however induſtriouſly and maliciouſly fo- " mented, are turn'd into Diſaffection and a " Spirit of Rebellion. Had I ſince my Acceſ- " ſion to the Throne, ever attempted any In- " novation in our Eſtabliſh'd Religion. Had " I in any one Inſtance invaded the Liberty " and Property of my Subjects, I ſhou'd leſs " wonder at any Endeavours to alienate the " Affections of my People, and draw them " into Meaſures that can end in Nothing but " their own Deſtruction.

" But to hope to perſuade a Free People, in " full Enjoyment of all that is dear and valua- " ble to them; to exchange Freedom for Sla- " very, the Proteſtant Religion for Popery, " and to ſacrifice at once the Price of ſo much " Blood and Treaſure, as have been ſpent in " Defence of our preſent Eſtabliſhment, ſeems " to be an Infatuation not to be accounted for. " But however vain and unſucceſsful their " deſperate Projects may prove in the End, " They have at preſent ſo far the deſir'd Ef- " fect, as to create Uneaſineſs and Diffidence " in the Minds of my People, which our " Enemies labour to improve to their own " Advantage. By forming Plots, they depre- " ciate all Property that is veſted in the pub- " lick Funds, and then complain of the low " State of Credit. They make an Encreaſe " of the Nations Expences neceſſary, and then " clamour at the Burthen of Taxes, and en- " deavour to impute to my Government as " Grievances, the Miſchiefs and Calamities " which they alone create and occaſion.

I need

A.D. 1722

" I need not tell you of what infinite Concern it is to the Peace and Tranquility of " the Kingdom, that this Parliament ſhould " upon this Occaſion exert themſelves with a " more than ordinary Zeal and Vigour. An " entire Union among all that ſincerely wiſh " well to the preſent Eſtabliſhment, is now " become abſolutely neceſſary. Our Enemies " have too long taken Advantage from your " Differences and Diſſentions. Let it be " known, that the Spirit of Popery, which " breathes Nothing but Confuſion to the Civil " and Religious Rights of a Proteſtant Church " and Kingdom, However abandon'd ſome Few " may be, in Deſpite of all Obligations Di- " vine and Humane, has not ſo far poſſeſs'd " my People, as to make them Ripe for ſuch " a fatal Change. Let the World ſee, that " the general Diſpoſition of the Nation, is no " Invitation to foreign Powers to invade us, nor " Encouragement to Domeſtick Enemies to " kindle a Civil War in the Bowels of the " Kingdom. Your own Intereſt and Welfare " call upon You to defend Your ſelves. I " ſhall wholly rely upon Divine Providence, " the Support of my Parliament, and the Af- " fection of my People, which I ſhall endea- " vour to preſerve by ſteadily adhering to the " Conſtitution in Church and State, and conti- " nning to make the Laws of the Realm the " Rule and Conduct of all my Actions".

This Speech, than which the Timoleons, the Cato's, and all the Heroick Patriots of Antiquity never utter'd a better for the Cauſe of Liberty and the Good of their Country, charm'd all the People of Great-Britain, who had really any Love for it, but had ſo little Effect on the Diſaffected and Diſguſted, that they very ſoon fell in with the Sentiments of the pretended Cato, and cry'd out againſt the Danger of thoſe Forces to which they ow'd their Security againſt the treaſonable Deſigns of the Faction, with which they were come to a Coalition.

As ſoon as his Majeſty was withdrawn, and the Commons retir'd to their Houſe, His Grace the Duke of Grafton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, took Notice of the horrid Conſpiracy lately form'd, and ſtill carrying on againſt his Majeſty's ſacred Perſon and Government, and ſhew'd the Neceſſity of Strengthening the Hands of his Majeſty's Miniſters, in Order to a full Detection and entire Suppreſſion of thoſe traiterous Deſigns. His Grace then preſented a Bill for ſuſpending the Habeas Corpus Act. Tho' by the Experience of the two former Reigns, Every one could not but be ſatisfied, that ſuch a Suſpenſion might be equally neceſſary and ſafe, yet it met with ſome Oppoſition, not only from the Earls of A— and St—, the Lords Trevor and Bingley, but from Earl Cowper, the Lord Coningsby, and the Lord Lechmere. The Reaſons brought againſt the Bill, were fully anſwered by the Duke of Wharton, who was Chairman of the Committee, the Lord Viſcount Harcourt, the Lord Carteret, the Dukes of Grafton, Newcaſtle, and Argyle, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and other Peers. The Queſtion being put, and the Bill being carry'd in the Affirmative, without a Diviſion, ſixteen Peers enter'd their Diſſent.

Debates about the Habeas Corpus Act.

Mr. Speaker having reported his Majeſty's Speech to the Houſe of Commons, William Pulteney, Eſq. " made a lively Repreſentation " of the diſmal Conſequences of the Horrid " Plot, if it had pleas'd the Divine Providence " that it had not been timely diſcovered; and " mov'd for an Addreſs of Thanks on the ſe- " veral Heads of his Majeſty's Speech, parti- " cularly to congratulate his Majeſty on the " timely Diſcovery of the dangerous and un- " natural Conſpiracy againſt his Majeſty's Per- " ſon and Government, to expreſs the juſt " Deteſtation and Abhorrence, his faithful " Commons had of all ſuch traiterous Prac- " tiſes, and their Indignation and Reſentment " againſt the Authors and Contrivers of them. He was ſeconded by George Dodington, Eſq, and by the general Aſſent of the Houſe, only Mr. William Shippen mov'd, that to the Paragraph, aſſuring his Majeſty that his Faithful Commons would enable him effectually to ſuppreſs all remaining Spirit of Rebellion; theſe Words might be added, With a due Regard to the Liberty of the Subject, the Conſtitution in Church and State, and the Laws now in Force. He was ſeconded by Sir William Wyndham, but Mr. Pulteney reply'd " That ſuch a Clauſe " would be injurious to the King, ſince it " would look like making a Condition or Bar- " gain with his Majeſty, and tacitly imply, " either that the Laws had already been in- " fring'd, or that the Commons were jealous, " leſt his Majeſty for the Future, ſhou'd break " in upon the Conſtitution. Therefore, inſtead " of the ſaid Clauſe, he propos'd, That at the " latter End of the Addreſs, they ſhould re- " turn his Majeſty their Thanks, for his moſt " gracious Declaration, that he would preſerve " the Conſtitution in Church and State, and " continue to make the Laws of the Realm " the Rule and Meaſure of all his Actions. This was ſeconded by William Young, Eſq. ond the Queſtion being put which of the Two Clauſes ſhould be made Part of the Addreſs, it was carry'd for Mr. Pulteney's Clauſe, without dividing.

A.D. 1722

Mr. Pulteney's Motion for an Addreſs of Thanks.

Seconded by Mr. Dodington.

Sr William Wyndham anſwer'd by Mr. Pulteney.

The Bill for ſuſpending the Habeas Corpus Act, being brought down from the Lords by Baron Price and Judge Tracy, it was upon Mr. Walpole's Motion immediately read the firſt Time, and after a ſecond Reading, October 19, the committing it was oppos'd by Mr. Charles Cæſar, Mr. John Hungerford, &c. And after it was Committed, a Debate aroſe chiefly about the Time of the Suſpenſion, 6 Months or 12 Months. The Earl of Hertford was Chairman of this Committee, and the firſt that ſpoke for the 6 Months, was Spencer Cowper, Eſq. who was ſeconded by John Smith, Eſq. and back'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll. Three Gentlemen as eminent for their Affection to the Conſtitution as for their Stations in it. They were anſwered by Sir Robert Raymund, Attorney-General, and the Debate was continu'd by Mr. Hungerford, Mr. Worſeley, Mr. Winnington Jeffries, Mr. Hutcheſon, Mr. Sloper, for the Six Months, and Mr. Pulteney, Mr. Yonge, and Mr. Pelham, for the Twelve-Months. Mr. Robert Walpole clos'd it, and prov'd the Neceſſity of that Suſpenſion in a very Pathetick Speech. He inform'd the Houſe, " that the Conſpirators had apply'd to Foreign " Powers, firſt, for 5000, and then for 3000 " Men; that their Deſign was to ſeize the " Bank; the Exchequer, and other Places, " where Money was lodg'd: That there had " been a Meeting of ſeveral conſiderable Per- " ſons, one of whom was not far off, wherein " it had been propos'd to proclaim the Preten- " der at the Royal Exchange, &c." Mr. Walpole's

Mr. Robert Walpole's Speech about the Conſpiracy.

A.D.1722 pole's Speech had ſo good Effect, that upon the Queſtion, it was carry'd by a Majority of 246 Voices againſt 193. To prepare the Way for a powerful Oppoſition to the Augmentation of the Forces in this dangerous Juncture, Mr. John Trenchard publiſh'd a virulent, ſophiſtical Diſcourſe, to prove The Folly, Uſeleſsneſs and Danger of ſtanding Armies; the Nonſenſe of which is as conſpicuous, as the Malice; for if the Soldiers are uſeleſs to defend the Government, they are uſeleſs to oppreſs the People. There is not one Argument in this Piece, but what had been before directly or indirectly ſufficiently confuted in the Ballancing Letter, written by the late Lord Somers, who is treated in a very inhumane Manner by this pretended Cato. He was remov'd from a Capacity of perplexing Publick Affairs. The Falſhood of which Scandal is ſo notorious, that by the general Conſent of all Parties, the Lord Somers was reckon'd to have the cleareſt Head in the Miniſtry, while he continu'd in it.

The mighty Army againſt which Cato harangu'd in ſo much Anxiety for the Preſervation of Liberty againſt them, who indeed were in Pay to defend it againſt Foreign and Popiſh Tyranny, conſiſted of

Of the Standing Forces.

Of theſe 12115 Men, the Horſe and Foot Guards, 4750, Men being deducted, as alſo the Horſe, Foot and Dragoons in Scotland, there remain'd in England only 4500, a formidable Hoſt to overturn the Conſtitution, which in a great Meaſure owes to it its Exiſtence, ſo often threaten'd by Foreign and Domeſtick Enemies: Theſe few Troops are magnify'd by the Catos, Danvers, Foggs, and other ſuch modern Patriots, tho' there is not, and never was a true Briton ſince the Revolution, who had the leaſt Fear upon him, that they were kept up to enſlave us, or that the Nation would be begger'd by paying them the Money, every Penny of which was again ſpent amongſt them.

The Addreſſes of both Houſes of Parliament, ſuited to the Contents of his Majeſty's Speech, having been preſented and graciouſly receiv'd, we ſhould have remember'd it, but choſe rather to keep that Room for their joint Addreſſes againſt the Pretender's Declaration, equally vain and inſolent.

I have hinted already why I do not enter into Convocation Hiſtory. All the World knows ſuch a Work muſt conſiſt of a Series of Forms without Subſtance, and we are too much circumſcrib'd in Compaſs, to give them a Place here. But we muſt not omit the meeting of this Synod, October 12th, nor the Latin Sermon preach'd before them at St. Pauls, by Dr. Hare's Convocation Sermon.

Dr. Hare, Dean of Worceſter; nor their making Choice of Dr. Stanhope for their Prolucutor. Dr. Hare in his Sermon ſet forth the Complaints againſt the Clergy, and exhorted them to regulate their Conduct, in ſuch a Manner, as to put to Shame and ſtop the Mouths of their Adverſaries. He reduc'd theſe Complaints to three Heads, A.D.1722

His three Complaints againſt the Clergy.

Firſt, The Diviſions, Factions and Animoſities among them.

Secondly, Their Love of Novelties, Reſtleſs Spirit and Affectation of Independency.

Thirdly, Their Diſaffection to the King and Royal Family, their ſaucy and inſolent Behaviour to the Government, Their Aſperſing the King, &c. He expatiated very much on the third and laſt Head, and how ſucceſsful his Exhortations concerning their future Conduct were, is not our Buſineſs to inquire into. Sure we are the Convocation preſented a very Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs to his Majeſty, wherein they "begg'd Leave "with the greateſt Sincerity to expreſs their "Abhorrence of the traiterous Conſpiracy, "which his Majeſty had ſo happily diſcover'd "againſt his ſacred Perſon and Government. "A Conſpiracy ſo unnatural in it ſelf, ſo execrable in its Circumſtances, and which, had "it ſucceeded muſt have been ſo terrible in "its Effects, that the leaſt Thought of it fill'd "their Souls with Horror at the extream "Wickedneſs of the Deſign, and with the utmoſt Deteſtation of all thoſe deſperate Men "who cou'd engage in it. Will it be want of Charity to call to Mind, that Dr. Francis Atterbury, whom a former Convocation was proud of having for their Prolocutor, was one of thoſe deſperate Men.

Convocation Addreſs againſt the Plot.

Among many other Addreſſes on the Diſcovery of this horrid Conſpiracy, we find one from the Proteſtant Diſſenting Miniſters of the Three Denominations, preſented by Mr. Matthew Clarke, introduc'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State; wherein they ſay: It grieves us that our Native Country, ſhould produce ſuch Monſters of Ingratitude and Perfidiouſneſs. We are at a Loſs to expreſs how much we abhor their Practices, and as for their Principles that lead into Them, we cannot but account them as Fooliſh as they are Impious. We aſſure your Majeſty That We, as Miniſters of the Goſpel of Peace, are fully determin'd always to recommend Loyalty and Fidelity to your Majeſty and your Government, and it is no ſmall Satisfaction to us, that we are engag'd with a People ſo well diſpos'd in this Reſpect, as the Body of Proteſtant Diſſenters, of whom we can with Safety declare, That in all Parts of the Kingdom, they adhere moſt inviolably to your Majeſty, as their Rightful and Lawful Sovereign, and are very ſenſible of the many Bleſſings of your Auſpicious Reign, which is not only juſt and equal at Home, but glorious Abroad thro' the tender Concern, which your Majeſty upon all Occaſions is pleas'd to diſcover for the Liberties of Europe, and for our Proteſtant Brethren in Foreign Parts.

Diſſenters Addreſs.

On the 22d of October, a Special Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, for the County of Eſſex, was open'd at Rumford, before Mr. Juſtice Forteſcue Aland, Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, with Sir Henry Fetherſtone, and ſeveral other Gentlemen. The Grand Jury being ſworn, a Bill of Indictment for High Treaſon, againſt Chriſtopher Layer, Eſq. was preſented to them, and after Examination of ſeveral Witneſſes, they return'd it to the Court, Billa Vera. The Proceſs was remov'd by Certiorari to the Court of King's Bench at Weſtminſter, where his Trial came on November 21ſt,

A.D.1722 between 10 and 11 a Clock, and lasted about 17 Hours, His Council Mr. Hungerford and Mr. Kettleby, giving the Court a great Deal of needless Trouble. Sir Robert Raymund, Attorney General open'd the Indictment, which set forth in Substance, That the Prisoner at the Bar had been employ'd in forming a most Traiterous and Horrid Plot and Conspiracy against his Majesty and his Government, by inlisting Men in Essex for the Pretender's Service, in order to stir up a Rebellion, and also, that he had held Correspondence with the Pretender, by carrying Letters and treasonable Papers to him beyond Seas, and from Him to his Majesty's disaffected Subjects in this Kingdom. The first Evidence prov'd "That the Earl Cadogan was "to be siez'd, and the Tower at the same "Time. Afterwards the Bank of England, "then his Majesty and the Prince of Wales. The listing of Men for the Pretender, was prov'd by several Persons to whom Layer gave the Money to list them. The whole Indictment with several Additional Circumstances, was fully prov'd, and one Circumstance had more of Farce than Tragedy in it, which was Layer's desiring the Pretender and his Wife to stand Godfather and Godmother to a Child of his, which they did by Proxy, Two Bigotted Papists represented by two of high Church, the Lord North and Grey standing for the Pretender, and the Dutchess of Ormond for his Wife, at the same Time that she subsisted by a Pension his Majesty was graciously pleas'd to allow her. Layer being found guilty, had Sentence past upon him by the Lord Chief Justice Prat, He said, I hope I shall have Courage enough to undergo the Execution of it both as a Gentleman and a Christian. Something like the saying of the Polander, who was hang'd for murdering Mr. Thynne, That he doubted not God Almighty would have Respect to the Character of a Gentleman. Layer desir'd he might not be hang'd at Tyburn, but as he said himself, He had no Reason to expect any Mercy from the King, and much less any Favour or what was so esteem'd by him.

On the 26th of October, the Lord Viscount Townshend, signify'd to the House of Peers, "that his Majesty had caus'd the Person of "Thomas Duke of Norfolk to be siez'd, having "just Cause to suspect, that he was engag'd in "the Conspiracy now carrying on, and his Ma"jesty did therefore desire the Consent of the "House to his being committed to the Tower "and detain'd on Suspicion of High Treason, "according to the Act lately past for suspending the Habeas Corpus, which Suspension sufficiently justify'd the Commitment of this Duke, but such was his Majesty's most gracious Condescension to the most jealous of his Subjects, such his unparell'd Tenderness in whatever regarded their Liberties and Rights, that he wou'd not admit the making use of the late Act about the Habeas Corpus, without the Consent of the House of Peers. A Motion being made for it, 'twas strenuously oppos'd by the Earls of Aylesford, Cowper, Anglesey, Strafford, Coningsby and Uxbridge, the Lords Bathurst, Lechmere, and some others, who were answered by the Lords Viscounts Harcourt and Townshend, the Duke of Newcastle and the Lord Carteret, and the Question being put, it was carry'd to consent by a Majority of 60 Voices against 28. Upon which 19 Peers sign'd and enter'd a Protest.

Protests against the Duke of Norfolk's Imprisonment.

On the 16th of November, the Lord Viscount Townshend, deliver'd to the House of Peers the following Message from his Majesty.

GEORGE R.

"His Majesty having been inform'd that "many scandalous Declarations in Print, had "been dispers't among his good and faithful "Subjects, to poison their Minds and seduce "them from their Allegiance, several of those "Declarations, have by his Majesty's Order, "even since his Majesty receiv'd from both "Houses of Parliament the last most solemn "and acceptable Assurances of their Fidelity, "been intercepted, and among them an Origi"nal in Writing, sign'd as his Majesty has good "Reason to believe, by the Pretender himself, "this together with one of the printed Copies, "his Majesty has order'd to be laid before "you, as a Matter not unworthy your Consideration.

The King's Message about the Pretender's Declaration.

After the reading of this Paper, the Earl of Scarborough mov'd, that the House wou'd come to some vigorous Resolutions to shew their just Resentment of the high Indignity offer'd in the said Declaration to his Majesty, and being seconded by the Lord Harcourt, a Committee was appointed to draw up the said Resolutions, which were immediately reported and agreed to by the House of Peers, and after two Conferences with the Commons, both Houses agreed to the said Resolutions, and to an Address to his Majesty thereupon.

The first Resolution was, That the Paper this Day communicated by his Majesty, intitul'd, Declaration of James the Third, King of England, Scotland and Ireland, to all his loving Subjects of the three Nations, and all Foreign Princes and States, to serve as a Foundation for a lasting Peace in Europe, and sign'd James Rex, is a false, insolent and traiterous Libel, the highest Indignity to his most sacred Majesty King George, our Lawful and undoubted Sovereign, full of Arrogance and Presumption, as supposing the Pretender in a Condition to offer Terms to his Majesty, and injurious to the Honour of the British Nation, in imagining that a Free Protestant People, happy under the Government of the best of Princes, can be so infatuated as without the utmost Contempt and Indignation to hear of any Terms from a Popish Bigotted Pretender.

Resolutions of both Houses about the Pretender's Declaration.

Resolv'd, By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled. That the Printed Copy of the Pretender's Declaration, mention'd in his Majesty's Message, be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman, at the Royal Exchange in London, upon Tuesday next, at one of the Clock, and the Sheriffs of London then to attend in their own proper Persons and cause the same to be burnt there accordingly. The Attendance of the Sheriffs in Person, was pursuant to a Motion made by William Yonge, Esq. who in a long Speech ran

A.D. 1722 ran over the Pretender's Declaration, and with a great deal of Wit and Judgment, expoſed the Inſolence, Weakneſs and Abſurdities of that Libel, as did alſo Sir William Thompſon, Recorder of London, and Mr. Pelham, Brother to the Duke of Newcaſtle, who mov'd for an Addreſs, and was ſeconded by Arthur Onſlow, Eſq. who repreſented the Danger of Popery, and ſeverely animadverted on the Audaciouſneſs of the Pretender and his Adherents, upon which it was reſolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, " That an humble Addreſs be pre-
" ſented to his Majeſty, expreſſing their ut-
" moſt Aſtoniſhment and Indignation at the " ſurprizing Inſolence of the Pretender, in his " late traiterous and preſumptious Declara" tion, and to aſſure his Majeſty, that his " faithful Subjects, being fully ſatisfied they " have no other Security for their Religious " and Civil Rights, but the Preſervation of " his Perſon and Government and the Proteſ-
" tant Succeſſion, are determin'd to ſupport
" with their Lives and Fortunes, his moſt juſt
" Title to the Crown of theſe Realms, againſt
" the Pretender and all his open and ſecret
" Abettors.

Upon theſe Heads an Addreſs was drawn up, and at a Conference was communicated to the Lords who agreeing to it, both Houſes preſented it to the King the next Day, November 17th; after the uſual Introduction, it is ſaid,

Their Addreſs.

We are fill'd with the utmoſt Aſtoniſhment and Indignation, at the unexempled Preſumption and Arrogance of the Pretender to your Dominions, in daring to offer ſuch an Indignity to your Majeſty and the Britiſh Nation, as to declare to your Subjects, and to all Foreign Princes and States, that he finds himſelf in a Condition to offer Terms to your Majeſty, and even to capitulate with you for the abſolute Surrender of the Religion and Liberties of a Free Nation. However great the Infatuation of his Adherents may be, we are ſenſible nothing cou'd have rais'd His and Their Hopes to ſo extravagant a Degree of Preſumption, but repeated Encouragement and Aſſurances from the Conſpirators at Home, founded on the moſt injurious and groſs Miſrepreſentations of the Inclinations and Affections of your Majeſty's Subjects and a raſh Concluſion that becauſe ſome from whom it ought leaſt to have been expected, had broke through the ſolemn Reſtraint of reiterated Oaths, in Order to raiſe themſelves on the Ruin of their Country, therefore the whole Body of the Nation was ripe for the ſame fatal Defection, and ready to exchange the mild and legal Government of a moſt indulgent Prince, for the boundleſs Rage of an attainted Fugitive, bred up in Maxims of Tyranny and Superſtition.

But We, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, Reſolve by a ſteddy and conſtant Adherence to your Government, to wipe off this Stain and Imputation from the Name of Britons and to convince the World, that thoſe wicked Deſigns form'd againſt your Majeſty, which the Inſolence of this Declaration proves to be moſt real, while it affects to treat them as imaginary are indeed impracticable againſt a Prince relying on and ſupported by the Vigour and Duty of a Britiſh Parliament, and the Affections of his People.

And we beg Leave in the moſt ſolemn Manner to aſſure your Majeſty, that neither the impotent Menaces of foreign Aſſiſtance, or the utmoſt Efforts of Domeſtick Traitors, ſhall ever deter us from ſtanding by your Majeſty with our Lives and Fortunes, and ſupporting your Majeſty's juſt Title to the Crown of theſe Realms, againſt the Pretender and all his open and ſecret Abettors, both at Home and Abroad. A.D. 1722

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer,

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Anſwer.

I give you many Thanks for the juſt Reſentment you have expreſt againſt the Indignity offer'd to me and the Britiſh Nation.

I ſhall continue to protect and ſupport my good People in the full Enjoyment of their Religion, Liberties and Properties, againſt all that ſhall endeavour to ſubject them to Tyranny and Superſtition.

Two Days after the Houſe of Commons having heard the Merits of the Coventry Election; at which the High Church Rabble had behav'd with their wonted Rage and Inſolence, order'd that Sir Thomas Gery, Mr. Thomas Kimberley, faſt Friends to Henry Sacheverel, D. D. &c. be taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant Arms, on Account of the notorious and outragious Riots, Tumults and Seditions at the ſaid Election.

Sir Thomas Gery taken into Cuſtody for the Coventry Riot.

On the 22d of November, the Houſe of Commons being in a grand Committee on Ways and Means, a Motion was made for raiſing 100000 l. on the Real and Perſonal Eſtates of Papiſts, and it was generally thought very reaſonable, that ſince the Papiſts had been moſt deeply concern'd in Rebellions and Conſpiracies againſt the Government ſince the late Queen's Death, and conſequently been the chief Occaſion of the extraordinary Expence the Nation had been put to for its Defence, they ſhould contribute towards it in an extraordinary Manner. This Motion was oppos'd by Sir Wilfred Lawſon, Mr. Hungerford, and Dr. Friend, who ſoon after was impriſon'd for the Conſpiracy. Dr. Friend ſaid Some of thoſe who had had their Education in Foreign Popiſh Seminaries, prov'd ſome of the beſt Friends to the Preſent Government. To this William Yonge, Eſq. anſwer'd with great Vivacity; That he knew very little of Foreign Education, but he doubted very much, that Loyalty to King George was taught by Prieſts and Jeſuits in Romiſh Seminaries. Indeed Dr. Friend's Logick in this Argument, was not equal to the Opinion his Party had of his Learning and Capacity. For ſome Perſons who had been bred Papiſts, having overcome the Prejudice of their Education ſo far as to be ſenſible of their Duty to their King and Country; was no Reaſon that all Papiſts, even thoſe whoſe Principles and Practices had been ſo troubleſome and dangerous to the Government that protected them, ſhould have the ſame Privileges as Proteſtants that were intirely innocent. The Lord Gage, who had been a Romaniſt, and had ſeveral Relations of that Religion, ſpoke more than once in their Favour, and among other Things ſaid " He be-
" liev'd moſt of them to be very Loyal Sub" jects, tho' by their Principles they cou'd not " take the Oath of Supremacy, and therefore " his Lordſhip propos'd, that a new Oath of " Allegiance might be fram'd for them, which " it was ſaid the Body of Papiſts were ready
" to

Debate about the 100000 l. on Papiſts.

*A.D.*1722 to comply with; and that one of their principal Gentlemen was deputed to make such an Offer, supported by the Imperial Ambassador and the Ministers of other Roman Catholick Princes, who were in Friendship with the King of Great-Britain. Sir William Thompson urg'd, that this extraordinary Tax could not be deem'd a Persecution for Conscience Sake, it being on Account of Penalties the Papists had at divers Times incurr'd, and for being Enemies to the Civil Government, raising Rebellion and contriving Plots against the State. It was observ'd in this Debate that several Gentlemen who were hearty Friends to the present Settlement spoke against this Tax meerly out of Principle of Liberty of Conscience. Such we must believe was the Inducement to Sir Joseph Jekyl, Mr. West, Mr. Onslow, and others, but no Body cou'd think so of Mr. Hungerford, Dr. Friend, &c. who doubtless oppos'd the Tax because the Papists oppos'd the Government. The Strength of the Argument on the Affirmative Side of the Question, is seen in what Mr. R. Walpole said, who represented "the great Dangers this Nation had been in "ever since the Reformation, from the constant "Endeavours of Popery to subvert our Con-"stitution and the Protestant Religion, by the "most violent and unjustifiable Methods, that "he wou'd not take upon him to charge any "particular Person among them with being "concern'd in the present Horrid Conspiracy, "but that it was notorious to the whole World, "that many of them had been engag'd in the "Preston Rebellion, and some were executed "for it, that the present Plot was contriv'd at "Rome, and countenanc'd in Popish Countries, "that many of the Papists were not only Well-"wishers to it, but had contributed large "Sums of Money towards carrying it on, and "therefore he thought it very reasonable, "since they made such ill Use of the Savings "of the Incomes of their Estates, that the "same should go towards the great Expence "they, and the Pretender's Friends had put "the Nation to." This Speech had so great Influence, that upon putting the Question, it was carry'd in the Affirmative, by 217 Voices against 168.

Mr. Robert Walpole speaks for the Tax.

The Pretender did not only fortify himself with this formidable Declaration, but he had also a Ship equipp'd to support his Pretences. It was call'd the Revolution, and was seiz'd in the Port of Genoa by Commodore Scot, who sent it to England. The Faction was not so much dispirited by the Loyalty and Vigour of the Parliament, as to give over libelling the Government at Home, in Imitation of their Idol the Pretender abroad. Among the Rest one Philips was try'd and convicted for printing an impudent Pamphlet, entitul'd, A short View of the Advantages of the Hanover Succession. Lewis in Covent-Garden, and Edlin in the Strand, Booksellers, were apprehended for printing and publishing, A short View of the History of England, by Bevil Higgons.

The Pretender's Ship taken

*A.D.*1723 Layer the Counsellor, lay still under Sentence of Death, having been repriev'd from Time to Time, to the 19th of January, in Hope he would deserve the Clemency that was shewn him by an ingenious Confession, which however he avoided, or in Truth cou'd discover nothing more important, than what had been prov'd against him; it being obvious, that he was an officious pushing Traitor, who wanted more Employment than the Pretender had for him, or was willing to trust him with. The House of Commons, January 15th, resolv'd, Nem Contradicente, that a Committee be appointed to examine Christopher Layer, in Relation to the Conspiracy, and that the Committee be such Members as were of the Privy-Council. Spencer Compton, Esq. Speaker, Robert Walpole, Esq. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Joseph Jekyl, Master of the Rolls, Paul Methuen, Esq. Comptroller of the Household, William Pulteney, Esq. John Smith, Esq. Richard Hampden, Esq. Lieutenant Gen. Wills, Sir Robert Sutton, who chose Stephen Pointz, Esq. to be their Secretary. Layer's Reprieve was also prolonged on this Occasion. On the 21st of January, the Earl of Anglesey, spoke in the House of Lords about Layer's Trial, and mov'd, That the Judges of the King's Beneh, be order'd to cause it to be forthwith printed. This Motion was back'd by the Earls Cowper, Strafford, Aylesford, the Lords Trevor, Bathurst, Lechmere and others. The Lord Carteret, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, reply'd, "that the Order "mov'd for, was altogether unnecessary, Di-"rections having long before been given by "the Judges of the Court of King's Bench, "for printing and publishing of the said Trial "with all convenient Speed, that the said "Trial being of a very large Extent, and se-"veral Parts of it that were taken, requiring "a great Deal of Time to be put in Order, "and revis'd and rectify'd by the Judges and "the Counsel on both Sides, had occasion'd "the Delay complain'd of, but that the Print-"ing of the said Trial being now in great "Forwardness, the same would be publish'd "in a few Days," as indeed it was a Week after, which made this Debate the more extraordinary, for it was a convincing Proof that the Printing was going forward all that while, and that the Notion of its being delay'd on Account of Deficiency of Proof concerning the Plot, was groundless. The Dukes of Argyle and Newcastle, seconded the Lord Carteret, and a Negative was put on the Motion, by a Majority of 53 Voices against 32, sixteen Lords enter'd their Protest, but the Reason of it, cou'd not exist above a Week, the Trial being publish'd so soon after it.

The Committee to examine Layer.

His Majesty in the beginning of January, was pleas'd to appoint the Earl of Lincoln to be Constable of the Tower, and the Lord Tenham to be one of the Gentlemen of the Bedchamber. John Lord Clifton, was created Viscount Darnley in Ireland, and Henry Temple, Esq. Baron Temple, of Mount Temple, and Viscount Palmerston in that Kingdom. Charles Strickland, Esq. was made Vice Admiral of the white, and Sir George Walton, Rear Admiral of the Blue Squadron of the Navy, and about the same Time, George Ducket, Esq. Member of Parliament for Caln, was appointed one of the Commissioners of the Excise, in the Room of Sir Marmaduke Wyvil, Bart. deceas'd. This is the Gentleman whom one Webster, and other Oxonians, have lately so scandalously abus'd, for the Information he gave me of male Practice in Editing the History of the Grand Rebellion. His Brother. Capt. Ducket, of General Evan's Dragoons, was made Major of the second Troop of Horse Grenadier Guards. Some Time before this their Graces the Dukes of Bolton, Promotions and Preferments.

George Ducket, Esq. made Commissioner of Excise.

A.D. 1723 Time before this their Graces the Dukes of Bolton, Rutland and Roxburgh were elected Knights of the Garter.

On the 16th of February, Robert Cotton, Esq. one of the Preston Rebels, who obtain'd so much Mercy, as not to be prosecuted for that Rebellion, was try'd for affirming and asserting, that the Pretender's Wife, whose Picture was hung up in his Room, was Queen of England. The Lord Chief Justice Prat, summing up the Evidence, concluded with telling the Jury, that if they believ'd the Witness for the King, Mr. Speare, one of his Majesty's Messengers, whose Character and Credit stood entirely unimpeach'd, they must find Cotton guilty, notwithstanding which, they brought him in Not guilty, to the great Surprize of the Lord Chief Justice, and all that heard the Cause, but not of such as consider'd that the City of Westminster, had for some Years been pretty much under the Influence of Bishop Atterbury and the Head Bailiff, who had marry'd his Daughter. Mr. Pulteney, Chairman of the Committee for the Examination of Layer, having acquainted the House, that the Papers relating to the Examination of James Plunket, were necessary to be perus'd by the Committee in re-examining the said Plunket, the House resolv'd to address his Majesty for the Evidences and Papers relating to Plunket. The Committee was also impower'd to examine George Kelly, and Dennis Kelly, Esq. Prisoners in the Tower of London. The Affair which occasion'd the most Talk of any Thing, under the Consideration of the House of Commons this Season, was that of the Harburgh Lottery, so call'd from the Place where it was to be drawn, the Town and Port of Harburgh on the River Elbe, within his Majesty's German Dominions; where the Projector of this Lottery, was to settle a Trade for the Woollen Manufacture, between England and Germany. The Scheme for this Lottery, was to raise 1500000 l. by 500000 Tickets, at 3 l. a Ticket; the Charter for the Company of Merchants for settling the Trade to Harburgh, was granted by the King as Duke and Elector of Brunswick, drawn up at Hanover, and seal'd with the Seal of that Electorate, and the Gentlemen concern'd in this Company at first, Sir Thomas Abney, Sir John Eyles, John Deacle, Esq. Sir Robert Baylis, Sir William Billers, Sir Charles Wager, Sir Thomas Webster, &c. were so unblemish'd in their Characters, that People had for some Time a good Opinion of it, which did not however last long, tho' there could not be reasonably Exception made to many of the Trustees, as

The Harburg Company.

Several Gentlemen gave out as soon as the Lottery was set up, as in particular Sir John Eyles, who early dropt any Concern in it, and Lord Barrington, Sir John Hartop, and Henry Bendish, Esq. refus'd to act as Trustees for the Lottery, as Mr. Benjamin Joules declared at his Examination by a Committee of the House of Commons, of which Mr. Hungerford was Chairman, which boded not well to the Managers of this Lottery, several of whom were Protestant Dissenters, and that could not A.D. 1723 but very much sharpen Mr. Hungerford in his Inquiries: It appears every where in the Proceedings about this Matter, that it was represented to his Majesty as a Project which would not only advance the Trade of Cloth within his Electorate, but also within his Kingdom of Great-Britain, and that his Majesty did not suffer a Step to be taken in it by his Authority, but as Elector of Brunswick, and as it related to his German Dominions; tho' the Disaffected rais'd a mighty Clamour upon it, as if the Design was to sacrifice the Commerce of Great-Britain to the Germans, which was so false, that when Lord Barrington, Sir Charles Wager, and Sir Thomas Webster waited upon Lord Townshend, Lord Carteret, and Mr. Walpole, to procure a British Charter, they were told it could not be granted, because it was ILLEGAL and Impracticable.

There does not appear to have been any great Sums of Money paid in upon this Lottery Project, which was not lik'd by most of those that had been willing to engage in the Trading Company. The Objections to the Lottery were, that too much of the Money, intended to be rais'd by it, was for Rewards and Gratifications to Persons who pretended to have done great Services towards the settling of this Company, and that the Lottery had no British Charter to authorize it; for tho' the Tickets were to be drawn at Harburgh, or any other Place, the Money was to be British, and consequently would be liable to a Parliamentary Inquiry, upon Complaint which the Sufferers wou'd be sure to make. To have done with it, the Harburgh Lottery was voted a fraudulent Undertaking, and Lord Barrington expell'd the House for being concern'd in it.

The House taking into Consideration the Abuses and Frauds in the Tobacco Trade, Mr. Trenchard mov'd, that in Order to prevent them, there might be a Re-entry of all Tobacco that was remov'd from one Port to another, both in England and Scotland; and Sir Nathaniel Gould, a Merchant, mov'd, that all Tobacco Imported both in England and Scotland, be put into Warehouses, and not be remov'd from thence without a Permit to prove that the Duty was paid. Thus we see that the Motion for putting Tobacco into publick Warehouses, came originally from Merchants, and this shews the Extravagance of the Cry against it, as a Part of a late Scheme for an Inland Duty on that Commodity.

Merchants move for putting Tobacco into publick Warehouses.

On the 18th of February, Mr. Yonge, from the Committee appointed to inquire into the Printer and Publisher of the Report about the Harburgh Lottery, acquainted the House that Richard Franklin, Bookseller in Fleetstreet, who had own'd that the said Report, was printed by his Direction, having been again summon'd to attend the Committee, had sent a Letter to the Chairman, acquainting him that he would not obey the said Summons: No doubt it was this Impudence of his that recommended him to the Faction of the Craftsmen to be the Printer of their seditious Libel the Craftsman, which he has printed 5 or 6 Years in Defyance of Law and Truth. He was order'd to be taken into Custody of the Serjeant at Arms.

Richard Francklin, Bookseller's impudent Answer to the Committee.

On the 23d of February, William Pulteney, Esq. from the Committee appointed to examine Layer, acquainted the House that the Committee had prepar'd a Report to be laid

A.D.1723 before them, and it was order'd to be receiv'd the first of March. The 26th of February it was resolv'd, Nemine Contradicente "That an "humble Address be presented to his Majesty "to congratulate his Majesty on the Increase "of his Royal Family by her Royal High- "ness's being happily delivered of a Princess "and that a Congratulatory Message be sent "to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and "Princess of Wales on this happy Occasion. The next Day, Robert Walpole, Esq Chancellor of the Exchequer, reported to the House that the said Address had been presented, and that his Majesty commanded him to acquaint this House, That his Majesty returns his Thanks to this House for their Address of Congratulation, and for the Zeal and Affection which they have expres't to him aud his Family. Then Mr. Pelham reported, that the Gentlemen appointed to attend their Royal Highnesses with a Congratulatery Message, had attended his Royal Highness accordingly, who was pleas'd to give this Answer; That He is very sensible of the Affection which the House of Commons have shew'd to him upon all Occasions, and returns his Thanks for this particular Instance of it.

An Address on the Birth of the Princess Mary.

His Majesty's and his Royal Higness's Answer.

The House having order'd the Report of the Committee for the Examination of Layer, to be printed, every one that read it was convinc'd of the Truth of the Conspiracy, in which it appears by that Report, that the Bishop of Rochester, the Lord North and Grey, and other Lords and Gentlemen, that had by reiterated Oaths abjur'd the Pretender, were engag'd some in a greater, and some in a less Degree. Layer declar'd to a Committee of Lords of the Council, that the Earl of Orrery told him, Nothing could relieve the Nation but a Restoration. The Piety, the Honour, the Gratitude of this Man, whom the King trusted with one of the largest Counties in England, and with a Post near his Royal Person. James Butler wrote to another Traitor at Rome; "Tell, Mr. Chau- "mont, the Prerender, I think it a good Time "to make an Effort when the Elector is gone "to Hanover. Atterbury wrote also to the Pretender, Notwithstanding this Opportunity is elaps'd, I agree with you another may offer before the End of the Year. Layer confest that the Lord Orrery, was not for stirring without Foreign Troops to assist them, which he telling the Lord North and Grey, this rare Protestant and Patriot said, Lord Orrery is a timerous Fellow, and always making Difficulties. Coll. Stanhope, his Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid, procur'd an Order from that Court to hinder Butler's Embarkation in Spain, and the like Orders were granted by the Regent of France to his Majesty's Minister at Paris, which was a great Balk to the Conspirators. Neyno a Nonjuring Priest depos'd, that Sir Henry Goring, was one of their principal Leaders. Sir Luke Schaub, wrote from Paris, that John Barber, the Printer, Alderman, carry'd with him Bills of Exchange for 50000 l. for the Pretender. The Conspirators argu'd, as by Lieutenant Pancier's Affidavit. "They cou'd ex- "pect no Opposition. We had but 14000 Men in all, pray mind what Stress the Jacobites laid on the small Number of regular Forces in England, and at the same Time what Stress the Catos, the Craftsmen and the Murmurers lay on the Number of those Forces, which they call a Standing Army. "That "3000 of them were necessary to guard Lon- "don, 3000 more for Scotland, and 2000 for "the Garrisons, so that the Remainder would "never dare to attack the Invaders. Layer told the Committee, "That the Pretender "askt him what Country he was of, and what "Gentleman he knew, and that he answer'd "he was of Norfolk, and knew all the Tory "Gentlemen," of whom he drew up a List, and gave it to the Pretender, thinking it wou'd be agreable to him. He said, that at his Return from Italy, he found most of the Gentlemen in Norfolk, who were Tories before, Jacobites now. Kelly and Neyno, two of the Conspirators confest, that Bishop Atterbury held Correspondencies with the Pretender and his Agents. The British Minister gives Information about John Barber.

The Report of the Committee for examining Christopher Layer, is very well evidenc'd and circumstantiated, which the House having taken into Consideration, William Pulteney, Esq. mov'd that this Question might be put: "That upon Consideration of the Report, and "the several Papers and Examinations relating "to the Conspiracy, it appears to this House, "that a detestable and horrid Conspiracy has "been form'd and carry'd on by Persons of "Figure and Distinction, their Agents and "Instrumeuts, in Conjunction with Trai- "tors abroad, for invading these Kingdoms "with foreign Forces, for raising Insurrections "and a Rebellion at Home, for seizing the "Tower and City of London, for laying vio- "lent Hands upon the Person of his most sa- "cred Majesty and the Prince of Wales, in "order to subvert our present happy Establish- "ment in Church and State, by placing a Po- "pish Pretender upon the Throne. This Motion was seconded by Sir John Rushout, and Thomas Broderick, Esq. But Mr. Shippen, and Mr. William Bromley, did not think from what had been yet laid before them, that there was such a particular concerted Plot, as was mention'd in that Question; there could not have been plainer Proof of a Conspiracy's being forming; and unless it had been put in Execution, some of those who spoke slightingly of it, would not have acknowledg'd that it was ever form'd. Sir Joseph Jekyll, Master of the Rolls said with a great deal of Warmth upon hearing Mr. Shippen and Mr. Bromley, He could not with Patience and with his usual Moderation hear the Truth of this detestable and horrid Conspiracy call'd into Question, after so many undeniable Proofs. But, added he, As there are People who know nothing of the Plot, and yet believe it so there are others that know the whole Plot, and yet pretend not to believe it, which is as great a Truth as ever was spoken in that House, Mr. Ward made some Reply, and excepted against the Words laying violent Hands on the Person of his Sacred Majesty, because it was only said in the Report, that the Conspirators meant only to sieze or assault, as if siezing and assaulting were not Acts of Violence. Mr. Horatio Walpole, answer'd him saying: He was amaz'd to hear such Words come out of the Mouth of a Lawyer, and a Member of that House, but since he had forgot his Profession, and the Place he was in so far as to make so small a Matter of siezing the King's Person, and the Heir apparent on whom all that is dear and valuable to Englishmen, both as Men and Christians entirely depends, He must take the Liberty to tell him, that, much less Sir Jos. Jekyl's admirable Speech in Answer to Mr. Shippen and Mr. William Bromley.

A.D.1723 leſs than ſeizing and aſſaulting the Perſon of the King or Prince, is by our Laws looke upon as an Overt Act of High Treaſon. This Lawyer came off ſo poorly, that few of his Side had the Courage to ſpeak after him, and Mr. Pulteney's Queſtion was carry'd without dividing. Then Mr. Pelham mov'd, "That it appears to the Houſe, that Chriſtopher Layer, "in his ſeveral Examinations before the Lords "of the Council and the Committee of that "Houſe, has groſly prevaricated, ſuppreſt the "Truth, and endeavour'd as far as in him lies, "to diſguiſe and conceal the ſaid horrid and "deteſtable Conſpiracy." He was ſeconded by the Lord Tyrconnel, and the Queſtion carry'd without dividing. After this Mr. Attorney General mov'd, "That it appears to the "Houſe, that John Plunket has been a princi-"pal Agent and Inſtrument in the ſaid horrid "and deteſtable Conſpiracy, and has carry'd "on ſeveral treaſonable Correſpondencies to "procure a foreign Force to invade theſe "Kingdoms, to raiſe Inſurrections and a Re-"bellion at Home, and was engag'd with others "in the vilainous and execrable Deſign of "laying violent Hands upon his Majeſty's "moſt ſacred Perſon," which Queſtion was alſo carry'd without a Diviſion. Mr. Attorney alſo mov'd, that Leave be given to bring in a Bill to inflict certain Pains and Pinalties upon John Plunket. He was ſeconded by Mr. Onſlow, but the Motion was warmly oppos'd, however it was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 289 Voices againſt 130. On the 11th of March, Mr. Sollicitor General made the like Motion in the Caſe of George Kelly alias Johnſon, and was ſeconded by Mr. Sandys and Mr. Walpole, but Mr. Trenchard, as well known by the Name of Cato, ſaid, He thought the propereſt way to proceed againſt this Criminal was in the old Parliamentary Method by Bill of Attainder, there being ſufficient Proof to ſupport ſuch a Bill. Mr. Lutwyche, another Lawyer, Mr. Shippen, and Mr. William Bromley, thought there was not Proof ſufficient to ſupport Mr. Sollicitor's Motion. They were anſwer'd by the Maſter of the Rolls, Mr. Talbot, and others, and the Queſtion carry'd in the Affirmative, by 280 Voices againſt 111. Plunket and Kelly were two indigent Fellows, and many were of Opinion they ſhould rather have been ſhut up with the Traitors in Newgate, than have been impriſon'd in the Tower, and indeed that they were hardly worth the Trouble that was taken about them, and much leſs the Charge, but as they were in the ſame Plot with Atterbury, 'twas fit they ſhou'd prepare the Way for the like Proceedings againſt him; accordingly when the Queſtion about Kelly was carry'd, William Yonge, Eſq. ſtood up, and in a long elegant Speech repreſented "how deep-"ly Dr. Francis Atterbury Biſhop of Roche-"ſter had been concern'd in this DETESTABLE "Conſpiracy, aggravating his Crime from his "holy Function and high Station in the Church "of England, from the ſolemn Oaths he had, "on ſo many Occaſions taken to the Govern-"ment, and by which he had ABJUR'D the "Pretender, when at the ſame Time he was "Traiterouſly conſpiring to bring him in, up-"on the Ruin of his Country and of all that "was dear and valuable to us, as Freemen and "Chriſtians, concluding that as he was a Diſ-"grace to his Order, and Diſhonour to his "Church, ſo he might apply to him on that "Occaſion Theſe Words of the Acts: Let his "Habitation be deſolate, and let no Man dwell "therein. And his BISHOPRICK let another "take." And therefore he mov'd that "it "appears to this Houſe, that Francis, Lord "Biſhop of Rocheſter, was principally con-"cern'd in forming, directing and carrying "on the ſaid wicked and deteſtable Conſpiracy "for invading theſe Kingdoms with a foreign "Force, and for raiſing Inſurrections and a "Rebellion at Home, in Order to ſubvert our "preſent happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and "State, by placing a Popiſh Pretender on the "Throne." Mr. Yonge was ſtrongly ſupported by Sir John Cope and others, who were as ſtrongly oppos'd by Sir William Wyndham, Mr. William Bromley, Mr. Shippen, Mr. Hutcheſon, Mr. Strangways, Mr. Hungerford, Mr. Lutwyche, and Dr. Friend, the laſt was at a great Deal of Pains to prove, that above two to one of the Members of that Houſe, were not as good Judges of the Matter as himſelf. This Doctor, as has been hinted elſewhere, wrote a Book about the War in Spain, and ſwore to the Truth of it, which argu'd a Latitude of Conſcience and a narrowneſs of Soul, it being a Party Buſineſs, that did not at all do Honour to the Biſhops Cauſe by his appearing in it. Sir William Wyndham ſaid, There was little or indeed no Evidence againſt the Biſhop beſides Conjectures and Hearſays. But theſe Hearſays and Conjectures, were more than ſufficient to convince any Man, that was not reſolv'd not to be convinc'd, that Mr. Yonge's Motion was juſt, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Maſter of the Rolls, Robert Walpole, Eſq. Chancellor of the Exchequer, John Smith, Eſq. formerly Speaker of that Honourable Houſe, Mr. Pelham, Mr. Talbot, and William Pulteney, Eſq. anſwer'd all the Objections, the other Gentlemen made to that Motion, which was carried without a Diviſion, as was the other Motion for a Bill to inflict certain Pains and Penalties upon Francis, Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter. Two Days after Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, acquainted the Houſe, "That his Majeſty having had juſt "Reaſon to apprehend Dr. John Friend, a "Member of this Houſe for High Treaſon, "had caus'd him to be apprehended, and de-"ſir'd the Conſent of this Houſe to his being "committed and detained for High Treaſon, "according to an Act of this preſent Seſſion, "for impow'ring his Majeſty to ſecure and de-"tain ſuch Perſons as his Majeſty ſhall ſuſpect"are conſpir ng againſt his Perſon and Govern-"ment. Upon which he mov'd "That an "humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, "that he would be pleas'd to give Order for "committing and detaining Dr. John Friend, "&c." This Motion was ſeconded and backt by ſeveral Members, but oppos'd by Mr. Shippen and Mr. William Bromley, who ſaid "They "could not ſee any Reaſon why that Houſe "ſhould give Leave for detaining any Mem-"ber, unleſs the Species of Treaſon was de-"clar'd, and that the Information was upon "Oath." Sir Joſeph Jekyl and Robert Walpole, Eſq. reply'd, "That by the late Act for "ſuſpending the Habeas Corpus, the King was "impower'd to take up any Perſon he had "Reaſon to ſuſpect." Mr. William Bromley and Mr. Shippen, had juſt heard the Title of that Act read, and how prodigious was it in the Way of thinking, that they ſhould inſiſt upon an Information upon Oath, when bare Suſpi-

Dr Friend impriſon'd for High Treaſon.

A.D. 1723 Suſpicion was by that new Statute declared to be ſufficient. But really there was ſo much Malignity and Extravagance in the Arguments of the Negatives on this Occaſion, that it is aſtoniſhing to think how they could be offer'd to ſuch an illuſtrious Aſſembly. Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, added: "He did "not doubt, but Dr. Friend was charg'd upon "Oath," and as we read in the Annals, pri- "vately declar'd to ſeveral Members, that "there was a poſitive Oath of his being guilty "of the BLACKEST and baſeſt Treaſon." Mr. S— then ſuggeſting, "that the Doctors hav- "ing ſpoken ſo warmly in Kelly and the Bi- "ſhop of Rocheſter's Behalf, was in his Opi- "nion the Reaſon of his being taken up him- "ſelf, and that, at that Rate, there was an "End of the Liberty of Speech, which every "Member of that Houſe had a Right to," Mr. Walpole reply'd with ſome Quickneſs, "He "wonder'd any Gentlemen could think any "Miniſtry capable of ſo baſe a Thing, as to "take up a Gentleman for what he ſaid in that "Houſe, without any other Cauſe, when they "knew themſelves to be accountable as well "as others for their Actions," Adding "That "they who made ſuch Inſinuations, might more "eaſily be prov'd to be Jacobites, than they "could make out ſuch an Allegation againſt "the Miniſtry," William Pulteney, Eſq. ſpoke on the ſame Side, and in Relation to Dr. Friend's ſpeaking in Behalf of Kelly and Atterbury, obſerv'd, That it was uſual in all Conſpiracies for one Traitor to endeavour to excuſe another. This was an Obſervation made in the ſame Place by Lieuteuant General Mordaunt, in Fenwick's Caſe, after Sir Edward Seymour had been ſpeaking for that Traitor. But Mr. S— fell warmly on Mr. Pulteny, ſaying, It was not to be endur'd to have a Member of that Houſe call'd a TRAITOR before he was convicted as ſuch. Mr. Pulteny explaining himſelf, the Matter dropt, and the Addreſs was carry'd without dividing. After ſo mature Conſideration of the Report of the Committee, the Houſe of Commons preſented an Addreſs of Abhorrence of the Conſpiracy to his Majeſty. In which was this Paragraph. We ſee with Aſtoniſhment, that Perſons of Figure and Diſtinction, who ought to have been the beſt Judges and moſt zealous Defenders of your beneficent and mild Reign (by which alone their Fortunes and Dignity can be made ſecure) ſhould be ſo far infatuated as to head and abett a MONSTROUS Conſpiracy, to deſtory your Majeſty, their Country and Themſelves. That Honour, Faith and the moſt ſolemn Ties ſhould be violated, in Favour of a Popiſh FUGITIVE, known only for his blind Bigotry and Attachment to Ruin.

We congratulate your Majeſty and all your good Subjects, that you have eſcap'd the BLACK and unnatural Deſigns of the WORST of Men, &c. Dr. Francis Atterbury, one of the Idols of High Church, the Defender of Sacheverel, the great Stickler for the Occaſional and Schiſm Bills, is here declar'd to be one of the worſt of Men, and I ſuppoſe I may now make bold with his Character, without the Charge either of Indecorum or Partiality.

At a Conference between the Lords and Commons, William Pulteney, Eſq. Chairman of the Committee, appointed to be Managers for the latter, acquainted the Managers for the Lords, "that upon the Commons humble Ap- "plication to his Majeſty, they did by Order "of the Houſe lay before their Lordſhips the "original Papers and Letters relating to the "Conſpiracy:" which he ſet forth agreably to the Reſolutions of the Houſe of Commons, concluding: "That the Commons did not "doubt, but that the ſame Zeal which anima- "ted them, would likewiſe animate their Lord- "ſhips in the vigorous Proſecution of thoſe "wicked Conſpirators, till they were brought "to Exemplary Juſtice, and until the united "Reſentments of both Houſes of Parliament, "ſhould convince the whole World of the "Danger there is for the moſt ſubtle Traitors "to attempt the Subverſion of this Govern- "ment, or endeavour to deprive a Free and "Happy People of the Bleſſing of his Majeſty's "Reign, and the Succeſſion of his Royal Fa- "mily, upon which their Religion, Laws and "Liberties ENTIRELY depends: So ſaid Mr. Pulteney with great Truth and Reaſon, and whoever ſay the contrary, muſt according to his Saying, and according to Reaſon and Truth be Traitors and Enemies to their Country. The Managers for the Lords having made Report of the Conference to the Houſe, their Lordſhips by Way of Ballot, made Choice of nine Peers to be a Committee to inquire into the horrid and deteſtable Conſpiracy, and upon a Scrutiny, the following Liſt was carry'd by a vaſt Majority.

Duke of Dorſet.	Lord Viſc. Torrington.
Duke of Montroſe.	Lord Viſc. Lonſdale.
Earl of Scarborough.	Biſhop of Salisbury.
Earl of Lincoln.	Biſhop of Lincoln.
Earl of Iſlay.

Two Days after Dr. Friend was apprehended he was examin'd by a Committee of Council, and afterwards committed Priſoner to the Tower for High Treaſon. About the ſame Time, one Thomas, Keeper of the Repoſitory of the Royal Society, in Crane Court, was taken into Cuſtody, for aſſiſting ſome of the Conſpirators in carrying on their treaſonable Correſpondences. The Earl of Orrery being much indiſpos'd, occaſion'd not only by his Confinement in the Tower, but by Grief for the Diſappointment of the Plot, or for his heing engag'd in it, upon Repreſentation of his Condition to his Majeſty, Leave was given to admit him to Bail. His Sureties were the Lord Carleton, Lord Preſident of the Council, and the Earl of Burlington, his noble Relations, who were not more illuſtrious for their Dignity than their Zeal for the Publick Good. Dr. Yalden, Miniſter of Bridewell, and lately Tutor to the Duke of Beaufort, was taken into Cuſtody of a Meſſenger about the latter End of March, on Suſpicion of Correſpondence with the Conſpirators, which Suſpicion was the better grounded, for that he was known to be in Confidence with Perſons, who in the late Reign were Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as was before hinted.

We omitted giving Account of the Duke of Portland's Arrival and generous Reception at the Iſland of Barbadoes, in his Paſſage to his Government of Jamaica, where his Grace arriv'd at the latter End of the preceding Year, with his Dutcheſs and Family, and was receiv'd with all Demonſtrations of publick Joy. Such Incidents as theſe, and indeed thoſe of Preferments and Promotions, relating more to particular Perſons, than to the Publick in general, are more proper for Biography than Hiſtory.

A.D.1723 from the Levant, where the Plague had rag'd all the laſt Year, was taken off by Proclamation, and a general Thankſgiving for preſerving his Majeſty and his Subjects from it, was order'd to be obſerv'd on the 25th of April.

The Oxonians, who agree ſo well in good High Church Principles, happen'd now to be at Variance about the Choice of an Academick Officer, call'd Curator, of the Sheldonian Theater. The Candidates were Dr. Shippen, Principal of Brazen-Noſe College, and by his Turn Vice-Chancellor, and Dr. Butler, Preſident of St. Mary Magdelens. But the Parliamentary Merit of Mr. Shippen, was at this Time of no Uſe to his Brother the Dr. who loſt the Election by a great Majority of Voices. For him 65, for Dr. Butler 96, upon which Occaſion there were great Rejoycings in ſeveral Colleges.

It will not be expected that we ſhould enter into the Detail of the Examination of the Evidence, to prove the Plot, taken by the Committees of Lords and Commons, we muſt refer to the Printed Trials and other publick Accounts for Particulars, and can only here incert the more curious.

The Committee of Lords having made their Report to the Houſe of Peers, it was reſolv'd by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled: " That this Houſe is fully " ſatisfy'd and convinc'd, that a deteſtable and " wicked Conſpiracy has been form'd and carried on for ſolliciting a Foreign Force to invade theſe Kingdoms, for raiſing a Rebellion " and inciting Inſurrections in London, and divers other Parts of Great-Britain, and even " for laying violent Hands on the ſacred Perſon of his Majeſty, and on his Royal Highneſs " the Prince of Wales, in Order to deſtroy our " Religion and happy Conſtitution, by placing " a Popiſh Pretender on the Throne." Their Lordſhips after this order'd, " That the Thanks " of this Houſe be given by the Lord Chancellor to the ſaid Lords Committees, for " their having diſcharg'd the Truſt in them " repos'd, with great Exactneſs, Care, Fidelity " and Candour," which his Lordſhip did accordingly in a very elegant Speech.

Among other Things relating to Biſhop Atterbury's engaging in this Conſpiracy, one of the Evidence Carryl, depos'd, that Atterbury, in Diſcourſe with Sir Henry Goring about the Pretender's Affairs, took an Expreſſion, which he thought injurious to his Zeal for the Pretender, ſo ill, that he collar'd Goring, which agrees exactly with the Character of the Man, as to Temper, Moderation, and other Chriſtian Virtues.

Biſhop Atterbury collars Sir Henry Goring.

The Earl of Orrery was ſo active in this Matter, according to Pancier's Information, that he was Chairman of the Burford Club, which Plunket told Pancier conſiſted of Tory Lords and others, and as it is very juſtly obſerv'd in the Report, the Matter aſſerted of that Club in Plunket's Letters, ſeems inconſiſtent with the known Character of ſome of thoſe Perſons.

The pretended Burford Club.

'Tho' the villainous Deſign of the Conſpirators in this Chimerical Club, was like that of Fenwick, when he charg'd King William's Miniſters and Friends with his own Plot, to puzzle the Cauſe and create Jealouſies and Miſunderſtandings among them, yet one may perceive there were ſeveral Names in this Liſt which the Conſpirators imagin'd every one wou'd believe very likely to be concern'd in it, as Goring, Atterbury, Phipps, &c. But there were others, which at firſt Sight appear'd to be fictitious; as, Cowper, Webb, &c. The Earl of Strafford, and the Lord Hay, Son in Law to the laſt Treaſurer, and Earl of Kinowle, in Scotland, complain'd to the Houſe of Lords, that in the printed Report of the Houſe of Commons, it is mention'd that one Skeene told Pancier, that the Lord Strafford, and the Lord Kinowle, were privy to Deſigns againſt the Government, and a Motion was made that they ſhould be examin'd at the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, but it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 64 Voices againſt 29. The Earl Cowper and Mr. Hutcheſon, publiſh'd Declarations againſt the falſe Information of their being of the Burford Club, and Earl Cowper made a long Speech in the Houſe, complaining of his being mention'd in the Report on the bare Hearſay of an infamous Perſon, which was enough to give an Air of Fiction to the whole Conſpiracy. This was anſwer'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend: " That he " was much ſurpriz'd to find that a noble Peer " whoſe Abilities and Merit had juſtly ſo great " Weight in that illuſtrious Aſſembly, ſhould, " upon a trivial Circumſtance, ridicule as a " Fiction, a horrid execrable Conſpiracy, ſupported by ſo many concurring Proofs, and " from a falſe triffling Particular, infer, that " no Part of it was true." The Lord Bathurſt anſwer'd the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and was ſupported by the Lord Craven, the Earl of Kinowle, and the other Lords nam'd in the Liſt of the exploded Burford Club, who all proteſted their own Innocency, not without ſome ſlaunting Reflections on the Plot, as the Annaliſt tells us " As if the main Drift " of it was a baſe Contrivance of their Ene- " mies, to blaſt their Honour and Reputation, " and to render the beſt Patriots uſeleſs to their " Country, by making them obnoxious. The Earl of Strafford having expreſt his juſt Reſentment with more Warmth than the reſt, the Earl Cadogan reply'd: That for his own Part, tho' his Name was often mention'd in the Report, he never troubled himſelf about it, but in his Opinion, there was Reaſon to believe, ſome People were ſore, when they winch'd ſo much at the leaſt Touch. The Earl of Strafford repell'd this Reflection with a great Deal of Vivacity, and ſaid, He was as whole and ſound as any in that illuſtrious Aſſembly, But as he had the Honour to have more ancient noble Blood running in his Veins than ſome others, ſo he hop'd he might be allow'd to expreſs a more than ordinary Reſentment againſt Inſults offer'd to the Peerage. But ſome Members apprehending the Iſſue of this warm Debate, call'd for the Queſtion, which was carry'd in the Negative.

Several Lords nam'd juſtify themſelves.

of ſuch Cuſtody was the Conſequence of it, which I remember to be a Guide to others, not to wade without their Depth, nor make Uſe of Hiſtorical Freedom, till it is ſettled how far ſuch Freedom is to extend, or how far Privilege is a Check upon Hiſtory.

On the 29th of March, the Lord Bathurſt preſented a Petition from Biſhop Atterbury, ſuggeſting, that a Bill was depending in the Houſe of Commons, for inflicting Pains and Penalties on him, for ſuppos'd Crimes, of which he was ENTIRELY innocent How ſhocking is it to read ſuch Words, aſſerted by a Man in Holy Orders, nay by a Biſhop, when it was prov'd as clear as Light in a fair Noon, that he was ENTIRELY guilty. The Petition was for Direction as to his Conduct, in Reſpect of a ſtanding Order, prohibiting on a Penalty, any Lord to appear by Council before the Houſe of Commons. The Lord Lechmere, the Earls Cowper and Strafford, the Lords Trevor, Bathurſt, and ſome others ſpoke in Behalf of the Petition, but were anſwer'd by the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Carteret, the Dukes of Argyle and Wharton, the Earls of Peterborough and Coningsby, and the Lord Viſcount Harcourt, who alledg'd that in this Affair the Commons did not act as a Court of Judicature, but as a Part of the Legiſlature, of which they were as much a Part, and to which they had as much Right as the Lords themſelves. But what the Duke of Wharton ſaid, was ſo reaſonable, that one cannot conceive how it ſhould eſcape the Conſideration of ſuch great Lawyers, as the Lord Lechmere, Earl Cowper, and Lord Trevor. The Matter before you needs no great Debate, for the Biſhop of Rocheſter having already apply'd to the Houſe of Commons in a Letter to their Speaker, for Council to be aſſigned, it was prepoſterous now for him to pray the Lords not to give him Leave to be heard before the Houſe of Commons, which was the Drift of his Petition. But the Houſe of Peers gave him Leave by a Majority of 77 Voices againſt 27, tho' he did not make Uſe of it. A few Days after, another Petition from Biſhop Atterbury, was read, complaining that Coll. Williamſon, Deputy Lieutenant of the Tower, ſearch'd him, and took from him two Seals, and a Piece of a Letter, after he had ſnatch'd the Reſt of it from him. But a Motion being made that Coll. Williamſon, Deputy Lieutenant of the Tower, Mr. Thomas Serjeant, Gentleman Porter, and two Wardens ſhould attend at the Bar of the Houſe, to give an Account of thoſe Matters, it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 52 Voices againſt 24.

Biſhop Atterbury's abſurd Petition.

Duke of Wharton's Speech againſt it.

I ſhall take no farther Notice of the Proceedings in Parliament about the Bills for inflicting Pains and Penalties on Francis, Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, George Kelly, and John Plunket, then as I find ſomething particularly curious in them.

Among others taken up and examin'd for this Helliſh Conſpiracy, was Thomas Yalden, Doctor of Divinity, in whoſe Pocket Book was found a villainous and traiterous Libel in Doggrel Verſe, againſt his Majeſty and the Royal Family. This Godly Man had been very intimate with Mrs. Manly, who wrote thoſe lewd Books, call'd Atalantis, and carry'd her Money from the late Duke of Beaufort, who was his Patron; and tho' he had often abjur'd the Pretender, and ſworn Allegiance to King George, he was found to be in the Confidence of George Kelly, Sir Henry Goring, Semple, the Runaway Conſpirator, the Lord North and Grey, and other Plotters againſt the King and Government.

A.D. 1723

When the Queſtion was put, whether the Bill againſt George Kelly, ſhould paſs, it was ſtrenuouſly oppos'd by Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Shippen, and Mr. Kettleby, who were anſwer'd by R. Walpole, Eſq. and Sir Joſeph Jekyl, and both that Bill and the Bill againſt Plunket, were carry'd in the Affirmative by a very great Majority, 250 againſt 72.

When the Bill for inflicting Pains and Penalties on Biſhop Atterbury, was debated in a grand Committee, we read in the Annals, "that the Tories choſe to go out of the Houſe, "ſo that only Mr. Lawſon, Mr. Oglethorpe, "and two or three more ſtaid in to ſpeak in "the Biſhop's Behalf," which indeed was a Taſk that few cou'd be fond of undertaking; the Reaſon Mr. Oglethorpe, gave againſt puniſhing the Biſhop in that Manner, was that "It was plain the Pretender had none but a "Company of ſilly Fellows about him, and it "was to be fear'd, that if the Biſhop, who was "allow'd to be a Man of great Parts, ſhould "be baniſh'd, he might be ſollicited and tempted to go to Rome, and there be in a Capacity to do more Miſchief by his Advice, than "if he was ſuffer'd to ſtay in England, under "the watchful Eye of thoſe in Power." It was not likely, that ſuch Reaſoning as this ſhould hinder the paſſing of the Bill, which was carry'd without any Diviſion.

Bill to baniſh Biſhop Atterbury, paſſes.

On the 10th of April, his Majeſty gave his Royal Aſſent to two or three publick and ſome private Acts, and the ſame Day Sir Nathaniel Gould, having repreſented to the Houſe of Commons, the great Damage the Eaſt-India Company had already receiv'd, and was like further to recieve, by the erecting a New Eaſt-India Company at Oſtend, which Undertaking was chiefly encourag'd by the Subjects of Great-Britain, it was unanimouſly Reſolv'd, "That for the Subjects of this Kingdom to "ſubſcribe or be concern'd in encouraging any "Subſcription, to promote an Eaſt-India Com- "pany, now erecting in the Auſtrian Nether- "lands, is a High Crime and Miſdemeanour. The ſame Day alſo, Sir Hans Sloane, Sir Richard Maningham, and Thomas Robe, Eſq. waited on her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, from the Managers of the Raw Silk Undertaking, with a curious Piece of Silk, containing a Deſcription of the various Changes of the Worms; adorn'd with a Repreſentation of the Mulberry Tree, its Leaves and Fruit, which her Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to accept with a particular Satisfaction.

On the 22d. of April, Mr. Bevil Higgons, the ſame who was mention'd in the Aſſaſſination Proclamation, was ſiez'd at Stepney, by a Juſtice's Warrant, for a ſcandalous Piece, entitled, A View of the Engliſh Hiſtory, the Impreſſion of which had been before ſiez'd by Order of the Government. It was a virulent Libel, and had nothing to recommend it to his Readers but Sedition and Aſſurance.

The Bills for inflicting Pains and Penalties on the Conſpirators, being ſent to the Houſe of Peers, their Lordſhips ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, to deſire they would give Leave to one of their Members, Mr. John Walter, to be examin'd as a Witneſs for Biſhop Atterbury. But neither he, nor two other Members, Archibald

A.D. 1723 chibald Hutcheſon and Thomas Chapman, Eſq. thought fit to make Uſe of that Leave.

The Bill to inflict Pains and Penalties on John Plunket, was carry'd in the Houſe of Lords, by a Majority of 84 Voices againſt 37, of which Number 31 Peers enter'd their Proteſt.

The Bill againſt Kelly paſt with more Debate. Plunket had made a very ſorry Defence, but Kelly's was a very good one. When the Queſtion for admitting his Circumſtantial Evidence paſt in the Negative, about 40 Peers enter'd their Proteſt. After his Council had been heard, he made a very long Speech, and a much better one for Stile and Method than Biſhop Atterbury's, tho' that Biſhop ſpoke and wrote as well, till then, as any of his Contemporaries. A bad Cauſe and a bad State of Health might diſcompoſe him both in Thought and Expreſſion. Kelly's Bill was carry'd by a Majority of 79 Voices againſt 44. and on the 6th of May, Biſhop Atterbury was brought to the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, and his Council and himſelf having been heard, a Debate enſu'd, in which the Speakers for the Bill were,

We have ſeen that in the Beginning of this Inquiry into Atterbury's Plot, the laſt of theſe Peers, the Duke of Wharton, was as forward as any one in the Debates relating to Kelly and the late Biſhop. 'Twas generally believ'd that his Profuſion had render'd him extremely troubleſome to the Stet, upon whom he was always making Demands, and it was found impracticable to keep him in Temper, without waſting the Publick Money, ſo his Importunities and Menaces not anſwering his Deſign, he broke out into a violent Oppoſition to every Thing that came from the Court, and purely for that, and for no other Reaſon, as may be ſeen by the Suddenneſs of his Change from Revolution Principles to Hereditary Right, and from the Proteſtant Religion to Popery. The Speech he made for the late Biſhop Atterbury, was mightily cry'd up by the Tories, tho' there does not ſeem to be much Argument or Elegance in the Cloſe of it, Let the Conſequences be what they will, I would not have ſuch a helliſh Stain fully the Luſtre and Glory of this illuſtrious Aſſembly, as to condemn a Man without the moſt Legal Evidence. Let the Reader determine who was the beſt Judge of the Legal Evidence, the Duke of Wharton, a Man of Pleaſure and Frolick, or the Lord Lechmere, one of the greateſt Lawyers of the Age, and tho' his Lordſhip had been all along againſt the Proſecution, and in moſt of the Proteſts with the Biſhop of Cheſter, the Lord Bingley, &c. againſt the Pains and Penalties, yet he now declar'd, That in his Opinion there was ſufficient Evidence to ſupport the Charge. After which there will be no Need of repeating what was ſaid for the Biſhop; ſo we come to the Queſtion, carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 83 Voices againſt 43, 40 Lords proteſted, particularly Theſe ten noble Lords were of the Creation, by Writ, the laſt Day of December, 1711. The Duke of Wharton was ſo over zealous for the late Biſhop, that he enter'd a long Proteſt by himſelf, and ſet his Name to it.

On the 23d of May, the Bill for laying a Tax upon Papiſts was read the third Time in the Houſe of Peers, and the Lords who ſpoke for and againſt it, were,

'Tis fit to obſerve that, as we have hinted, this Bill diſcharg'd the Papiſts from greater Penalties, which they had incurr'd than this Tax amounted to, and therefore, as one of the Lords ſaid, It was rather an Indulgence than a Perſecution. 'Twas remark'd, that ſince Earl Cowper left the Side, by adhering to which he had been advanc'd to the higheſt Station in the Kingdom, he ſeem'd to have leſs Guard on his Expreſſions, and to expreſs himſelf with leſs Reaſon and Eloquence then he had been for many Years fam'd for. This Remark came from the Spirit of Criticiſm and not of Party. His Lordſhip compar'd this Tax of 100000 l. to the Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France, upon the wicked Revocation of the Edict of Nantz, and urg'd, that this Tax would drive the Engliſh Papiſts out of the Kingdom, as Dragoons and the Galleys drove the French Proteſtants out of France; but as there is no Manner of Agreement in this Compariſon, ſo it was ill ſupported by a Suppoſition, that the Popiſh Traders and Mechanicks had a Million of Money to carry with them out of England. Theſe and the like Reaſons were not ſtrong enough to put a Negative on the paſſing the Bill, which was carry'd by a Majority of 64 Voices againſt 55, upon which theſe Lords enter'd their Diſſent.

On the 27th of May his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and the Commons attending with their Speaker, the latter upon preſenting the Bill for laying a Tax upon Papiſts, made an excellent Speech, wherein he ſhew'd the Occaſion and Neceſſity of that Tax, from the late Horrid and Execrable Conſpiracy, in which the Papiſts had a great Share. Then the Lord Chancellor by his Majeſty's Directions, prorogu'd the Parliament to the 2d of July. The King had before declar'd in Council that extraordinary Affairs calling him Abroad this Summer, he had appointed the following Perſons to be Lords Juſtices.

Charles Townſhend, Eſq made Lord Lynne.

A.D. 1723

Our moſt belov'd and moſt faithful Counſellor Robert Walpole, firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, with the Aſſiſtance of other ſelect Perſons, and Chancellour of our Exchequer, having highly recommended himſelf to our Royal Favour by his many Services to us, to our Houſe, and to his own Country, We did not think him unworthy to be advanc'd to the Rank of the Peers of our Realm. But tho' he rather chuſes to merit the higheſt Titles than to wear them, we have however thought fit, in Order to ennoble his Family, to confer on the Son the Honour due to the Father, and to raiſe to the Peerage, Robert Walpole, Junior, Eſq. &c. And we were willing that ſo hopeful a young Man, ſhould take his firſt Title, from the Place, in the County of Norfolk, whence the Name and moſt ancient Family of Walpole draw their Original, where they have been ſeated ever ſince the Reigns of the Edwards, and where they have, at all Times, made a ſhining Figure amongſt the beſt Families, &c.

Preamble to Lord Walpole's Pattent.

About the ſame Time, his Lordſhips Father Robert Walpole, Eſq. was ſworn one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, William Pulteney, Eſq. was made Cofferer to his Majeſty's Houſhold, Philip, Lord Stanhope, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guards, Robert Herbert, Eſq. Groom of his Majeſty's Bedchamber, George Berkeley, Eſq. Governour of St. Katherine's Hoſpital; the Lord Viſcount Cobham, Governour of Jerſey; the Earl of Carliſle, Conſtable of Windſor Caſtle; Major General Gore, Governour of Kinſale. Nor muſt we forget the Eccleſiaſtical and Military Promotions, Dr. Edmund Gibſon having been tranſlated from the See of Lincoln to that of London, Dr. Richard Reynolds was tranſlated from Bangor to Lincoln; Dr. Samuel Bradford from Carliſle to Rocheſter. Dr. John Waugh was made Biſhop of Carliſle; Dr. Frankland was made Dean of Glouceſter; Dr. John Clarke, Prebendary of Canterbury, and Dr. William Bradſhaw, Canon of Chriſt-Church; Mr. Alured Clarke, Prebendary of Wincheſter. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Capt. Challoner Ogle, and gave the Regiment of the late Coll. Chudleigh, to Coll. Robert Hayes.

Preferments.

Towards the latter End of May, the King was pleas'd to order, that the Duke of Norfolk, Lord North and Grey, Dennis Kelly, Thomas Cockran, Eſqrs. and Swathfuger, the Lord Orrery's Secretary, ſhould be admitted to Bail.

The King goes to Holland.

His Majeſty embark'd on Board the Carolina Yacht at Greenwich, June 3d. but by Reaſon of contrary Winds, did not land in Holland till the 7th. His Majeſty arriv'd at Oſnabrug, on Sunday, June 9th, ſtaid with his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, till the 11th, and then came to Herenhauſen, his Palace, near Hanover, where a Week after the King of Pruſſia paid him a Viſit. On the 24th of June, the King went to Pyrmont, to drink the Waters, attended by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and the Lord Carteret, the Britiſh Principal Secretaries of State, and other Perſons of Dignity. Upon Advice of his Majeſty's ſafe Arrival in Holland, their Excellencies the Lords Juſtices open'd their Commiſſion at the Cockpit, June the 10th, and ſome Days after prorogu'd the Parliament further, to the 13th of Auguſt.

The Lord Waldegrave having embrac'd the Proteſtant Religion, his Majeſty was pleas'd to appoint

A.D. 1723 appoint him to be one of the Lords of the Bedchamber. On the 20th of June, Mr. Eyre, the Lawyer, mov'd the Court of King's Bench, for a Habeas Corpus, to bring up Dr. Friend, in order to be bail'd out of the Tower, which being granted, Coll. Williamson, Deputy Lieutenant attended the Dr. to Weſtminſter-Hall, where Bail was taken for him. His Sureties were Dr. Mead, Dr. Hulſe, Dr. Hale and Dr. Levet. Two Days before Dr. Atterbury, late Biſhop of Rocheſter, embark'd on Board the Alderborough, a ſmall Man of War, that had Orders to land him in France. Accordingly he was put on Shoar at Calais, accompany'd by his Daughter Morrice, and her Husband, Head Bailiff of Weſtminſter. The Doctor was told at Calais, that Mr. Henry St. John, late Viſc. Bullingbroke, was juſt arriv'd there to embark for England, upon which he ſaid, Then I am Exchang'd. That late Viſcount came to Bateriea, where his noble Father the Lord Viſcount St. John has a pleaſant Seat, and it had been well both for his Country and himſelf, if his future Conduct had not made his Return one of the greateſt Misfortunes that has ſince happen'd to his Country.

Whatever Diſappointments the Diſaffected met with in all their Contrivances againſt the Government, they gave not over fomenting the Humour of the diſtemper'd Rabble, which broke out on every Occaſion, and very often they knew not how nor why. They were indeed ſpirited in the City of London this Year by the Oppoſition which the new Sheriffs, Sir Richard Hopkins and Felix Feaſt, Eſq. met with from the old ones, Humphrey Parſons and Francis Child, Eſqs. who endeavour'd to have the Election fall upon Sir John Williams, and Mr. Richard Lockwood, tho' after the ſtricteſt Scrutiny the Poll ſtood thus,

The Occaſion of the Act paſt in the laſt Seſſion of Parliament to prohibit Britiſh Subjects to ſubſcribe to the Eaſt-India Company's Stock in the Auſtrian Netherlands, was the eſtabliſhing ſuch a Company at Oſtend by his Imperial Majeſty's Charter, dated the 19th December, 1722, which Company notwithſtanding the Oppoſition they met with from the Engliſh, French and Dutch, open'd their Books, and had a full Subſcription in a very few Days, owing chiefly to the clandeſtine Negotiations of their Agents in England, France and Holland, where great Numbers of Merchants ſubſcrib'd to that Stock, and Maſters of Eaſt-India Ships and Supercargoes went to Oſtend, to enter into their Service, and put them in a way to eſtabliſh and carry on their Trade, which they did effectually to the great Damage of the Engliſh, French and Dutch Companies. Monſieur de Fonſeca, the Emperor's Miniſter at Paris, ſignify'd to the Duke of Orleans, then at the Head of Affairs there, that the Emperor was much ſurpriz'd at the moſt Chriſtian King's forbidding his Subjects to be any ways concern'd in the Oſtend Company. He was anſwer'd, " That Repreſentations had " been made to the Emperor, that he was en- " gag'd by Treaty not to encourage any ſuch " Commerce; that nevertheleſs his Imperial " Majeſty, without any Regard to the ſaid " Repreſentations, had thought fit to grant a " Charter in Favour thereof. That the moſt " Chriſtian King was Maſter of his own King- " dom, and not oblig'd to give an Account of " his Actions, and therefore the Emperor " could not take amiſs the Prohibition to his " Subjects not to have any Concern in the Com- " pany ſet up at Oſtend. Thus it is plain that the Emperor eſtabliſh'd that Company in Breach of Treaties of Commerce, and that he had had no Regard to the Repreſentations made to him againſt it, conſequently that all the new Engagements he enter'd into with other Powers for the Support of that Eſtabliſhment, was an Injuſtice to the Engliſh, French and Dutch Companies and Nations, and he was therein the Aggreſſor, which juſtifies all the Steps that were taken by thoſe Nations to defend their Rights.

*A.D.*1723

The Parliament of Ireland, which met the 5th of September, was almoſt wholly taken up with the Copper Half-pence coin'd in England by William Wood, purſuant to a Patent granted him for that Purpoſe, The Clamour that was rais'd in Ireland againſt thoſe Half-pence, was made a Pretence by all the Enemies to the Government to encreaſe their Faction, and ſtrengthen their Hands againſt it. Among theſe Jonathan Swift, D. D. made Dean of St. Patricks, Dublin, in the Time of the wicked Miniſtry, that form'd the Utrecht Treaty, immediately caught hold of that Occaſion to ſet the People againſt the Adminiſtration both in England and Ireland, which he did in Libels, under the Name of thn Draper of Dublin. This got him a great Vogue among the Populace there, and he who was the Creature of the worſt Men that ever were in the Miniſtry, was cry'd up as a Patriot. See what Mr. Trenchard ſays of them in Cato's Letter, in May this Year: Nor did the High Clergy uſe the late Queen, their own favourite Queen, or even thoſe of their own Party, who ſerv'd her faithfully, one jot better till ſhe fell into the Hands of a few deſperate Traitors, who gave away all the Advantages of a long, expenſive and ſucceſsful War, put France in a Condition again to inflame Europe, and to place a Popish Traitor and an attainted Fugitive upon the Throne of theſe Kingdoms. Theſe deſperate Traitors were the Men that made Jonathan Swift, D. D. Dean of St. Patricks. Theſe were the Men to whom he gave himſelf up we may ſay, Body and Soul, without Hyperbole, and this Man, this Dean, this Draper of Dublin, whoſe Picture was ador'd there as Sacheverel's had been in London, by Fools and Women, would now be look'd upon to be the Champion for the Rights and Intereſts of the People of Ireland, which according to him were invaded, and in a likely way to be deſtroy'd by Wood's Copper Half-pence. There are certain Periods of Time when great Aſſemblies run away with Things at the firſt Hint, as well as particular Perſons. We do not ſay, that the Parliament of Ireland, as wiſe, as Loyal, and I was going to ſay as entirely Engliſh as a Parliament cou'd be wiſh'd to be, did ſo, but 'tis certain that there was no ſuch ill Deſign in Wood's Grant, as Swift and others would have it believ'd. We will not enter into the Merits of the Cauſe farther, than to repeet a Paragraph of Wood's Vindication: " Could it be thought " that becauſe his Majeſty has not made uſe " of his Power to enforce the Currency of the " Coin, but out of his great Goodneſs left e- " very one at Liberty to take only what he " wants, to prevent the Fear and Danger of " being overſtock'd, that an Advantage would " have been taken from thence, and his Ma- " jeſty's Kindneſs ungratefully abus'd by a to- " tal Refuſal of the Coin, and that thoſe who " wanted and had a Mind to take it, ſhould " not be left at Liberty to ſerve their Wants, " but be threaten'd to be ruin'd, and account- " ed, as ſeveral have been, Enemies to their " Country.

His Majeſty remain'd at Herenhauſen in good Health, and on the 16th of September review'd near Hanover, ſix Battaljons and twelve Squadrons of his Troops, about 6000 Men in all, Horſe Dragoons and Foot; his Royal Highneſs

A.D. 1723 Highneſs the Duke of York, attended his Majeſty at this Review, and ſoon after return'd to Oſnabrug. On the 1ſt of October, N. S. Notice was given to Mr. Wallenrodt, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, of his Britannick Majeſty's Reſolution to go to Berlin, and the next Day that Miniſter ſet out for his Court to carry the News. The Lord Viſcount Townſhend and the Lord Carteret went thither by the Way of Spandaw, his Majeſty took the ſame Route, and made the Journey in two Days.

The Parliament of Ireland receiv'd a Petition of George Rooke, Abel Stretter, Joſeph Gill, John Barclay, Samuel Braithwaite, John Barcroft, Thomas Ducket, Edward Cowper, William Penroſs, John Boles, and Solomon Watſon, in Behalf of themſelves and the Reſt of their Society, the People call'd Quakers, That a Bill may be brought in for granting them an Affirmation inſtead of an Oath, and Leave was given accordingly. A Petition of Brigadier General Naper, Coll. William Newton, Coll. Henry Hawley, and Coll. Charles Lanne, ſetting forth the Inconveniences that attended the Soldiers for want of a Chappel, was read, and order'd, Nem. Contradicente, to be referr'd to the Comittee of the whole Houſe for the Supply, who gave 1000 l. for that Uſe. And indeed the Proceedings of this Parliament ſhew'd them to be equally careful of the Intereſt of the Publick and that of private Perſons, who apply'd to them for Relief. They granted near 340000 l. Supply for paying the Debt of the Nation, which was about 660000 l. and for Support of the Eſtabliſhment two Years.

The barbarous Murder of four Engliſh Gentlemen near Calais in France, in September, ſtruck both Engliſh and French with Horror. The latter by their Care and Diligence in detecting the Villains that did it, wip'd off the Stain which the perpetrating of ſo damnable a Deed left on the very Nation. Mr. Seabright and Mr. Monpeſſon, accompany'd by Mr. Davis paſſing over to Calais in their Way to Paris, ſet out from thence for that City the 12th of September, Mr. Seabright and Mr. Davis in one Chaiſe, Mr. Monpeſſon and Richard Spindelow, Mr. Seabright's Man in another, and Mr. Monpeſſon's Servant on Horſeback. About 7 Miles from Calais they were attack'd by ſix Ruffians well mounted, who ſtopt the Poſtillions, came up to the Chaiſes, and demanded their Money, which the Gentlemen readily ſurrender'd, they having no Fire-Arms to make Reſiſtance, and even their Swords were taken from them. The Robbers then taking them out of the Chaiſes, commanded them to lie down upon their Faces, and the Poſtillions to do the ſame. After which the Villains rifled their Pockets, and ſearch'd them very narrowly, which done, they order'd Spindelow to get up and open the Portmanteaus, which as he was doing, he ſaw one of the Rogues pull the dead Body of Mr. Locke out of a Chaiſe in which he had been kill'd in his Return from Paris, at ſome ſmall Diſtance from that Place, Mr. Locke's Servant, a Swiſs, was ſpar'd, but made to lie on his Face. When they had done with Mr. Seabright's Portmanteau, they order'd Mr. Monpeſſon to open his, and he deſir'd Mr. Seabright to tell them in French, his Servant was gone before, and had the Key with him. This Man they had ſhot in the Back, but not being dead, he was commanded to lie down on his Face, and now they fetch'd him to open his Maſter's Portmanteau; when they had finiſh'd their Search, they cry'd Tuez, Kill, they firſt ſhot Mr. Seabright through the Heart, Mr. Davis was ſhot and ſtabb'd in ſeveral Places, and his Skull cleft, they ſtabb'd Spindelow in five Places of his Body, and left him for dead, Mr. Monpeſſon at the ſame Time receiv'd a Shot which had laid him ſprawling on the Ground. A Peaſant of the Neighbourhood who was going to Calais for a Licence to marry, unfortunately paſſing that way, was alſo murder'd, and Mr. Monpeſſon, who had lain as if he had been dead, lifting up his Head before the Murderers were gone, one of them came back to him and cut his Throat, but he and Spindelow, made a Shift with the Help of ſome of the Country People to get back to Calais, where Mr. Monpeſſon dy'd 36 Hours after. and Spindelow recovering of his Wounds, return'd to England. The dead Bodies of the four Engliſh Gentlemen were brought to England, and landed at Tower Wharf, four Days after, where they were receiv'd by their Friends, who gave them decent Interment, and George Turville, Eſq. of the Middle Temple, who happen'd to paſs by the Place where theſe Gentlemen were murder'd, a few Hours after the ſaid Murder was committed, while the dead Bodies ſtripp'd naked by the Country People, yet lay on the High Road, gave Orders for erecting a Monument of black Marble, in Form of a Pyramid, on the Spot where the Murder happen'd, by Permiſſion of the Duke de Humiers, Governour of the Bolougnois, and the Biſhop of Bologne. Theſe Robbers and Aſſaſſins robb'd the Liſle Stage Coach 7 Milles from Peronne, two Months afterwards, and kill'd Poulart and Heunelet, two Perſons that accompany'd the Coach; two of the Rogues Joſeph Bizean, a Jeweller of Liege, and Peter le Fehvre, another Jeweller, being taken, were try'd and condemn'd at Paris in July following, by this moſt dreadful Sentence: To be put to the Rack, to have their Arms, Legs and Thighs broken on a Scaffold. and to have their Bodies put upon Wheels, there to remain with their Faces towards the Sky as long as they had Life, and Bizeans dead Body to be carry'd and remain expos'd on a Wheel upon the High Road to Calais, and Le Fehvres on the High Road to Peronne, which Sentence was executed to the Full.

At the latter End of September, the King of Great-Britain arriv'd at Charlottenbourg from Herenhauſen, and was receiv'd with great Magnificence and Reſpect by the King and Queen of Pruſſia, accompany'd by the Prince Royal and four young Princeſſes; the Margraves, Albert and Chriſtian Lodowick, Uncles to his Pruſſian Majeſty, and the two Margravines. His Britiſh Majeſty found himſelf indiſpos'd at Supper, which was imputed to his having travell'd about 100 Miles that Day without eating, and to the Heat of the Place where his Majeſty ſupp'd, which was very much crowded, but the King's Indiſpoſition was ſoon over, and he reſted very well that Night. The next Day he ſaw the Guards reliev'd and perform their Exerciſe, which they did in perfect Order and made a fine Appearance, being choſen Men and new cloath'd. From Charlottenbourg his Majeſty went to Berlin, where he ſaw the Town Guard conſiſting of

His Majeſty at the Court of Pruſſia.

A.D. 1723 of 1200 Men reliev'd and exercis'd. The King paſt thro' ſeveral Streets of the Town and the Spandaw Gate to a Pavillion in the Queen's Garden, where he din'd, and after Dinner went to the Parade, where he ſaw the Band of Cades, about 300 young Noblemen and Gentleman, with the Prince Royal of Pruſſia at their Head, perform their Exerciſe. His Majeſty ſtaid five Days at the Court of Pruſſia, and then took Leave of the Queen and Royal Family; after which he ſet out for Potſdam, near which Place his Pruſſian Majeſty had order'd the Battalion of Tall Grenadiers to be drawn up. They made a gallant Shew, march'd before the Kings of Great-Britain and Pruſſia, and perform'd the Exerciſes of Advancing and Retreating, and firing in Plattoons, which they did with ſuch Order and Dexterity, that they fir'd above 10000 Shot in 15 Minutes; their Majeſty's din'd at Potſdam, and after Dinner the King of Great-Britain took Chaiſe, and was accompany'd a good Way out of the Town by the King of Pruſſia, with ſeveral of his general Officers on Horſeback. His Majeſty lay that Night at Fehrbellin, and the next Day October 3d. O. S. came to the Ghore, where he intended to paſs ſome Days to hunt in the Country about it. Hither came his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York; the Marquiſs de Pozzobueno, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Spain; Monſieur de Chavigny, Miniſter from the moſt Chriſtian King; Mr. Peſters, Envoy Extraordinary from the States General; the Marquiſs de Courtance, Miniſter from the King of Sardinia; Mr. Wallenrodt, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia. Monſ. Lewenhorn, Miniſter from the King of Denmark, and M. de Marchetti, Miniſter from the Duke of Parma. As did ſome Days after he Duke and Dutcheſs of Mecklenbourg. About his Time Credentials were ſent from Ghore, to Mr. Horatio Walpole, to act as his Majeſty's Miniſter Plenipotentiary at the Court of France, where for ſeveral Years together he manag'd the moſt critical and important Negotiations with great Ability and Succeſs.

On the 23d. of October, being the firſt Day of the Term, the State Priſoners that were bail'd out of the Tower, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Orrery, the Lord North and Grey, Dr. Friend, and Dennis Kelly, appear'd on their Recognizances at the King's Bench Bar, as did ſeveral others for Libels againſt the Government, and were all continu'd, and the next Day the Term of the Suſpenſion of the Habeas Corpus Act expir'd. A Fortnight before dy'd Sir Conſtantine Phipps, of chief Note for the Troubles he caus'd in Ireland, by his turbulent and factious Adminiſtration in Favour of the Jacobites; there was a Panegyrick upon him printed in a ſcandalous News-Paper, the Poſt-Boy, the latter Part of which will be more than enough to ſurfeit every Reader that ever heard of Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Dr. Sacheverel's Advocate: " As He was a ſincere Lover " of his Country, and of the CHURCH and " CLERGY of England, his Memory will ever " be honour'd, and he will juſtly be reckon'd " among the worthieſt of Gentlemen, the beſt " of Husbands, the beſt of Fathers, the beſt " of Friends and the beſt of Chriſtians." Here we ſee that there is as much Truth in the Eulogy as in the Scandal of the Faction. Other Accounts of him ſaid: " It is certain " his Political Principles had render'd him " juſtly obnoxious to all Lovers of the Conſti- " tution, founded upon the Revolution and " the Proteſtant Succeſſion, for if it cannot be " denied that the Part he acted during his " Adminiſtration in Ireland, gave no ſmall " Encouragement to the Pretender's Friends, " his good Wiſhes to that Party were ſo well " known, that he was conſtantly retain'd for " the State Criminals, &c.

Earl Cowper dy'd the next Day after Sir Conſtantine Phipps, the 10th of October. I have avoided entring into the Characters of Perſons in this Work, being diſcourag'd by the Difficulty there is in drawing them and in preſerving the Likeneſs, could one hit it, without Flattery or Satyr in the Opinion of Parties. The Earl of Clarendon's Characters tho' inimitable for the colouring, are all of this Kind, and there can be nothing more vicious in Hiſtory. As to Earl Cowper's, he was doubtleſs a Perſon of as great Merit as ever Man had in his High Station, and his Love to his Country was not the leaſt Part of it. There have been Lord Chancellors of more extenſive Learning, but probably none of more Knowledge in the Laws of England. His Judgment was quick and yet ſolid. His Eloquence Manly, but flowing. His Manner noble and graceful. His Integrity firm and untainted. If he was not ſo fam'd for Liberality as ſome others have been, he certainly was not ſo much unfam'd for Parſimony and Stingineſs, as if the ſole Buſineſs of the firſt great Office in the Kingdom, was to ſcrape Money together, and make up a Heap for a Family.

Hiſtorical Characters.

We did not enter into the Arguments on each Side of the Queſtion about the Copper Half-pence in Ireland, for Want of due Judgment to diſtinguiſh the Weight of them, but we find, that at the winding up of the Matter, the People of Ireland were well content with his Majeſty's Anſwer to the Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons of that Kingdom, which had been tranſmitted to him by his Grace the Duke of Grafton, whoſe Conduct on that Occaſion, was equally prudent and ſucceſsful, in allaying the Heats which the Reverend Draper of Dublin and his Abettors had been fomenting.

His Majeſty's Anſwer was,

His Majeſty is very much concern'd that his granting the Patent for coining of Half-pence and Farthings, agreable to the Practice of his Royal Predeceſſors, has given ſo much uneaſineſs to the Houſe of Commons, and if there have been any Abuſes committed by the Patentee, his Majeſty will give the neceſſary Orders for inquiring into and puniſhing thoſe Abuſes, and will do every Thing that is in his Power for the Satisfaction of his People.

Edward Finch, Eſq. His Majeſty was detain'd there by contrary Winds till the 16th of December, when the Wind, coming to the South-Eaſt, his Majeſty embark'd about Noon, and din'd a Board the Carolina Yacht. At two o' Clock the Yachts weigh'd Anchor, and being favour'd by the Tide with ſmall Breezes, got to the Goree, where they caſt Anchor to wait for a ſtronger Wind, that the larger Men of War, the Colcheſter and Leopard of the Squadron, might get over the Bar. They continu'd at Anchor till 8 a Clock at Night, when his Majeſty order'd the Signal to be given for the Yachts to weigh without waiting any longer for the larger Men of War. Accordingly they put to Sea without them, the Port Mahon, on Board of which Sir John Norris hoiſted his Flag, with the Ferret Sloop, attending as Convoy. His Majeſty had a very fine Paſſage, for a freſh Gale at South-Eaſt, brought him within Sight of Land the next Day, about two a Clock in the Afternoon, and between five and ſix a Clock that Eveeing, he happily landed at Margate. His Majeſty ſet out from thence the next Morning, and lay the next Night, December the 18th at Chatham, at the Houſe of Mr. Kempthorn, Commiſſioner of the Navy; the next Morning the King view'd the Dock and Yard at Chatham, which he found in excellent Order; and directed that a Donative of 500 l. be diſtributed among the Carpenters, Ropemakers and other Workmen, after which, his Majeſty proceeded on his Journey, and about ſix in the Evening arriv'd at Lambeth, where having croſs'd the Water to Whitehall, he was carry'd in a Sedan to St. James's Palace, where he was attended by his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, the Lord Chancellor, the Lords Juſtices, the great Officers of State and other Perſons of Diſtinction, who congratulated his Majeſty's ſafe Arrival in perfect Health. His Majesty's Speech to the Parliament.

I am fully satisfied, that the Trade and Wealth of my People, are the happy Effects of the Liberties they enjoy, and that the Grandeur of the Crown consists in their Prosperity; and I am as fully persuaded that All, who wish well to their Country, must agree with me, that it is the vainest of all Delusions to imagine that the Religion, Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom, can ever be secured but by supporting the Present Establishment, and maintaining the Succession in the Protestant Line; Let us therefore heartily join in every Thing that may tend to promote our mutual Happiness, and to extinguish the Hopes of those who long have been and still are restless in their Endeavours to Subject this Nation to the whole Train of Miseries that are inseparable from Popery and Arbitrary Power,

The Abdication of Philip V. King of Spain.

The most extraordinary Event in this Year was the Abdication of Philip Vth, King of Spain, whose Genus for Government dos not distinguish him so much as the Extent of his Dominions. He and his Queen, Elizabeth Farnese, Princess of Parma, having come to a Resolution to throw themselves for Life into the Monastry of St. Ildefonso, King Philip sent the Marquis de Grimaldo, his principal Secretary of State, with a Packet for the Prince of Asturias, his Son, who the Day before return'd from St. Ildefonso to the Escurial, where the Marquis arriv'd at 11 a Clock in the Forenoon, January 15th, and having acquainted the Prince with his Message, his Highness sent for the Infantes to come to his Apartment, and also order'd the Count de Altamira, the Marquis de Valero, the Duke de San Pedro, the Count de Salazar, the Marquis de Magney, the Count de Safateli, and the Prior of San Lorenzo, to attend there and be Witnesses of what should pass, who being all present, the Marquis deliver'd the Packet to the Prince of Asturias, who return'd it to him open'd, that he might read what was in it, which was the Instrument of his Fathers Renunciation of the Crown, accompany'd with a Letter of Advice to direct the new King's Conduct. When the Marquis had done reading, they all kist the King's Hand, tho' under great Concern about a Matter, for which they could not account in Reason and Policy. The new King sent to desire Leave of his Father to pay his Duty to him and kiss his Hand, but it was not granted, nor was his Offer made at the same Time to let the Life-Guards continue to attend their Majesties at St. Ildefonso, accepted. However the new King thought fit to order, that a Guard of 12 Men, with an Officer and a Cadet, should keep at Balsain, to be at Hand in Case of any unforeseen Accident. The Queen's Lady of Honour, and the King's Physician remain'd with them in that Monastery. Four Days after, the new King and Queen came from the Escurial to Madrid, about 7 at Night. The Road for some Distance from the Town and the Streets in the Way to the Palace, being lin'd with Coaches of the Nobility and Gentry, and crowded with People, who made joyful Acclamations, but whether for losing the old King, or getting a new one, is left to conjecture. The Letter the late King Philip wrote to his Son, is one of the poorest for Stile and Sentiments that ever past under a Royal Pen; 'twill be enough to repeat this Seraphick Instruction in 4 or 5 Lines, Preserve ever a great Devotion to the most holy Virgin, and put your Self, as well as your Kingdom, under her Protection, seeing you cannot by any other Means better obtain what may be needful for you and for them. Be always obedient to the Holy See, and to the Pope, as the Vicar of Jesus Christ. Protect and defend ever the Holy Inquisition, which may be called the Bulwark of the Faith. The Rest of it is of a Piece with This, and one can hardly think it possible for such Ignorance to dwell in such High Places.

A poor Letter from him to his Son.

There was little done in Parliament this Session, more than what is the usual Business, the raising Supplies and passing private Bills. Protections granted by Members to Persons in Debt, who thereby shelter'd themselves from their Creditors, being become a Grievance, the House of Commons, February 18th, order'd, Nemine Contradicente; "That all Protections and written Certificates of the Members of this House, be declar'd void in Law, and be forthwith withdrawn and call'd in and that none be granted for the future, and that if any shall be granted by any Member, such Member shall make Satisfaction to the Party injur'd, and shall be liable to the Censure of the House. A Week afterwards the House of Peers order'd and declar'd, That all the said written Protections are null and void, and all other Protections which shall be at any Time hereafter given, shall be taken to be null and void." This Order not to extend to Menial Servants, nor those employ'd necessarily and properly about the Estates of Peers, or any that are really their Servants.

The House of Commons upon Protections.

We have mention'd the Duke of Wharton's deserting the Cause his noble Father had so warmly and so constantly espous'd, and falling in with Tories and Jacobites, and not long after with Papists. It cannot be said that he wanted Sense, but his want of Judgment appear'd in every Thing, He was not contented with giving his Vote in Parliament in all Cases against the Administration, and being foremost in all Protests which he thought injurious to it, He set up a Weekly Paper, and gave it the Name of the True Briton, which was supported for a while by false Facts, false Parallels, false Arguments, and all the bad Qualities that recommend Libels to the Factious and Seditious. The Government could more easily come

Duke of Wharton's True Briton, a Libel.

A.D.1724 come at his Publiſher than his Grace, and Payne, the Publiſher, was try'd, February 24th, for printing and publiſhing three of thoſe True Britons, No. 3, 4, 5, which the Court of Kings Bench obſerv'd, were more ſcandalous than common Libels, becauſe they not only inſulted every Branch of the Legiſlature, but manifeſtly tended to make the Conſtitution it ſelf odious to the People. Tho' the Jury found this Criminal Guilty, without going out of the Court, yet he had no other Puniſhment than an eaſy Fine and a ſhort Impriſonment. The Duke of Wharton, in order to carry on his chimerical Projects in the City, and encreaſe the Party of the Diſaffected there, was in the beginning of the Month, February, preſented to the Court of Aldermen, to be made free of the City of London, and the Waxchandlers Company, which was done in the uſual Form, and he appear'd among the Livery in ſeveral future Elections, but the Miſchief he did was more to himſelf than thoſe againſt whom it was intended. The Faction made deſperate by frequent Diſappointments, vented their Malice and Rage in ſeveral ſeditious and impudent Pamphlets, nor did they ſpare their Endeavours to corrupt Hiſtory itſelf. About this Time one Salmon publiſh'd, A Review of the Hiſtory of England, a very mean Performance, full of groundleſs and ſaucy Reflections on the Revolution and its Friends. The Impreſſion was fiez'd by Vertue of a Secretary of State's Warrant, and the Printer and Bookſeller, Rivington, were committed to Cuſtody. But neither of the Offenders was made an Example to deter other Malignants from the like Offences; nay Miſt, who ſet up the traiterous Paper, call'd after him, Miſt's Journal, continu'd ſince under the Title of Fog, by a miſerable Nonjuring Prieſt and his Brethren, was now only fin'd and impriſon'd.

In this Seſſion of Parliament, the Inland Duty was laid on Coffee, Tea and Chocolate, which has been a conſiderable Increaſe to the publick Revenue.

In the beginning of February, Mr. Baron Scrope, one of the Judges of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, was appointed to ſucceed William Lowndes, Eſq. as Coadjutor Secretary to the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, aud he was ſucceeded as Baron of the Exchequer, by Matthew Lant, Eſq. one of the Truſtees of the forfeited Eſtates of the South-Sea Directors. Sir Robert Raymund, Attorney-General, being made one of the Judges of the King's Bench, Sir Philip York ſucceeded him as Attorney-General, and Sir Clement Wearg, ſucceeded Sir Philip York, as Sollicitor-General: Coll. Townſhend, Second Son to the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, was made Aid de Camp to his Majeſty. The Lord Naſſau Pawlet, Auditor of the Exchequer in Ireland.

Promotions in the Law.

The Congreſs at Cambray, which had been open'd laſt Month, produced ſome Conferences between the Miniſters Plenipotentiaries, but as thoſe Conferences produc'd nothing of more Importance, than the Forms and Rules for meeting and conferring, theſe muſt be left to thoſe Writers who have more Room than I have circumſcrib'd my ſelf in this Hiſtory.

In the Debate about the Number of Forces to be continu'd, the Lord Trevor ſpoke againſt the Continuance of the ſame Number as was provided for the laſt Year, but ſo worded his Argument, that it was liable to great Exception: If ſo great an Army, 12000 Men, was allow'd to be continu'd in our preſent happy Circumſtances, A Standing Army wou'd thereby become an eſſential Part of our Conſtitution. How cou'd any one underſtand, that an Allowance made for one Year only, cou'd without any further Act of the Legiſlature, become an eſſential Part of our Conſtitution, which is perpetual. The Speech is very long and temperate, both in Thought and Expreſſion, but it was fully anſwer'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, who among other Things ſaid "That "the Reduction of the Army, in the Reign "of King William, had a double ill Effect, It was the bad Works of the Seymours, the Muſgraves, the Hows, the Ha—ys, the F—ys, &c. "for on the one Hand, it oblig'd King William and his Miniſters to enter into a Treaty of Partition, for doing which theſe Men impeach'd thoſe Miniſters; "and on the other "Hand, it very probably encourag'd France "to break that Treaty, which occaſion'd a Second War, and was the Source of two thirds "of that heavy Debt, under which the Nation "labours at this Day. That the disbanding "of the Army had almoſt the ſame ill Effects "in the Reign of the late Queen, having encourag'd Lewis XIV, to furniſh the Pretender with a Land Force and a Fleet to invade "theſe Kingdoms. That if at Preſent they "weaken'd the Hands of the Government, "they ſhould be expos'd to the like Inſults "and Attempts. That if our Enemies may "be credited in an Affair in which it is their "Intereſt to ſpeak Truth, they ſeem'd conſtantly aſſur'd of Succeſs in their Deſign of "overturuing the Government, provided they "had only an Aſſiſtance of 3 or 4000 Men "from Abroad, and that conſidering the Method now practis'd in Imbarkations, how "good and how ſtrong our Fleet may be, it "was impoſſible to hinder a Foreign Prince, "who ſhould have a Mind to undertake it to "throw ſuch a Number of Men upon England. His Lordſhip concluded, "That the conſtant "Tenour of his Majeſty's Adminiſtration, "ſince his happy Acceſſion to the Throne, "onght to convince every Body, that by the "continuing the Number of regular Forces "now on Foot, his Majeſty and his Miniſters "have nothing in View, but the Publick Safety and Security, and thereby to give the "People an Opportunity to improve Trade "and encourage Induſtry, as the only Means "to retrieve their former Loſſes." The Duke of Wharton, the Lord Bathurſt, and the Earl of Strafford, ſpoke on the ſame Side of the Queſtion with the Lord Trevor, the Lord Carteret and the Duke of Argyle on the contrary Side, which was carried in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 77 Voices againſt 22. Several Lords enter'd their Diſſent, and did the ſame again upon the paſſing that Bill. Among thoſe Peers are the Names of the Lord North and Grey, and the Earl of Orrery, which is the more remarkable, for that thoſe two Peers were juſt got out of the Tower, where they had been confin'd for High Treaſon, and their voting for disbanding 4000 of the Land Forces, according to Lord Trevor's Motion, was the natural Effect of the Engagements they had enter'd into in the late Conſpiracy, which cou'd not have ſucceeded without leſſening the Number of the Regular Troops.

Lord Townſhend's Speech for the Land Forces.

Dr. Friend,

*A.D.*1724 Dr. Friend loſes his Seat in Parliament.

Dr. Friend, who had been impriſon'd for the Plot, was not long after his Diſcharge depriv'd of his Seat in Parliament, by being found, and voted to have been unduly elected for Launceſton, in Cornwall, which he took ſo very ill, that he could not help expreſſing it before he went out of the Houſe, as the Annaliſt informs us. He was afterwards rechoſen.

In the Beginning of April, the Plenipotentiaries of Great-Britain and France, at the Congreſs at Cambray, the Lord Polvarth and Lord Whitworth, the Count de Rottembourg and Monſieur de St. Conteſt, agreed upon a Regulation to be obſerv'd by the Miniſters of the ſeveral Princes and States there aſſembled, for preventing any Diſorder among their numerous Retinue. It conſiſted of 13 Articles, which were of the leſs Conſequence, becauſe that Congreſs had no Effect.

On the 24th of the ſame Month his Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to all the publick and private Bills that were ready, and clos'd the Seſſion with a Speech, which was the beſt Anſwer to all the pretended Reaſons for breaking the Forces.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech to the Parliament.

" Your continuing the like national Force " by Sea and Land this Year, as was judg'd " neceſſary by Parliament for the Service of " the laſt, gives me great Satisfaction, you " have hereby wiſely provided againſt the " Miſchiefs from any ſudden Shocks to pub- " lick Credit: You have provided for the " Safety of the Kingdom, and have ena- " bled this Nation to hold among the Pow- " ers of Europe, the Rank and Figure due " to her Honour and Dignity. Nothing " cou'd have been more acceptable to Me, " than your having been able to make that " Proviſion, without laying any New or Ad- " ditional Burthens on my People, &c.

The Lord Chancellor by his Majeſty's Command, prorogu'd the Parliament to the 4th of June.

Promotions.

Three Weeks before this, the King was pleas'd to appoint his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, to be one of his Majeſty Principal Secretaries of State. The Lord Carteret to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. His Grace the Duke of Grafton to be Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold. Robert Walpole, Eſq. George Baillie, Eſq. Sir Charles Turner, William Yonge and George Dodington, Eſqrs. to be Lords of the Treaſury. The Lord Viſcount Falmouth, and Richard Edgecombe, Eſqs. to be Vice-Treaſurers of Ireland. George Treby, Eſq. to be a Teller of the Exchequer Henry Pelham, Eſq. to be Secretary at War. Thomas Frankland, Eſq. was made one of the Commiſſioners of the Revenue in Ireland. Richard Sutton, Eſq. Clerk Comptroller of the Houſhold. Charles Dubourgay, Eſq. was appointed his Majeſty's Envoy to the King of Pruſſia. Edward Finch, Eſq. his Majeſty's Plenipotentiary at Ratisbon. Francis Coleman, Eſq. to be Reſident at the Court of Tuſcany. Dr. Arthur Price, was made Biſhop of Clonfert, in Ireland, and the Lord Viſcount Middleton, Lord Chancellor of that Kingdom. The Lord Viſcount Shannon, Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's Forces; and William Conolly, Eſq, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, were *A.D.*1724 Lords Juſtices of Ireland, till the Arrival of his Excellency the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant,

About the ſame Time, April 9th, a Committee of Council had under Conſideration, the Complaint of the Parliament of Ireland, againſt the Patent granted to Mr. Wood. But tho' Jonathan Swift, Dean of St. Patricks, had under the Diſguiſe of the Draper of Dublin, written one or more virulent Diſcourſes againſt Wood and his Copper Half-pence, and endeavour'd to raiſe a Spirit of Sedition againſt the Government, which in many Inſtances appear'd in the City of Dublin and other Parts of that Kingdom, Yet now the Matter was taken into Conſideration, no Evidence came from thence, to prove the Miſchiefs complain'd of, or any Fraud committed in the Execution of Wood's Patent for coining thoſe Half-pence. He was heard in Juſtification of himſelf, and at his Deſire, Orders were given for an Eſſay to be made immediately of the Fineneſs, Value and Weight of his Coinage and its Goodneſs, compar'd with the former Coinage of Copper Money in the Kingdom of Ireland.

Nothing can better deſerve a Place in Hiſtory, than his Majeſty's extraordinary Bounty to the Profeſſors of it, expreſt in his Circular Letter of the 16th of May, ſent to the two Univerſities of Cambridge and Oxford, wherein after having ſhewn the Deficiencies in the Education of Youth there, with Reſpect to Modern Hiſtory, and Modern Languages, it is ſaid, In Order to remedy theſe and the like Inconveniencies, we have determin'd to appoint two Perſons of ſober Converſation and prudent Conduct, of the Degree of Maſter of Arts, Batchelour of Laws, or of ſome higher Degrees in one of the ſaid Univerſities, ſkilled in Modern Hiſtory, and in the Knowledge of Modern Languages, to be nominated by US, to be our Profeſſors of Modern Hiſtory, one for the Univerſity of Cambridge, and the other for that of Oxford, *who ſhall be oblig'd to read Lectures in the publick Schools, at ſuch Times as ſhall hereafter be appointed. Great were the Expectations of Succeſs from the Choice of the Two Firſt Profeſſors, Mr. Samuel Harris, Fellow of Peter-Houſe, Cambridge, and Mr. Gregory, of Chriſt Church, Oxford, Men of Learning and Parts, who doubtleſs did what in them lay, to anſwer the good Ends of this noble Foundation.

The Two Univerſities preſented Addreſſes of Thanks to his Majeſty, and that of Cambridge receiv'd this moſt gracious Anſwer.

I thank you for your Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs, and am glad to find that what I propos'd to you in my Letter, meets with your intire Approbation, and doubt not, but with your Aſſiſtance, my Intentions upon this Occaſion, will prove an Honour to the Univerſity in General, as well as an Advantage to the particular Members of that learned Body.

Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York, being lately deceas'd, the King was pleas'd to nominate Dr. Lancelot Blackbourn, Lord Biſhop of Exeter, to that Metropolitan See; and about the ſame Time May 2d. to appoint John Williams, Richard Alworth, Edward Yonge, William Cleland, Thomas Medlycot and John Bromfield, Eſqrs. to be Commiſſioners for Taxes. The new Commiſſioners of Exciſe, were Chriſtopher Montagu, James Vernon, John Whetham, Roger Gale, Benjamin Mildmay, Richard Elliot, George Ducket and Patrick Haldane, Eſqrs.

Commiſſioners of Exciſe.

About the Middle of May, Horatio Walpole, Eſq. was appointed his Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary at the Court of France; and on the 21ſt of the ſame Month, Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer, dy'd a natural Death: But to avoid the groundleſs Charge of Partiality, to which my Zeal for Truth and our happy Conſtitution has ſo often expoſed me, I ſhall borrow what I ſay of him from the Annals, 535 leaving out what relates to his Family and Circumſtance, Of which, if I have given any Hints elſewhere, they were neceſſary to explain the Character of a Miniſter, who, in that Station, had been the Occaſion of ſo much Miſchief to his Country, and to ſhew that it was of a Piece both in publick and private Life.

Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford's Death.

By his ſtrict Conjunction with the Foleys and Winningtons, his Relations and their Friends, he gain'd at laſt ſuch an extenſive Intereſt, as to be choſen Speaker of the Houſe of Commons. When the Queen thought fit to lay aſide the Earl of Nottingham, Principal Secretary of State, Mr. Robert Harley was pitch'd upon to ſucceed him as her Favourite and Prime Miniſter, ſuppoſing he would be moſt agreable to the Whigs, from his Education among the Diſſenters, The Duke of Marlborough, and the Earl of Godolphin's main Deſign in advancing him, was to ſecure his Intereſt in the Houſe of Commons, and they fondly imagin'd, that as to the grand Affairs, either he would not intermeddle, or would blindly follow their Directions; but they ſoon after found, that a Perſon of his Ambitious Spirit, would not be contented to act an under Part.

His Character from the Annals.

They who extol his Liberality and Munificence to Learned Men, are no more to be depended upon, than when they tell us, that he diſcharg'd the Office of Secretary to King William, with great Addreſs, for as it is certain on the one Hand, that he never ſerv'd King William in that Capacity; 'tis no leſs true on the other Hand, that the only Perſon on whom he beſtow'd any Publick Mark of Favour, was Dr. Jonathan Swift, the famous Author of the Tale of a Tub, whom he employ'd with ſome other obſcure Writers, to banter and ridicule all that oppos'd his Meaſures. He was the Reverſe of his Predeceſſor in the Treaſury, the Earl of Godolphin, who never kept Suitors unprofitably in Suſpence, nor promis'd any Thing that he was not reſolv'd to perform, The Earl of Oxford on the Contrary, kept them, who had any Pretenſions, in perpetual Dependance, by feeding them with Hopes. This Maxim he practis'd in a moſt barbarous Manner, with Mr. Rowe, Author of the Tragedy of Tamerlane, the Story is too well known to be repeated. They who commend him for being a kind Friend, and generous Enemy, have forgot with what an unrelenting Fury he perſu'd his Benefactor, the Immortal Duke of Marlborough, and Mr. Stephens, the Miniſter, whom he caus'd to be proſecuted to the Pillory, and that ignominious Puniſhment was not remitted, till he was brought to the Place of Execution. His prodigious Riſe and Greatneſs was more owing to his Cunning in finding out the Weakneſſes of thoſe he had to deal with, than to his own bright Parts. For he neither was Maſter of Eloquence in Speech, nor of Stile in Writing, but in both puzzled and intricate, His conſtant Deſign being to diſcover other Peoples Thoughts, and conceal his own. But he had at laſt the Fate, which all Ambidexters deſerve, to be diſtruſted and diſregarded by all Parties, of which he was ſo ſenſible, that for ſeveral Years before his Death, he ſeldom came to Parliament, but liv'd in a Country Retirement, endeavouring to drown his Melancholly Thoughts in Wine, which at laſt doz'd his Spirits, and certainly abridg'd his Life.

Shortens his Days with Drinking.

We having mention'd the Practice of Inoculating the Small-Pox, at this Time attempted in England, which ſucceeded very well with the two Princeſſes Amelia and Carolina, and had the ſame good Effect on Prince Frederick, now his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, On the Duke of Bedford, and the Lady Mary Ruſſel, his Siſter, under the Direction of Sir Hans Sloane; it muſt not be forgotten, that it did not ſucceed ſo well with ſome others; as, William Spencer, Eſq. Son to the Earl of Sunderland, Miſs Rigby, Miſs Rolt, Miſs Brooksbank, Miſs A Court, Miſs Brailsford, Mrs. Mary Walker, Francis Bacon, Eſq. one of the Lord Bathurſt's Family, and ſome others, who dy'd in the Operation, upon which Dr. Jurin, Secretary to the Royal Society, publiſh'd a Treatiſe in Favour of Inoculating, to which we refer.

A few Weeks before this, the Rabble of Weavers, Woolcombers, &c. got together in a riotous Manner, to the Number of 7 or 800, at Bradninch and Cullumpton, in Devonſhire, under Pretence of raiſing their Wages, but it will appear preſently, that they were ſet on by the Jacobites. They arm'd themſelves with Clubs and Staves, and enter'd the Pariſhes of Uffulem and Cullemſtook, where they broke open Houſes, deſtroy'd the Furniture, and extorted Money from ſeveral Perſons, by threatning to murder them, if they did not give it to them; none ſuffer'd more than Mr. Nicholas Charley, whoſe Houſe was broke open and fill'd with the Rioters, who paſt from Room to Room, doing all the Miſchief they could, without the leaſt Provocation, breaking every Thing to Pieces, and among the Reſt the Pictures of his Majeſty King George, and of their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales. But the Men of Cullemſtock, about 150 in Number, taking Heart, fell upon them with great Vigour and Succeſs, put them to Flight and took 18 Priſoners, among whom were the Pretender and Mar, two of the Ringleaders, who affected to go by thoſe traiterous Names. They broke down Part of a new erected Meeting-Houſe, not far from Mr. Charleys; and as we read in the Annals, many ſuſpected, that the raiſing their Wages, was not the only Motive of their aſſembling.

Dr. Sacheverel's Death.

On the 5th of June dy'd Henry Sacheverel, D. D. a Scandal to his Name, to his Function, to his Religion and to his Country, tho' Earl Stanhope call'd him the Inſignificant Tool of a Party, it muſt be underſtood to refer to his Want of Senſe, Learning, Morals and Manners; for as he had workt the Rabble into a Ferment, and had made his Name as important among them, as that of the Church, He was of great Significance to the Harleian Miniſtry, by engaging the Mob on their Side. I was his Neighbour, and never heard that he had any Remorſe for the Miſchiefs he had been the Occaſion of, but went off in a State of Inſenſibility and Impenitence, after a long Indiſpoſition.

Among innumerable Calamities, which the wicked Counſels of the Miniſtry, in the Four laſt Years of the late Queen's Reign, brought on all Europe, and more eſpecially on the Confederate Powers, the Impotence they were left in, by the inglorious and ruinous Peace of Utrecht, to do any Thing for the Relief of the Proteſtants in France and elſewhere was one of the greateſt. Had not James Butler, once Duke of Ormond, baſely deſerted the Common Cauſe, the Army of the Allies, and abandon'd, if not betray'd their Troops to a French Maſſacre, the Confederate Arms would in all Probability have been, the next Campaign at the Gates of Paris, and that Cruel Perſecutor of Reform'd Chriſtians, Lewis the XIV. wou'd no longer have been in a Condition to deſtroy his Proteſtant Subjects, by his Edicts of Will and Pleaſure. But the Biſhop of London and Earl of Strafford, having finiſh'd their diſhonourable and dangerous Negotiations at Utrecht, without taking one Step in Favour of the Proteſtants in France, that might give the leaſt Offence to their grand Perſecutor, the French King, that King, and even his Great Grandſon, after his Death, at the Perſwaſion of the Biſhop of Frejus, in Hopes of a Cardinal's Cap, and contrary to the Sentiments of the Duke of Bourbon, Prime Miniſter, and the Chief Director of the Finances, put Weapons into the Hands of the Enemies of the Huguenots, for their intire Deſtruction. By an Edict of Lewis the XVth, dated the 31ſt of May, this Year, the Proteſtants were condemn'd in the following barbarous and bloody Articles.

Perſecution in France.

A.D. 1724

Whoever perform'd any Exerciſe of the Reform'd Religion, If a Man, was to be ſent to the Gallies: If a Woman, to be ſhav'd and confin'd where the Judges thought fit.

Proteſtant Preachers to be put to Death; to have any Communication directly or indirectly with ſuch Miniſters, the Puniſhment, the Galleys, &c.

To give their Children Foreign Education, a Fine of 6000 Livres.

Thoſe that dye in the Profeſſion of the Proteſtant Religion, their Memory to be proſecuted.

All conceal'd Proteſtants, that diſſwade ſick Perſons from dying Catholicks, are condemn'd to the Galleys, if Men, and if Women, as before.

To conſent that Children marry Abroad without Licence, puniſh'd with the Galleys.

Baptiſm and Schooling forbidden to Proteſtants, under the like Pains and Penalties.

Every one knows ſo much of the Wickedneſs and Nonſenſe of Popery, that it is needleſs to interrupt the Courſe of our Hiſtory with Diſcuſſions of that Kind, and this is remember'd only to ſhew the Spirit the Romiſh Powers reſum'd on the Breach made in the Confederacy, by the Miniſters in the Four laſt Years before-mention'd, of odious Memory.

About the ſame Time that this execrable Edict was publiſh'd in France, the Perſecution was carry'd on by the Idolaters in Spain, with the wonted Rage of the Inquiſition: There was an Auto de Fe, an Act of Faith, as ſays the Annaliſt, They expreſsly call an Act of diabolical Barbarity, held by the Tribunal at Granada, June 25, who condemn'd Five Perſons for Judaiſm, and they were immediately butcher'd. Sixteen other Perſons, moſt of whom had ſunk under their Sufferings, and dy'd in the Dungeons of the Holy Inquiſition, as they blaſphemouſly term it, were burnt in Effigy. Nineteen others being wrought upon by the Cruelties of the Inquiſitors, had the Benefit of being reconcil'd to that Anti-Chriſtian Church by Penance, All of them ſuffering Confiſcation of Goods, ſome Impriſonment for Life, receiving 200 Laſhes, and others Impriſonment or the Galleys for a certain Number of Years. At Corduba, ſix Perſons were reconcil'd to the Holy Roman Apoſtolical Church, in that Pagan Manner. At Minorca, two Women receiv'd 200 Laſhes a-piece Additional Penance. At Cuenca, three Women and two Men were burnt Alive, after a Converſion by Torture. To put a Stop to the Barbarities in France, if it was poſſible, his Excellency Horatio Walpole, Eſq. had Orders to ſollicite that Court in Behalf of the Proteſtants, and he obey'd thoſe Orders in the moſt preſſing Manner, but cou'd get no better Anſwer than this ſhort one, The King's Edicts muſt be obey'd. There was not a Miniſter in France, who had Courage

Courage enough to have ſaid as much to the Duke of Marlborough, before the Confederate Army was broken.

Levellers in Scotland.

Whether there were not Men in Scotland, almoſt as much out of their Wits as the Bigots in Spain, is left to the Reader's Conſideration, A Number of them call'd Levellers, roſe in the Weſt of that Part of Britain, who under Pretence of eſtabliſhing Equality among Chriſtians, pull'd down Incloſures, and committed great Ravages and Depredations. They were by ſome thought to be a Remnant of the old Cameronians, but thoſe that thought ſo, knew little of the People ſo call'd, who diſtinguiſh'd themſelves as much by Sobriety, as their Perſecutors did by Fury. Theſe Men were certainly diſcompos'd in their Underſtandings; and in Order to preſerve the Peace of that Country, the Royal Regiment of Scot's Fuzileers was about the latter End of June, order'd to march againſt them, and three other Regiments of Foot landing at Galloway at the ſame Time, receiv'd Orders alſo to ſuppreſs them, in which they met with no great Difficulty.

His Majeſty towards the latter End of July, appointed Mr. Finch to be Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the States General, Mr. Poyntz ſucceeded him in the ſame Character at the Court of Sweden. Dr. Boulter, Lord Biſhop of Briſtol, was nominated to the Archbiſhoprick of Armagh, in Ireland, Dr. Bradſhaw, Canon of Chriſt-Church, ſucceeded him both in the Biſhoprick of Briſtol, and Deanery of Chriſt-Church. This Doctor took a great Deal of Pains to clear himſelf from the Calumny of being deſcended from Serjeant Bradſhaw, Preſident of the High Court of Juſtice, that try'd King Charles I. and rather than have ſuch a Blemiſh in his Pedigree, he contented himſelf with a low Welſh one, which without Doubt was the true one. Dr. Blackbourne, Biſhop of Exeter, being nominated to the Archbiſhoprick of York, was ſucceeded in the See of Exeter, by Dr. Weſton, Fellow of Eaton Colledge. We have mention'd the referring the Trial of Mr. Wood's Copper Half-pence to Aſſay, which was made by Men of as great Honour and Capacity as any in Britain, Sir Iſaac Newton, Edward Southwell, Eſq. and John Scrope, Eſq. Names ſo much ſuperior to any on the other Side of the Queſtion, that it almoſt prejudices one in Favour of the Experiment, againſt all the Addreſſes and Petitions from Ireland. His Majeſty ſent Orders twice, by Letters from the Secretary of State to the Parliament of Ireland, to have the Perſons that had given Evidence before the Parliament there againſt theſe Half-pence, as baſe and fraudulent, to come to England and make good their Charge, upon which Swift and other factious Libellers founded their Clamour againſt the Government, but not one of them would appear, tho' their Charges were offer'd to be born as amply as they ſhould deſire. The Lord Lieutenant did his utmoſt, with the Aſſiſtance of the Lord Chancellor, the Lords of the Council and the Judges, to get thoſe Witneſſes to go to England and confirm their Teſtimony, by repeating it in Support of the Petition and Addreſſes founded upon it. But all was ineffectual, when they found that the Matter was to be weigh'd in equal Scales, and the King was reſolv'd that Juſtice ſhould be done accordingly. They were afraid of putting it upon that Iſſue. They were for having it determin'd by the Royal Authority, taking the Remonſtrances from Ireland about it, upon Truſt and their own Credit. They did not conſider what the Lords Committees of the Privy-Council in England, ſaid in their Report to his Majeſty, That however deſirous he was to give his People of Ireland all poſſible Satisfaction, he was ſenſible he could not in any Caſe proceed againſt any of the meaneſt of his Subjects, but according to the known Rules and Maxims of Law and Juſtice. The Lords of the Committee ſay further: "They think it "very ſtrange, that there ſhould be ſuch "a great Difficulty in prevailing with Perſons "who had already given their Evidence be"fore the Parliament of Ireland, to come "over and give the ſame Evidence here, and "eſpecially that the chief Difficulty ſhould "ariſe from a general Apprehenſion of a Miſ"carriage, in an Enquiry before his Majeſty, "or in a Proceeding by due Courſe of Law, &c. For tho' both Houſes of Parliament in that Kingdom, had declar'd themſelves to be fully convinc'd, that the Evidence there given, ſpoke the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth, yet it was moſt certain the Witneſſes prevaricated, in their Repreſentation of the matter, and that their Facts were not intirely true. For they inſiſted upon it again and again, that Wood's Half pence were not only under Weight, but of a baſer Allay than the Obligation of his Patent, without which all their Arguments againſt it, would have been abſurd and impertinent, becauſe all the World knew the Want the People of Ireland were in of ſuch Coinage. This will appear plainly by the Report of the Lords Committees of the Aſſay and Trial of thoſe Copper Half-pence, made by Sir Iſaac Newton, Edward Southwel, Eſq. and John Scrope, Eſq. in theſe Words addreſt to his Majeſty.

Mr. Wood's Copper Coin miſrepreſented

"The Pix of the Copper Monies coin'd at "Briſtol, by Mr. Wood, for Ireland, contain"ing the Trial Pieces, which was ſeal'd up "and lock'd up at the Time of the Coining, "was at your Majeſty's Mint at the Tower, "that the Comptroller's Account of the Quan"tities of Half-pence and Farthings coin'd, "agreed with Mr. Wood's Account, amounting

to

*A.D.*1724 " to 59 Tons, 3 Hundred, 1 Quarter, 11 " Pounds and 4 Ounces. That by the Speci- " mens of the Coinage, which had from Time " to Time been taken from the ſeveral Parcels " coin'd, and ſeal'd up in Papers, and put " into the Pix, 60 Half-pence weigh'd 14 " Ounces Troy and 18 Penny Weight, which Dr. Swift accuſes him falſely. " is about a Quarter of an Ounce above one " Pound Weight Averdupois; and 30 Farthings " weigh 3 Ounces and 3 Quarters of an Ounce " Troy, and 46 Grains, which is alſo above " the Weight requir'd by the Patent." Quite contrary to this fair State of the Caſe, is the falſe and bold Aſſertion of Jonathan Swift; If that is the Name of the Draper of Dublin, which no Body has yet queſtion'd, and the Sedition, Malice and Falſhood of his Allegations, in his Aſperſions on Mr. Wood and his Money, affords us another Meaſure for that Man's Conſcience. The Lords Committees proceed: " It alſo appears, that both Half-pence and " Farthings, when heated red hot, ſpread thin " under the Hammer without cracking, that " the Copper of which Mr. Wood's Coinage is " made, is of the ſame Goodneſs and Value " with the Copper of which the Copper Mo- " ney is coin'd in your Majeſty's Mint for Eng- " land, worth in the Market about 13 Pence " per Pound weight Averdupois. That a " Pound of Copper wrought into Bars or Fil- " lets, and made fit for Coinage, before brought " into the Mint at the Tower of London, is " worth 18 Pence per Pound, and always coſts " as much, and is coin'd into 23 Pence of " Copper Money, by Tale for England. It " likewiſe appears, that the Half-pence, and " Farthings coin'd by Mr. Wood, when com- " par'd with the Copper Money, coin'd for " Ireland, in the Reigns of King Charles II. " King James II. and King William and Queen " Mary, conſiderably exceeds them all in " Weight, in Goodneſs, Fineneſs and Value " of the Copper, none of them bearing the " Fire ſo well, not being malleable, waſting " very much in the Fire, and great Part of " them burning into a Cinder, of little or no " Value at all. Specimens of all which, as likewiſe of Mr. Wood's Copper Money, upon Trials and Aſſays, made by Sir Iſaac Newton, Mr. Southwel, and Mr. Scrope, were laid before this Committee for their Information.

The Fact being thus prov'd beyond all Manner of Contradiction, to be on the Side of Mr. Wood's Patent. The Lords Committees ſhew further, That his Majeſty's Royal Predeceſſors, always exercis'd the undoubted Prerogative of granting Patents for Copper Coinage in Ireland, to private Perſons, none of which were equally beneficial to that Kingdom, nor ſo well guarded with proper Covenants and Conditions, for the due Execution of the Powers thereby granted, as this of Mr. Wood, tho' the Validity of thoſe Patents, and a due Compliance with them, was never in any one Inſtance, till this Time diſputed or controverted. Their Lordſhips then prove, that Mr. Wood's Patent was not, as had been ſuggeſted in Ireland, obtain'd clandeſtinely, and in an unprecedented Manner, but after a Reference to the Attorney and Sollicitor General, and after Sir Iſaac Newton had been conſulted in all the Steps of ſettling it. In the laſt Place the Lords made it plainly appear by a Cloud of Witneſſes, that there was real Want of ſmall Money in Ireland, to make ſmall Payments; notwithſtanding all which ſolid Reaſons to ſupport this Patent, Mr. Wood, in Compliance with the Clamour, induſtriouſly rais'd againſt his Coinage, propoſing to reduce his Quantity by the Patent, from 100000 l. to 40000 l. Value, it was thought fit to accept of it, and to ſend Directions to Ireland, accordingly. I do not find any better Vindication of the Remonſtrances from Ireland, againſt Wood's Half-pence after this, than a Letter addreſt to him, wherein is this notorious Untruth: The only Two Inſtances of coining Copper Money at ſo great a Diſproportion from the real Value, was by the late King James in Ireland, and the King of Sweden: Whereas the Lords of the Council ſay, Wood's Copper Money, conſiderably exceed all other Copper Money for Ireland, even that in King William's Reign, in Weight, Goodneſs, Fineneſs and Value, Alſo a Lampoon beginning,

Now altho' to draw Water is not very good.
Yet we all ſhould rejoice to be Hewers of Wood.

Which by the Pun and Spirit ſeems to be Swift's.

*A.D.*1724

About the ſame Time the Lords of the Council had a remarkable Caſe under Conſideration, relating to the Biſhop of Man, who had been impriſon'd by the Lieutenant Governour of that Iſland, of which the Earl of Derby was Lord. It was This. A Reflection having been rais'd by one Lady upon another, for being too familiar with a certain Gentleman; the Miniſter of the Pariſh, who was acquainted with it, told the Lady accus'd, when ſhe came to receive the Sacrament, that he could not admit her without previous Admonition, as the Rubrick of the Church in ſuch Caſes directs. The Lady complain'd to the Biſhop, who call'd an Eccleſiaſtical Court, and finding the Reflection to be groundleſs, enjoin'd the Miniſter and the Lady, his Informer, to aſk Forgiveneſs of both the injur'd Perſons in the Chapel. The Lieutenant Governour ſhuts up the Chapel, and calls a Court of Judicatory of the Iſland, to enquire into the Matter, but the Biſhop and the Two other Perſons refus'd to acknowledge the Authority of the Court, and were fin'd, the Biſhop 50 l. and the Two others 20 l. Each, which they refuſing to pay, the Governour and Court ſent them to the Caſtle, under Guard of a File of Muſketeers. They lay there 9 Weeks, paid their Fine at laſt, and appeal'd to the Crown. There were two or three Hearings before the Lords of the Council upon it, and their Lordſhips order'd the Fines to be return'd. Upon which the Biſhop and his Abettors, made very great Complaints of the Hardſhips He and his two Companions, had endur'd; tho' they might have prevented all by ſubmitting to the Juſtice of their own Country. As the Earl of Derby was not ſpar'd in theſe Complaints, notwithſtanding he did not concern himſelf in the Affair, nor was indeed Privy to it, 'twas alledg'd that ſeveral Livings in the Iſle of Man were neglected to be fill'd up, and we ſhall find that the Jacobites were the Evil Spirit that troubled theſe Waters as well as others. The Earl of Derby had order'd his Lieutenant Governour, Capt. Horn, to ſee that every one who came to be admitted into a Living, ſhould firſt ſign a Paper, whereby he was to own the Title of King George and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Capt. Horn offer'd this Paper to a Clergy-

A.D. 1724 Clergyman, who refus'd to ſign it, and was deny'd Admittance on Account of his Diſloyalty, but the Biſhop appointed the ſame Perſon to officiate during the Vacancy, tho' he knew that the Perſon was thus diſaffected to the Government. Several other Vacancies were ſupply'd in the ſame Manner, none being found in the whole Iſland, that would accept of the Earl of Derby's Preſentation, by giving that reaſonable Teſtimony of their Affection to the preſent Eſtabliſhment. The Academic Profeſſor there, educated Children in Principles inconſiſtent with the Declaration the Earl requir'd all Miniſters to ſign, and held his Place contrary to his Lordſhips known Deſire, but with the Conſent and Approbation of the Biſhop. Such is the Diſloyal and Diſreſpectful Behaviour of High-Church, in whatever Part of his Majeſty's Dominions we find them.

Very well were they reprov'd by Dr. Benjamin Ibbet, Rector of St. Paul, Shadwell, in a Sermon he preach'd before the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, on the Firſt of Auguſt the whole is worth repeating, but the Want of Compaſs forbids us. Let us only inſert a Paſſage or Two, that touches to the Quick the Fomenters of Sedition and Diſcord, the Character of Modern pretended Patriots. Theſe "groſs Calumnies and groundleſs Miſrepreſentations; theſe little and low Stories, theſe "baſe Slanders and vile Reproaches, theſe "mean Party Falſhoods and Forgeries, which "have been ſo liberally dealt about, and with "which Artful and Deſigning Men, have too "long abus'd the weak and credulous Multitude, are now plainly ſeen through, and "fully confuted by Time and Experience. "Many who have hitherto been deluded, both "diſcern and own their Error, and will not ſo "eaſily be impos'd upon again; for his Majeſty wanted only to be more and better "known, to make himſelf both lov'd and fear'd "by all his Subjects: And it was Baſeneſs to "the laſt Degree, and black Ingratitude in "thoſe who knew him, to take the Opportunity of the Ignorance of Others, to ſow the "Seeds of Diſaffection among his People, to "make falſe Impreſſions upon their Minds, "and raiſe their Prejudice againſt him. For "He wanted not US, nor any Thing from "US, but we ſtood in great Need of Him, "and muſt have been miſerable and undone "without Him. Had it not been for this Auſpicious Day, and that wiſe and wholeſome "Act of our Great Deliverer, which then "took Place in his Preſent Majeſty and his Illuſtrious Houſe, Miſery and Slavery, both "of Body and Soul had been entail'd upon us, "and our Poſterity, without Remedy and "without End, &c." Yet how did our Two Univerſities and others, condole that good Providence of God, that brought us Deliverance, the glorious Firſt of Auguſt; or as Dr. Ibbot writes, The Auſpicious Firſt of Auguſt. The Doctor preſented his Sermon to his Majeſty the 28th of this Month, and was receiv'd very graciouſly.

Dr. Ibbot's good Sermon.

The glorious Firſt of Auguſt, the ſame as Auſpicious in the Sermon.

A Week before, Mr. John Barber, City Printer and Alderman, was brought up to Town in Cuſtody of Mr. Crew, a Meſſenger, He was ſiez'd near Harwich, as he came from beyond Sea, and being carry'd to Windſor, was examin'd by his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, but on Tueſday, the 25th of Auguſt. He was admitted to Bail.

Mr. John Barber, the Printer, ſiez'd.

A.D. 1724

On the 22d. of Auguſt there was a General Council held at Windſor, where his Majeſty then kept his Court, and Sir Philip York, Attorney General and Sir Clement Wearg, Sollicitor General, attended with their Report concerning the Charter of Tiverton, which was referr'd to them, and gave it as their Opinion, that the old one was forfeited, and that it was neceſſary and lawful to grant a new one, for reſtoring the Corporation to its ancient Rights and Privileges, which his Majeſty was pleas'd to order accordingly. And it was wiſh'd that the Charters of other Corporations, which had been forfeited by Law, and were in the Hands of mean, diſaffected Perſons, who crept into them on the Expulſion of Proteſtant Diſſenters, by the Schiſm and Occaſional Bills, had been in like Manner referr'd and vacated, and thoſe Corporations put again into the Hands of the Well-Affected and Worthy.

Tiverton Charter forfeited.

His Majeſty's Fatherly Love to his People appear'd upon all Occaſions and on this particularly, about the Beginning of September, one Heaton was ſollicuting for a Patent, to make Hats of Bent or Straw, which would have been extreamly prejudicial to Thouſands of poor People, about Hempſted in Hertfordſhire, Luton, Dunſtable, &c. in Bedfordſhire. I was told at Hempſted, that 200 l. a Week has been turn'd in a Market Day in Straw Hats only, which Manufacture has thriv'd in thoſe Parts above 100 Years, and Children, as well as grown People, maintain themſelves by platting Wheat Straw, and working for Hatts and other Uſes. Heaton's Project alarm'd the Maſters of theſe Manufacturers, and Mr. Thomas Burch, of Hempſted, and Mr. John Miller of Dunſtable, introduc'd by his Grace the Duke of Bridgwater, whoſe Noble Seat at Aſhridge, is in the Neighbourhood of Hempſted, preſented a Petition to the King, ſetting forth the Danger they were in of loſing their Trade and Livelihood, if Heaton's Patent took Effect. His Majeſty receiv'd their Petition very graciouſly, and gave poſitive Order to the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, that a ſpeedy Stop ſhould be put to the ſaid Patent, which gladden'd the Hearts of thoſe Thouſands of Manufacturers in Straw, who thought their Bread and their Being in ſo much Peril.

His Majeſty relieves the Manufacturers at Hempſted.

Mention has been made of the Cruel Edict in France, againſt the Chriſtians of the Reformation. It was obtain'd by the Intereſt of the Jeſuits, the moſt irreligious, inſolent and intereſted Tribe that ever profeſt Prieſthood. They were not contented with perſecuting the Reform'd, they encroach'd on the Prerogatives of the Prelates, inſomuch that the Biſhop of Montpellier, Brother to the Marquiſs de Torcy, thought himſelf oblig'd to write a Letter of Complaint againſt them to the Duke of Bourbon, Prime Miniſter. But the young King had ſuffer'd himſelf to be ſurrounded by the Friends to that Order, and they procur'd an Arret or Decree of the Privy-Council, to be ſent to Mr. Bernage, Intendant of Lauguedec, for ſequeſtring the Biſhops Temporalities, and appointing a Perſon to diſtribute them to the Poor of the Dioceſe, which Bernage did accordingly, and the Biſhop retrench'd his Equipage and Domeſticks. He refus'd a Penſion offer'd him by his Brother, and 80000 Livres,

The Biſhop of Montpellier perſecuted in France.

A.D. 1724 remitted by his Friends and Relations, saying, He return'd them his hearty Thanks, and would make Use of their Generosity, when he stood more in Need of it, having still enough to live upon in a Condition that did not require so much Expence, it was about 1500 l. per Ann. the Remainder of 4000 l. per Annum. his Patrimonial Estate. The Rest he had spent in Acts of Charity and Liberality. But he had 80000 Livres in Plate and Moveables, and a Library valu'd at 50000 Livres.

The Rage of Persecution was not thus prevalent in France and Spain only. It made Havock in Poland, where King Augustus, who quitted the Protestant Religion to make Way for his Election to that Crown, had not the Will or the Power to hinder the Effusion of Christian Blood by Wretches immers'd in Idolatry and Barbarism. The Case was thus, as it was sent to the Polish Court.

The Protestants massacred at Thorn.

On the 16th of July, the ordinary Procession at Thorn, in Royal Prussia, belonging to Poland, being arriv'd at St. James's Church Yard, which Church had been taken from the Lutherans, contrary to the Peace of Olivos. A great Number of the Citizens Children resorted thither to see it, with their Hats under their Arms, according to Custom, but a Student of the Jesuits Colledge, not satisfy'd with that Mark of Civility and Respect, would needs have them kneel down, and gave them bad Language and Blows. About Two Hours after the Procession was over, this same Student with some of his Comrades, insulted several young People, without the least Provocation on their Part, but in the End this troublesome young Fellow was siez'd by the Soldiers of the Garrison, and brought to the Guard, after he had wounded several Citizens with Stones. Next Day the Jesuits Students got together again, and meeting one of the Citizens, whom they had abus'd the Day before, they would oblige him to get their Comrade set at Liberty, but the Citizen had the good Fortune to get out of their Hands, and ran to his own House for Safety, whither they pursu'd him Sword in Hand. In the mean Time the President of the City had given Order for setting him at Liberty, at the Request of the Rector of the Jesuits Colledge, but another Student being likewise carry'd to the Guard Room, his Comrades would oblige the President to set him at Liberty also, which he refus'd to do, till he had spoke to the Rector. Upon this the Jesuit's Students ran furiously to the Guard Room to rescue their Comrade, but being repuls'd, they thought to revenge themselves upon a Townsman, whom they pursu'd with drawn Swords to the Burgrave's House, where he took Shelter. They then attack'd a Lutheran Student, who was in his Night-Gown at the Door of his Lodgings. They dragg'd him by the Hair as far as their own Colledge, threw him into the Canal, and beat him unmercifully, which done, they sally'd again into the City, and wounded several People with their Sabres, who were coming to the Assistance of the Lutheran Student. But the President having sent thither the Town Guard, they were oblig'd to betake themselves to their Colledge, where they kept the Lutheran Student, till the Jesuits Student was first set at Liberty. While this Exchange was making, some of the Train'd-Bands of the Town, were order'd to post themselves before the Jesuits Colledge, to protect them from the enrag'd Populace. But the Students throwing Stones at them, and firing upon them, it was not possible to restrain the People, who forc'd open the Gate, and were doing what they could to revenge the Cruelty of the Jesuits Students, when in that very Instant, the Town Clerk, who had got the Lutheran releas'd, came and oblig'd them to retire. The Riot was then thought to be over, but the Guards that were posted before the Colledge, were scarce march'd off, when the Jesuits Students from within fir'd again, and threw Stones at the People, who again forc'd open the Gate, plunder'd the Colledge, and committed great Disorders, till a Detachment of the Garrison and Train'd Bands came to the Jesuit's Assistance, and dispers't the People. A.D. 1724

By this Account, which the Papists allow to be true in the main, 'tis manifest, that the Jesuits Students began and carry'd on the Riot against both the Citizens and Soldiers. And the Sanguinary Decree past against the Magistrates of Thorn, by the King and Diet of Poland, seems to own as much. For they say: The Inhabitants of Thorn laid their insolent Hands on Places and Persons devoted to God, for a very small Fault. They order'd Commissioners to repair to that City, and see their Sentence executed, and the Generals of the Crown to assist them.

To do what in us lies that the Infamy of this Diabolical Sentence may remain on the Poles to all Generations, that their Name may be had in eternal Abhorrence, and whatever Calamities and Plagues fall on them and destroy them, they may meet with the less Pity in Human Minds, let it be recorded that this was their Bloody Decree.

The Bloody Decree of the King and Diet of Poland.

" The President and Vice-President
" are condemn'd to be Beheaded,
" and their Estates to be confis-
" cated.

" Gherherde Thomas, Burgomaster, and " Zimmerman, Vice Burgomaster,
" are declar'd Infamous and to be
" imprison'd.

" Harden, Moab, and Thirteen more to
" be beheaded.

" Karwiza, Schultz, to have their Right
" Hands cut off, and afterwards
" their Bodies quarter'd and burnt,
" for burning the Picture of the " Virgin Mary.

Many others to be exorbitantly fin'd and imprison'd, and the Money arising from the Fines, to be laid out in erecting a Stone Pillar with the Virgin Mary's Statue on the Spot, where her Picture was burnt.

What a Mixture is here of Stupidity, Barbarism, Cruelty and Superstition.

Protestant Counsellours at Thorn, to be turn'd out of the Magistracy, and Papists put in their Places. The Church of St. Mary

to

A.D.1724 to be taken from the Proteſtants and given to the Franciſcan Friers. A.D.1724

The Miniſter Olon and his Collegue, are declar'd Infamous and baniſh'd.

If the Town of Thorn oppoſes this Sentence, 'tis declar'd Guilty of High Treaſon.

The Magiſtrates of the City hearing that dreadful and damnable Decree had paſt againſt them, apply'd immediately to the Proteſtant Powers to interceed for them. The King of Sweden, who was neareſt at Hand, diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Warſaw, with a Letter to King Auguſtus. But whether he was diſpos'd or not to accept of his Interceſſion, the Jeſuits were reſolv'd to prevent any good Effect, either from that Kings, or any other Power's Mediation, and to that End they eaſily prevail'd with the Commiſſioners to begin the Butchery fifteen Days before the Day ſet and appointed for the Execution of the Helliſh Sentence, which was the 15th of December. Accordingly on the 30th of November, Prince Lubomerski, and his Adjutant General arriv'd before Thorn, at the Head of Three Regiments, and the Preſident Rohner, and Vice Preſident Czernich, were ſiez'd at Church, and put under Guard. Then 150 Dragoons enter'd the Town, and the Reſt poſt'd themſelves before it. The Firſt Thing the Dragoons did after poſſeſſing themſelves of the old and new Town, was to cauſe a Scaffold to be erected, upon which the Preſident Burgomaſter Rohner, was beheaded by Torchlight, betwixt 4 and 5 a Clock in the Morning, in the Square of the old Town. The Heads of Mohault, Hertel, Hertz and Wanſch, were ſtruck off on a Scaffold in the ſame Square, about 9 o'Clock; Karwiza, a Carpenter's Boy, Schultz, a Needle-Maker, and one Huſt, had their Right Hands cut off firſt, and then their Heads, Five Burghers had their Hands cut off firſt, and then their Heads. Some Carmen and others loſt their Heads alſo. Many Burghers were whipp'd without Mercy, and many more impriſon'd and beggar'd. The Preſident Rohner was offer'd a Pardon, if he wou'd abjure his Religion, but he rejected the Offer with Diſdain, and dying like a good Chriſtian in the Augsburgh Confeſſion, left his innocent Blood on the Heads of the barbarous People, crying ſtill for Vengeance. The Vice Preſident Czernich was repriev'd, tho' he refus'd to renounce his Religion. He was ſo good a Magiſtrate, that even the Papiſts interceeded for him. His Houſe was given to the Jeſuits, and a great Fine extorted from his Family. The Jeſuits pretended, that the Damages they ſuffer'd in the late Riot, amounted to above 30000 Florins. But the Palatine Robinskt, one of the Commiſſaries, diſcovering their Roguery in Calculation, reduc'd the Sum to 22000 Florins, which was paid them by the City. The Proteſtants in all Parts of Europe, expreſt their Horror and Indignation at this tyrannous and terrible Execution, and heartily wiſh'd that Meaſures cou'd be taken to chaſtize the Murderers, in the moſt exemplary Manner. But the Slaughter being over, and the Loſs of thoſe Martyrs irretrievable. The different intereſts and Paſſions of ſo many Nations as would be concern'd in ſuch an Attempt, not eaſily to be reconcil'd for its Accompliſhment, hinder'd the turning the Edge of the Sword of Juſtice againſt that barbarous and otherwiſe contemptible Nation the Poles, cruel and accurſt.

The Maſſacre.

His Majeſty ſtaid at Windſor, till the Firſt of October, and then return'd to Kenſington: About which Time the Rebel Mackintoſh, who made his Eſcape out of Newgate, in May, 1716, was taken in the Highlands of Scotland, by one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers, who had a Warrant to apprehend him, but there was no great Likelihood that a Meſſenger without Military Force, ſhould be able to bring off ſo robuſt a Rebel, ſurrounded with Highlanders of his own Clan. He indeed ſiez'd Mackintoſh, with one of his Brothers, by the Help of the Perſons he took to his Aſſiſtance, but others of the Clan coming in and overpow'ring thoſe who had taken him, the Rebel once more eſcap'd out of the Hands of Juſtice, and tho' his Brother remain'd a Priſoner, there was nothing more done to him. Such was the dangerous Clemency of this offended Government.

Mackintoſh eſcapes a ſecond Time.

Towards the End of the Month, Thomas Wyndham, Eſq. of the Wiltſhire Family, was appointed Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas in Ireland; and a few Days after, the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, arriv'd at Dublin, and immediately proceeded to the Caſtle, with the uſual Solemnity, and took the Oaths as chief Governour in the Council Chamber, Colonel Huske, the ſame who ſiez'd Sir William Wyndham, was appointed one of his Excellency's Aids de Camp, and Thomas Clutterbuck, Eſq. his firſt Secretary. Mr. Thomas Tickel, who liv'd with Mr. Addiſon, and tranſlated the firſt Book of Homer, in a Sort of Rivalſhip with Alexander Pope, was Secretary to the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, and his Brother, Mr. Richard Tickel, was made Secretary to the Lord Shannon, General of the Forces in that Kingdom.

There was a laudable Zeal in a Reverend Prelate, who cou'd not bear the Liberty which a certain Writer had taken to inſinuate, that the Uſe of Reaſon, was neceſſary in Matters of Faith, which he complain'd off in the Houſe of Peers, November 23d. tho' not with the Succeſs which he expected from ſo Orthodox a Declaration. I will repeat one Paſſage only of the Piece at which he took Offence.

Reaſon to be us'd in Religion.

'Tis wonderful to obſerve the vaſt Stock of Wiſdom without Knowledge, and of Faith, without Reaſon, which for many Ages paſt has deſcended from Generation to Generation, by Right of Inheritance. Men bequeath their Religion to their Succeſſors, among their other Goods and Chattels, and convey the Crown of Life and Immortality to their Heirs, together with their Temporal Eſtates, by Will and Teſtament. It muſt be own'd, that where Truth and Orthodoxy deſcend thus by Inheritance, or ſpring up ſpontaneonſly from uncultivated Nature, they commonly prove Rank, Offenſive Productions, and might much better have been ſpar'd, were it not for the great Honour and Perſonal Advantages, which hereby redound to the wealthy Profeſſors. But yet it cannot be expected, that the rich and honourable Proprietors of this vaſt natural Stock of Hereditary Truth and Orthodoxy, ſhould eaſily quit their Poſſeſſion, to be reduc'd to the hard Fate of Drudges and Day Labourers, to be oblig'd to

As much as this ſeem'd to reflect on the Orthodox Clergy, the venerable Bench of Biſhops did not think fit to come into their Brother's Complaint, ſo the Affair dropt.

The Wapping Minters ſuppreſt.

The Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration the Diſorders committed by Shelterers in Wapping-Stepney, where they pretended to ſtand out againſt their Creditors, as they had done in the Mint in Southwark. But a Bill being order'd to be brought in to ſuppreſs them, theſe Offenders either remov'd to other Places, or gave up their Pretences to Privilege.

Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales deliver'd of a Daughter.

On Monday, the 5th of December, about half an Hour paſt Four in the Afternoon, her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, was ſafely deliver'd of a Princeſs at Leiceſter Houſe, there being then preſent in the Room, his Royal Highneſs the Prince, the Dutcheſs of Richmond, the Dutcheſs of Dorſet, the Counteſs of Hertford, Ladies of her Royal Highneſs's Bedchamber: Dr. Chamberlain and Others, whoſe Duty it was to attend. Their Royal Highneſſes diſpatch'd the Earl of Eſſex to St. James's, to acquaint his Majeſty with it, and his Majeſty was pleas'd to ſend immediately the Duke of Queensberry, with his Compliment to their Royal Highneſſes.

On Tueſday, the 8th of December, upon a Motion made by Arthur Onſlow, Eſq. it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, To preſent an humble Addreſs to his Majeſty, to congratulate his Majeſty upon the Encreaſe of his Royal Family, by her Royal Highneſſes being happily deliver'd of a Princeſs; and that a Congratulatory Meſſage be ſent to their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales on this happy Occaſion, and Mr. Onſlow, Mr. Yonge, Mr. Eversfield, Mr. Gore, Mr. George Berkley and Mr. Sandys, were order'd to attend their Royal Highneſſes with the ſaid Congratulatory Meſſage. The next Day Mr. Comptroller reported to the Houſe, that his Majeſty was pleas'd to receive their Congratulatory Addreſs very graciouſly, and Mr. Onſlow reported, that the Gentlemen appointed to attend their Royal Highneſſes, having accordingly attended his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, His Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to ſay, That he took this Mark of Affection from the Houſe of Commons very kindly, and ſhould be glad at all Times to ſhew his Eſteem for the Houſe of Commons. A Week after Mr. Onſlow reported to the Houſe, that the ſame Gentlemen having attended her Royal Highneſs with the Congratulatory Meſſage, her Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to ſay, That ſhe thank'd the Houſe of Commons for this very kind Meſſage, and eſteem'd it a Mark of Affection to Her, as She had the Honour to be one of the King's Family. The City of London alſo made their Compliments of Congratulation to his Majeſty, upon this Encreaſe of his Royal Family, and Joſeph Eyles, Eſq. one of their Sheriffs, receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood.

The Houſe of Commons addreſs their Royal Highneſſes upon it.

Their Royal Highneſſes Anſwer.

On the 23d of this Month, in the Evening, the young Princeſs was chriſten'd at Leiceſter Houſe, by the Name of Louiſa, there being preſent their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales, Prince William and the Princeſſes. The Princeſs Amelia, ſtood Godmother, the Dutcheſs of Richmond Proxy for the Princeſs Louiſa of Pruſſia, the other Godmother, and the Earl of Grantham, Proxy for the Prince Royal of Pruſſia. The Service was perform'd by Mr. Dean Harris. A.D.1724

A Motion being made in the Committee of Ways and Means: "That inſtead of the Duties on Malt in Scotland, a Duty of Six-pence be paid there for every Barrel of Beer, Ale, &c. it occaſion'd a ſmall Debate, but the Queſtion being put, it was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 133 Voices againſt 41.

On the 27th of December, dy'd Thomas Guy, Eſq, in the 81 Year of his Age. He was formerly a Bookſeller, in Cornhill, and Lombardſtreet, and got a great Deal of Money by ſelling Bibles, Common-Prayer Books and Pſalters, which Money he improv'd ſo well in the Funds, that he acquir'd an immenſe Eſtate, of which he gave by his Will 240000 l. to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, in Southwark, for erecting and endowing the Hoſpital of Incurables near it. He left 400 l. per Ann. to Chriſt's Hoſpital for ever, tho' the Governours of that Charity were by no Means principled like himſelf, either in Religion or Politicks, Mr. Guy being ſo zealous for the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion that the Borough of Tamworth, the Place of his Nativity, which he had repreſented in five or ſix Parliaments, threw him out at the Election, after Sacheverel's Sedition, for which the poor Inhabitants are like to be Sufferers, as long as there are any that want Charity among them. He built the Market Houſe in that Place, and a Range of Alms Houſes, which he intended to have enlarg'd in Number and Endowment. If High-Church had not dealt ſo unhandſomly and ungratefully by him. He left many other great Charities, and about 100000 Pounds among his Relations. Mr. Guy's great Charities.

There had been for ſome Time a murmuring againſt the Inſufficiency of the Maſters in Chancery, to anſwer the great Sums lodg'd in their Hands by the Suitors in that Court, and it was ſuſpected, that the large Sums they paid for Admiſſion into their Places, made their Way more eaſy than it ought to have been, and very much leſſen'd the Inquiry into their Qualifications for them. 'Tis true this Abuſe had been long growing up to this Enormity, and there was hardly any Commodity in a Market bought and ſold more freely and openly than a Maſter in Chancery's Place. The Suitors Mony for which they paid no Intereſt, brought them in great Intereſt from the Funds and the Profits of the Place, being conſequently doubled and trebled at leaſt to what they were, before there was ſuch an Opportunity to enrich themſelves by the Advantages they made of the Money they had in their Hands, 'Tis no wonder the Lord Keepers and Lord Chancellors doubled and trebled the Price they were to pay for Admittance, which had riſen from one Thouſand to three Thouſand Pounds in my Remembrance, who being intimate with ſeveral of them; as Mr. Medlicot, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Lovibond, Mr. Browning, have heard this Matter frequently diſcourſt of before there was any Whiſper of imputing it as a Crime ro the Earl of Macclesfield, Lord Chancellor. But from a Complaint in Generals, it came to a Charge in Particulars, and the Earl finding it was unpracticable for him to prevert it, or keep the great Seal under it, he he resign'd his High Office in the beginning of January; and the Seals were committed to the keeping of Sir Joseph Jekyl, Master of the Rolls, Sir Jeffry Gilbert, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Sir Robert Raymund, one of the Justices of the Kings Bench, who having in Council taken the Oath as Lords Commissioners, his Majesty was pleas'd to express himself to them as follows.

His Majesty's Speech to the Commissioners of the great Seal.

I have had such Experience of your Integrity and Ability, that it is with Pleasure I now put the great Seal into your Hands. You are fully inform'd of the State of the Accounts of the Masters in Chancery. I earnestly recommend to you the taking effectual Care, that entire Satisfaction be made to the Suitors of the Court, and that they be not expos'd to any Dangers for the Future; and I have such Confidence in the faithful Discharge of the Trust I now repose in you, that I am persuaded you will look narrowly to the Behaviour of all the Officers under your Jurisdiction, and will see that they act with the strictest Regard to Justice, and to the Ease of my Subjects.

Mr. Conway, one of the Masters in Chancery, was committed to the Fleet-Prison by the Lords Commissioners, for not obeying their Order to pay some Orphans Money into the Bank. The House of Peers about the same Time committed the Earl of Suffolk and Bindon to the Tower of London, for having given several written Protections in Breach of the Standing Orders, &c.

The 30th of January Sermons.

The Thirtieth of January, Sermons being still preach'd, in Compliance with an Act of Parliament still in Force, Dr. Waugh, Bishop of Carlisle, who preach'd before the Lords, and Dr. Lupton, before the Commons; exerted their great Talents in setting forth the Iniquity of that Day, and had the Thanks of both Houses. Dr. Lupton cou'd not miss so fair an Opportunity to hint the Necessity there was of believing the Church to be always in Danger. No body will say he does not mean Church by Religion. He tells the Commons: It appears to Demonstration in the History of the Jews, that the Prosperity of a Nation does usually rise or fall in Proportion to the Provisions which it makes for the Security and Propagation of Religion.

Mr. Elde, expell'd the House of Commons.

The 4th of February, Mr. Francis Elde, one of the Masters in Chancery, was expell'd the House of Commons for indirect and corrupt Practices, in procuring himself to be elected a Representative for the Borrough of Stafford.

On the 9th of the same Month, Mr. Comptroller, acquainted the House, that he had a Message from his Majesty, which was read by Mr. Speaker, as follows:

GEORGE R.

The King's Message.

His Majesty having Reason to apprehend, that the Suitors of the Court of Chancery were in Danger of losing a considerable Sum of Mony, from the insufficiency of the Masters, thought himself obliged in Justice and Compassion to the said Suitors, to take the most speedy and proper Method the Law would allow, for inquiring into the State of the Masters Accounts, and securing their Effects for the Benefit of the Suitors. And His Majesty having had several Reports laid before him in Pursuance of the Directions he had given, has orderd the said Reports to be communicated to this House, that this House may have a full and as perfect a view of this important Affair, as the Shortness of the Time and the Circumstances and Nature of the Proceedings would admit. Which Reports and other Papers relating to them, were delivered at the Table by Mr. Comptroller. A.D. 1725

Proceedings against the Earl of Macclesfield.

On the 12th of Febr. the House of Commons took into Consideration the several Reports and Papers referr'd to in His Majesty's most gracious Message, and Sir George Oxenden spoke to this Effect, "That it manifestly appear'd by "these Reports, which after the strictest Inquiry and upon the maturest Deliberation, "had been drawn up by Persons of the greatest "Weight and Authority for their Abilities Experience, High Stations and Integrity, That "enormous Abuses had crept into the High "Court of Chancery, chiefly occasion'd by the "Magistrate, who was at the Head of the "Court, and whose Duty consequently it was to "prevent the same. That the Crimes and "Misdemeanours of the late Lord Chancellor "were many, and of various Natures, but "might be reduc'd to these three Heads, "First, That he had taken into his own "Hands the Estates and Effects of many Widows, Orphans and Lunaticks, and either "had disposs'd of Part of them arbitrarily to "his own Profit, or conniv'd at the Officers "underhand making Advantage of the same. "Secondly, That he had rais'd to an exorbitant "Price the Offices and Places of Masters of "Chancery, and in order to enable them to "pay him those high Prices and Gratuities "for their Admission, had trusted in their "Hands large Sums of Money, belonging to "Suitors in Chancery. Thirdly, That in several Cases he had made divers irregular "Orders, so that in his Opinion, that first "Magistrate in the Kingdom, was fallen "from the Height of the Dignities and Honours to which he had been rais'd by the "King's Royal Bounty and Favour, to the "Depth of Infamy and Disgrace, and therefore he mov'd, That THOMAS, Earl of "Macclesfield, be impeach'd of High Crimes "and Misdemeanours." Earl of Macclesfield impeach'd.

This Motion was seconded by William Strickland, Esq. and back'd by George Dodington, Esq. both these Gentlemen expatiated on the Misdemeanours of the Lord Chancellor, which they said were of the most dangerous Consequences, since most of the Estates in England, once in Thirty Years, pass through the Court of Chancery; William Pulteney, Esq. stood up next, and said in Substance: "That it "was far from his Thoughts to endeavour to "abate the just Resentment, which the Gentlemen who spoke last shew'd against the "great Abuses that had been committed in "the Court of Chancery, but that, in his Opinion, they went a little too fast in so weighty "and important an Affair, by which Means "they might lose the very End they aim'd at, "viz. The effectual punishing the Person by "whose Neglect at least those Abuses had "been committed, That whatever Deference "they ought to pay on this Occasion, to the "Capacity, Experience, Integrity and Authority of the Persons who had drawn up "the Reports, that had been laid before them, "yet it little became the Dignity, and was

A.D.1725 " even Derogatory to the Prerogative of that " Houſe, which is the grand Inqueſt of the " Nation, to found an Impeachment on thoſe " Reports, without a previous Inquiry and " Examination into the Proofs that were to " ſupport it, and therefore he was of Opinion " and mov'd, that this Affair might be referr'd " to the Conſideration of a ſelect Comittee. He was back'd by ſeveral Members, particularly by Sir William Wyndham, who urg'd, " That by proceeding by way of Impeachment, " upon Reports laid before them, the Commons would make a dangerous Precedent, " and ſeem to give up the moſt valuable of " their Privileges, viz. the Inqueſt after State " Criminals. Sir Wilfred Lawſon and Sir Thomas Pengelly, alſo ſupported Mr. Pulteney's Motion, but Mr. Yonge, and Sir Clement Wearg, Sollicitor-General, anſwer'd and remov'd their Objections; upon which the previous Queſtion was put, whether the Queſtion be now put upon Sir George Oxenden's Motion, which was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 273 Voices againſt 164. Then the main Queſtion was put, and it was Reſolv'd by the ſame Majority, That Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, be impeach'd of High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, and Order'd, That Sir George Oxenden, do go up to the Lords, and at their Bar, in the Name of the Houſe of Commons, and of all the Commons of Great-Britain, Impeach Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, of High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, and acquaint them, that this Houſe would in due Time, exhibit particular Articles againſt him, and make good the ſame, which was done accordingly, and a Committee was appointed to draw up thoſe Articles. After which, upon a Motion made by Mr. Weſt, and ſeconded by Mr. Thompſon, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to indemnify the Maſters of Chancery, from the Penalties of the Act of the 5th and 6th Years of King Edward the Sixth, againſt buying and ſelling of Offices, upon their diſcovering what Conſideration Price or Gratuity, They paid or agreed to pay for the Purchaſe of, or for their Admiſſion into their reſpective Offices; which Bill paſt both Houſes and had the Royal Aſſent. It had been well for Suitors in the Court of Chancery, if the Maſters had been regulated alſo as to their multiplying Summons in References to them, and thereby lengthening Suits, to the great Trouble, Charge and Vexation of the Suitors. At the latter End of February, Sir Robert Raymond, was made Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, and Serjeant Reynolds, a puiſny Judge of that Court.

We read in the Annals, that when the Bill about the Fifty new Churches was committed, March 17th, Arthur Onſlow, Eſq. made a Motion for a Clauſe, " to render incapable " any Bodies Politick or Corporate Brotherhoods or Societies, to purchaſe or take any " Right of Advowſon, Patronage, Preſentation, Nomination, Collation or Donation of " in, or to any Benefice with Cure of Souls, " &c." The two Univerſities, and particularly Oxford, had for ſeveral Years paſt made Uſe of their beſt Oeconomy and their Intereſt in good Church-Men and Women, to lay up a Stock for purchaſing Advowſons and Preſentations for the Benefit of ſuch Incumbents as they ſhould think moſt proper to carry on the Work they had for them to do, and there was juſt Cauſe to apprehend, that by the increaſing this Stock, they might in Time engroſs all the good Benefices in the Kingdom, which would neceſſarily give them that Influence in it, which this Contrivance ſeem'd to aim at, to the great Prejudice of the Laity, who even in Popiſh Times cou'd lawfully make ſuch Purchaſes Proviſions for their Male Iſſue. Sir Gilbert Heathcote, late Father of the City of London, had this Novelty very much at Heart, and foreſaw many Miſchiefs like to ariſe from it. Serjeant Miller, ſeconded Mr. Onſlow's Motion, and Mr. Sandys backt it, but it was oppos'd by Mr. Hungerford, and ſo many other Members, that a Negative was put upon the Queſtion, by a Majority of 144 Voices againſt 74. The next Day the Articles againſt the Earl of Macclesfield, were read, and John Conduit, Eſq. mov'd for recommitting them. He was anſwer'd by Mr. Plummer, to whom Sir Philip York Attorney-General reply'd, Sir Thomas Pengelly anſwer'd Sir Philip York, to whom Mr. Yonge reply'd, and to him Mr. Weſt, who was anſwer'd by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, but the Motion was dropp'd without a Diviſion, a great Majority appearing againſt it. And the Articles being agreed to and paſt, were ſent to the Lords, March 20th. As was alſo the Bill for regulating Elections in the City of London, the Law which is now the Rule on that Occaſion. But the Ferment this Law rais'd in the City, was ſuch, that a printed Summons was diſperſt. inviting the Citizens to aſſemble at Guildhall, on the 25th of March, to conſider it, as the Faction term'd it. The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen reſenting this audacious Attempt, order'd the Gates of Guild-Hall to be ſhut up, and acquainted the Government with what had paſt, upon which the Guards were doubled at St. James's Palace, Leiceſter-Houſe and Somerſet-Houſe, and ſuch wiſe Precautions were taken, as kept all Things quiet. This Spirit was ſuppos'd to have been rais'd by that of the Majority of the Common-Council, who had voted Thanks to Francis Child, Eſq. one of the Aldermen of the City, Richard Lockwood, Eſq. and John Barnard, Eſq. two of the Repreſentatives for their ſtrenuous Behaviour, in oppoſing the Bill. The diſperſing of the ſeditious Summons, occaſion'd the publiſhing a Paper with the Face of Authority, wherein 'tis ſaid, This unheard of Proceeding is juſtly ſuppos'd to be calculated to draw the Citizens to precipitate them into ſome Act to countenance the late Diſorder at Elections, which doubtleſs refers to the Election of Sheriffs and an Alderman for Cripplegate Ward, when Sir Felix Feaſt, was oppos'd in both, by Sir John Williams, whoſe Party were very riotous both at Guild-Hall and in the Ward.

On the 24th of March, his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the Malt Tax Bill, that for unrated Goods, and ſeveral other publick, and 14 private Acts.

I am under no Temptation to enlarge on the Impeachment and Trial of the Earl of Macclesfield, of whoſe Generoſity, particularly to Men of Learning and Genius, I cou'd give ſo many Inſtances, that wou'd go a good Way to clear him of the Charge of Avarice, but

A Motion about Advowſons rejected.

The Act about City Elections, raiſes a Mutiny in London.

A.D.1725 but the Articles againſt him prov'd ſtronger than his Lordſhip's Anſwer in the Judgment of the Houſe of Lords, in which 'tis every Briton's Duty to acquieſce.

Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, having deliver'd to Mr. Speaker his Majeſty's Meſſage, that he may be enabled to make Uſe of the Funds lately ſettled for the Payment of the Civil Liſt Annuities, and for replacing the ſame in his Majeſty in the moſt advantageous Manner, and upon the Credit thereof to raiſe a Sum ſufficient to redeem thoſe Annuities, and to diſcharge the preſent Debts contracted in his Civil Government, which amounted to 508000 l. The firſt Man that ſpoke againſt it was Mr. P——. Cofferer to his Majeſty's Houſhold, who ſaid, "He wonder'd "how ſo great a Debt cou'd be contracted in "three Years Time, but was not ſurpriz'd "ſome Perſons were ſo eager to have the "Deficiencies of the Civil Liſt made good, "ſince they and their Friends had ſo great a "Share in it." This Gentleman had known, ever ſince he had been in the Cofferers Office, that a large Penſion, was allow'd to the noble Lord who held it before him, purely to make a Vacancy in it for himſelf to fill up, but there was no Harm in this, nor in the other Penſions which had encreas'd the Civil Liſt, as long as he was humour'd in his other Expectations from the Court, but having met with ſome Diſappointment, he all at once fell off from the Party he had ſo heartily ſupported, even in the worſt of Times; and in a little while appear'd on the ſame Side with the Schiſm-Bill Men, the French-Commerce Bill Men, with the Confidents and Creatures of thoſe Miniſters, of whoſe Miniſtry he had ſo often declar'd an Abhorrence, and againſt whoſe Crimes he had vigorouſly promoted the moſt Capital Proſecution. It was obſerv'd in Anſwer to Mr, P——, what 'tis probable he knew as well as any Body: "That moſt of "the Penſions had been granted in King William's and Queen Anne's Reigns ſome by "King Charles II. and very few by his preſent Majeſty. That ſince the Civil Liſt "was firſt ſettled for his Majeſty, an Expence of about 90000 Pound per Annum, had happen'd, which could not then "be foreſeen, and therefore was left unprovided, that upon Examination of the Account given in of the Civil Liſt, it would "appear, that moſt of thoſe Expences were "either for the neceſſary Support of the Dignity of the Government, or for the publick "Good;" and it was reſolv'd, That for the redeeming of the Annuities of 25000 l. per Annum, charg'd on the Civil Liſt Revenues, and for the Diſcharge of the Debts and Arrears, due from his Majeſty to his Servants, Tradeſmen and Others, his Majeſty be enabled to raiſe any Sums, not exceeding one Million, by Exchequer Bills, Loans, or otherwiſe, at the Intereſt of 3 per Cent. This Vote was carry'd April 9th, by a Majority of 239 Voices, againſt 219. A Bill was brought in thereupon, which paſt both Houſes and had the Royal Aſſent 10 Days after, at which Time there happen'd an Event, which in its Conſequences has been fatal to the Peace of the Kingdom, which was the preſenting a Petition to the Houſe of Commons, in Behalf of Henry St. John, once Viſcount Bullingbroke, attainted for High Treaſon; and the Purport of this Petition was to ſuſpend the Execution of the Law with Reſpect to his Forfitures, as a Pardon ſuſpended it with reſpect to Life. As his Guilt was founded on Perjury and Treaſon, ſo was the Suſpenſion of his Puniſhment in Fraud and Credulity. The Fraud appears in his falſe Pretence to Penitence and Sorrow for his paſt Crimes. The Credulity is in the Readineſs with which ſome Wiſe and Great Men gave into it. It is fit to note, that after his Petition had been offer'd to the Houſe by the Lord Finch, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer acquainted them, that he had receiv'd His Majeſty's Command to acquaint them, "That the Petitioner had "ſeven Years ſince, made his humble Application and Submiſſion to his Majeſty, with "Aſſurance of Duty, Allegiance and Fidelity, "which His Majeſty ſo far accepted, as to "give him Encouragement to hope for ſome "future Marks of his Majeſty's Grace and "Goodneſs, and that His Majeſty is ſatisfy'd, "that the Petitioner's Behaviour has been ſuch "as convinces his Majeſty, that he is an Object of his Majeſty's Mercy, and his Majeſty "conſents that this Petition be preſented to "the Houſe." 'Tis certain this attainted Perſon had ſerv'd the Pretender Abroad to the utmoſt of his Power, and that he diſcover'd ſo much of his Deſigns, as loſt him the Confidence of that Maſter of his, and the Applauſe and Favour of his Adherents, who as well as good Britons, ſtuck not to ſay, He deſerv'd to be hang'd. I know not how far Sir Samuel Garth was inſtrumental in ſifting him of the Pretender's Secrets, but ſeveral Years before this Sir Samuel made a Tour to Paris, had Conference with him, and gave me, with others, a doleful Account of his Condition both in Body and Mind. He ſaid in his Petition, he was truly concern'd for his Offence, in running away, That he had in a moſt humble and dutiful Manner made his Submiſſion to his Majeſty, and given his Majeſty the ſtrongeſt Aſſurances of his inviolable Fidelity, and of his Zeal for his Majeſty's Service, and for the Support of the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, which his Majeſty hath been pleas'd moſt graciouſly to accept. Then comes the Prayer for a Bill that he might take and enjoy his Father, the Lord Viſcount St. John's Eſtate, and any Perſonal Eſtate he is, or ſhall be poſſeſt of. The Lord Finch mov'd, that a Bill be brought in purſuant to that Petition, and was ſeconded by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, whoſe Acquieſcence in this Meaſure, gave great Uneaſineſs to that honourable Perſon's beſt Friends, and among them, to the beſt Friends to our Country, againſt whoſe Opinion he did this good Office, for one who has employ'd the Opportunity, that was by this Bill put into his Hands, to defame, betray, and as far as in him lay, to deſtroy his generous Benefactor. Mr. Chancellor was pleas'd to ſay, "He was "fully ſatisfy'd, that the Petitioner had ſufficiently atton'd for his paſt Offences, and "therefore deſerv'd the Favour of that Houſe "ſo far, as to enable him to enjoy the Family "Inheritance that was ſettled upon him, "which according to the Opinion of the beſt "Lawyers, he could not do by Virtue of his "Majeſty's moſt gracious Pardon, without an "Act of Parliament." There was a ſmall Debate among the Lawyers about the Validity of

His Clandeſtine Negotiation of "Peace without the Privity of the Queen's "Allies, contrary to the expreſs Tenour of "the grand Alliance. His inſolent Behaviour "towards all the Confederates in general, "and the Dutch in particular. His ſacrificing "the Intereſt of the whole Confederacy, and "the Honour of his own Country particularly, in the baſe abandoning of the Poor and "Brave Catalans, a Tranſaction with which "he, Mr. Methnen, had an Opportunity to "be intimately acquainted, as having had "the Honour at that Juncture, to ſerve the "Nation as the Queen's Miniſter in Portugal, "And to ſum up all his CRIMES in one, his "TRAITEROUS Deſign of defeating the Proteſtant Succeſſion, the Foundation of both "our preſent and future Happineſs, and of "advancing a Popiſh Pretender to the Throne, "which would have involv'd his native Country in endleſs Miſery. This Speech made "a great Impreſſion on the Aſſembly, and ſeveral eminent Members ſpoke to the ſame "Effect, particularly Arthur Onſlow, Eſq. "Lord William Pawlet, Sir Thomas Pengelly, "Mr. Serjeant Miller, and Mr. Gybbon, &c." It wou'd give the Reader a juſt Idea of the true Characters of both the Petitioner and his Poet, if his Poetry in Praiſe of his Maſter's Heroick Virtue and Worth, was compar'd with this Speech in the moſt illuſtrious Aſſembly in the World. I am very unwilling to digreſs eſpecially when I am led into Egotiſms by it, but I could not forbear animadverting on the Profuſion of Flattery, which the Petitioner's Poet, as he calls himſelf, has laviſh'd upon him in ſome late Epiſtolary Libels and Lampoons upon others, infinitely ſuperior to his Maſter in Dignity and Merit, which has made it a Glory to me to be abus'd by him in ſuch honourable Company. And whereas He or *A.D.*1725 or Some body for him, to juſtify that Abuſe, pretends that I was the Aggreſſor, it ſhews that either he does not know or does not value the Difference between Criticiſm and Scandal. I charg'd ſome of his Writings with Affectation in an enormous Degree, which he did not nor cannot defend, and he takes his Revenge in Slander and Inſolence. I have not Leiſure nor Inclination to ſay more of him, but that I deſpiſe and deteſt his Practices as much as his Principles, and take Pride in the Enmity of one who by his Friendſhips and his Writings, ſhews himſelf to be an Enemy to his Country. But enough of him for the preſent, and perhaps for the future, my Health and my Affairs not permitting me to enter into Contention with one who has nothing to do but to flatter the Virulence of his Malice and the Wantonneſs of his Wit, without any Regard to Truth, Decency or Conſcience. Serjeant Miller made a conciſe pathetick Diſcourſe, wherein he ſaid, he was againſt Lord Finch's Motion, "For three very ſubſtantial Reaſons; Firſt, Serjeant Miller, againſt the Petition. "Becauſe he thought it againſt the Intereſt of "the King: Secondly, againſt the Intereſt of "his Country: Thirdly, againſt the Intereſt "of the Preſent Miniſtry. That he lov'd the "King better than he lov'd himſelf, and hated "his Enemies more than he did: That he "lov'd his Country as he lov'd himſelf, and "as he thought its Intereſt inſeparate from "the King's, ſo he would not have any publick Favour ſhewn to One who had acted "in ſo notorious a Manner againſt Both. And "as for the preſent Miniſters, he was ſo well "ſatisfy'd with their juſt, prudent and ſucceſsful Management, which Henry St. John, once Viſcount Bullingbroke, the Petitioner in the Libel, intitul'd, the Craftsman, has 100 Times reproach'd, as Corrupt, Weak and Unhappy, "That he would not ſee them ex"poſ'd to the Cabals and Intrigues of their "inveterate, tho' ſeemingly reconcil'd Ene"mies. On the other Hand Sir Thomas Hanmer ſpoke for the Motion, and in Praiſe of his Majeſty's Royal Clemency, and the Queſtion being put, it was carry'd in the Affirmative by 231 Voices againſt 113, and the Lord Finch and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, were order'd to bring in a Bill according to the Prayer of the Petition.

The Lords having by a Meſſage notify'd to the Commons, that they had appointed May 6th, for the Trial of the Earl of Macclesfield, the latter choſe Managers for it, and order'd Mr. Nicholas Paxton and Mr. Thomas Bayly, to be their Sollicitors. The Managers were,

Sir George Oxenden.	Sir John Ruſhout.
Sir Clement Wearge, Sollicitor General.	Edward Thompſon, Eſq.
Sir Thomas Pengelly, his Majeſty's Primier Serjeant at Law.	Phillip Gybbon, Eſq.
Sir William Strickland.	John Hodges, Eſq.

As

A.D.1724 As this Trial is in Print, and Peoples Curioſity about it pretty much worn off, I ſhall only add, That Judgment was given againſt the Earl of Macclesfield upon the Articles of Impeachment, by the Mouth of Sir Peter King, Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, who ſucceeded the Earl in his high Poſt of Lord Chancellor, That he be Fin'd 30000 Pounds, and Impriſon'd in the Tower till the Sum is paid: And the next Day, May 28. he was carried thither Priſoner, and confin'd in the ſame Apartment as was formerly the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer's. And May 29th His Majeſty in Council was pleas'd to order his Lordſhip's Name to be ſtruck out of the Liſt of the Lords of the moſt Honourable Privy Council. The Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, by Order of the Houſe, made an excellent Speech of Thanks to the Managers of the Impeachment, for faithful Management in their diſcharge of the Truſt repos'd in them.

We muſt now caſt an Eye on the Continent, where Events happen'd that are equally Curious and Important. The Duke of Orleans, Regent of France, either to aggrandize his own Family, or to perpetuate the Union of the French and Spaniſh Branches of the Houſe of Bourbon, projected and brought about three Intermarriages; his ſecond Daughter Mademoiſelle de Montpenſier was married to the Prince of Aſturia, afterwards King of Spain, on the Reſignation of Philip V. his Father. About the ſame time the French King, Lewis XV. was married to the Infanta of Spain, then not quite three Years old; and a Year after Mademoiſelle de Beaujalois, another Daughter of the Duke of Orleans, was married to Don Carlos, Infant of Spain by King Philip's ſecond Wife. The firſt Marriage was conſummated, but ſoon afterwards diſſolv'd by the Death of Lewis King of Spain, upon which his Father reſum'd the Crown, and in March this Year the French King declar'd his Reſolution to ſend back into Spain the Infanta, to whom he had been betroth'd during his Minority. This was ſo highly reſented by Philip V. that he reſolv'd to ſend back to France Mademoiſelle de Beaujalois, whoſe Marriage with the Infant Don Carlos was yet unconſummated; accordingly, on the 20th of March, N.S. that Princeſs ſet out from Madrid in order to return to Paris in Company with her Siſter the young Queen Dowager of Spain; and on the 5th the betrothed Wife of Lewis XV. ſet out from Verſailles to return to Madrid. The Marquis de Monteleone and Patrick Lawleſs, the Pretender's Agent with the Harleian Miniſtry, who both reſided at the French Court on the Part of King Philip, left Paris and attended the Infanta, and the Miniſters and Conſuls of France in Spain were order'd to depart. A.D.1724

French King ſend's his betroth'd Wife back to Spain.

This amazing Conduct in the Court of France cou'd not but be reſented in the moſt extraordinary manner by that of Spain; and in this diſpoſition 'twas no hard Matter for the German and Spaniſh Miniſters to accomodate the Differences between the Emperor and King Philip; the firſt motion towards which came from the latter, and was too readily hearken'd to by the former, who thought by that means to maintain the Charter granted to the Oſtenders for breaking in upon the Trade of the Engliſh and Dutch in the Eaſt-Indies, eſtabliſhed ſo many Years and by ſo many Treaties.

CHAP. VI.

From the Treaty of Vienna between the Emperor and King of Spain, to the Siege of Gibraltar.

Containing the ſpace of One Year and Seven Months.

THE Miniſters that negotiated, concluded, and ſign'd the Treaty of Vienna, were Prince Eugene of Savoy, Count Zinzendorf, and Count Staremberg, on the part of the Emperor; and on the part of the King of Spain the Baron de Ripperda, a Runagado Dutchman, and Proteſtant, whoſe Flatt'ring Schemes of Grandeur and Glory had acquir'd him the Confidence of King Philip. This ill-concerted Meaſure broke in a great degree the good Correſpondence that had been maintain'd between the Court of Vienna and that of Great-Britain ever ſince the happy Revolution, and did not a little alienate the Minds of the People of England and Holland from the Intereſts of the Houſe of Auſtria, to which they had been firmly attach'd during the two laſt Grand Alliances againſt France.

Treaty of Vienna.

In this Treaty of Peace, the end of holding the Congreſs at Cambray, was ſeemingly accompliſh'd, and the Miniſters of His Britannick Majeſty and the moſt Chriſtian King, who chiefly acted as Mediators, took their Leaves of the Imperial, Spaniſh, and other Plenipotentiaries, and ſo (adds my Author) that fruitleſs Aſſembly broke up.

Congreſs at Cambray breaks up.

In the mean time the late Viſcount Bolingbroke's Bill was paſſing in the Houſe of Commons, and the Lord William Pawlet mov'd in a Grand Committee for a Clauſe to diſable Henry St. John, late Viſcount Bolingbroke, to be a Member of either Houſe of Parliament, or to have or enjoy any Office, or any Place of Truſt or Profit under His Majeſty. This Motion was back'd by ſeveral Members, but was oppos'd by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, to produce another Inſtance of wonderful Generoſity in him, and wonderful Baſeneſs and Ingratitude in the late Viſcount; then the Lord William Pawlet's Motion being put to the Queſtion was carry'd in the Negative by 154 Voices againſt 84; and both Lords and Commons having paſs'd the Bill, it had the Royal Aſſent with other Bills, the 31ſt of May, at which time, after a moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne, the Parliament was

A.D 1724 prorogu'd to the first of July. The Earl of Coventry, the Earl of Warrington, and the Lord Lechmere, in their Protest against the Bill to enable Henry St. John, &c. to hold Lands, say, We think this Bill contains extraordinary and undeserv'd Bounty and Reward to a Person Impeach'd by the Commons, and as yet ATTAINTED for TREASON, which tended to the Overthrow of the Protestant Succession to the Crown of these Realms, and to the placing the Pretender on the Throne. The Duke of Wharton and the Earl of Scarsdale protested against the Bill; and the Earl of Coventry, the Earl of Bristol, the Lord Clinton, the Lord Lechmere, and the Lord Onslow, sign'd the following Reasons, May 24.

Lords Reasons in the Protest against Henry St. John's Bill.

'We have not been inform'd of any particular publick Services which this Person hath perform'd to His Majesty, or this Nation, since his Commission of the many high and dangerous Treasons before-mentioned; and in case he has done any, they must be of such a Nature, as ought (in our Opinions) to be rewarded in another manner than is provided by this Bill; and for which we think the Crown is otherwise sufficiently enabled; and the Sincerity of his having quitted the Interest of the Pretender, may (in our Opinions) be justly suspected, he never having, as appears to us, throughout the Progress of this Bill in both Houses, once signify'd his Sorrow for the Treasons he had committed; and if he had really abandon'd that Interest, his private Intelligences or Services, with regard to the Interest or Councils of the Pretender, can't reasonably be suppos'd (in our Opinions) to be of great Value.

'We think that no Assurances which this Person hath given, nor any Services he can have perform'd, since his Commission of the Treason aforesaid, or any further Obligations he can enter into, can be a sufficient (or any) Security to His Majesty, or the Kingdom, against his future Insincerity, which may happen, he having already so often violated the most solemn Assurances and Obligations; and, in Defence of them, having openly attempted the dethroning His Majesty, and the Destruction of the Liberties of his Country.

'We think the Services he may have perform'd, (if any) ought not to be rewarded either in the degree or manner provided by this Bill, it having been found by Experience, in Cases of like Nature, that the strongest Assurances have afterwards prov'd deceitful; for which Reason, we conceive it to be unwise and dangerous to give such Rewards as can't be recall'd, tho' the Assurances shou'd be broke, and we believe it to be the known Policy, and universal Practice of wise Governments, to keep the Persons (claiming Merit from such Services as the late Lord Bolingbroke can possibly have perform'd, since the Commission of his Treasons) dependant on the Government for the Continuance of those Rewards.

'The Pardon of the late Lord Bolingbroke under the great Seal, having been communicated to the House, and under Consideration, on the Debate of this Bill, we think that this Bill ought not to pass, because it may hereafter be construed in some degree to confirm or countenance that Pardon; and we are of Opinion, that that Pardon, tho' it may be legal as to the Treasons committed by him since his Attainder, yet so far as it may be construed (if that should ever be) to pardon or affect the Act of Attainder of the late Lord Bolingbroke, or the Impeachment of the Commons, on which that Act is founded, it is a most dangerous Violation of the Rights and Freedom of the Kingdom, and will defeat the whole Use and Effect of Impeachments by the Commons, which is (as we think) the chief Institution arising even from the Constitution it self, for the Preservation of the Government, and for the attaining parliamentary Justice; and tends, as we conceive, to render the Rights and Judicature of this House, on Impeachments and Bills of Attainder, vain and useless: All which ancient Rights of both Houses, and of the Subjects of this Nation, were saved to them by the Revolution, and were intended (as we conceive) to have been for ever preserv'd to them in their full Extent, by the Act passed in the Reign of the late King William, of ever glorious Memory, by which the Crown of these Realms is limited and settled on His present Majesty, and His Issue; and in which Act it stands declar'd, That no Pardon under the Great Seal shall be pleadable to an Impeachment of the Commons. A.D. 1724

'We are of Opinion, that the Power of disposing Mercy, is an inherent Right of the Crown of these Realms; and the Exercise of it of great Benefit to the People, when it is wisely and properly apply'd: But it being incumbent on us, in the Vote we give, for or against passing this Bill, to judge between the late Lord Bolingbroke, and to consider the Right and Title he appears to us to have to the Benefits of this Bill; and the Concern, which, on the other Side, the Honour, Interest and Safety of the King, and His Royal Family, and the whole Kingdom have, (in our Opinion) from the Consequences of it; we think we cannot be justify'd in our own Thoughts, with regard to the latter; or to our Posterity, if we should consent that this Bill shou'd pass.'

These noble Lords do here declare, this Henry St. John, late Viscount Bolingbroke, to be a frequent Violater of the most solemn Assurances, and to have attempted the Destruction of his Country: Yet this is the very Man to whom A. P. dedicates his Rhimes; as a Person only worthy of the immortal Fame which those Rhimes are to entitle him to.

Order of the Bath reestablished.

Four Days after this, His Majesty was pleas'd to reestablish the Order of Knights of the Bath; and to appoint His Grace the Duke of Montague to be the first great Master of the said Order; which His Majesty the same Day conferr'd on his Royal Highness Prince William, and put the Red-Ribband, having the Badge of the Order of the Bath, over his Shoulder; and His Royal Highness having kiss'd His Majesty's Hand, Garter King of Arms, was commanded to administer the Oath to the Duke of Montague, who took it kneeling; and then His Majesty put the like Ribband about His Grace's Neck: After which His Majesty Knighted several other Lords and Gentlemen. And on Thursday, the 17th of June, the Installation of the Knights Companions of the most honourable Order of the Bath, was perform'd in Westminster-Abbey, with the utmost Pomp, Solemnity, and Magnificence. These Knights and Esquires were:

A ſhort Account of the Lord King.

On the 28th of May, a Patent paſt the Seal for creating Sir Peter King, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, a Peer, by the Title of Lord King of Ocham, in the County of Surrey; and three Days after he was ſworn into the Office of Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain. This great Lawyer was deſign'd by his Father to follow his own Trade, that of a Salter, or Grocer, in the City of Exeter, and did actually ſerve ſeveral Years, as (or in the Nature of) an Apprentice to it; but his Genius to Learning breaking thro' the Diſadvantages of Education, diſcovered it ſelf in two or three very learned Treatiſes, of the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution, of the Creed, and Primitive Chriſtianity, which he wrote even while he was breeding up in the Trade of his Father; who being related to the Famous Philoſopher Mr. Locke, did, doubtleſs by the Advice of that great Man, enter his Son in the Temple, where he ſoon diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in the Study and Practice of the Law. His Father was a Native of Glaſtonbury in Somerſetſhire; and when the Charter of that ancient Corporation was reviv'd, in the Year 1705, Sir Peter King was

A.D.1724 was appointed their Recorder by it, and continu'd to his Death.

On the first of June, the Duke of Bolton, Daniel Lord Finch, Comptroller of His Majesty's Houshold, Sir Robert Eyre, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Henry Pelham, Esq; Secretary at War, were sworn of the Privy Council: Washington Earl Ferrers was made Lord Lieutenant of Staffordshire: And His Majesty declaring his Intention of going out of the Kingdom, was pleas'd to nominate the following Persons to be Lords Justices.

William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
Peter Lord King, Lord High Chancellor.
William Duke of Devon, Lord President.
Evelyn Duke of Kingston, Lord Privy-Seal.

Richard West, Esq; one of His Majesty's Council in the Law, was made Lord Chancellor of Ireland. Edward Thompson, Esq; one of the Commissioners of the Revenue in that Kingdom. Dr. William Burscough, Bishop of Limerick. John Viscount Darnley, Earl of Darnley, in the County of Meath, in the Kingdom of Ireland. William Bateman, Esq; Son of Sir James Bateman, of the City of London, Baron of Calmore, in the County of Londonderry, and Viscount Bateman. Brigadier Dormer was appointed Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Portugal.

On Thursday the 3d of June, about ten in the Forenoon, the King set out from St James's, and at about twelve, went on board the Carolina Yatcht at Greenwich; the Yatch fell down with the Tide to Gravesend, and from thence sail'd to the Nore, where Sir John Norris lay with the Squadron appointed to convoy His Majesty to Holland. The King sail'd up the Maese, Monday the 7th of June, came to Vaert, set out the next Day for Delden, and arriv'd at Osnabrug the 12th: His Majesty staid there the 13th with his Royal Brother the Duke of York, and came the next Night to his Palace at Hieren-Hausen in good Health. The King goes to Hanover.

On Thursday the 16th of June, the most Noble the Duke of Richmond, and the Noble and Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, were installd Knights of the Garter, with the usual Ceremonies, and extraordinary Magnificence, in the Chappel Royal at Windsor. Sir Robert Walpole installd Knight of the Garter.

About this Time News came from France, that as the Duke of Bourbon was preparing to follow the Young King to Rambouillet, June 1st, N. S. he was prevented by a Letter under the Privy Seal, which was brought him by the Duke De Charost, Captain of the Guard, containing an Order from His Majesty to go to Chantelly, his Highness's Seat, and there to stay till His Majesty's farther Orders. In a few Moments after, the Count De St. Florentine, Secretary of State, went to acquaint him, that His Majesty had resolv'd to take the Government into his own Hands; which accordingly he did, the 16th of June, in a Council of State at Versailles, to whom he made a Speech suitable to the Occasion. This Revolution in the Ministry in France, was generally suppos'd to be owing to the Intrigues of the Court of Spain, who cou'd never forgive the sending back the Infanta, which they imputed to the Influence of the Duke of Bourbon on the Counsels of France. The Bishop of Frejus, the Young King's Preceptor, had doubtless a very great Hand in this Measure, to gratify the strong Inclination which he had to change the Ministry in the Church, for that of the State, where he became prime; and assur'd Mr. Horatio Walpole, the British Ambassador at Paris, 'That the Alterations in the Court of France, 'instead of making any in the Measures taken 'with the King of Great Britain, pursuant to 'the Treaty of Hanover, would rather tend 'to the Execution of that Treaty.' But the Steps that have been since taken in that Court, show, from the Removal of the Duke of Bourbon to this Time, the Cordiality of the Correspondence kept up with the Court of Great Britain, by the Dukes of Orleans and Bourbon, who best understood, and best pursu'd, the true Interest of that Nation, was more in Form than in Substance. Duke of Bourbon removd from the Administration of Affairs in France.

A Letter

A.D.1724 A Letter under the Privy Seal from His Britannick Majeſty to the Duke of Wharton, commanding him upon his Allegiance, to return forthwith to Great Britain, being carry'd to Madrid by Mr. Crew the Meſſenger, and June 31, deliver'd to him in a Coach, which he had order'd to ſtop, as he was paſſing one of the Streets of the Town: As ſoon as he was told the Contents of it, he flung the Letter from him out of the Coach, and made great Clamour at the executing a Summons upon him by a Britiſh Officer of Juſtice, even in the Sight of his Catholick Majeſty's Palace. He alſo gave out, that he would preſent a Memorial upon it to the King of Spain, and demand Juſtice againſt the King's Meſſenger that brought him the Letter: Which Colonel Stanhope, the Britiſh Miniſter at Madrid, hearing, his Excellency ſent his Secretary to the Marquis De Paz, to acquaint him with it. The Marquis promiſed to repreſent the Matter to his Catholick Majeſty, and deſir'd the Secretary to return to him the next Morning; when he aſſur'd him that the King of Spain knew nothing of the ſaid Memorial, but had been inform'd of what had paſt with relation to the Delivery of the ſaid Letter of Privy Seal; and would not in any manner interpoſe his Authority in Oppoſition to that Proceeding. 'Tis probable this pretended Memorial was only an Air the Duke gave himſelf to diſguiſe the Mortification of receiving ſuch a Summons; or, if there was ſuch a Thing, that the Court of Spain thought it a Trifle not worth taking notice of.

Duke of Wharton's inſolent Behaviour at Madrid.

Before His Majeſty embark'd for Holland, a new Commiſſion was iſſu'd, for the Management of the Exciſe. The Commiſſioners, George Townſhend, Chriſtopher Montagu, John Whetham, Roger Gale, Benjamin Mildmay, Richard Elliot, George Ducket, Patrick Haldane, and Charles Polhill, Eſqs;. Charles Dartiquenave, Eſq; was appointed Surveyor of His Majeſty's Gardens and Waters belonging to the Royal Palace. John King, Eſq; Son to the Lord Chancellor, Out-Ranger of His Majeſty's Foreſt at Windſor. Thomas Martin, Eſq; one of the Juſtices of North-Wales. John Willes, of Lincolns-Inn, Eſq; ſecond Judge of Cheſter, Anthony Lowther, Eſq; Commiſſioner of the Revenue in Ireland. The Earl of Clanrickard, the Earl of Kerry, the Lord Newton Butler, the Lord Duncannon, the Lord Southwel, Sir Robert Maude, Sir Thomas Taylor, and Major General Wynne, were ſworn of the Privy Council in that Kingdom.

The Scots, ever ſince the Union, have very unwillingly paid any of the Taxes that have been laid on the united Kingdom; and have behav'd on all ſuch Occaſions, as if they thought themſelves injur'd, when they were oblig'd to contribute any thiug towards the publick Expence. The Enemies to the Government fail'd not to feed this ill Humour of theirs; and under Colour of Zeal for the old Conſtitution, to ſet the People againſt that which was now eſtabliſh'd. The Malt Tax was clamour'd againſt more than any thing, and it was forſeen that it would not be collected without Peril to the Officers. At Edinburgh indeed the Exciſe Men were ſuffer'd to take an Account of the Maltſters Stock in Hand; but thoſe at Glaſgow were oblig'd to apply to the Commiſſioners of the Exciſe at Edinburgh for Protection and Aſſiſtance, their Lives being threaten'd, if they offer'd to viſit the Malthouſes. The Commiſſioners apply'd to Major General Wade, Commander in Chief of His Majeſty's Forces in Scotland, who on the 23d of June ſent Captain Buſhel with two Companies of Soldiers to Glaſgow, where they arriv'd the next Day in the Evening. At their Entrance into the Town, they found a great Mob of Men, Women, and Boys, who gave them abuſive Language, and threw Stones at them, as they march'd along the Sereets, crying out, No Malt Tax. The Officer deſired them to forbear, for he meant them no Harm. The Provoſt gave him Billets for quartering his Men; but told him, he could not put him in Poſſeſſion of the Guard-Room, becauſe the Rabble had lock'd it up, and carry'd away the Key, as ſoon as they heard the Soldiers were coming. The Officer, unwilling to exaſperate them by forcing open the Door, order'd the Guard to be kept at a publick Houſe, which they hir'd for that Purpoſe. About eleven a-Clock that Night, ſeveral Thouſands of the Mob got together about the Houſe of Mr. Daniel Campbell, Repreſentative in Parliament for Glaſgow, threatening to plunder it: Upon which Captain Buſhel ſent an Officer to the Provoſt, letting him know the Miſchief they deſign'd to commit; and that he was ready with his Men to aſſiſt him, in preventing it: But his Anſwer was, He thought the Number of his Soldiers too few, and therefore he would make no Uſe of them. This Anſwer was look'd upon as evaſive, tho' in Truth 100 Men were not likely to prevent the Miſchief which ſome Thouſands of Men were ready to commit. So the Rabble finding no Oppoſition, not ſo much as the Preſence of the Magiſtrate to reſtrain their Fury, with Hatchets, and other Inſtruments, forc'd into Mr. Campbell's Houſe, turn'd out two or three of Mr. Campbell's Servants, he, with his Wife, having the Day before retir'd to his Country Seat, and fell to plundering ev'ry thing they could carry away: Having ſeiz'd the ready Money, Plate, Jewels, Furniture, and Moveables of all Kinds, they demoliſh'd the Floors, Wainſcotting, and all the Timber Work of the Houſe; pull'd down in part the Roof, and alſo defac'd and broke the Statues, and deſtroy'd the Trees and Hedges in the Garden. This Riot continu'd till nine the next Morning, when ſeveral of the Rabble were lying drunk in the Houſe, with the Wine and Liquors they found in the Cellars; but the Magiſtrates took no Care to get any of them ſecur'd. The Officers of the Exciſe hid themſelves as well as they could; ſome of them fell into the Hands of the Mob, and had much ado to eſcape with Life, after having been unmercifully beaten. The Rabble were then pretty quiet, till about four in the Afternoon, when they began to meet again; Women, or Men in Womens Cloaths, beating Drums about the Streets to call them together. Captain Buſhel not knowing what their Deſigns might be, order'd the Soldiers to be near the Guard-Room, which the Provoſt had now caus'd to be open'd: But the Mob did not long keep their Secret; for they advanc'd towards the Guard, ſaying, Their next Buſineſs was with the Soldiers. They gather'd from all Quarters of the City, and threw Stones at the Soldiers, crying, Drive the Dogs out of Town. We'll cut them to pieces. The Officer ſaid again, We mean you no Harm. But if you continue to provoke the Soldiers, we ſhall not be able to reſtrain them from firing at you.

The Riot at Glaſgow.

A.D. 1724 you. The Rabble anſwer'd, You dare not fire with Ball; and continu'd throwing Stones in ſuch Quantities, and ſo large, that they broke ſome of the Locks of the Soldiers Pieces, and their Bayonets, and wounded ſeveral Men. Upon which they were order'd to fire over the Heads of the Mob to frighten them; but they advanc'd ſtill upon the Soldiers, and throwing Stones in greater Quantities, the Soldiers at laſt fir'd on them, and kill'd or wounded three or four; which made them retire to ſome Diſtance. In this ſhort Interval, the Provoſt ſent to Captain Buſhel, deſiring him to ſave himſelf and Men, by retreating out of the Town; for the Rioters were collecting all the Arms they could; and if he did not march away, there would be more Blood ſhed. The Captain taking his Advice, march'd immediately for Dunbarton, being follow'd by great Numbers of the Mob, and that ſo cloſely, that he was forc'd to fire now and then to ſecure his Retreat out of the Town. Three or four Hundred of them followed him ſix Miles; but they durſt not come up with him. He ſent an Officer from Dunbarton to Edinburgh, to give Major General Wade an Account of what had happen'd: And, on the 8th of July, the Major General, accompany'd by Duncan Forbes, Eſq; Lord Advocate, ſet out from Edinburgh, and at Noon the next Day join'd a Body of Forces that had been order'd to draw together on a Moor within two Miles of Glaſgow, conſiſting of four Troops of Horſe, and a Detachment of Colonel Campbell's Dragoons; eight Companies of the Earl of Deloraine's Regiment of Foot: The Earl of Stairs's Regiment; and one of the new rais'd Highland Companies. The Major General wrote a Letter to the Magiſtrates to let them know he was coming; and the next Day, about two a-Clock in the Afternoon, enter'd the Town; the Troops advancing with Silence and good Order; and they were diſtributed into Quarters without any Diſturbance. The two following Days the Exciſemen were ſet to take an Account of the Maltſters Stock in Hand, and had quiet Admittance. The Rioters having endeavour'd by circular Letters to every Town of any Note to excite Tumults, the Mob roſe, July 9th, at Elgin, attack'd in the Night Time three Soldiers, who were poſted Centinels at a Shop, wherein was lodg'd a Quantity of Brandy, that had been ſeiz'd by the Cuſtom Houſe Officers, and oblig'd the Soldiers to fire in their own Defence, by which one of the Rabble was kill'd: The Soldiers being overpower'd, were put in Priſon, by the Magiſtrates; and the Mob immediately carry'd off the Brandy. The Maltſters at Glaſgow comply'd with the Terms of the Act of Parliament. Many of the Rioters were ſeiz'd; moſt of them mean Perſons. Near 100 Witneſſes were examin'd; but little or nothing was found againſt them; it was all laid on thoſe that were fled, and on Strangers. General Wade, and the Lord Advocate, having ſtaid a Week at Glaſgow, return'd to Edinburgh. The Lord Advocate committed 17 Men and Boys, and 4 Women, to Priſon. The Provoſt, Bailies, Dean of Guild, and Deacon Conveener, were alſo apprehended, and the next Day, under a ſtrong Guard of Dragoons, ſent to Edinburgh. When they came near the City, there was a vaſt Concourſe of People, at ſuch an unuſual and unexpected Sight, beſides a great many Merchants, and Men of Note, on Horſeback, who went out to meet them; and accompany'd them to the Priſon Door; the Glaſgow Magiſtrates being in Coaches. They did not continue long under Confinement: For this Affair being brought before the Lords Juſticiary, they were unanimous in their Opinions that they were Innocent; upon which they were immediately ſet at Liberty; and have ſince behav'd with more Prudence and Activity. It was reported that the whole Royal Boroughs of Scotland, had come to a Reſolution to ſtand out againſt Payment of the Malt Tax: But they were ſo far from doing it, that the Convention being aſſembled at Edinburgh, the 7th of July, they reſolv'd to write a circular Letter to each of the Royal Boroughs, to be ſent by Expreſs, teſtifying the Falſhood of that ſcandalous Report, and their Abhorrence of the Thought of reſiſting or not paying due Obedience to the Law, which has enacted the levying of that Tax, exhorting the Magiſtrates and Governors of each Royal Borough, to concur vigorouſly with the Officers of the Revenue in the Execution of the Laws relating thereto; and in ſuppreſſing of all Mobs, Riots, and Tumultuous Aſſemblies; and requiring them every where to uſe all Diligence for the Diſcovery of the Authors of ſuch malicious Reports and ſeditious Practices, and to acquaint the annual Committee of the Convention therewith, that the Offenders may be proſecuted, and brought to deſerv'd Puniſhment, at the Suit of the Convention, as Diſturbers of the publick Peace. A.D. 1724

On the 21ſt of July, the Earl of Macclesfield paid into His Majeſty's Exchequer, the Fine of 30000 l. to which he ſtood condemn'd by the Houſe of Lords; and was thereon diſcharg'd from his Confinement in the Tower of London. A Month afterwards, an Order was made in the Court of Chancery, that Application be made to the Lords of the Treaſury, that the 30000 l. paid into the Exchequer by the Earl of Macclesfield, be applied to the Benefit of the Suitors in the Court of Chancery, and Earl of Macclesfield's Fine paid into the Treaſury.

A.D.1724 and to make good the Deficiencies of the Maſters, when the ſame ſhall be known; and in the mean time the ſaid Sum be put out at Intereſt, upon Government Security; which Application having accordingly been made, the Lords of the Treaſury comply'd with the Lord Chancellor's Propoſal.

The South-Sea Company having reſolv'd to carry on a Whale Fiſhery, they had very good Succeſs in it this Year, their Ships taking 25 Whales and half, more than the Ships of any other Nation took this Seaſon: The following Liſt was then publiſh'd.

	Ships.	Maſters.	Whales.

Theſe Whales produc'd about 1000 Puncheons of Train Oil, and 21 Tons of Whale Fins: Upon which Encouragement the Directors of the South-Sea Company reſolv'd to build 12 Ships more, to be employ'd next Spring in the ſame Fiſhery: But the Trade did not anſwer in the ſucceeding Seaſons.

Foreign Affairs at this Time did not engage much Attention. The Interceſſion of the Proteſtant Powers procured no Satisfaction, for the Murders and Plunderings committed by the Papiſts at Thorn. The States General wrote a preſſing Letter to the Emperor, in behalf of the poor Sufferers there; and their Ambaſſador at Vienna, Monſieur Bruyninx, inforc'd the Contents of it by Word of Mouth. The Anſwer to it was fair enough in Expreſſion, but it had no Effect. Their High Mightineſſes wrote alſo to the King of Poland, in favour of the diſtreſt Proteſtants of that Kingdom: But the Poles, whom the Pope promis'd to aſſiſt, not only with his Bleſſings, but his Purſe, wou'd hear of no Accommodation; inſiſting upon it, that what had been done at Thorn, was altogether uniform to the Laws and Conſtitution of their Kingdom.

We have mention'd His Majeſty's ſafe Arrival at Hieren-Hauſen, where he was complimented upon it by the Count De Plattenburg, Miniſter from the Elector of Cologne; by the Count De Traches, on the part of the King of Pruſſia; and by the Baron De Huncken, whom the Duke De Blanckenburg, the preſent Empreſs's Father, ſent thither on this Occaſion. The Duke of Wolfenbuttel, who was then at Hamburgh, diſpatch'd a Perſon of Diſtinction from thence on the ſame Account. The King went to Pyrmont Midſummer-day to drink the Waters, and was attended there by divers of the Engliſh and German Nobility, and foreign Miniſters; particularly the Count De Broglio, Ambaſſador from France. The Prince of Waldeck, came to Pyrmont with all his Court, to compliment His Majeſty on his Arrival in his Highneſs's Dominions; and the next Day that Prince entertain'd the Lord Townſhend, and the Officers attending His Majeſty, in a moſt magnificent manner. The King return'd to Hieren-Hauſen the 11th of July, where the Syndic of Bremen paid the Compliments of that City to His Majeſty. The King of Pruſſia arriv'd there five Days after, accompany'd by General Gerſdorf, Colonel Dockum, Colonel Krocker, Monſieur Engel, Secretary of the Cabinet, and ſeveral Lords of his Court. It is not to be doubted, but his Pruſſian Majeſty came thither to concert, with the King of Great Britain, proper Meaſures to guard againſt the dangerous Deſigns of the Princes, engag'd in the Treaty of Vienna, concluded in April laſt: And that it was at this Time and Place that the Treaty of Hanover, between the King of Great Britain, the moſt Chriſtian King, and the King of Pruſſia, was reſolv'd upon. A.D.1724

His Britannick Majeſty appointed General Schulembourg, Mr. Faboicius, Mr. Wangenheim, Gentleman of his Bedchamber, and Mr. Hardenburg, to attend his Pruſſian Majeſty, during his Stay at Hieren-Hauſen. His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, and the Young Prince of Waldeck, came alſo to Hieren-Hauſen; as did ſeveral other Princes and Lords of Germany, which made the Court very numerous; which was ſtill encreas'd by the Arrival of Engliſh Noblemen and Gentlemen, who, being on their Travels, came to Hieren-Hauſen to pay their Duty to His Majeſty; as the Earl of Radnor, the Lord Graham, Lord Harry Brydges, and others. The King of Pruſſia ſtaid at Hanover till the 8th of Auguſt, and a Week after return'd to Berlin. The Queen of Pruſſia, Daughter to the King of Great Britain, arriv'd at Hieren-Hauſen, accompany'd by the Counteſs of Finkenſtein, Madamoiſelle De Bulan, Madamoiſelle De Grumcken, and other Ladies. Her Majeſty was ſo charm'd with her Stay at Hieren-Hauſen, that, after ſhe had been there ten Days, ſhe ſent an Expreſs to the King of Pruſſia, to deſire Leave to ſtay there a Fortnight longer. Thither came Prince William, and Prince George of Heſſe-Caſſel; and in the Conferences which were held there, between the Lord Viſcount Townſhend and the Count De Broglio, that Treaty was concluded, which goes by the Name of Hanover; and was form'd to be a Ballance to the Alliance between the Courts of Vienna and Madrid. Treaty of Hanover.

His Majeſty having been pleas'd to grant a Charter for erecting a College, by the Name of St. Paul's College, in the Iſles of Bermeudas, to conſiſt of a Preſident, and nine Fellows, George Berkeley, D.D. Dean of Derry in Ireland, was declar'd the Firſt Preſident; and the three Firſt Fellows were, William Thompſon, A.M. Jonathan Rogers, A.M. and James King, A.M. of Trinity College near Dublin. The Deſign was equally pious and generons for the Education of Youth, to qualify them to ſupply the Churches in the Britiſh Colonies in America with Preachers. But as to converting the Indians to Chriſtianity, if our Miſſionaries do not behave better than they have hitherto done, what the Indians of New-York ſaid to Brigadier Hunter, Governor of that Province, That they wanted Blackſmiths more than Miniſters, will perhaps be their Opinion, for another Age or two. That the French Miſſionaries ſucceed better than the Engliſh, is certainly not owing to the Truth of their Religion, but to the Facility of their Converſion; for which there's nothing neceſſary but hearing Maſs,

A.D.1724 Maſs, and telling Beads; and all Heart-Work is out of the Queſtion. About this Time Advice came from Rome, of a wonderful Miracle wrought by the Pope; which probably will be made Uſe of, on a proper Occaſion, to procure him a Saintſhip. The Pope Benedict XIII, going to viſit the Sick in the Hoſpital of the Holy Ghoſt, came to a Perſon whoſe Leg was going to be cut off; and who ſeeing his Holineſs, beg'd of him to order the ſuſpending the Operation; which he did, and bleſs'd the Leg; and from that Time the Leg grew better and better, till it was a perfect Cure; and the lame Man walk'd up and down the Streets of Rome, as well as ever he cou'd do, to the Admiration and Edification of the whole City.

Mr. Finch, His Majeſty's Miniſter at Dreſden, having receiv'd Orders to go to Poland, and preſs the Negotiations for Satisfaction to the Proteſtants of Thorn, and other Places in that Kingdom, oppreſs'd by the Papiſts, the Miniſters at Warſaw, upon Information of it, held Conference in the King's Palace, wherein it was reſolv'd, to diſpatch a Perſon to meet him, to deliver him his Recredentials, and ſave him the Trouble of proceeding in his Journey. Accordingly Mr. Mocki, Secretary of the Privy Seal, was diſpatch'd with a Letter to Mr. Finch, from the High Chancellors of Poland and Lithuania; and having met this Miniſter at Rech, he deliver'd him thoſe Letters. Mr. Finch anſwer'd the Meſſenger from thoſe two Chancellors on the Spot, that he would ſend their Reſolutions to the King his Maſter, by an Expreſs; but as he was indiſpenſably oblig'd to follow His Britannick Majeſty's Orders, he would purſue his Journey to Warſaw, there to ſtay till the next general Diet of that Kingdom. He arriv'd there the 22d of Auguſt, N. S. and People were not without Hopes, that ſome Good at laſt might come of the Interceſſion of ſo many Powers in behalf of the Proteſtants of Thorn. Prince Dolhornsky, the Ruſſian Ambaſſador, among his Demands of the Republick of Poland, incerted this Article: That an entire Satisfaction be given to the Proteſtants, as well in regard to the free Exerciſe of their Religion, as to what has been taken by Force from them; as alſo concerning the Affairs of Thorn, ſo that every Thing be reſtor'd upon the ancient Foot. But the moſt that was made of this, and other Interceſſions, was the Fright it put the Aſſeſſorial Tribunal in, who paſt Sentence againſt Thorn; and were told, that the Drift of the Proteſtant Powers in their Demands, was to have that Sentence declar'd unjuſt and partial, in the next Diet; and to make the Members of the ſaid Tribunal anſwer for it; upon which they preſented a Memorial to the King of Poland, to hinder him from giving Ear to ſuch Demands; which would tarniſh His Majeſty's Glory, and ſubvert the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom; for maintaining of which, there was no body but would readily ſacrifice his Life and Fortune.

The Poles will not give Satisfaction to Thorn.

About this Time all Europe was ſurpriz'd with News from France, that the Young King had contracted Marriage with the Princeſs Mary, Daughter to Staniſlaus, once King of Poland; in which the French Miniſters ſeem'd to have acted a ſincere part for their Maſter's and his Kingdom's Intereſt, by getting him a Wife who promis'd well for Child bearing; which was the ſureſt Way to prevent a long and fatal Conteſt about the Succeſſion to the Crown, had the Competition lain between the Houſe of Orleans in France, and that of Anjou in Spain; which would doubtleſs have enſu'd, had Lewis the XVth dy'd without Children. The Princeſs Mary was of a Conſtitution which gave great Hopes of long Life and Iſſue: And, beſides her Family was not conſiderable enough to give the Princes of the Blood Jealouſy, in Caſe of another Minority, or the Continuance in the Adminiſtration, which no body ſuppos'd Lewis XVth wou'd ſoon take into his own Hands, for Reaſons not delicate enough for Hiſtory. The Contract for this Marriage was ſign'd by Proxy in July: In which Month King Staniſlaus was choſen Knight of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, the principal Order in France, as abſurd, and as contradictory to Chriſtianity and common Senſe, as it is to ſay, A Knight of the Holy Spirit; a Spirit of Meekneſs and Purity. The Duke D'Antin was ſent with the Badge of the Order to King Staniſlaus, at Stratsbourg, where the Cardinal De Rohan took his Profeſſion of Faith. The ſame Duke D'Antin, and the Marquis De Beauvais, were appointed the French King's Ambaſſadors Extraordinary to demand the Princeſs Mary of her Father, King Staniſlaus, in Form; which they did the 4th of Auguſt, N. S. and on the 9th the King ſign'd the Contract of his Marriage with the Princeſs Mary, in his Cloſet at Verſailles: And it was alſo ſign'd by the Dutcheſs of Orleans, and the Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood. The Count De Tarlo, commiſſion'd for that Purpoſe, with full Powers from King Staniſlaus, and his Daughter, ſign'd it in like manner. The Duke of Orleans was at Stratsbourg, the moſt Chriſtian King's Proxy for the Marriage; the Ceremony of which was perform'd by the Cardinal De Rohan, in the Cathedral of that City.

The French King's Marriage with King Staniſlaus Daughter.

Some Days before, came Advice from Ireland, of his Excellency the Lord Carteret's celebrating the Firſt of Auguſt with equal Splendor and Joy. The Lord Lieutenant, attended by the Nobility and Gentry, went in State to Chriſt-Church in Dublin, where a Sermon was preach'd by the Biſhop of Limerick: After which there was a noble Entertainment at the Caſtle. The Day begun with ringing of Bells: At Noon the Great Guns at the Barracks were ſeveral Times diſcharg'd; and were anſwer'd by Vollies from the Regiments drawn out in Oxman Town Green for that Purpoſe: And the Night concluded with Bonefires and Illuminations. As his Excellency ſhew'd in this the juſt Senſe he had of our Deliverance on that Day, by His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, from the Dangers that threaten'd us, ſo did his Lordſhip ſhew the like Senſe of our Prior Deliverance from the Dangers of Popery and Slavery, by the like happy Acceſſion of King William, of glorious and immortal Memory. On the 10th of Auguſt, the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the Lord Chancellor, and ſeveral others of the Nobility and Gentry, attended by a Troop of Horſe, came to Drogheda, and were receiv'd at Dublin Gate by the Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen, in their Formalities: The Keys of the Town were preſented to his Excellency; as was alſo the Inſtrument of his Freedom, in a Gold Box, with his Arms finely engrav'd. The Recorder made a very handſome Speech; and the ſame Preſent

Lord Carteret Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Journey to the Boyne.

A.D.1724 Preſent to the Lord Chancellor. Their Lordſhips were from thence attended to the Lord Primates, where his Excellency lodg'd, the Garriſon being under Arms. After a ſhort Stay the Lord Lieutenant walk'd to the Tholſel, where a ſplendid Entertainment was prepar'd for him; and the Aldermen waited at Dinner in their Gowns. The Day concluded with Illuminations, Bonefires, and other Demonſtrations of Joy. The next Day his Excellency, with his Grace the Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor, and the ſame noble Company, went to ſee the Ground on the Banks of the Boyne, where our Great Deliverer King William III, routed the Iriſh and French Army, under the Command of the late King James II. He din'd with the Lord Ferrard at Baanlin; and return'd to Drogheda in the Evening. The next Day being Sunday, his Excellency went to Church, the Mayor carrying the Sword; and after Sermon din'd with the Counteſs of Fingal, on his Way to Dublin.

About this Time, His Grace the Duke of Roxburgh reſign'd his Place of Secretary.

Mention hath been made of the Treaty of Commerce, lately concluded at Vienna, between the Emperor and the King of Spain; on which Foundation the Oſtend Eaſt-India Comprny was eſtabliſh'd; and againſt which the Dutch, Eaſt, and Weſt-India Companies deliver'd Remonſtrances to the States General, proving the ſaid Treaty of Commerce to be a notorious Infraction of the 5th Article of the Treaty of Weſtphalia, and the 10th Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, between Spain and the united Provinces. By the latter, both thoſe Powers oblig'd themſelves not to transfer the Right of Trading to the Eaſt-Indies, or make another Nation Partaker thereof, without the Concurrence and Conſent of the other two contracting Powers: And the Treaty of Commerce concluded at Vienna, being made without ſuch Concurrence, it was a plain Violation of the Treaty of Utrecht, as well as that of Weſtphalia; which proves that the Emperor and King of Spain, were the Aggreſſors in the Diſputes that aroſe upon the Concluſion of the Vienna Treaty of Commerce, and the eſtabliſhing the Oſtend Company, more favour'd by that Treaty, than the Subjects of the States General, directly contrary to all Treaties of Commerce, between the Catholick King, and their High Mightineſſes. Thus the Argument that the Emperor, as Sovereign of the Auſtrian Netherlands, might grant what Privileges he pleas'd to his Subjects of thoſe Provinces, and what he could procure from the King of Spain for them, was falſe and groundleſs; being contrary to ſo many ſolemn Treaties then ſubſiſting. The third Article of the Treaty between Great Britain, France, and Pruſſia, concluded at Hieren-Hauſen, the third of September, ſeems to be a Precaution againſt the ill Effects of the Vienna Treaty.

The Oſtend East India Company a Breach of Treaties.

The contracting Powers, promiſe and engage their mutual Guaranty for all their reſpective Dominions and Countries, as well in Europe, as in the other Parts of the World, not only to preſerve the Advantages, Privileges, and the Trade, they are at this Time poſſeſt of, but alſo thoſe which they may enjoy hereafter; binding themſelves to uſe their good Offices to ſee Juſtice done in Caſe of Need, to the injur'd Party; and, as Guarantees of the Treaty of Oliva, to procure Reparation for what has been done contrary to it. His Britannick Majeſty wrote a Letter to the King of Sweden, to examine the Contents of the ſaid Treaty, and concur by all convenient Ways to procure the End propos'd thereby, which is the maintaining of the Treaties of Weſtphalia and Oliva. About a Fortnight after the Concluſion of the Treaty between the three Kings, Mr. Finch, the Britiſh Envoy in Poland, had a private Audience of that King, which he had not been able to obtain in ſome Weeks before. It will appear, by the Anſwer of the States General to the Repreſentations of their Eaſt and Weſt India Companies, that the Treaty between the three Kings was concluded with the View I have already mention'd. 'They have order'd their Miniſters 'at the Imperial Court, to renew their Inſtan-'ces with more Vigour than ever, in Hopes 'their Majeſties, the Kings of Great Britain 'and France, will ſend the like Orders to their 'Miniſters at Vienna, for obtaining ſuch a de-'ſirable End; the rather, ſince thoſe two Pow-'ers have mutually engag'd, by the Treaty con-'cluded at Hanover, to reſtore every thing up-'on the Foot of the Treaty of Weſtphalia.'

The Treaty of Hanover between the Kings of Great Britain, France, and Pruſſia

A.D.1724

The wiſe Meaſures His Britannick Majeſty took to prevent one Power's injuring another, to preſerve the Ballance and Peace of Europe, were the common Subject of Approbation, and Applauſe, in Germany, where the Emperor had not entire Influence, in France, Holland, and the North; and in Great Britain, excepting only that ungrateful Faction, which His Majeſty ſpoke of in his Speech to the Parliament, and a few diſguſted, becauſe diſcarded, Countries, who diſliking every body in Employment, diſlik'd every thing they did.

The Faction againſt the Treaty of Hanover.

The moſt remarkable Vote in the Journal of the Parliament of Ireland, is the Order to bring in a Bill to enable John Lord Viſcount Moleſworth, Richard Moleſworth, William Moleſworth, Edward Moleſworth, Walter Moleſworth, Coote Moleſworth, and Byſſe Moleſworth, Eſqs; all Brothers, to make Leaſes of Lands near St. Stephen's Green, and Dawſon Street, in Dublin.

Every Thing remain'd quiet in Scotland, where General Wade, for the farther Security of that Country, diſarm'd the Highlanders, Mackenzies, Mackdonalds, Grants of Glemoriſton, Mack-Leods, Chiſholms, Stewarts, Camerons, Mac-Pherſons, Mackintoſhes, Mac-Gregers, Gordons, Farquharſons, Mac-Farlans, and other Clans, their Tribes and Followers, as alſo the Inhabitants of the Iſles of Sky and Mull, the Arms amounting to between 2 and 3000. The Companies of Soldiers left in the Highlands, were ſo poſted, that they poſſeſs'd all the conſiderable Paſſes, and thereby prevented the Stealing of Cattle.

The Scots Highlanders diſarm'd.

The Rioters at Glaſgow were brought to their Trial before the Court of Juſticiary, of which the Earl of Ilay was Chief; and Walter Buchanan, William Hamilton, George Macfarlan, Patrick Mitchell, being found guilty of the Riot, were ſentenc'd to be ſcourg'd at Glaſgow, by the common Hangman, and afterwards tranſported. Balleny, a Woman concern'd in the Riot, being convicted, was ſentenc'd to ſtand twice in the Pillory in that City.

One cannot too much or too often inculcate the Principles of Toleration in Religion, nor do it better than by the Example of a

A.D. 1724 great and wise Republick, such as the States of the united Provinces; to whom the Republick of Venice having apply'd by way of Intercession, in favour of some Papists in their Dominions, who had been at Variance with other Papists there, about the Choice of an Archbishop of Utrecht, which the Pope look'd upon as an Encroachment on his Supremacy, (dearer to him than all the Articles of Faith and Religion) and desir'd the Venetians to interpose their good Offices in that Affair, to engage the States to oblige their popish Subjects not to admit of any such Innovation; upon which their High Mightinesses wrote a Letter to the Doge and Senate of Venice; and the following Passages in the beginning of it, shew their Wisdom and Moderation, to the Reproach of all those, that in the Profession of Christianity, assume a coercive Power over their Fellow Christians, in Matters of Religion. Their High Mightinesses say:

The States General's Letter to the State of Venice about Toleration.

'After mature Deliberation, it has been re-'solv'd, to acquaint the serene Republick of 'Venice, that their High Mightinesses will al-'ways retain a very high Esteem for the said 'Republick; and that their Intercession is of 'so great Weight with their High Mightinesses, 'that they would give them a Proof of it upon 'this Occasion with Pleasure; but that they 'cannot do it without derogating from the 'fundamental and inviolable Maxim of their 'Republick, viz. That in Matters of Religion, 'and Ecclesiastical Discipline, the bare Perswa-'sion, without any Constraint or Violence, ought 'to take Place, that 'tis free for every one to 'think in Religious Matters what he believes 'is most proper for obtaining his Salvation, of 'which every one is to give an Account to God, 'according to the Informations or Lights he has 'receiv'd:* That their High Mightinesses think-'ing the Religion which they profess the best, 'and most conformable to the reveal'd Will of 'God, could wish that every one of their Sub-'jects would conform to it; but that according 'to their fundamental Maxims, they cannot 'force any body on that Article; but, on the 'contrary, must leave every one at Liberty to 'profess what Religion he thinks in his Con-'science to be the best, provided, nevertheless, 'that they demean as good and loyal Subjects, 'and that they attempt nothing in Word or 'Deed, which may be prejudicial to the Au-'thority of the Government, to the Happiness 'of Civil Society, to good Manners, to the 'publick Tranquility, or which tends to the 'Oppression of their Neighbours.' Is not this wise Answer of the States General, enough to put all Persecutors, whether Princes or Republicks, to the Blush; and much more the Petty Imps of Bigotry and Persecution, of whatever Cloth or Profession.

The States General assert Liberty of Conscience.

The Clergy of France had a general Assembly at this Time, and they offended the King or rather the Court so much by their Conduct, that the Count De Maurepas, Secretary of State, was sent to cancel their Register, which he did before their Faces, November 9th, N. S. and took the rest of their Papers along with him. After which, the Bishops of Angers, Soissons, and Chartres, were order'd to retire to their Dioceses. I cannot omit repeating two or three Lines of the Bishop of Langres Speech to the King, in the Name of the General Assembly, three Weeks before.

Not only your Minority was peaceful, a thing hardly ever known since the Establishment of this Monarchy, but all Europe has enjoy'd a profound Tranquility ever since your Majesty ascended the Throne of your Ancestors: Let others attribute this Sort of Mercies to human Prudence; as for us, the Clergy, we never form any Judgment by outward Appearances, we acknowledge that it was the Hand of God, that disarm'd the Powers of Europe, and suspended their Jealousies to raise your Infancy, and form your Youth in the Bosom of Peace: The God of Peace is pleased to give us a pacifick King, the most precious Gift he could take out of the Treasury of his Mercies. What then was Lewis the XIV. this King's Great Grandfather? on whom the French Academy bestow'd so many fulsome and false Panegyricks, for his Slaughters, Ravages, and Depredations in War. A.D. 1724

The Parliament continuing sitting in Ireland, rais'd the necessary Supplies for the Government; and proceeding in their Consideration of the State of the Nation, came to these Resolutions, against the Growth of Popery.

Parliament in Ireland resolves against Popery.

1. 'That the electing Persons to be Members 'of this House, who are newly converted from 'the Popish to the Protestant Religion, or who 'are married to popish Wives, or breed or suffer 'their Children to be educated in the Popish 'Religion, is highly prejudicial to the Prote-'stant Interest.

2. 'That no Person that is, or shall be, con-'verted from the Popish to the Protestant Reli-'gion, ought to be elected, or admitted to serve 'as a Member of this House, for the Space of 'seven Years, next after his Conversion, unless 'he produce a Certificate of having receiv'd the 'Sacrament, according to the Usage of the 'Church of Ireland, as by Law establish'd, 'thrice in every Year, during the said Term.

3. 'That no Person converted from the Popish 'to the Protestant Religion, whose Wife shall 'continue, or whose Child or Children shall 'be educated, in the Popish Religion, be for 'the future admitted into any Office, Employ-'ment, or Place of Trust in this Kingdom.

After this it was order'd, That Heads of a Bill be brought in on the said Resolutions; and that Mr. Stannus, Dr. Trotter, Mr. Henry Singleton, Mr. Ward, Mr. Carter, Mr. Agmondesham Vesey, and Mr. Paul, do prepare and bring in the same. The House also order'd Heads of a Bill to be brought in, for preventing Marriages by degraded Clergymen, and Popish Priests. People at London were alarm'd, at News from Hanover, that the King had a Fall from his Horse; but, God be prais'd, it was attended with no ill Consequences. His Majesty, with his most Serene Highness Prince Frederick, continu'd at the Ghore, hunting the Stag, and taking other Diversions of the Chase and Season, as often as the Weather would permit, till Thursday the 11th of November, when His Majesty left that Place, and return'd to Hanover. Eight Days after, the Marquis De Marchetti, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Parma, dy'd there in an advanc'd Age; and the Marquis De Cortance, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Sardinia, being recall'd, the Marquis of Aix, who succeeded him in that Character, had a private Audience of His Majesty. The King left Hanover the 18th of December, O.S. and past through the Mall of Utrecht four Days after, in perfect Health. He was attended in his Coach by Monsieur De Haren-

The King at the Ghore, and Hanover.

A.D. 1725 Harenberg, Great Marſhal of the Court of Hanover, and Monſieur Fabricius, Chamberlain, at Bililt, where His Majeſty took freſh Horſes. He was waited upon by the Prince of Naſſau Sciegen, the Prince of Holſtein Norburgh, and Count Maurice of Naſſau. From thence he proceeded to Helvoet-Sluyce.

The Affair of Thorn being ſtill as when we laſt mention'd it, the Grandees of Poland ſeem'd as averſe as ever to enter into a Treaty of an Accommodation, and doubtleſs were encourag'd in it, by the Backwardneſs of the King of Pruſſia, to have Recourſe to Arms, to obtain Juſtice for the Proteſtants. As willing as His Britannick Majeſty and their High Mightineſſes were to give all poſſible Aſſiſtance towards the Relief of theſe oppreſs'd Chriſtians, they were at too great a Diſtance to be firſt in any ſuch Undertaking; and the King of Pruſſia, who was in the Neighbourhood of Thorn, left the Matter to fruitleſs Negotiations: Upon which the Poles grew ſo inſolent, that the Biſhop of Cuſavia ſaid, It was unbecoming them to give Foreigners an Account of their domeſtick Affairs, ſince the Republick was able enough to terminate her Differences, according to the Laws of the Kingdom; and to maintain her Liberties. Prince Lubomerski, who had gorg'd himſelf moſt with the Blood of Thorn, tho' he was now quite blind, ſaid, He hop'd ſtill to have the Satisfaction to build a Church to the Honour of the Bleſſed Virgin, in the fineſt City of the Hereticks, meaning, as was believ'd, either Dantzick or Coningsberg, Capital of Ducal Pruſſia. Such was the Rage and Ignorance of this Barbarian. The Romiſh Clergy did their utmoſt to inſpire the Poles with the like Sentiments, preaching every where againſt the Reform'd as Traitors to their Country, for the Application they made to Foreign Powers to interceed for them, which had little or no Effect.

All Things remain'd quiet in England; and the vain Attempts of the Diſaffected to diſturb the publick Peace, brought themſelves only into Peril. A notorious Libeller, one Earberry, a Nonjuring Prieſt, had been outlaw'd for writing a villainous Libel againſt the Government, upon his running away from Proſecution; but in this Term that Outlawry was revers'd.

We mention'd His Majeſty's proceeding on his Journey from Hanover to Helvoet-Sluyce; where Sir John Norris waited with the Convoy and Yatchts. His Majeſty embark'd on board the Carolina Yatcht, on New-Year's Day, about one in the Afternoon: Towards ſeven that Evening there aroſe a moſt violent Storm with Rain and Hail, which ſeparated the Ships one from another, except one Man of War, commanded by Captain Dancey, who kept Company with the King's Yatcht, on board which was Sir John Norris. The Tempeſt continu'd ſo high, and the Sea ſo boiſterous, for thirty-ſix Hours, that the whole Fleet was in the utmoſt Danger. On Monday Morning, the third of January, the Yatchts and the Men of War were near Dover; and one of the Yatchts, with ſome of His Majeſty's Attendants, enter'd the River; but it was thought more adviſeable that His Majeſty ſhould land at Rye; where he arriv'd about Noon. The King went immediately into the Small-Boat, the Tide being down; and as ſoon as he could reach a Horſe, which Captain Pigram had brought him, His Majeſty mounted it, rode by the Wall, and over the New Bridge, the Captain holding the Horſe all the Way by the Bridle. The Mayor, Mr. Lambe, and Jurats, in their Formalities, with the neighbouring Gentlemen, attended the King, who alighted at the Mayor's Houſe; being ſhouted all the Way with loud Huzza's and Acclamatiions. His Majeſty was extreamly fatigu'd, having eat nothing ſince the Day he embark'd; yet his vigorous Conſtitution ſupported him, and preſerv'd him in Health. The Lord Townſhend, and his Lady, who were in the Mary Yatcht, kept Company with His Majeſty, and with ſome Difficulty landed at the ſame Place. It being rightly conjectur'd, that the King had embark'd on the firſt of January, 1725, and conſequently that His Majeſty was in the violent Storm that enſu'd, the Alarm, Conſternation, and Uneaſineſs, all the Well-affected in London and Weſtminſter were under, for ſo precious a Life, can hardly be expreſs'd. It was then that the People wiſh'd His Majeſty's Affairs had never call'd him abroad; and that if ever they call'd him ſo again, he would never croſs the Sea in any of the Winter Months; and hardly truſt either the Autumn or Spring. At laſt, on Tueſday the 4th of January, about two a-Clock in the Afternoon, one of His Majeſty's Meſſengers, diſpatch'd by the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, arriv'd at the Cock-Pit, with the agreeable News of His Majeſty's ſafe Landing at Rye; which was immediately communicated to their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales; and their Excellencies the Lords Juſtices. It was ſoon after proclaim'd to the City and Suburbs by the Firing of the Great Guns, which occaſion'd an univerſal Joy; and His Majeſty had the inexpreſſable Pleaſure to ſee he was receiv'd every where by his People with the tender Affection of Children, as well as with the Reſpect of Subjects. His Majeſty intended to ſet out from Rye towards London, on Thurſday the 6th of January, but the Roads, in that Part of the Country, being moſtly rais'd between Ditches, which by this Time were fill'd with Drifts of Snow, it was found neceſſary to give Orders for the Cleaning of the Ways, ſo as to make His Majeſty's Paſſage ſafe. Mrs. Lambe, the Mayor of Rye's Wife, being brought to Bed of a Son, a few Days before the King landed, His Majeſty was pleas'd to ſtand Godfather, repreſented by his Proxy the Lord Viſcount Townſhend: Sir John Norris, who had many Years repreſented that Cinque Port in Parliament, was the other Godfather; and the Lady Townſhend Godmother; and they both ſtood in Perſon. The Ways being clean'd, His Majeſty began his Journey the next Day; and having croſs'd the Water from Rye, at a Place call'd the Point, lay that Night at Hythe; the next at Sittingbourne: And on Sunday, the 9th of January, arriv'd in good Health at St. James's Palace, where His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, and ſeveral Perſons of the Firſt Rank, waited on His Majeſty, to congratulate his Return in Safety. As did the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London, two Days after, when the Recorder made the following Speech, which explains the Senſe of the Nation as to His Majeſty's Conduct in his Abſence.

The King's dangerous Paſſage to Rye.

The King arrives at St. James's.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty:

The Lord-Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, of the City of London, moſt humbly intreat your Ma-

A.D.1725 Majesty's Permission, to congratulate your safe Return to Great Britain. These, your Majesty's most faithful and dutiful Subjects, have a just Sense of the many Blessings they enjoy, under your Majesty's mild, prudent, and auspicious Reign.

They beg leave to express their Satisfaction, in observing that your Majesty's Cares, while abroad, have been extended not only for the Welfare of your Subjects of this Realm, but that your Majesty has shewn a generous Benevolence for the Relief of the injur'd, and for the Protection of the distress'd: That your Majesty has espous'd the Cause of Liberty, and the Protestant Religion, and exerted your Vigilance and Zeal for preserving the Tranquility of Europe.

These your Majesty's laudable Endeavours for the Benefit of Mankind, proclaim your Majesty's Goodness and Humanity, and will be lasting Monuments of your Glory.

Your Majesty's most tender and fatherly Indulgence to your own People, will be always esteemed their peculiar Happiness, will be always attended with their most grateful Acknowledgements, with their sincere Affection to your Majesty's Person, their hearty Endeavours for the Support of your Government, with their most ardent Wishes for the Continuance of your Majesty's Health and Prosperity.

To which His Majesty was pleas'd to return his most gracious Answer.

I take very kindly this Mark of your Duty and Affection to me: You may assure your selves, that my Endeavours shall never be wanting to promote the Trade and Prosperity, and Happiness, of the City of London.

Francis Porten, Esq; Alderman and Sheriff, and Jeremiah Murden, Esq; the other Sheriff, receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood.

On the 20th of January the Parliament met, and His Majesty made his Speech to both Houses, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor; the chief Contents of which were:

The King's Speech to the Parliament.

'The distress'd Condition of our Protestant 'Brethren abroad, and the Negotiations and 'Engagements enter'd into by some foreign 'Powers, which seem to have laid the Foun- 'dation of new Troubles and Disturbances in 'Europe, and to threaten my Subjects with the 'Loss of several of the most advantagious 'Branches of their Trade, oblig'd me, with- 'out Loss of Time, to concert with other 'Powers such Measures as might give a Check 'to the ambitious Views of those, who are en- 'deavouring to render themselves formidable, 'and put a Stop to the further Progress of such 'dangerous Designs. For these Ends, I have 'enter'd into a Defensive Alliance with the most 'Christian King, and the King of Prussia; to 'which several other Powers, and particularly 'the States General, have been invited to ac- 'cede; and I have not the least Reason to 'doubt of their Concurrence: This Treaty 'shall in a short Time be laid before you.

'By these Means, and by your Support and 'Assistance, I trust in God, I shall be able, not 'only to secure to my own Subjects the Enjoy- 'ment of many valuable Rights and Privileges, 'long since acquir'd for them by the most so- 'lemn Treaties, but effectually to preserve the 'Peace and Ballance of Europe, the only A.D.1725 'View and End of all my Endeavours.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

'I have order'd the Estimates for the Service 'of this Year, to be prepar'd and laid before 'you, which from an Unwillingless I always 'have to put my Subjects to an extraordinary 'Expence, by any unnecessary Precautions, are 'form'd upon the Foot of employing no great- 'er Number of Forces than was thought neces- 'ry the last Year; for which, if the Supplies 'you give shall be fully rais'd, I shall be ena- 'bled to have a strong Fleet at Sea, early in 'the Spring: If the Posture of Affairs shall at 'any Time make it necessary to augment our 'maritime Forces, I confide so entirely in the 'Zeal and Affection of my Parliament, that 'I assure my self you will enable me to make 'such an Addition to the Number of Seamen, 'as shall be found requisite.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'It is not to be doubted, but the Enemies to 'my Government, will conceive Hopes, that 'some favourable Opportunity for renewing 'their Attempts, may offer, from the Prospect 'of new Troubles and Commotions. They 'are already very busy by their Instruments 'and Emissaries, in those Courts, whose Mea- 'sures seem most to favour their Purposes, in 'solliciting and promoting the Cause of the 'Pretender: But, I perswade my self, not- 'withstanding the Countenance and Encourage- 'ment they may have receiv'd, or flatter them- 'selves with, the Provision you shall make for 'the Safety and Defence of the Kingdom, will 'effectually secure us from any Attempts from 'abroad, and render all such Projects vain and 'abortive.

'When the World shall see that you will not 'suffer the British Crown and Nation to be 'menaced and insulted, those who most envy 'the present Happiness and Tranquillity of this 'Kingdom, and are endeavouring to make us 'subservient to their Ambition, will consider 'their own Interest and Circumstances, before 'they make any Attempt upon so brave a Peo- 'ple, strengthen'd and supported by prudent 'and powerful Alliances; and, though desirous 'to preserve the Peace, yet able and ready to 'defend themselves, against the Efforts of all 'Aggressors. Such Resolutions, and such Mea- 'sures, jointly taken, I am satisfy'd are the 'most effectual Means of preventing a War, 'and continuing to us the Blessings of Peace 'and Prosperity.'

The Lords Address of Thanks was unanimously voted, and being immediately drawn up, was presented to His Majesty the next Day, January 21st: Their Lordships say, after the Introduction,

The Lords Address.

'We thankfully acknowledge your Majesty's 'exceeding Goodness and Condescension, in ac- 'quainting us with the Defensive Alliance, 'lately made by your Majesty, for prevent- 'ing the ill Consequences which might other- 'wise attend the Negotiations and Engagements 'enter'd into by other Potentates, to the appa- 'rent Prejudice of this Kingdom: And for your 'Majesty's gracious Assurance, that it should 'be soon laid before us. Nothing can be more 'vain, than for any foreign Power to enter- 'tain the Hopes of rendering themselves formi- 'dable to Britain; your Majesty having 'strengthen'd your self by such powerful Al- 'ances: The Resolution and Fidelity of your

'Subjects

A.D.1725 'Subjects being ſo well known, and the late 'Marks of their Valour not yet worn out, we 'moſt humbly entreat your Majeſty to believe 'that our Lives are not dearer to us than your 'Majeſty's Honour; and that your Majeſty 'may at all Times with Certainty depend up-'on our ſtrongeſt Efforts to maintain and de-'fend it, againſt all Powers whatſoever, who 'can ſo far delude themſelves, as to imagine 'that they may with Safety inſult or menace 'the Britiſh Crown or Nation.

'It is no Surprize to us that the Enemies to 'your Majeſty's Perſon and Government are 'labouring to diſturb the Peace of this King-'dom, if they can flatter themſelves with the 'Proſpect of any new Troubles or Commotions 'in Europe: We can eaſily believe that at ſuch 'a Juncture, new Schemes and Solicitations are 'daily making by the moſt profligate and 'abandon'd of them, to revive the expiring 'Cauſe of the Pretender: All which we aſſure 'our ſelves, can have no other Effect than to 'haſten his Deſtruction, and the utter Ruin of 'all his perjur'd Adherents.

'Your Majeſty's conſtant and unwearied En-'deavours to perpetuate to us the Bleſſing of 'that happy Tranquility we now enjoy, and 'to maintain the general Peace and Balance of 'Europe, to preſerve the Trade of this Nati-'on, and to ſecure to your People the many 'valuable Rights and Privileges to which they 'are entituled by the moſt ſolemn Treaties, 'oblige us to all imaginable Returns of Duty 'and Gratitude, and leave us no room to 'doubt, when we conſider the prudent Mea-'ſures your Majeſty has taken for obtaining 'thoſe great Ends, but that all your Majeſty's 'Endeavours will, by the Bleſſing of God there-'upon, notwithſtanding any Attempts to the 'contrary, be crown'd with Succeſs.'

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer.

'I heartily thank you for this very affectio-'nate and loyal Addreſs; the World may be 'convinc'd by it, how fix'd and immoveable 'all your Purpoſes and Reſolutions are, to 'maintain my Honour, and promote the true 'Intereſt of your Country: You may be aſſur'd 'of my conſtant Endeavours to ſupport the 'Proteſtant Religion, to preſerve the Peace 'and Balance of Power in Europe, to prevent 'any Encroachment on the Trade of my Sub-'jects, and, on all Occaſions, to encreaſe their 'Happineſs.'

Mr. Speaker, and the Commons, were no ſooner return'd to their Houſe, and His Maje-ſty's Speech reported, than Sir Robert Sutton mov'd, and, being ſeconded, it was reſolv'd, Commons Addreſs. 'That an humble Addreſs be preſented to His 'Majeſty, to congratulate His Majeſty upon 'his ſafe Arrival in theſe Kingdoms: To re-'turn the Thanks of this Houſe for His Maje-'ſty's moſt gracious Speech from the Throne: 'To expreſs our moſt dutiful Acknowledge-'ments for His Majeſty's tender Regard and 'Compaſſion for the diſtreſs'd Proteſtants a-'broad, for his great Care and Vigilance for the 'Peace and Proſperity of this Nation, and for 'the general Tranquility of Europe, in watch-'ing over the ambitious Views and Deſigns of 'thoſe that are endeavouring to render them-'ſelves formidable; and for his great Wiſdom 'in forming and entring into ſuch Alliances as 'may put a Stop to the further Progreſs of the 'dangerous Negotiations, carrying on by other 'Powers: And, that His Majeſty's conſtant 'Endeavours for the particular Intereſt of his A.D.1725 'own Subjects, and preventing a War, may 'have the deſired Effect, to aſſure His Majeſty 'that this Houſe will chearfully, and with all 'poſſible Diſpatch, ſo effectually raiſe the Sup-'plies for the Service of this Year, that His 'Majeſty may be enabled to have a ſtrong Fleet 'early in the Spring, ſufficient for the Safety 'and Defence of this Kingdom, and to diſap-'point the vain Hopes and Projects of the Ene-'mies to His Majeſty's Government: And to 'aſſure His Majeſty, that how deſirous ſoever we 'may be of Peace, we will not ſuffer His Maje-'ſty, and the Britiſh Nation, to be inſulted; 'but that we will, to the uttermoſt of our 'Power, as the Exigency and Neceſſity of Af-'fairs ſhall require, ſtand by and ſupport His 'Majeſty againſt all Attempts to diſturb the 'publick Repoſe.'

The Addreſs, of which this is the Subſtance, being put into Form, was preſented to His Majeſty by the whole Houſe, January 22d, who receiv'd this moſt gracious Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

I return you my Thanks for this dutiful and loyal Addreſs: I make no doubt but you will ſoon be ſenſible of the good Effect of this ſeaſonable Vigour and Reſolution. You may be aſſur'd that I will make no Uſe of the Confidence you repoſe in me, but for preſerving to us the Bleſſings of Peace, and for promoting the Honour and Intereſt of this Kingdom.

On the 28th of January the Houſe taking into Conſideration the Supply for the Land Forces, for the Year 1726, Mr. Pelham, Secretary at War, open'd the Debate, and mov'd, that Proviſion be made for the ſame Number of Forces as were provided for the laſt Year; which was oppos'd by Mr. Sh———, Mr. Hutcheſon, Mr. Hungerford, and other Mem-bers, who inſiſted on the reducing the 4000 Men that were rais'd ſome Years ago, and urg'd, that Great Britain was firmly ſecur'd by the late diſarming of the Highlands of Scot-land, and by the Supply voted for the Fleet. The Honourable Mr. Pelham, and Mr. Verney, &c. anſwer'd, That it would be highly impru-dent to leſſen the Number of our Land Forces at a Time when ſome Foreign Powers, who endeavour'd to make themſelves formidable, and threaten'd us with the Loſs of the moſt advan-tagious Branches of our Trade, were augment-ing theirs: That the Alliances His Majeſty had lately enter'd into, to check ſuch ambitious Views, and put a Stop to the further Progreſs of ſuch dangerous Deſigns, might make it ne-ceſſary to ſend ſome Land Forces abroad, in Support of thoſe Alliances; and that in ſuch a Caſe, the leaving the Kingdom without a ſufficient Number of Men for Guards and Gar-riſons, would be too great a Temptation to the Enemies of the Government, who are conti-nually watching for favourable Opportunities for renewing their Attempts, and diſturbing the happy Repoſe we enjoy. A leading Mem-ber of the Houſe of Commons, who had, till lately, diſtinguiſh'd himſelf within Doors and without, by his Zeal for the Revolution, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, and his Attachment to the Miniſtry, while he was of it, or near it, upon what Motive we know not, thought fit to turn againſt ev'ry Perſon and Thing he had before been attach'd to, and to fall in with Perſons and Things whom he before deteſted and de-ſpis'd: That he cou'd have no Reaſon for it

A Debate about the Land Forces.

A leading Member falls off.

*A.D.*1725 on Account of the publick Intereſt, and eſpecially in this Debate, is plain, becauſe he had himſelf conſtantly pleaded for an Increaſe and Continuance of Forces, as the Government deſir'd it, when the Neceſſity of both was not ſo apparent as at this Time, except at, or immediately after, the Rebellion. All his Objections were fully anſwer'd by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer. We have been oblig'd to ſpeak ſo often and ſo much about the ſtanding Forces, for and againſt, that we ſhall only now refer to what Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Maſter of the Rolls, ſaid, at the Cloſe of the Debate: That he was indeed the laſt Year for reducing Part of the Army, but that the Face and Poſture of Affairs in Europe being ſince chang'd, he thought it now unſafe. His Opinion had ſo great Weight, that the Houſe granted Supplies for 18226 Men, Officers included; and to addreſs His Majeſty, that the Treaties of Peace and Commerce between the Emperor and King of Spain, be laid before them.

Mr. Peplow made Biſhop of Cheſter.

It was with very great Pleaſure, that the Well-affected read in the publick News, that on Sunday the 16th of January, Mr. Peplow, Warden of Manchester College, and Vicar of Preſton, had kiſs'd His Majeſty's Hand for the Biſhoprick of Cheſter, vacant by the Death of Dr. Gaſtrel, prefer'd to that See when the late Viſcount Bolingbroke was doing his Country ſuch Sort of Services in favour of High Church. Mr. Peplow had remarkably diſtinguiſh'd his Zeal for the preſent Government, in the very Town and County which was the chief Theatre of the late belliſh Rebellion, and had for his Loyalty met with much Vexation from his Predeceſſor.

The Death of Mrs. Grove, Daughter to the Lady Liſle.

We will enter ſo far into private Hiſtory, as to mention the Death of Mrs. Tryphœa Grove, who dy'd on the 23d of January in a very advanc'd Age, a Lady of an eminent Character: She was the Daughter of the Lord Commiſſioner Liſle, (who was aſſaſſin'd in Switzerland, by ſome Vagabond Tories, not long after the Reſtoration,) by his Lady; afterwards his Relict, was murder'd, as the Annaliſt writes, by the infamous Jefferies, in his bloody weſtern Circuit, whoſe Clerk, Simon Harcourt, liv'd many Years after to do much Miſchief both in Town and Country. The Lady Liſle's Head was cut off in the 70th Year of her Age. Her amiable and pious Daughter marry'd firſt Mr. Lloyd, a wealthy Citizen of London, and ſecondly Robert Grove, Eſq; of Fern in Wiltſhire. By Mr. Lloyd, ſhe had one Daughter, marry'd to the Lord James Ruſſel, Great Uncle to his Grace the Duke of Bedford, and, after his Deceaſe, to Sir Henry Houghton, of Houghton Tower in Lancaſhire. By the Lord James, ſhe had one Daughter, a very great Fortune, marry'd to Thomas Scawen, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for Surrey, in the laſt Parliament, and in this: Which is fit to be remember'd, to ſhew how Providence has rewarded the Poſterity of two Perſons, who were ſacrific'd to the Rage and Revenge of Papiſts, and their Abettors.

I take no farther notice of the Sermons preach'd on the Thirtieth of January before the Parliament, and elſewhere, than as I meet with ſomething extraordinary, as doubtleſs is the following Paſſage of the Sermon preach'd by Dr. Lockyer, Dean of Peterborough, before the Houſe of Commons, who order'd him their Thanks. He is ſpeaking of the odious Parallel between the beheading King Charles I. and the abdicating King James II. 'If this 'Parallel were a true one, ſays he, it would 'be a better Apology for the Evil of this Day, 'than the Wit and Malice of Milton, or the 'Rage and Impudence of the Regicides, could 'invent: It would confirm the Jealouſies and 'Diſtruſts, Reports and Calumnies, of King 'Charles's worſt Enemies; and leave the Steadineſs and Loyalty of his beſt Friends defenceleſs. If it did hold, it would follow, that 'King Charles deſign'd to deſtroy the eſtabliſh'd Religion, and introduce Popery; that 'he reſolv'd to diſpenſe with the Laws, that 'is, to over-rule them; that he was a faſt 'Friend to our greateſt Enemies, and a ſworn 'Enemy to our beſt Friends: In a Word, if 'this were a juſt Parallel, it would follow, 'that all that enter'd into King Charles's Meaſures, were Traitors to their Country, and 'they that oppos'd them, ſo many Patriots. 'Let none then who pretend to a juſt Senſe of 'the Horror of this Day, any longer compare 'a Day of Gladneſs and Triumph, to a Day 'of Blackneſs and Darkneſs, for ever. *A.D.*1725. Dr. Lockyer's Sermon of the Cavaliers.

On Wedneſday, the 9th of February, Mr. William Pulteney, late Cofferer to His Majeſty, mov'd, 'That a Committee be appointed to 'ſtate the publick Debt, as it ſtood on the 25th 'of December, 1724, with what Debts have 'been incurr'd ſince that Time, till the 25th of 'December, 1725, diſtinguiſhing how much of 'the ſaid Debt remains unprovided for by Par-'liament.' He was ſeconded by his Couſin, Mr. Daniel Pulteney, late one of the Lords of the Admiralty. This Motion had ſo much an Appearance of Concern for the Peoples Eaſe with reſpect to the National Debt, that others who approv'd it on that Account only join'd in it; as Sir Joſeph Jekyll: But a Gentleman, whoſe Knowledge and Experience in Matters of the Revenue and Funds, gave great Weight to whatever he ſaid on thoſe Articles, oppos'd the Motion with that Force of Argument and Eloquence, that it was ſoon quaſh'd. Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer ſhew'd, how unſeaſonable and prepoſtrous ſuch an Inquiry was, and what a dangerous Wound it might give to publick Credit, at this critical Juncture; when Money'd Men were already but too much alarm'd by the Appearance of an approaching War; urging, that in the preſent Poſture of Affairs, they could not better expreſs their Love to their Country, than by making good their Promiſes and Aſſurances to His Majeſty at the beginning of this Seſſion; and with the greateſt Diſpatch raiſing the neceſſary Supplies, to enable His Majeſty to make good his late Engagements for the Welfare of his Subjects, to diſappoint the Hopes of the Enemies to his Government, and to reſent any Inſults that may be offer'd to his Crown and Dignity. Mr. Barnard, one of the Members for the City of London, the Center and Support of Credit, confirm'd what Sir Robert Walpole had ſaid, as to the Danger of encreaſing the Alarm of Money'd Men, which had already ſo affected publick Credit, that the Stocks were in a few Weeks fallen 12 or 14 per Cent. It could not be imagin'd that Sir Thomas Pengelly, tho' a very eminent Lawyer, was ſo good a Judge of this Matter as the Gentleman that ſpoke laſt; and conſequently, that his Reaſon for the Motion would have ſo much Weight as Mr. Barnard's againſt it; and the Member who made Mr. P---- anſwer'd by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer.

A.D.1725 made the Motion finding it was like to go againſt him, declar'd, He did it with no other View than to give a great Man an Opportunity to ſhew his Integrity to the whole World, which would finiſh his ſublime Character. Such Petulance in ſo illuſtrious an Aſſembly being extreamly trifling and indecent, ſhews that the Perſon who was guilty of it, underſtood little of the ſublime in Character; and it juſtly provok'd the Gentleman he meant to rally, to retort, The Compliment would have come out with a better Grace, and appear'd more ſincere, when that fine Gentleman had himſelf a Share in the Management of the publick Money, than now he was out of Place: And the Queſtion being put upon the laſt Motion, it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 262 Voices againſt 89: Indeed it ſeem'd ſo much out of Seaſon, that, the Annaliſt tells us, moſt of the Tories voted againſt it.

Treaties of Vienna and Hanover laid before the Houſe.

The next Day, February 10th, Sir Paul Methuen, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, acquainted the Houſe, that he had receiv'd His Majeſty's Commands, to lay before this Houſe, the Treaty between His Majeſty, the moſt Chriſtian King, and the King of Pruſſia, made at Hanover, the third of September, 1725; as alſo the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, concluded between the Emperor and the King of Spain: Which were taken into Conſideration a Week after; when the Houſe was very full, there being above 420 Members preſent. After the Reading of theſe Treaties, Horatio Walpole, Eſq; open'd the Debate with an excellent Speech, which laſted near an Hour, and wherein he laid before the Houſe the State of Affairs in Europe, from the Peace of Utrecht to the preſent Time, and took Notice, 'That ſince 'His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, 'his conſtant Care and Endeavour had been to 'ſettle the Balance of Power upon a ſolid 'Foundation; and to preſerve and ſecure the 'Tranquility of Chriſtendom, to protect and 'defend the Proteſtant Cauſe, and promote 'the Honour and Intereſt of his Britiſh Sub'jects: That with theſe great Views, His Ma'jeſty was become Mediator and Guarantee, 'both of the Barrier Treaty, concluded in '1715, and of a Convention made in 1718, for 'the Execution of that Treaty, between the 'Emperor and the States General of the united 'Provinces: That in the Year 1716, His Ma'jeſty concluded a Defenſive Alliance with the 'Emperor; and in 1717, another with the 'moſt Chriſtian King, and the States General; 'the genuine Deſign of both which Treaties, 'was only to preſerve the publick Repoſe of 'Chriſtendom, eſtabliſh'd by the Peace of U'trecht, and to guaranty the Succeſſion of the 'Crown of Great Britain in the Proteſtant 'Line: That in order to fortify all the ſaid 'Treaties, and to extinguiſh the War which 'the Spaniards had kindled in Italy, His Ma'jeſty, in 1718, made a Convention with the 'moſt Chriſtian King, for propoſing ultimate 'Conditions of Peace, between the Emperor 'and the King of Spain, and between his Im'perial Majeſty and the then King of Sicily: 'That this Convention was a few Days after 'follow'd by a Treaty of Alliance, between 'the Emperor, the King of Great Britain, and 'the moſt Chriſtian King; which by their Mi'niſters was concluded at London, and ſign'd 'on the 22d of July, 1718, and in which the 'States General were nam'd, as one of the con'tracting Parties; from whence this Treaty 'was term'd the Quadruple Alliance: That a 'few Months after the King of Sicily was ad'mitted into this Alliance and Treaty, and 'at length the King of Spain himſelf was forc'd 'to accede to it; which was mainly owing to 'the generous Aſſiſtance His Britannick Majeſty 'gave the Emperor in the Mediterranean. 'That there remaining ſome Points ſtill con'troverted between the Emperor and the King 'of Spain, the ſame were referr'd to be ami'cably determin'd in a Congreſs, which was 'afterwards open'd at Cambray, under the 'Mediation of His Britannick Majeſty, and 'the moſt Chriſtian King: That by reaſon of 'ſeveral Difficulties, induſtriouſly rais'd by 'the Courts of Vienna and Madrid, the great 'Pains taken for three Years by the Miniſters 'Mediators prov'd ineffectual, and, at laſt, the 'Congreſs was ſuddenly diſſolv'd, upon Advice 'that the Emperor and King of Spain had ſe'cretly adjuſted the Differences between them, 'and concluded a Treaty of Peace at Vienna. 'That this unexpected Event occaſion'd no 'ſmall Surmize, and rais'd Jealouſies, which 'appear'd to be the better grounded, when it 'was known, that the ſaid Treaty of Peace 'was ſoon follow'd by a Treaty of Commerce, 'the main Deſign of which was to ſupport 'and countenance the Eaſt-India Company, 'ſome Years before eſtabliſh'd at Oſtend, by 'granting to the Inhabitants of the Auſtrian 'Netherlands, greater Privileges, both in the 'Eaſt and Weſt-Indies, than were ever granted 'to the Engliſh and Dutch; which viſibly ten'ded to the entire Ruin of many valuable 'Branches of our Trade, and was contrary to 'ſeveral ſolemn Treaties ſtill in Force: That 'thereupon His Majeſty, ever watchful for 'the Intereſt of his Britiſh Subjects, had caus'd 'lively Repreſentations to be made againſt the 'ſaid Treaty of Commerce, both to the Empe'ror and King of Spain: That at the Court of 'Madrid, theſe Complaints were receiv'd with 'Coldneſs, and that at Vienna, with Fierceneſs 'and Haughtineſs, even to ſuch a degree, that 'the Imperial Miniſters did not ſtick to inſinu'ate, that if His Britannick Majeſty perſiſted 'in his Reſolution, to take Meaſures in Oppo'ſition to the Treaties of Vienna, His Imperial 'Majeſty would not only think himſelf diſen'gag'd from the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Suc'ceſſion to the Crown of Great Britain, but that 'the ſame might be attended with Conſequen'ces with relation to His Majeſty's Dominions 'in Germany. That theſe inſulting Menaces 'made no Impreſſion on His Majeſty's Firm'neſs, nor deterr'd him from his fix'd Reſolu'tion, of concerting with other Powers, ſuch 'Meaſures, as might give a Check to the am'bitious Views of thoſe, who endeavour'd to 'render themſelves formidable. That theſe 'Meaſures ſeem'd to be the more neceſſary, be'cauſe there were juſt grounds to believe, that 'the unforeſeen Reconciliation of the Emperor 'and King of Spain, was owing to the conſtant 'View of the Houſe of Auſtria, of rendering 'the Imperial Dignity hereditary in that Fa'mily: That in order to that, it might reaſo'nably be ſuppos'd, that the Treaties of Vienna 'were to be cemented by a Match between the 'Emperor's Eldeſt Daughter and the Infant 'Don Carlos. That it was eaſy to foreſee the 'Conſequences of ſuch a Marriage: For the 'Iſſue Male that might come from it, might, 'in

The Oſtend Company the main Deſign of the Treaty of Vienna.

Mr. Horatio Walpole's Speech about them.

A.D.1725 'in Time, be poſſeſs'd, not only of the heredi-
'tary Dominions belonging to the Houſe of
'Auſtria, and of the Imperial Dignity, but al-
'ſo of the Dominions of the Spaniſh Monarchy,
'which would entirely overthrow the Balance
'of Power, and render the Liberties of all the 'reſt of Europe very precarious. That this
'Suppoſition would appear more than proba-
'ble to any one, who conſider'd, that there
'was ſcarce any other way of accounting,
'either for the King of Spain's breaking thoſe
'ſolemn Treaties with Great Britain, in fa-
'vour of the Emperor's Subjects in the Nether-
'lands, or for the Emperor's forgetting ſo far,
'the Obligations he had to Great Britain and
'Holland, as to enter into Engagements to aſ-
'ſiſt Spain, towards the Recovery of Gibraltar
'and Minorca, and to perſiſt in ſupporting
'and countenancing the Oſtend Company, eſta-
'bliſh'd with no other View, than to deprive
'the Subjects of the Maritime Powers, of ſeve-
'ral of the moſt advantagious Branches of their 'Trade. That in order to give a timely Check
'to the farther Progreſs of ſuch dangerous De-
'ſigns, His Majeſty, in his great Wiſdom, had
'enter'd into a Defenſive Alliance with the moſt
'Chriſtian King, and the King of Pruſſia; to 'which ſeveral other Powers, and particularly
'the States General, had been invited to accede.
'That the States of Holland had already done
'it, and it was not to be doubted but their Ex-

The Treaty of Hanover to guard againſt it. 'Provinces. That the main View of this Alli- 'ance, was to maintain and preſerve the pub-
'lick Repoſe and Tranquility of Chriſtendom,
'and to ſecure to each contracting Party the 'Poſſeſſion of their reſpective Dominions and 'Territories, with the Rights, Immunities,
'and Advantages, particularly thoſe relating
'to Trade, which their Subjects enjoy'd, or ought
'by Treaties to enjoy. And that as His Maje-
For the Proteſtant Intereſt. 'ſty ever had a particular Concern for the Pro-
'teſtant Intereſt, ſo, out of his Royal and ten-
'der Compaſſion for the diſtreſs'd Condition of
'ſome of our Proteſtant Brethren in Poland,
'His Majeſty not only interpos'd his good Of'fices in the moſt preſſing manner, in their 'Favour, but had taken the Occaſion of the
'Defenſive Alliance, made at Hanover, to en-
'gage, by a ſeperate Article, the moſt Chriſtian
'King, and the King of Pruſſia, who, together
'with His Majeſty, are Guarantees of the Trea-
'ty of Oliva, to ſee it maintain'd and obſerv'd
'in its full Extent; and to cauſe Reparation
'to be made for what may have been done at
'Thorn, contrary to the ſaid Treaty.' Mr.
Walpole concluded his Speech with a juſt Encomium upon His Majeſty's Wiſdom and Care,
Vigilance, Steadineſs, and Reſolution, in the Conduct of all thoſe weighty and important
Affairs. We muſt remember, that not only the Eaſt-India Company, but almoſt the whole
Kingdom, took the Alarm at the ſetting up of the Oſtend Company; that the Parliament voted againſt it; and how earneſt People were in their Wiſhes, that ſome Means might be found to prevent its ſucceeding: The only Means that could be made uſe of, was this very Treaty of Hanover, by which the Kings of Great Britain, France, and Pruſſia, and the States General, engag'd to be Guarantees of the Rights, Immunities, and Advantages of Trade, enjoy'd by their reſpective Subjects. It will appear very plainly, by this Speech, made after the Reading of the ſeveral Treaties therein referr'd to, that the Treaty of Vienna was like- A.D.1725
ly to be attended with the moſt dangerous Conſequences to the Liberties of Europe, and the Trade of all Nations, trading to either of the Indies. Yet as plain as it appear'd, Mr. Da- niel Pulteney, Mr. William Pulteney, and Sir
Thomas Pengelly, thought fit to ſpeak againſt the Treaty of Hanover, made to preſerve what the Treaty of Vienna had endanger'd. 'Twas not ſo ſtrange that Mr. Sh——, Dr. Friend, and Mr. F—y, ſpoke alſo againſt the Treaty of Hanover, their Conduct on all Occaſions, where the Honour and Intereſt, or even the very Being of the Government, ſince His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, were concern'd, was too well known, to make ſuch Speeches from them at all ſurprizing. It was ſuggeſted by a Gentleman, on the Negative Side of the Treaty, That it might be ſuppos'd, that the King of Spain did not grant any further Privileges to the Emperor's Subjects in the Nether- lands, than what had been granted to the Eng- liſh. He was anſwer'd by Colonel Bladen, who pointed to the very Articles of the Treaty of Commerce of Vienna, whereby it was expreſly ſtipulated, Article II, That the Ships of War, and Merchant Ships, belonging to the contracting Powers, ſhould be allow'd full Liberty to frequent the Harbours, Coaſts, and Provinces, of each other, naming particularly the Eaſt-Indies; and without any Exception, as to the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, or of any other Reſtraint on the Ships of War, and Merchant Ships, than not to buy any thing, beſides Victu- als, and Materials for repairing the Ships; which imply'd a Permiſſion to vend their Merchandizes for ready Money: So that it was manifeſt that the Subjects of the Auſtrian Ne- therlands were allow'd more extenſive Privileges than had been granted to any other Nation, contrary to ſeveral Treaties in Force, between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain.
Thus it was obvious that the Treaty of Vienna broke in upon the Treaties between Great Bri- tain and Spain, in a Matter which the Britons had, and ought always to have, moſt at Heart.
The Members who were in the Oppoſition, (a new Cant to diſtinguiſh the Enemies to the Adminiſtration, from its Friends) could not deny this: However, they were reſolv'd to oppoſe; and Mr. Daniel Pulteney made a long Speech in Anſwer to Mr. Horatio Walpole's, which conſiſting chiefly of Facts, the Anſwerer muſt make but an indifferent Figure in endeavouring to confute them by Argument. He could not but think it a great Honour to be back'd by Mr. Sh—— of Lancaſhire, whoſe main Objection againſt the Treaty of Hanover was, That it would engage the Britiſh Nation in a War, for the Defence of His Majeſty's
Dominions in Germany, contrary to the expreſs
Proviſion made for the ſecuring our Religion,
Laws and Liberties, in the Act for further Li- mitation and Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line; which being the Baſis and Foundation of the preſent Settlement, was become part of the Conſtitution. This ſophiſti-cal Argument is trump'd up by all Libellers and Declaimers againſt any Meaſures taken by the Government, for ſecuring the Britiſh Dominions from abroad, tho' the Fallacy of ſuch Reaſoning ſwims upon the Surface of it. If in the laſt Grand Confederacy the Confederates were oblig'd by Juſtice and Friendſhip to aſ-ſiſt each other in Caſe of Attack, and the Treaty of Vienna againſt ſeveral other Treaties.

Elector

A.D. 1725 Elector of Brunſwick, one of the Confederates, had required Aſſiſtance for the Defence of his Territories, was not Britain bound to give it him, as well as any other of the Confederates. But the Caſe is much ſtronger in the Conditions of the Treaty of Hanover: For whatever Aſſiſtance Great Britain was to give the Subjects of Hanover, in Caſe they were invaded, was on a Suppoſition, that ſuch Invaſion would be made in Reſentment of His Majeſty's Endeavours to protect his Britiſh Subjects, in the Extent and Rights of their Commerce. And it would have been monſtrous to have deny'd Aſſiſtance to thoſe, who for our Sakes only were brought into extreameſt Peril. It was aſtoniſhing, that the Gentry in the Oppoſition, as they call it, did not bluſh to declare that they had leſs Care upon them for the Safety of His Majeſty's Subjects on the Continent, than the French had, who were as much bound by the Treaty of Hanover to aſſiſt them, as the Britons. What was ſaid about the Act of Limitation, was well explain'd by Mr. Pelham, Secretary at War, who, among other weighty Arguments, urg'd, That the true Meaning and Intent of the Limitation in the Act of Settlement, was not wholly and for ever to deprive His Majeſty's Foreign Dominions of any Aſſiſtance from this Nation; for if ſo, His Majeſty in that Reſpect would be in a worſe Condition upon his Acceſſion to the Britiſh Throne than he was before; but only to reſtrain the Sovereign, for the future, from engaging the Nation, at his Pleaſure, in a War, for the Defence of any Dominions not belonging to the Crown of England, without the Conſent of Parliament, to whom the Legiſlature, wiſely left to judge and determine, whether ſuch a War was juſt and neceſſary or not. Concluding, that for his own part, he was fully of Opinion, That if in the preſent Juncture and Circumſtances of Affairs His Majeſty's Foreign Dominions be attack'd or inſulted, this Nation ought to ſtand by and ſupport His Majeſty againſt all his Enemies whatſoever; and therefore he mov'd,

Mr. Pelham's Motion for an Addreſs to ſupport the Treaty of Hanover.

'That an humble Addreſs be preſented His 'Majeſty, to return His Majeſty the Thanks of 'this Houſe, for his great Goodneſs in communicating the Treaties of Peace and Commerce, concluded between the Emperor and 'the King of Spain, and the Defenſive Alliance 'between His Majeſty, the moſt Chriſtian 'King, and the King of Pruſſia. To expreſs 'our juſt Senſe of His Majeſty's Concern for 'the Balance and Peace of Europe, and the 'Proteſtant Religion; and, above all, our unfeigned Gratitude for his earneſt and ſeaſonable Care of the particular Intereſts of his Britiſh Subjects, by forming and entering into the 'ſaid Defenſive Alliance with the moſt Chriſtian King, and the King of Pruſſia, in order 'to obviate and diſappoint the dangerous Views 'and Conſequences of the Treaties of Peace 'and Commerce, between the Emperor and King 'of Spain; and to preſerve the many valuable 'Rights of this Nation againſt the fatal Tendency of the ſaid Treaty of Commerce, calculated for the entire Deſtruction of the Britiſh Trade, in Breach of ſeveral ſolemn Treaties now in Force. To acknowledge His Majeſty's Prudence and Reſolution in not ſuffering any Attempts or Inſinuations whatſoever, 'to divert His Majeſty from conſulting and 'ſteadily purſuing the Intereſt of theſe his 'Kingdoms; and to aſſure His Majeſty, That 'in Juſtice and Vindication of the Honour and 'Dignity of the Britiſh Crown, this Houſe 'will effectually ſtand by and ſupport His Majeſty againſt all Inſults and Attacks, that any 'Prince or Power, in Reſentment of the juſt 'Meaſures which His Majeſty has ſo wiſely 'taken, ſhall make upon any of His Majeſty's 'Territories or Dominions, not belonging to 'the Crown of Great Britain.' A.D 1725

This Motion was ſeconded by Mr. Dodington, one of the Lords of the Treaſury: But Dr. Friend, lately impriſon'd for High Treaſon, and Mr. F——y, rais'd ſeveral Objections to it. They were anſwer'd with great Solidity and Weight by the Maſter of the Rolls: And Sir Thomas Pengelly, a much better Lawyer than Politician, made ſome Reply. After this ſtood up the Lord Finch, Comptroller of the King's Houſhold, who in a handſome Speech made a ſhort but juſt Panegyrick on His Majeſty's illuſtrious Family, 'who had ever been the 'Bulwark of the Reformation: And fail'd not 'taking notice of the great Sufferings of the 'Excellent Princeſs Elizabeth, Daughter to 'King James I. Queen of Bohemia, and His 'Majeſty's Grandmother, upon Account of 'the Proteſtant Religion: Concluding, That 'His Majeſty ſeem'd to have been led to the 'Britiſh Throne by the hand of Providence, as 'a Reward for the Piety of his Anceſtors.' After this Mr. William Pulteney made a ſhort Speech, and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer clos'd the Debate, with confuting a rude and groundleſs Suggeſtion, That the Imperial Court's Backwardneſs in granting the Inveſtiture for Bremen and Verden, might have been one of the Motives to ſome late Meaſures, Sir Robert Walpole aſſuring the Houſe, That His Majeſty might long ago have had the ſaid Inveſtiture, if he would have paid the exorbitant Fees that were demanded for it. The Queſtion on Mr. Pelham's Motion was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 285 Voices againſt 107. And an Addreſs being drawn up, and agreed to, was preſented to His Majeſty by the whole Houſe, February the 19th.

Ld. Finch in Praiſe of the Houſe of Hanover.

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer

Gentlemen,

'I return you my Thanks for this particular 'Mark of your Duty, Affection, and Confidence in me. Your Aſſurances not to ſuffer 'my Foreign Dominions to be expos'd or inſulted, on account of the Meaſures I have taken for the Intereſt of theſe Kingdoms, will, 'I hope, be a Means to preſerve the Peace and 'Tranquility of Europe. I have no Views of 'Ambition to gratify; I have no Thought of 'aggrandizing my ſelf, or extending any Parts 'of my Dominion at the Hazard and Expence 'of the other: And as my Honour is the common Cauſe and Concern of my Subjects, their 'particular Intereſts ſhall upon all Occaſions 'be my conſtant Care.'

The Lord Viſcount Townſhend having made the like Motion in the Houſe of Peers as Mr. Pelham did in the Houſe of Commons, His Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle ſeconded it; and took Occaſion to acquaint the Houſe with a remarkable Paſſage out of a Letter from Mr. Stanhope, His Majeſty's Miniſter in Spain, 'That in a private Converſation the Duke of 'Ripperda had not ſcrupled to own, that be'ſides what had already been communicated 'to him about the late Treaties of Vienna, 'there were ſtill ſome other Articles, which

'by the contracting Parties mutually engag'd
'to aſſiſt each other with a certain Number of 'Troops, in order to ſupport the Oſtend Com-
'pany, and to recover Gibraltar.

There's ſomething extreamly ſhocking in this Article: The Town of Gibraltar was taken by the Engliſh, to facilitate that very Emperor, then King Charles the III's, poſſeſſing himſelf of the Crown of Spain, then poſſeſs'd by Philip Vth; and by this Article, he engages himſelf to aſſiſt the ſame Philip the Vth, to recover it from the Engliſh; King Philip alſo, who order'd his Miniſter at London, Mr. De Pozobueno, to oppoſe the Progreſs of the Oſtend Company, did by this Article engage himſelf to ſupport it. The Lord Lechmere did not think much Streſs ſhould be laid on this Information, becauſe it did not come regularly before the Houſe, that is, as another noble Lord intimated, becauſe the Original Letter was not produc'd. The Reader perhaps will think His Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle's taking notice of it by the King's Command, as convincing as the Sight of the Original Letter. The Earl of Scarborough anſwer'd the Lord Lechmere, whoſe Arguments, as alſo the Earl of Strafford's, being much to the ſame purpoſe as thoſe on the Negative Side of the Queſtion in the Houſe of Commons, we need not repeat them. It was propos'd to add theſe Words to the Addreſs: 'This Houſe not 'doubting, but your Majeſty, in your great Wiſ-'dom and Juſtice to theſe your Kingdoms, will 'always preſerve to them the full and entire 'Benefit of the Proviſion, made for further 'ſecuring our Religion, Laws and Liberties, 'by an Act paſt in the 12th and 13th Years of 'his late Majeſty King William, of glorious 'Memory, whereby it is enacted, that this Na-'tion be not oblig'd to engage in any War for 'the Defence of any Dominions which do not 'belong to the Crown of England:' It paſt in the Negative.

The Motion was carry'd in the Houſe of Lords, by a Majority of 94 Voices againſt 15; and the Addreſs, the ſame in Senſe as that of the Commons, being preſented to the King, the 18th of February, His Majeſty return'd this moſt gracious Anſwer.

The King's Anſwer to the Lords Addreſs.

My Lords,

'I thank you kindly for this moſt ſeaſonable 'and loyal Addreſs; the true Concern you 'ſhew for your Country, is no leſs acceptable 'to me, than the Regard you expreſs for my 'Honour. The Aſſurances you give me in re-'lation to my Territories abroad, will, I am 'perſwaded, contribute very much to the pre-'ſerving the publick Peace of Europe; and 'you may depend upon my making no other 'Uſe of that Confidence, which is ſo firmly 'eſtabliſh'd between us, than to maintain and 'promote the Welfare of this Kingdom.'

The Tax of 100000 l. on Papiſts deficient.

Five Days after His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Land Tax Bill, the Million Lottery Bill, and the Mutiny and Deſertion Bill; and there being a Deficiency of near 45000 l. of the 100000 l. Tax upon Papiſts, the Houſe of Commons paſt a Vote to make it good. The Tenderneſs of the People of England towards their Neighbours of that Religion was very remarkable, eſpecially where High-Church Aſſeſſors had the Management of the Rate; which occaſion'd this Tax's falling ſo ſhort of what it was given for. A.D. 1725

His Excellency the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, tranſmitted to His Majeſty two very loyal Addreſſes from the two Houſes of Parliament in that Kingdom. In the Addreſs of that Houſe of Commons, is this Paſſage.

'We are firmly perſwaded, That the Wiſ-'dom and Prudence of your Majeſty's Council 'and Adminiſtration, the Steadineſs of your 'faithful Subjects, and their conſtant Zeal for 'your Honour and Safety, ſupported by your 'powerful Allies, will ſoon convince the Ene-'mies of your Government, how vain it is to 'endeavour to diſturb it; and aſſure our ſelves 'that all Attempts to promote the Cauſe of the 'Pretender, will end in his Deſtruction, and 'the Ruin of thoſe, who, contrary to their 'Oaths, and the Intereſt of their Country, ad-'here to him.'

'Tis probable, that the Treaty of Hanover being form'd by the Powers, Guarantees of that of Oliva, which was ſo baſely and wickedly infracted by Lubomerski's Butchery at Thorn, might humble the Poles a little, and make them more inclin'd to treat of that Affair, than they were before the Congreſs at Warſaw, where the Diet, among other Reſolutions, came to this, which the Primate deliver'd to the King of Poland the 9th of February.

'That in adjuſting the Affair of Thorn, Care 'ſhould be taken to procure to the Roman-Ca-'tholicks, in the Proteſtant Princes Countries, 'the ſame Indulgences, which in regard to 'their Interceſſion may be granted to thoſe of 'Thorn; and that the Court of Berlin ſhould 'particularly oblige it ſelf to aboliſh out of 'hand all the Innovations made to the Preju-'dice of the Dioceſſes of Ermeland and Cujavi, 'as likewiſe of the City of Elbing.'

But they had till now refus'd to ſubmit to any Diſcuſſion of that Affair, inſiſting upon it, that 'twas according to the Laws of their Land; and knowing if they were found to be in the wrong, the Blood of the Innocents maſſacred at Thorn, could not be expiated without Vengeance, nor the Sufferings of the other Proteſtants there, without Satisfaction and Reparation.

Strange Reverſes in the Courts of Vienna and France.

Mr. Horatio Walpole, in his Speech to the Houſe of Commons, about the Treaties of Vienna and Hanover, inform'd the Houſe, that the States General of the united Provinces, had been invited to accede to the latter, and that the States of Holland had actually acceded to it, but, to prevent their High Mightineſſes doing the ſame, the Emperor and King of Spain's Miniſters at the Hague, preſented very preſſing Memorials, in a Stile very little agreeable to the Condition their reſpective Maſters were in, when the one beſieg'd Barcelona, and the other defended it; and when the Contractors of the Hanover Treaty ſupported the one and the other. For the Confederates, Great Britain, Pruſſia, and the States General, were the main Support of Charles III, now Emperor, as France was of Philip V, now King of Spain. Thus their two Catholick Majeſties, as they were called in the Treaty of Vienna, His Imperial

A.D.1725 perial Catholick Majeſty, and His Royal Catholick Majeſty, concluded that Treaty, in direct Oppoſition to the Intereſts and Rights of their Benefactors; and the Succeſs of it was like that of all Things founded on Injuſtice and Ingratitude. The Anſwers of the States General to thoſe Memorials, were full of Reaſon, Prudence, and Temper, Qualities that always diſtinguiſh the State Papers of that Republick from others of the ſame Nature in abſolute and arbitrary Governments. They ſay in the Cloſe of their Anſwer to the Marquis De St. Philippe, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador's Memorial, 'As to 'what is mention'd in the ſaid Memorial, 'touching the Treaty of Hanover, and the Ac-'ceſſion of their High Mightineſſes to that 'Treaty, they obſerve with Pleaſure, that 'His Majeſty is no leſs perſwaded than their 'High Mightineſſes are, of the ſaid Treaty's 'having no other View than the Peace of Eu-'rope; and that it is not to be believ'd, the 'Princes who concluded it would diſturb that 'Peace. That 'tis no leſs agreeable to them to 'learn, that His Majeſty does them the Juſtice 'to believe, that in their Deliberations on the 'ſaid Treaty, and on their Acceſſion, they are 'not led by any Animoſity, but they proceed 'therein ſolely from Motives of Precaution.' Their High Mightineſſes Anſwer to Count Koningſeck, the Imperial Ambaſſador's Memorial, explains in what manner the ſetting up the Oſtend Company is an Infraction of the Treaty of Munſter, and conſequently of all ſubſequent Treaties founded upon it.

Their High Mightineſſes do not diſpute the Power and Authority of His Imperial and Catholick Majeſty to erect Companies in his Dominions for navigating and trading in all Parts of the World, provided that Authority be not reſtrain'd by preceeding Treaties. But that they cannot agree that the Treaty of Munſter does not reſtrain that Authority. The 5th Article of the ſaid Treaty, with reſpect to the Eaſt-Indies, declares, (very explicitly) that the Subjects of the King of Spain, deſcrib'd there by the Name of the Spaniards, ſhall keep their Navigation in the manner they then had it in the Eaſt-Indies, without being allow'd to extend it further; which Clauſe manifeſtly excludes the Subjects of the Auſtrian Netherlands, at that time Subjects of the King of Spain, from Navigation in all Places which were not then poſſeſs'd by Spain.

The Oſtend Company a Breach of the Treaty of Munſter.

Thus it is obvious, that the erecting of the Oſtend Company was a manifeſt Violation of the Treaty of Munſter; and it had this particular Aggravation; that the very Town of Oſtend, where this Company was to be erected, to encroach upon, and thereby ruin, the Trade of the Engliſh and Dutch to the Indies, was taken for Charles III, now Emperor, by the Arms of the Engliſh in particular, 18 or 19 Years before, and yielded up to that Prince, who made them this Return for it, with the reſt of the Netherlands, recover'd for him by them and their Confederates.

The Parliament continuing ſitting in Ireland, the Commons prepar'd another Addreſs, about Money for the Half-Pay Officers, which His Majeſty graciouſly accepted of, and gave proper Directions for iſſuing it accordingly. Both Lords and Commons preſented Addreſſes, March the 7th, to his Excellency the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant, who return'd the moſt agreeable Anſwers.

The next Day the Lord Lieutenant gave the Royal Aſſent to, A.D.1725

An Act againſt fraudulent and clandeſtine importing of Goods.

An Act to prevent Marriages by degraded Clergymen, and popiſh Prieſts; and for preventing Marriages conſummated, from being avoided by Pre-contracts, and for the more effectual puniſhing of Bigamy.

And to ſeven other publick, and ſeven private Acts. Then his Excellency clos'd the Seſſion with an eloquent affecting Speech, wherein is this Paragraph.

'I queſtion not but by your Vigilance in 'your ſeveral Stations throughout the Coun-'try, effectual Care will be taken, that thoſe 'who have it in their Inclinations, may not 'be able to diſturb the publick Peace; to the 'Preſervation of which, nothing can contribute 'more than a due and impartial Execution of 'the Laws, which, under God, are the chief 'Security of our Conſtitution, in Church and 'State; and a ſtrict Union among Proteſtants, 'who ought at this Time, when all Europe 'ſeems alarm'd, to be particularly active a-'gainſt the Deſigns of the Pretender, and his 'Adherents.' Lord Lieutenant of Ireland's Admonition to Union

This Admonition to Union among Proteſtants, being the very reverſe of the Endeavours of the Schiſm Bill Men, muſt ſtrike Shame into thoſe of 'em that are capable of it; and into all thoſe that are for encreaſing or continuing the Hardſhips on any part of them, which keep them diſunited.

In ſpeaking of the Riot at Glaſgow in Scotland, we ſpoke of the Convention of the Royal Boroughs, whoſe Committee drew up an Addreſs to His Majeſty, which was preſented by John Campbell, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Edinburgh, in the laſt Month, February. They ſeem to diſavow the Conduct of the Glaſgow Men, and yet remonſtrate againſt the Malt Tax, which was the Occaſion of it. If that Tax was a Grievance, the Repreſentation wou'd have been more regular, had it been made to the Parliament; and that it was ſo thought, we ſhall obſerve by His Majeſty's Anſwer. They ſay in their Addreſs,

'The Malt Tax is a Burthen too heavy for 'this Country to bear: Our Poverty and Want 'of Coin, the great Decay of our Trade, and 'the hitherto ſucceſsleſs Attempts to relieve it, 'the Meanneſs of our Grain, are melancholy 'Truths, too certain and univerſally known; 'and are ſo many Proofs of our Inability to 'ſupport the Weight of this new Tax.' The Scots addreſs againſt the Malt Tax.

To which Addreſs His Majeſty return'd this Anſwer; which fully explains the whole.

I am very ſenſible of the Loyalty, Duty and Affection, of my Royal Boroughs of Scotland, which I have ſo often experienc'd, that I was greatly ſurpriz'd, to find that the Arts and Endeavours of diſaffected and deſigning Men, had been able to raiſe ſuch Tumults and Diſorders in many Parts of Scotland, upon the Execution of an Act of Parliament, for raiſing a Duty, impos'd by Authority of the Legiſlature of the united Kingdom of Great Britain: And as the Royal Boroughs do moſt juſtly reflect with the utmoſt Deteſtation upon ſuch dangerous and illegal Proceedings, I can never think of giving the leaſt Countenance to an open Defiance of my Authority, and Diſobedience to the Laws of the Land; a dutiful Submiſſion and Compliance with the Laws, under any ſuppos'd Hardſhip, being His Majeſty's Anſwer.

A.D. 1725 being a better Recommendation to obtain legal Redreſs, than Violence and Contempt of the legiſlative Authority.

The Committee of Royal Boroughs afterwards preſented a Petition to the Houſe of Commons, relating to the Malt Tax; as did alſo the Shires of Renfrew, Bamff, &c.

A Bill for the Bridge between Fulham and Putney.

The Petition of the Gentlemen, Freeholders, and Inhabitants, of Middleſex, Surrey, and Suſſex, about building a Bridge over the Thames, was referr'd to a Committee; and Mr. Broderick, Chairman of it, having made a Report, the Houſe reſolv'd, 'That the moſt convenient 'Place for building a Bridge croſs the River of 'Thames, is between Fulham and the Town of 'Putney:' And a Bill was order'd to be brought in accordingly, March 2d. After this, a Petition of Richard Hampden, Eſq; late (and in ſeveral Parliaments) Knight of the Shire for the County of Bucks, was preſented to the Houſe by Sir William Yonge, and read, praying that Leave might be given to bring in a Bill to impower the Lords Commiſſioners of His Majeſty's Treaſury, to compound with the Petitioner for the Debt due from him to the Crown; and Sir Robert Walpole, Chancellor of the Exchequer, having acquainted the Houſe that the Petitioner had applied to His Majeſty, and that His Majeſty had commanded him to acquaint the Houſe, that His Majeſty gave his Conſent that the Houſe might do therein as they thought fit: The ſaid Petition was referr'd to the Conſideration of a Committee of the whole Houſe on that Day ſevennight.

After the Reading of Mr. Hampden's Petition, Sir William Yonge ſpoke in his Behalf; and was ſeconded by another Member: But they were oppos'd by Mr. William Bromley, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Mr. Shippen, Mr. Hungerford, and others; whom Mr. Hampden ſtrenuouſly oppos'd, when they were doing the Miniſtry's Work in Parliament, in the four laſt Years of the Queen. Theſe Gentlemen had the eaſieſt Taſk in the World to prove, by various Arguments, that the imbezling the publick Money was a Crime: And one cannot imagine that there was a Man in that Aſſembly who would not have enlarged upon that Topick: But the Queſtion turn'd in this Caſe on another Thing. It was not whether he deſerv'd the Forbearance of the Houſe, nor whether the South-Sea Year was any Mitigation of his Crime; but whether his Family, one of the moſt antient in the Kingdom, and ever fruitful in Patriots, deſerv'd to have their Name kept from Indigence and Miſery, by the grateful Remembrance of good Engliſhmen, in Conſideration of their many Services to the Publick, in the Courſe of ſo many Ages. The Circumſtance of Mr. Hampden's Deficiency very much aggravated the Guilt of it, according to Sir John Eyles's Account of it, he, who was Sub-Governor of the South-Sea Company, declaring in the Houſe, that Mr. Hampden was ſo far from being a Sufferer in the South-Sea Project, that he gain'd 9 or 10000 l. by it. Which may be true, and yet Mr. Hampden loſe 100000 l. in the Infatuation of the South-Sea Year, by Contracts for Lands, and Funds, not South-Sea, which tumbling upon his Hands, 1, 2 and 300 per Cent. might run his Accounts ſo far backwards. He does not ſay, in his Repreſentation, that he loſt the Money by South-Sea Stock, but in the South-Sea Year; by Contracts of that Year, when all the World was infatuated. And there does not ſeem to be ſo much Reaſon for the Members to be incens'd againſt him upon what Sir John Eyles ſaid, as the Annaliſt pretends, or on any other Account, than the Embezlement it ſelf, wherein he did not apply to their Juſtice and Reaſon, but to their Compaſſion and Indulgence. Hampden was a Name which ſuch Men as Mr. William Bromley, and Mr. John Hungerford, could not be in Love with; after the great Things they had read or heard of the illuſtrious John Hampden, in the Conteſt for Liberty in the Reign of Charles I. and no doubt they would with Pleaſure have taken a ſevere Revenge in the utter Ruin of his Poſterity, now an Occaſion offer'd, had not the Gratitude and Generoſity of true Engliſhmen interpos'd. Arthur Onſlow, Eſq; the late and preſent Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and other worthy Members, urg'd, as we read in the Annals, That out of Regard to his ancient Family, and, in particular, in Conſideration of his Great Grandfather, John Hampden, who made a moſt noble and couragious Stand againſt arbitrary Power, in oppoſing Ship Money, and fell the firſt Victim in the glorious Cauſe of Liberty; they were for having ſomething done for his Relations. Another worthy Member ſuggeſted, Had it not been for that Stand, ſuch as thoſe that now ſpoke againſt the Petition, wou'd have had no Seat in that Houſe, for there had been an End to Parliaments. I now repeat the Annals Verbatim. 'Mr. Shippen wittily ſaid, that he would not 'enter upon the Merits of the Great Grand-'father; but this he was ſure of, that his 'Great Grandſon had waſted more Ship Money 'than ever he ſav'd to the Nation; (what 'comes after is prodigious) or King Charles I. 'intended to raiſe.' Tho' the Annaliſt knew not how to diſtinguiſh Pun from Wit, he might ſoon in this Caſe have diſtinguiſh'd Truth from Falſhood, in the Fact. Mr. Hampden's Debt was reduc'd to about 48000 l. and King Charles I. (according to Echard) had in the Year 1634 rais'd 236000 l. and there was a Million rais'd by it in all. I muſt own, I was well enough pleas'd, to hear that Gentleman ſay, he was ſure Mr. Hampden the Great Grandſon had in 48000 l. waſted more Ship-Money than ever King Charles the Firſt intended to raiſe, becauſe it will confirm the Idea I have endeavour'd to give of other ſuch Speeches, in Oppoſition to the Government; which was not againſt doing ſomething for that antient and deſerving Family, on this unhappy Occaſion. Four Days after, March 15th, the Petition of Iſabella Hampden, Wife of Richard Hampden, Eſq; was preſented to the Houſe; and the next Day a Petition of John Hampden, Eſq; his Brother; ſetting forth the Diſtreſs they would be reduc'd to, by the abovemention'd Deficiency, without Relief from the Honourable Houſe; which was taken into Conſideration, on the 23d of March, and occaſion'd a high Debate. Sir William Yonge took Notice, 'That Mr. Hampden's De-'ficiency had in ſome meaſure been occaſion'd 'by a general Calamity: That he had already 'done all that lay in his Power to make it up. 'That, however, ſince neither his Lady, nor 'his Brother, had any ways been acceſſary to 'his Misfortunes, it were unreaſonable and un-'juſt to involve them in his Offence, and its 'Puniſhment. That his real and patrimonial 'Eſtate amounted to about 2200 l. a Year; 'one 'of 200 per Ann. during her Life, for her ſe-

'parate Uſe: All which Settlements ought to

'Services at divers Times perform'd by their
'illuſtrious Anceſtors, ſome Proviſion ſhould
'be made for their Poſterity, out of the Fa'mily Eſtate; and therefore he mov'd, That
'a Bill be brought in for veſting the real and
'perſonal Eſtate of Richard Hampden, Eſq;
'in Truſtees, for making ſome Proviſion for
'his Wife and Family, and for the better ſecu-
'ring the Debt due from him to the Crown.'

And Sir John Hobart. This Motion was ſeconded by Sir John Hobart, and William Peer Williams, Eſq; an eminent Lawyer: But William Clayton, Eſq; and ſome other Gentlemen, repreſented, That if this Affair went through the uſual tedious Courſe of Extent in Exchequer, great part of Mr. Hampden's Eſtate would be conſum'd in Law Expences, ſo that the Crown ſhould never get 200*l.* a Year out of it; and therefore they propos'd, that the ſaid Eſtate ſhould be forthwith divided into two equal Parts, one of which ſhould be allotted as a Proviſion for his Wife and Family, and the other half immediately ſold off, towards ſatisfying the Debt due from him to the Crown. Many Members ſhew'd their Approbation of this Propoſal: But the Majority were for Sir William Yonge's Motion; and a Bill was order'd to be brought in accordingly.

Sir William Yong's Motion carry'd.

About this Time there were ſeveral Petitions preſented to the Houſe, for Bills to enable His Majeſty to grant the Inheritance of Eſtates to ſuch Poſſeſſors as held by Leaſe of the Crown; as that of Sir Thomas Lowther, Bart. for the diſſolv'd Monaſtery of Furneis in Lancaſhire, with the Meſſuages, Lands and Tenements, thereunto belonging. There was theſe Remarkables in this Eſtate: That the Preſton Family who held it were Papiſts, and that it was granted by King James II. to ſuperſtitious Uſes; but it was recover'd again by the Lowthers, Heirs to the Preſtons. The Petition of Sir Orlando Bridgman was for Bowood Park, and other Lands in Wiltſhire. His Majeſty having given his Conſent that Bills might be brought in upon theſe Petitions, it was accordingly order'd: But Mr. Hungerford mov'd, 'That this Houſe would receive no more Peti-
'tions for enabling His Majeſty to ſell the Re-
'verſion of Lands held of the Crown.' He was ſeconded by Mr. Freeman; and no body oppoſing the Motion, it paſt into a Reſolution.

Mr. Campbell of Glaſgow has Satisfaction for the Rioters.

Upon the Petition of Daniel Campbell, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Glaſgow, praying that he might have Satisfaction for his Damages, Loſſes and Sufferings, by the Rioters in that City; a Bill was thereupon order'd to be brought in, and paſt, with the due Forms, and the Satisfaction given him was equally juſt and reaſonable, it being laid upon the Place where the Crime was committed; by an Act for veſting in His Majeſty an Impoſition of two Pennys Scots, upon all Ale and Beer brew'd in the City of Glaſgow, for ſatisfying Mr. Campbell's Damages and Loſſes.

On the 24th of March, Sir Paul Methuen, Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Houſhold, acquainted the Commons, That he had a Meſſage to the Houſe, ſign'd by His Majeſty; and he deliver'd the ſame to Mr. Speaker, who read it as follows. A.D. 1726

GEORGE R.

His Majeſty having nothing more at Heart than an earneſt Deſire to ſecure to his own Subjects the full and free Enjoyment of their Trade and Navigation, and in the beſt manner to prevent and fruſtrate ſuch Deſigns as have been form'd againſt the particular Intereſt of this Nation, and the general Peace of Europe, has found it neceſſary, not only to augment his maritime Force, but to concert ſuch other Meaſures as may moſt effectually conduce to theſe deſirable Ends: And as theſe Services will require ſome extraordinary Expence, His Majeſty hopes he ſhall be enabled, by the Aſſiſtance of Parliament, to encreaſe the Number of Seamen already voted, and granted for the Service of this Year; and to enter into, and make good, ſuch Engagements, as the Circumſtances and Exigency of Affairs may require.

His Majeſty's Meſſage about augmenting Land Forces and Seamen.

When Men of great Parts, Figure and Fortune, ſpeak in publick Aſſemblies, ſometimes on one Side, ſometimes on another, as directed by their Judgment, and the Reaſon of the Thing in Queſtion, what they ſay has generally Weight with it: But when Men of a different Character do, right or wrong, oppoſe what is offer'd in ſuch Aſſemblies purely becauſe they do not affect the Perſons that offer it, and are always in one Tone, harſh and diſagreeable, ſuch Men are never heard with Regard: And if they had Prudence and Temper, they would by their Silence ſave themſelves and others a great deal of Trouble. The Annaliſt writes, 'After the Reading of this Meſ-
'ſage, it was reſolv'd, to take the ſame into
'Conſideration the next Morning; but Mr.
'Shippen took Notice, that this Meſſage had all
'the Air of another ſent to them about the be'ginning of April, 1717, to grant His Majeſty
'a Supply, which was afterwards fix'd at
'250000*l.* and therefore he mov'd, That an
'humble Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty,
'that he would be graciouſly pleas'd to direct
'the proper Officers to lay before the Houſe
'an Account of the Diſpoſition of that 250000*l.*
He was ſeconded by Mr. Snell of Glouceſter: But the previous Queſtion being put, that the Queſtion be now put upon the ſaid Motion, it was carry'd in the Negative, without a Diviſion. The next Day Sir William Yonge open'd the Matter of His Majeſty's moſt gracious Meſſage; and, having ſhewn the Neceſſity of an extraordinary Supply, mov'd, 'That an
'humble Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty,
'that he will be pleas'd to make ſuch an Ad-
'dition to the Number of Seamen already vo-
'ted, and to concert ſuch Meaſures as His Ma-
'jeſty ſhall, in his great Wiſdom, think will
'beſt conduce to the Security of the Trade and
'Navigation of this Kingdom, and the Preſer-
'vation of the Peace of Europe: And to aſ-
'ſure His Majeſty, That this Houſe will ef-
'fectually provide for, and make good, all
'ſuch Expences and Engagements, as ſhall be 'made, for obtaining theſe great and deſirable
'Ends.' This Motion was ſeconded by Mr. Pelham; but was warmly oppos'd by Mr. Shippen, Mr. Snell, Mr. Hungerford, Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Lutwyche, Sir Wilfred Lawſon, and Mr. Freeman. Such Oppoſition was always expected from certain Members, when

Mr Shippen's Motion carry'd in the Negative without a Diviſion.

Sir William Yong's Motion for the Meſſage oppos'd.

A.D. 1726 when the Servants of the Crown at that Time made any ſuch Motions; but People did not then expect it from Mr. William Pulteney, Mr. Daniel Pulteney, Mr. Sandys, Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Sir John Ruſhout. However, Sir William Yonge's Motion being ſupported by Sir Robert Walpole, Mr. Onſlow, Lord Finch, Mr. Dodington, Sir William Strickland, Mr. Thompſon, Mr. Thomas Lewis, and Mr. Speaker, the Queſtion was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of 270 Voices againſt 89; notwithſtanding the above Coalition againſt the Deſire of the Court. The Houſe coming to this Reſolution, it was preſented to the King by way of Addreſs, and His Majeſty return'd this moſt gracious Anſwer, March 26.

Carry'd by a great Majority.

Gentlemen,

I return you my Thanks for this loyal and affectionate Addreſs; and you may be aſſur'd, I ſhall make no other Uſe of the Confidence you repoſe in me, but for preſerving the general Tranquility, and in Support of the Trade, Honour and Intereſt, of my People.

The Preparations that were making for a naval Armament, muſt convince ev'ry one, that ſeriouſly conſider'd the Matter, that the Expence would be extraordinary. The Lords of the Admiralty had given the neceſſary Orders for the fitting out three different Squadrons; one of 7 Men of War, deſign'd for the Weſt-Indies, under the Command of Admiral Hoſier, Vice Admiral of the Blue: Another of 12, or more, Ships of the Line of Battle, for the Mediterranean, to be commanded by Sir John Jennings, Admiral of the White: And a Third, deſign'd for the Baltick, under the Command of Sir Charles Wager, Vice Admiral of the Red, and of Sir George Walton, Rear Admiral of the Blue, conſiſting of the following Ships.

The Publick were a little ſurpriz'd to read in the Prints, that on Sunday the 6th of March, Thomas Lord Trevor, created Baron of Bromham at the Twelve Creation, who had been in the Confidence of the Harleian Miniſtry, and in almoſt all the Oppoſition to the preſent Adminiſtration, and in moſt of the Proteſts in the Houſe of Peers, ſince His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, was declar'd Lord Privy Seal, in the room of the Duke of Kingſton, deceas'd: But his good Conduct afterwards explain'd that Myſtery. About the ſame Time, John Thompſon, Eſq; an eminent and worthy Citizen of London, was choſen Alderman of Candlewick Ward; which I mention, to ſhew how much more judicious and loyal the Citizens were then in their Elections, than they have been ſince on many Occaſions.

Lord Trevor made Lord Privy Seal.

A.D. 1726

On the 26th of February dy'd Maximilian, Elector of Bavaria, after a long Indiſpoſition; and his Death being notify'd to His Majeſty, the Court went into Mourning the 20th of March.

The great Deficiencies in the Caſh of the Maſters of Chancery, belonging to the Suitors in that Court, appear'd to be 82301*l.* 19*s.* 11*d.*$\frac{1}{2}$ as by an Account drawn up with great Accuracy by Nicholas Paxton, Eſq; Solicitor to the Treaſury, and laid before the Houſe of Lords the 12th of March, viz.

Which muſt have been loſt to the Suitors, if the Legiſlature had not interpos'd, and paſt a Bill for their Relief, by laying a Duty on Vellum and Parchment, made Uſe of for Writs, &c. for 32 Years. An Act alſo was paſt, For the better ſecuring the Monies and Effects of the Suitors in Chancery: And happy had it been for the Subject, if the Act had further reliev'd the Suitors in that Court, by regulating the litigious, tedious, and expenſive Suits, and the enormous Extortions of hungry Solicitors, and the vexatious and chargeable Attendances upon Maſters, &c. which render even a Court of Equity, equally ruinous and terrible, in too many Inſtances.

On the 20th of April, the Order of the Day being read in the Houſe of Lords, for taking into Conſideration the printed Votes of the Houſe of Commons, of the 24th of March, 1725, purporting to be a Meſſage to that Houſe from His Majeſty, under his Sign-manual; it was propos'd to adjourn the further Conſideration thereof for a Month; and the Queſtion being put, it was reſolv'd in the Affirmative.

Ward of Hackney expell'd, and put in the Pillory.

John Ward, Eſq; commonly call'd Ward of Hackney, having been proſecuted in the Court of King's Bench, by the Dutcheſs of Buckinghamſhire, in Behalf of her Son the Duke, (a Minor) for Forgery, and found guilty, the Houſe of Commons, of which he was a Member for Weymouth in Dorſetſhire, order'd him to attend in his Place; and he running away, they expell'd him, May 16th; but being caught afterwards, he was put in the Pillory, and ſtood there, (like no common Rogue) attended by Footmen in Livery.

Two Fellowſhips added to Jeſus College, Oxon.

Towards the end of May, His Majeſty was pleas'd to grant his Warrant for erecting two additional Fellowſhips in Jeſus College, Oxon; one of the Fellows to be choſen out of North-Wales, and the other out of South-Wales.

On the 24th of May, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to,

Acts paſt.

An Act for the Relief of Daniel Campbell, Eſq; beforemention'd.

An Act for the better ſecuring the Monies and Effects of the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, and to prevent the counterfeiting of Eaſt-India Bonds.

An Act for the Relief of the Suitors of the Court of Chancery.

An Act to prevent the unlawful Combinations of Workmen employ'd in the Woollen Manufacture, and for better Payment of their Wages.

An Act to prevent frivolous and vexatious Arreſts.

An Act to prevent Abuſes, in the making of Bricks and Tiles.

An Act for building a Bridge croſs the River of Thames, from the Town of Fulham in the County of Middleſex, to the Town of Putney in the County of Surrey.

And to other publick, and 13 private Acts. After which, His Majeſty, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor, made a Speech to both Houſes of Parliament: In which he was pleas'd to ſay,

A.D.1726 ‘The Spirit and Reſolution you have ſhewn ‘on this moſt important Occaſion, where our ‘moſt valuable Rights and Privileges have been ‘ſtruck at, are highly becoming the Weight and ‘Authority of a Britiſh Parliament; and the ‘Steps that have been taken abroad, in Support ‘of the Meaſures enter'd into againſt this Na- ‘tion, muſt convince ev'ry body of your Wiſ- ‘dom and Prudence, in endeavouring to put an ‘early Stop to the further Progreſs of them. ‘I hope the Precautions you have enabled me ‘to take, will be ſufficient, in Conjunction ‘with my Allies, to defeat the Deſigns which ‘have been form'd againſt us; and that the ‘Promoters of them, when they have fully ‘weigh'd their own Circumſtances, and better ‘conſider'd thoſe of the ſeveral Powers united ‘in the Defence of the Tranquility and Liber- ‘ties of Europe, will find it their Intereſt to ‘preſerve the Peace, and think it moſt ſafe ‘and prudent to deſiſt from their dangerous ‘Schemes.

His Majeſty's Speech to the Parliament.

Then the Lord Chancellor prorogu'd the Parliament to the 21ſt of July.

Sir Charles Wager's Squadron in the North.

About the latter end of April, Sir Charles Wager, with the Squadron of Ships under his Command, came to an Anchor in the Road of Copenhagen. The 25th he had an Audience of the King of Denmark, was receiv'd very graciouſly, and preſented Sir George Walton, and the Commanders of the Ships, to His Daniſh Majeſty. Sir Charles Wager had the Honour to dine at the King's Table, and Sir George Walton with the other Commanders were entertain'd at another Table, by the King's Officers. On the 2d of May Sir Charles ſail'd with his Squadron to Stockholm, where eight Days after he had Audience of the King of Sweden, being introduc'd by Mr. Pointz, the Britiſh Envoy Extraordinary. Sir Charles Wager deliver'd his Swediſh Majeſty a Letter from the King his Maſter: He had alſo the Honour to dine with that King. A Squadron of Swediſh Men of War having join'd the Britiſh Squadron, the united Fleet became ſo formidable, that the Court of Ruſſia thought fit to ſuſpend the fitting out their large Men of War, and contented themſelves with equipping ſome few Frigats to cruize; which Caution of theirs ſeem'd to render the boaſted and expenſive Embaſſy of the Duke of Liria from Spain to Muſcovy, equally fruitleſs and impertinent: For the Muſcovites not daring to look the Britiſh Fleet in the Face in their own Seas, 'twas very unlikely they wou'd venture to ſeek them out on the Coaſts of Britain. At this Time, not only the Duke of Liria, Son of the Pretender's pretended baſtard Brother, but alſo James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, Keith late Earl Mariſchal, and other Traitors and Fugitives in Spain, particularly the Duke of Wharton, the new Quixot of that Court, were very buſy in their Negotiations, for ſome Attempt againſt their Country; and did not a little promote the attacking Gibraltar by the Spaniards. Another Apoſtate and Fugitive, the D. De Ripperda, fell now into Diſgrace at that Court: We have mention'd this Perſon in the Treaty of Vienna, after which he was for ſome time King Philip's prime Miniſter and Confident; and the more ſo, becauſe he fed him with the vain Hopes of recovering Port-Mahon, and Gibraltar: He was made Superintendant of the Finances, Secretary at War, and engroſs'd ſeveral other Offices of Profit and Truſt. But he babbled too

James Butler, and the Britiſh Fugitives, buſy in Spain.

A.D.1726 too much to Mr. Stanhope, about the private Articles of the Treaty of Vienna, concerning Gibraltar, and Port-Mahon. His Words, tho' queſtion'd by ſome political Scepticks in Parliament, were own'd to have been ſpoken by Ripperda, on Occaſion of Monſieur De St. Saphorins, the Britiſh Miniſter's Memorial at Vienna, wherein it was mention'd; and all that Count Zinzendorf, great Chancellor of the Imperial Court, ſaid of it, was, We know very well why what was ſaid by the Duke De Ripperda is confounded with this Matter. He denies it not, and only urges, that it had no relation to the Memorial about ſtopping an Engliſh Meſſenger at Belgrade. Whatever was the real Cauſe of Ripperda's Diſgrace, the pretended one was at firſt Embezzlement in the Finances, the waſting of four Millions; but probably that Miniſter finding he had puſh'd Matters with reſpect to the Allies of Vienna and Hanover, farther than he knew how to bring his new Maſter off with Honour and Safety, it had been diſcover'd, that he inclin'd to make his Peace with the Hanover Allies.

The Duke of Ripperda's Diſgrace in Spain.

The Saying in Spain was, He had alter'd his Opinion with reſpect to State Affairs. Upon which King Philip ſent a Decree to his Houſe, (May 14) whereby he was diſmiſt from all his Employments, and allow'd 3000 Piſtols Penſion for his Subſiſtence. Ripperda went immediately to the Houſe of Monſieur Vandermeer, the Dutch Ambaſſador; but not thinking himſelf ſafe there, Monſieur Vandermeer took him in his Coach, and carry'd him to the Houſe of Colonel Stanhope, the Britiſh Ambaſſador, whoſe Protection he beg'd, and obtain'd: Which confirms what was ſaid of his changing his Opinion in State Affairs. The King being inform'd of it, ſeem'd very much out of Humour with the Ambaſſador; but was unwilling to violate entirely the Law of Nations, by forcing Ripperda from his Houſe: He only caus'd it to be ſurrounded by 200 Grenadiers. The next Day his Excellency Colonel Stanhope had Audience of the King, and gave him an Account of what had happen'd in relation to the diſcarded Miniſter, which His Majeſty did not ſeem to diſapprove; and the Grenadiers were call'd off from his Excellency's Houſe, on a Promiſe from him that the Duke of Ripperda's Perſon ſhould be forth-coming: And ſixty Guards were poſted in the Streets leading to Colonel Stanhope's Houſe, to take him if he ſhould attempt to make his Eſcape. The Marquis De Caſtelar was reſtor'd to his Employment of Secretary at War, and his Brother, Don Joſeph Patino, to that of Secretary of the Indies, and the Marine. The Affairs with Foreign Courts, were put into the Hands of the Marquis De la Paz, and the Marquis De Grimaldi. The Office of Superintendent of the Tobacco Rent, was reſtor'd to Don Jacobo Flor. By which we ſee to how many great Fortunes the Ruin of Ripperda's contributed. We ſhall find that the Court of Madrid did not long continue their Regard to the Law of Nations; for on the 25th of May, N.S. King Philip appointed Don Lewis Cuellar, one of the Alcaidas of his Court, aſſiſted by Major General Don Francis Valanſa, Adjutant General of the Life-Guard, to go to Colonel Stanhope's Houſe, to enter it, and take from thence the Duke of Ripperda, and convoy him to the Caſtle of Segovia, with a ſufficient Guard; which was done accordingly. The Marquis De la Paz wrote to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador at London, That he had inform'd Colonel Stanhope of his Maſter's Intention, before the Thing was executed; and pretended, that Ripperda being charg'd with the Crime of High-Treaſon, it was not againſt the Law of Nations to take him out of the Ambaſſador's Houſe. But it is reaſonable to think, that if the Court of Spain had not reſolv'd on a Rupture with England, by the Siege of Gibraltar, they would not have dar'd to have proceeded to ſuch an Extremity. A.D.1726

When Sir Charles Wager came near the Iſland Nargen, three Leagues from Revel, he ſent Mr. Burton, one of his Lieutenants in the Port-Mahon, to Cronſlot, with His Majeſty's Letter to the Czarina, inclos'd in a Letter to General Apraxin, containing His Majeſty's Reaſons for taking due Precautions againſt the Intrigues of the Ruſſians, in Concert with the Britiſh Fugitive Traitors, and other dangerous Meaſuees of the Court of Petersburgh.

The Czarina's Anſwer to this Letter was equally evaſive and angry, ev'ry body talk'd of the Endearments that paſt between the Courts of Ruſſia and Madrid, founded on the Agreement in their Deſigns to promote the Intereſt of the Pretender, out of Enmity to King George, and not out of any Reſpect or Concern for that Fugitive; and yet the Ruſſian Miniſters vainly imagin'd, they could clear themſelves of ſo well grounded a Charge, by a few empty Words only, as theſe in the Czarina's Anſwer.

'The Thing appears evident, from what 'your Majeſty alledges and charges us with, in 'relation to the Pretender. Your Miniſters 'have rightly underſtood, that all the Reaſons 'by them ſuggeſted, (and which abſtracted 'from, do not regard the Intereſt of Great 'Britain, but are rather diametrically op'poſite to the ſolemn Treaties ſubſiſting be'tween Great Britain, and other Powers,) are 'not to be admitted, and are inſufficient to 'juſtify their violent Enterprizes, to Perſons 'diſintereſted: And not being able to find out 'any other Reaſon, that frivolous and ſtale 'Accuſation muſt be trump'd up, and ſerve as 'heretofore, as the main Pretence for all the 'unkind Steps taken againſt us.'

The beſt Reply to this is, that the former Accuſation was grounded upon Facts, which the Czar's Miniſters could not deny, about the Negotiations of James Butler, once Duke of Ormond, at their Court, for the Service of the Pretender; and which being in part concerted with the then Swediſh Miniſters, were confeſt by them, with this Alteration, that their Maſter would not ſuffer James Butler to come to his Court, as the Czar had ſuffer'd him to be admitted to his. Count Rabutin, the Emperor's Ambaſſador at Petersburgh, us'd his utmoſt Endeavours to thwart the Negotiations which the Britiſh Admiral was inſtructed to propoſe to enter into with her Miniſters, towards the removing all Cauſes of Jealouſy on both Sides, ſuggeſting, That that Admiral 'being come with open Force to negotiate an 'Accommodation, it would be a Diſparage'ment to the Ruſſian Court to enter with him 'into a Treaty while his Fleet lay at Anchor 'under an Iſle belonging to the Ruſſians; and 'that they ought at leaſt to make him quit 'their Coaſts, to leave the Senators at an entire 'Liberty.' People wonder'd that Prince Eugene of Savoy, who influenc'd the Councils at

Vienna

A.D.1726 Vienna more than any other Perſon whatſoever, and who was thought not only to be the beſt Politician, but the beſt affected to the Engliſh Nation, from whom he had receiv'd eſſential Teſtimonies of Affection and Eſteem, ſhould give into Meaſures ſo contrary to their Intereſts and Peace, and even to Reaſon and Juſtice: But what ſhock'd them moſt was, that the Emperor had forbidden the Engliſh Trade in Sicily, the very Iſland the Engliſh had ſo effectually help'd him to conquer ſeven or eight Years before. He forbad the importing there the Woollen Manufactures of England, ſuch as Duroys, Calimancoes, Camblets, Druggets, and other Stuffs, contrary to ſeveral Treaties of Commerce between England and Spain, particularly that of 1667, which was confirm'd by His Imperial Majeſty himſelf in 1709. The Ruſſians, reckon'd (till the late Czar's Reign) Barbarians by the Southern People, behav'd more civilly towards the Engliſh, even at a Time when the Britiſh Fleet block'd up their Ports: For then did the Czarina publiſh a Declaration in Favour of the Britiſh Merchants, allowing them to carry on their Traffick equally with all Nations in Friendſhip with her.

On the 13th of July, N. S. Colonel Stanhope, the Britiſh Ambaſſador in Spain, preſented a Memorial to King Philip, by the Hands of the Marquis De la Paz, complaining of the Violence offer'd to the Duke of Ripperda, while under his Protection, as a Breach of the Immunities and Privileges allow'd to publick Miniſters by the Law of Nations, and demanding Satisfaction for the ſame; and the next Day his Excellency had Conference with the Marquis; but that Court were more intent on their Preparations for the Siege of Gibraltar, than on Expedients to give Satisfaction to the Court of Great Britain.

Duke of Wharton's extravagant and traiterous Conduct.

Mention has been made of the extravagant and inexcuſable Conduct of the Duke of Wharton, of whom People were willing to think well for his Father's Sake, after repeated Inſtances of his Misbehaviour, and that he did not deſerve it; having run through the beſt part of his Fortune by Riot and Profuſion; and in Reſentment of the Prudence of the Government, in hindring his ſupporting them at the Expence of the Publick, he ſet himſelf in open Defiance to it. He enter'd himſelf, as has been hinted, a Livery Man in the City of London, to have Opportunities to carry on his ſeditious (if not treaſonable) Practices within the Walls. And when he thought he had laid up a ſufficient Stock of Jacobite Merit, to recommend him to the Pretender, and his Friends abroad, he ſet out for Vienna, which is a good Argument, that there were then Projects forming there in the Pretender's Favour; and he had not Solidity enough to keep his own Counſels ſo well, as to prevent their being known. The Miniſtry in England knew his Errand to Vienna, and the Sum of Money he receiv'd in his Journey, towards his Expences, from the Pretender's Friends. He diſguis'd his Deſign a little when he came to that City, and pretended to His Majeſty's Friends, that his View was only to travel for a few Years, till the Memory of his Extravagancies at home might be ſomewhat effac'd, and his private Affairs in better Order. But he did not act this Part long: He ſoon grew intimate with the Duke of Ripperda, and had frequent Conference with him; and Money from him. He was admitted to the Converſation of the principal Perſons of the Court of Vienna: And during his Stay, both he and Graham, the Pretender's Agent, had a very particular Intimacy with the Ruſſian Miniſter at that Court. It was firſt projected that he ſhou'd return to England, and do great Exploits, in and out of Parliament, to promote the Pretender's Intereſt. But pondering that Matter more deliberately, and coolly, he began to think, he might not be very ſafe there, after he had laid himſelf ſo open. Then another Plan was concerted for his Conduct, and that was, to go firſt to Rome, and from thence to Spain. He had Letters recommendatory from young Ripperda, for the Spaniſh Ambaſſador at Rome; to whoſe Houſe he went, as ſoon as he arriv'd there. The Ambaſſador introduc'd him to the Pretender; in whoſe Houſe he was kept cloſe ſhut up for ſix Days: And after ſeveral very cloſe Conferences, he was poſted away to Madrid, where old Ripperda, (his great and intimate Friend) like him a Traitor to both God and his Country, was then in high Credit and Honour. He brought Credentials with him from the Pretender; and, as a publick mark of Confidence in him, was adorn'd with a new Title and a Garter. He was very kindly entertain'd at Madrid, with thoſe Diſtinctions of Treaſon and Perjury: And tho' it was often ſaid, promis'd, and ſworn to, by Ripperda, that Wharton ſhould be ſent away in 24 Hours; and as ſtrongly ſworn to, that he never admitted him, nor ever would admit him, into his Company; yet he ſtill remain'd at Madrid, without any mark of Diſpleaſure; and was known to have frequent Conferences with Ripperda himſelf. And truly ſuch a mad Agent was well ſuited to the mad Buſineſs he came about. He there grew into Intimacy with Count Koningſeck, the Imperial Ambaſſador; and the Freedom of his Viſits to him was very remarkable, at a Time when he profeſs'd himſelf to come into Spain, on no other Errand but the Pretender's Service; and this without Reſerve to the Engliſh themſelves at Madrid, who were in the Friendſhip, and even in the Service of the Crown of Britain. This Raſhneſs was agreeable to the other Actions of his Life, and it was not likely that ſuch a deſperate Cauſe as the Pretender's, cou'd engage more reaſonable and more virtuous Agents.

There wanted but one Step more to finiſh the Duke of Wharton's Character, as one that had abandon'd every thing that good Men held dear to them: He had renounc'd his King, his Country, his Quality, by becoming a Wax-Chandler; and had kept nothing but the Name of his Religion; which alſo he renounc'd, by declaring himſelf a Papiſt. His pretended Converſion was ſaid to be owing to the Pains taken with him by a Scots Jeſuit, one Clark, whoſe chief Merit was a blind Bigotry to the Romiſh Idolatry and Superſtition, which recommended him ſo much to Philip the Vth, that he ſent for him to Ildefonſo to be his and his Queen's Confeſſor; tho' he had no Knowledge of him, when his former Confeſſor, Father Bermudes, was diſmiſt, for not being ſo great a Jacobite as Clark, that is, for not being ſo zealous for putting the Project, which were the Effects of the Vienna Treaty, in Execution, as this Britiſh Renegado was. The Duke of Wharton made a publick Abjuration of the Proteſtant Religion, and went through all the Superſtitions, and debaſing Ceremonies, practiſed

*A.D.*1726 ſed upon ſuch Occaſions. One never expects Reaſons for a Perſon's turning from the Proteſtant to the Popiſh Religion, but one may inquire into the Inducement; and his was, it ſeems, the Proſpect of Marriage with one of the Ladies of the Queen of Spain's Bedchamber, who indeed had more Money for her Fortune than his firſt Wife, who had none; which is the beſt that can be made of it. He marry'd her, and by her Intereſt got the Pay at leaſt of a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Spaniſh Army; and 'twas ſaid, he took it as an Honour to be call'd Duke of Northumberland, by Vertue of the Pretender's Patent. Certain it is, that his Behaviour in ev'ry thing was wild, wicked, and ſcandalous; and not worth the Notice of an Hiſtorian on any other Account. He came once to the Port of Malaga, after his publick Apoſtacy, and there being ſeveral Engliſh Ships loading there, he ſingled out one of the Maſters to talk with him. He was in a ſorry Chariot, and had a Spaniſh Prieſt in his Company, who very often rebuk'd him when he talk'd treaſonably and inſolently of his Sovereign King George. Tell ———, ſaid he, naming His Majeſty, in the rudeſt manner, that I value not him, nor his Letters, and will be his Enemy as long as I live. Several of this Sort of Speeches coming from him, equally fooliſh and impudent, the Skipper not being like to carry his Meſſage to His Majeſty, ſo provok'd the honeſt Engliſh Sailors, that they were gathering about him, and wou'd doubtleſs have demoliſh'd him and his Chariot, had not the Spaniſh Prieſt with much a-do got him to make off in Time. Not long after this he ſhew'd about a Letter, he pretended to have receiv'd from the Pretender, commanding him to ſet out immediately from Madrid for Rome, in order to be near his excellent Perſon forſooth. And truly the Maſter and Man were ſo like one another in Character and Fortune, it was pity they ſhould have been parted.

On the 17th of July His Pruſſian Majeſty, who had been ſome time at Cleves, left that Place at Night, paſt the next Morning through Arnheim, and early on the 19th arriv'd at Amſterdam. His Majeſty made but a ſhort Stay in Holland; for being return'd to Cleves, he ſet out from thence for Berlin, with the Prince Royal his Son, the 28th of that Month.

The States General accede to the Treaty of Hanover.

On the 9th of Auguſt, Mr. Finch, His Britannick Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, the Marquis De Fenelon, Ambaſſador and Plenipotentiary of the moſt Chriſtian King, and Monſieur De Meynderſhagen, Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the King of Pruſſia, went to the Chamber of Treves at the Hague, where having been a little while in Conference with the Lords Deputies of the States General, they all ſign'd the Act of Acceſſion of their High Mightineſſes to the Treaty of Hanover, except the Pruſſian Miniſter, who excus'd himſelf, as not having Orders.

The Count De Schulenbourg, Captain General of the Venetian Army, being come to England to pay a Viſit to Her Grace the Dutcheſs of Kendal, his Siſter, he was entertain'd with a Review of the ſecond Regiment of Foot Guards, commanded by the Earl of Scarborough.

On the 15th of July, dy'd at Vienna Prince Maximilian, ſecond Brother to His Majeſty King George, of an apoplectick Fit, in the 60th Year of his Age. *A.D.*1726

On the 23d of July, Sir John Jennings with a Squadron of Nine of His Majeſty's large Men of War, ſail'd from St. Hellens for Liſbon, from whence he was to proceed to Gibraltar, to aſſiſt the Garriſon there, in Caſe of an Attack. It was about the ſame Time declar'd, that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to create His Highneſs Prince Frederick a Baron, Viſcount, Marquis, and Duke of this Kingdom; as Baron of Snowden, in the County of Carnarvon; Viſcouut of Launceſton, in the County of Cornwall; Earl of Eltham, in the County of Kent; Marquis of the Iſle of Wight, and Duke of Edinburgh. And to create His Highneſs Prince William a Baron, Viſcount, Earl, Marquis, and Duke of this Kingdom; as Baron of the Iſle of Alderney, Viſcount of Trematon, in the County of Cornwall; Earl of Kennington, in the County of Surrey; Marquis of Berkhamſtead, in the County of Hertford, and Duke of Cumberland. It was alſo declar'd, that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to grant his moſt gracious Pardon to the Earl of Seaforth, who was concern'd in the Rebellion in Scotland: He was afterwards introduc'd to His Majeſty, and had the Honour to kiſs the King's Hand.

At the Commencement at Cambridge this Year, were created 10 Doctors, and 100 Maſters of Arts. The Doctors were,

In Divinity.

Dr. Rymer, of Queen's College.
Dr. Sykes, of Bennet College.

Dr. Martin, of Clare Hall.

His Majeſty granted the Dignity of a Baronet to Sir Charles Farnaby, of Kippington, near Seven-Oakes, in Kent, deſcended from Mr. Farnaby the famous Grammarian and Linguiſt. Her Grace the Dutcheſs of St. Albans was appointed Firſt Lady of the Bedchamber to Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, in the room of the Dutcheſs of Shrewsbury deceas'd.

While Sir Charles Wager lay off the Iſle of Nargen, Prince Menzikoff was caballing to procure himſelf to be choſen Duke of Courland; but Prince Maurice of Saxony, Natural Son of the King of Poland, was on the 28th of May unanimouſly choſen Succeſſor to Ferdinand, the preſent Duke. The Czarina propos'd the Duke of Holſtein to the Dyet of Courland; Prince Menzikoff offer'd himſelf to them, and went in Perſon to Mittais, Capital of that Dutchy, to forward his Election; but that Affair was over before he came: However, the Ruſſian Court continu'd to obſtruct Prince Maurice's Election ſo warmly, and the King of Poland,

A.D.1726 Poland, his Father, abandoning him in this Matter, the Election of Prince Maurice had no Effect. Prince Menzikoff coming to Riga in the middle of July, Sir Charles Wager ſent Captain Haddock a-ſhore, with a Compliment to that Prince, and a Letter, which the Prince receiv'd with Marks of Civility, and treated Captain Haddock in the like manner; but the Negotiation Sir Charles was inſtructed to enter into with the Miniſters of Ruſſia, for adjuſting the Differences between the two Courts of Great Britain and Ruſſia, was not reliſh'd by the latter; and tho' the diſcontented and diſguſted Party in England, did not ſpare the Adminiſtration, in their Reflections on the Affairs of the North, pretending, there was no real Neceſſity for ſending ſuch a ſtrong Squadron thither, at ſo great an Expence; and inſinuating, with equal Truth and Modeſty, that the Apprehenſion of Peril from the Czarina's Armament, was affected to colour another Deſign, in which Great Britain was not concern'd: Yet it is plain, that there was juſt Reaſon to apprehend Danger to the Trade, if not to the Peace of the Nation, from the Conduct of the Ruſſians. This is explain'd in the very firſt Words of a Memorial Mr. Weſtphalen, the Daniſh Miniſter, preſented to the Czarina.

'The great Armament made in the Baltick, 'by Ruſſia, for ſome Years, and particularly 'that of this Year, which much exceeds all the 'foregoing, even thoſe made in Time of open 'War with the Crown of Sweden, are of ſuch 'a Nature in all their Circumſtances, that all 'the neighbouring Powers have Reaſon to be 'uneaſy on that Account, and to demand Aſ'ſurances which may entirely calm their 'Minds.'

The Reverend Doctor, the ſuppos'd Author of the Inquiry into the Reaſons of the Conduct of Great Britain, gives a very ſtrong one, for ſending this Squadron into the Baltick: 'To 'prevent very great Evils in thoſe Parts, there 'being no room to doubt, that the Czarina's 'real View was to go with a Fleet directly to 'Stockholm, and under Pretence of demanding 'the Uſe of the Ports, and the Aſſiſtances of 'Sweden, for the Recovery of Sleſwick, to the 'Duke of Holſtein, actually to dethrone the 'preſent King of Sweden, and make that Na'tion abſolutely dependant upon Muſcovy: 'And as Sweden could not but be conſider'd in 'the Nature of a Frontier, and Barrier to 'Britain it ſelf, the latter muſt be in Appre'henſion of Attempts from the Ruſſian Rava'ges, if Sweden was made ſubject to Ruſſia, 'or dependant upon it: In which Caſe this 'Evil could not be guarded againſt, but by the 'Expence, either of a conſtant Fleet upon the 'Northern Coaſts, or an armed Force in thoſe 'Parts of our Country, which lie moſt open 'to ſuch Attempts.'

All this while preſſing and repeated Inſtances were made by the Britiſh and French Miniſters at Stockholm, to induce the Court of Sweden to accede to the Treaty of Hanover. And no leſs Pains were taken by the Ruſſian and Auſtrian Miniſters, to procure his Swediſh Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Treaty of Vienna. But that wiſe Prince reſolv'd to leave the Determination of ſo important an Affair to the general Dyet of the States of Sweden. The Holſtein Faction in Sweden, were ſpirited in their Oppoſition to this Acceſſion, by Count Freytag, the Imperial Ambaſſador, and the Ambaſſador of Ruſſia; but that did not hinder the States ſigning it, as well as the King of Sweden. The Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of Admiral Hoſier, arriv'd at the Baſtimento's off of Porta-Bello, in the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, in the beginning of June. Ten Days before his Arrival, an Advice Boat from Spain, brought Orders for putting on Shore the Money on board the Galleons, ſaid to be 26 Millions of Pieces of Eight, and ſending it back to Panana. This ſame Money was the main Inducement to the Imperial Court to behave as they did, in their Treaty with Spain, againſt the Intereſt of England; and had the Silver on board thoſe Galleons been brought to Spain, as was expected, one cannot doubt but a good part of it wou'd have been ſent to the Court of Vienna, for the putting their raſh, dangerous, and ungrateful Projects in Execution. This early Step to prevent the applying that Money to ſuch miſchievous Uſes, did certainly diſconcert all the pernicious Meaſures of the two Courts of Madrid and Vienna, at that Juncture; and was alike prudent and ſafe. That it was ſo, is perhaps the very Reaſon which excited the complicated Faction of Jacobites and Murmurers, to diſclaim ſo much againſt it. A.D.1726

About three Weeks after Admiral Hoſier's Arrival at the Baſtimento's, His Grace the Duke of Portland, Governor of Jamaica, dy'd there of a Fever, after five or ſix Days Sickneſs. His Grace was generally eſteem'd, as one of the moſt comely and accompliſh'd Gentlemen at Court; and there was this very remarkable in his Education, that he had for his Tutors the two greateſt Hiſtorians of the Age; as firſt, Dr. Le Vaſſor, a Father of the Oratory in France, who embrac'd the Proteſtant Religion, and left that Kingdom upon it; and after him, Monſieur Rapin Thoyras, Author of the Hiſtory of England; and the Succeſs of their Cares for his Grace's Improvement, appear'd by his admirable Conduct in the Government of Jamaica. The Adminiſtration of publick Affairs devolv'd of Courſe on John Ayſcough, Eſq; Preſident of the Council.

About the latter end of Auguſt, Admiral Somelſdyke, with a Squadron of ſeven Dutch Men of War, arriv'd at Algier, to treat of a Peace between the States General and that Government, which was concluded and ſign'd the 8th of September, N. S. The States had inſiſted upon it, as a Condition of their Acceſſion to the Treaty of Hanover, that thoſe Allies ſhou'd aſſiſt them with their good Offices, in procuring them a Peace with the Algerines; and their procuring it, was undoubtedly owing to thoſe good Offices on the Part of Great Britain.

Promotions

In the beginning of September, it was declar'd, that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint Henry Lord Viſcount Lonſdale, to be Conſtable of the Tower of London, in the room of the Duke of Bolton, who was appointed Governor of the Iſle of Wight; and the Duke of Richmond to be one of the Lords of His Majeſty's Bedchamber, in the room of the late Duke of Portland. James Duke of Hamilton was made one of the Knights of the moſt noble Order of the Thiſtle, in the room of the late Earl of Cadogan. A Pardon paſt the Great Seal for Sir Hugh Paterſon, who had been attainted for the Rebellion in Scotland.

On

A.D.1726 On Michaelmas Day, Sir John Eyles, Bart. was unanimouſly choſen Lord-Mayor of London, and Sir John Locke, and William Ogborne, Eſq; were ſworn Sheriffs of that City.

The ſame Day a fine Picture of His Majeſty, at full Length, was, at the Expence of the Mayor and Aldermen of St. Albans, hung up in their Council Chamber; and in the Evening, the Mayor, Mr. Richard Carter, made a handſome Entertainment for the Corporation, Members of Parliament, Gentlemen and Populace of the Town; which was diſtinguiſh'd by loyal and orthodox Healths, His Majeſty's, Their Royal Highneſſes, the reſt of the Royal Family; the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, the two Univerſities, &c. In a general Hiſtory, every Thing cannot be of the like Importance and Gravity.

Sir Charles Wager returns from the North.

Sir Charles Wager remain'd in his Station near Revel, till the 20th of September, when the Year being ſo far advanc'd, and he having Intelligence from Petersbourg and Cronſlot, that the Ruſſian Gallies were laid up in their Winter Harbour, and their Fleet not in a Condition to put to Sea, he ſail'd from the Bay of Revel, for the Coaſt of Denmark, and anchor'd in Drago Bay, two Leagues from Copenhagen, the 19th of October, having been hinder'd in his Paſſage by contrary Winds, and bad Weather. He arriv'd with his Squadron off the Gunfleet below the Nore, the 1ſt of November, waited on His Majeſty at Kenſington two Days after, was graciouſly receiv'd, and had the Honour to kiſs his Royal Hand. The good Effect of Sir Charles Wager's lying ſo long off Revel, was obvious to all who conſider'd the Dangers that Great Britain and her Allies would have been expos'd to, if the Ruſſian Galleys and Ships had been at Sea. There's no Doubt but Prince Sherbetoff, the Czarina's Miniſter in Spain, did not forget the Intereſts of the Pretender, in his frequent Conferences with the Marquis De la Paz, at a Time when the Court of Madrid was in the Height of their Reſentment, for Rear Admiral Hoſier's blocking up the Harbour of Porta-Bello; and Count Koningſeck, the Imperial Ambaſſador, who had alſo taken Clark the Scots Jeſuit for his Confeſſor, aſſiſted almoſt always at thoſe Conferences. Colonel Stanhope, the Britiſh Ambaſſador at Madrid, was indefatigable in his Endeavours to detect their ſecret Councils; and they were not without Succeſs. King Philip took ſo ill the Acceſſion of the States General to the Treaty of Hanover, that Orders were diſpatch'd to all the Governors of the Sea-Ports in Spain, not to admit any Dutch Men of War: But Sir John Jennings, and Rear Admiral Hopſon, kept them in a little more Awe with reſpect to the Engliſh, while they were on the Spaniſh Coaſts, where the People were all that while in perpetual Alarm and Conſternation, which, with the want of Money at Madrid and Vienna, made the Treaty (ſo call'd) more pernicious to the Contractors, than thoſe againſt whom it was contracted.

Secret Counſels of Spain againſt Great Britain.

Sir Thomas Pengelly made Lord Chief Baron.

On the 23d of October, it was declar'd, That His Majeſty had been pleas'd to appoint Sir Thomas Pengelly, to be Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer: This Lawyer was bred ſo much in the Family of Richard Cromwell, when he was young, that it occaſion'd an idle Story of his being nearly related to him. As incredible as this Tale is, it paſt current among thoſe who envy'd his Succeſs in the Study and Practice of the Law. Be that as it will, 'tis certain that his Education was among the Nonconformiſts, and that his Principles led him to eſpouſe the Cauſe of Liberty; tho' in ſeveral late Seſſions of Parliament, he join'd too often with the Enemies to the Revolution, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, out of Humour or Diſguſt; which this Preferment put an end to. Baron Price, was made one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas; and Sir Laurence Carter, Solicitor General to His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, one of the Barons of the Exchequer. Three Days after, Sir Littleton Powis, Senior Judge of the Court of King's Bench, and Robert Tracy, Eſq; a Judge of the Common Pleas, on account of bodily Infirmities, ſign'd the Act of their Reſignation in Form: The former was ſucceeded by Mr. Serjeant Probyn, and the latter by Mr. Serjeant Comyns; and the late Judges Powis and Tracy, were allow'd each a Penſion of 1000 l. per Annum.

A.D.1726

Judge Tracy and Judge Powis reſign.

About the ſame Time, there was a new Commiſſion iſſu'd, for the Management of the Exciſe in Scotland. The Commiſſioners, Alexander Winderburne, Eſq; Gilbert Burnet, Eſq; Henry Robinſon, Eſq; Thomas Broughton, Eſq; George Roſs, Eſq;

When the Factious in England were complaining of the Grievance of a Standing Army, as they call'd the few regular Forces kept up in Great Britain, and making Harangues within Doors, and Libels without, againſt encreaſing their Number; even at this critical Juncture, the Dutch, who are at leaſt as good Judges of their Safety and Intereſt, and as good Huſbands of their Money, as the Engliſh, made two Augmentations in their Troops, of 10000 Men each: And the Province of Guelderland, and County of Zutphen, made Inſtances to the States General to quicken them in their Reſolutions, that the Republick might without Delay be put into a better State of Defence.

'It is much to be lamented, ſaid they, that 'in ſo great an Interval of Peace, ſo little 'Thought ſhould be had to any War that 'might enſue; and that it ſhould even be ima-'gin'd, there would be no more Wars: Theſe 'wrong Notions, and this improvident Con-'duct, have created the Perplexity and Danger 'which the State is now in, and which, hu-'manly ſpeaking, had not exiſted, had the 'State been provided with a greater and more 'ſufficient Body of Troops for its due Defence, '&c.' It will be of Uſe to compare theſe juſt Sentiments of the States of Guelderland, with thoſe of the Sh——, the Hungerfords, &c. in the Britiſh Parliament, in their Speeches upon augmenting or continuing the Forces.

The Dutch for augmenting their Troops.

The Treaty made between the Emperor and the King of Pruſſia, was not well reliſh'd by the Friends to that of Hanover, who look'd upon the one as a weak'ning to the other, by engaging the King of Pruſſia in a new Contract, not very conſiſtent with the Aprehenſions of the Hanover Allies of the Emperor's Power and Projects. It was ſaid, Treaty between the Courts of Vienna and Pruſſia.

The King of Pruſſia was by this Treaty to guaranty the Order of Succeſſion in the hereditary Dominions, in the manner the Emperor has eſtabliſh'd it in the Heirs Female, in Default of Male Iſſue.

The Emperor oblig'd himſelf to uſe his Endeavours to obtain from all thoſe who have Pretenſions to the Dutchies of Juliers and Bergues,

A.D.1726 Bergues, a Ceſſion of their Rights in Favour of His Pruſſian Majeſty.

The Difficulties with which the Execution of this Treaty were like to be attended, ſeem'd to be inſurmountable, and only to prepare future Troubles in the Empire, which would doubtleſs take off the King of Pruſſia's Thoughts from his Engagements by the Hanover Treaty. And truly the Conduct of that Prince has been ſuch, almoſt ever ſince the Succeſſion of the moſt illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover to the Throne of Great Britain, that it is not eaſily to be reconcil'd to the Relation between the Royal Houſes of Brunſwick and Brandenburg, nor to the Zeal the latter had always diſtinguiſh'd it ſelf by, for the Proteſtant Religion, and Liberties of Europe. It was forejudg'd, that the Palatine Houſes of Nieubourg and Saltzberg, would not conſent to the Alienation of theſe Dutchies; to which the Electoral Houſe of Saxony form'd alſo very ſtrong Pretenſions. Thus this new Treaty ſeem'd rather to render the Affairs of Religion and Liberty, on the Proteſtant Side, more perplex'd and intricate, than to ſtrengthen and ſupport them.

Abbot De Fleury made a Cardinal.

The Abbot De Fleury, formerly Preceptor to the Children of France, being advanc'd to the Dignity of Cardinal, by the Recommendation of that Court, the Young King, his Pupil, perform'd the Ceremony of putting the Cap upon his Head, the 5th of November, N.S. Upon which the new Cardinal made a florid Speech to him; which he clos'd thus.

Sire, May we have the Comfort to trace in your ſacred Perſon the Wiſdom of the King your Great Grandfather, in the Art of governing, the good Nature of the Dauphin your Grandfather, and the Piety of your auguſt Father.

But this French Orator could not help mixing ſome Satyr among his Flattery, and to make Britons the Subject of it, it being obvious he means them, where he ſays,

The Eaſtern Nations render their Monarchs Worſhip, almoſt equal to that of the Deity. Among thoſe of Europe, there are ſome that would GOVERN THEIR KINGS; others, though very faithful and obedient to them, yet rather fear than love them: But the proper Character of the French is, their Love to their King, &c. who in the laſt Reign, for threeſcore Years together, took Meaſures to faſten the Chains he fix'd upon them, on their Poſterity alſo; and their Love muſt conſequently be exceedingly well grounded and reaſonable.

We have more than once obſerv'd, what ill Returns the Imperial Court made that of Great Britain, for the Expence the latter had been at, of near 50 Millions of Vienna Money, to ſupport the Emperor's Title to the Monarchy of Spain. The Court of France, another Party in the Treaty of Hanover, had been at as great, or greater, Expence, in ſupporting the Title of Philip the Vth, another Party of the Vienna Treaty, to the ſame Monarchy; which was repreſented in a Memorial from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty to the King of Spain.

The French King taxes the King of Spain with Ingratitude.

It is Matter of Wonder and Aſtoniſhment, not only to him, but to all Europe, that his Catholick Majeſty, after ſo much Blood and Treaſure, expended by France, in ſetting him upon the Throne of Spain, ſhould make ſuch ill Returns, in taking Part with the Emperor, vindicating the Breach of ſolemn Treaties, and becoming the zealous Friend of the profeſt and moſt ancient Enemy the French Nation ever had. He then earneſtly recommends to him, to conſider thoſe Steps well, before Europe be involv'd in a freſh War, which (in all Probability) he may repent, when too late. A.D.1727

The King of Spain's ſending ſo conſiderable a Perſon as the Duke De Liria, in Embaſſy to the Court of Ruſſia, with ſo ample an Allowance as 12000 Piſtoles, and 1000 Piſtoles a Month, for his Appointments, made People think, that there was more Truth in what the Jacobites gave out, of a Deſign forming in Favour of the Pretender, than what there generally was in the Reports of that Faction. About this Time, Keith, late Earl Mariſchal, was made a Major General in the Spaniſh Service, and James Butler, late Duke of Ormond, had ſeveral Audiences of the King and Queen of Spain, which muſt be very treaſonable or very trifling, and perhaps both, conſidering his Abilities and Circumſtances.

James Butler has Audience of the King of Spain.

Upon repeated Advices that the Spaniards made great Preparations for the Siege of Gibraltar, all proper Meaſures were taken by the Government to ſend Succours to that important Place: Six Men of War, Kent, Lenox, Berwick, Royal Oak, Portland, and Tyger, were fitted out at Portſmouth with all poſſible Expedition. Three Regiments, Newton's, Diſney's, and Anſtruther's, were order'd to be put on board the Squadron, under the Command of Sir Charles Wager, for reinforcing that Garriſon. Indeed it was high time to be provided againſt the Attempts of the Spaniards, when King Philip was ſo far from diſguiſing his Intentions, that he recall'd the Marquis De Pozzobueno, his Ambaſſador at London, who in the Memorial he left with His Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, Jan. the firſt, 1727, makes a poſitive and publick Demand of the Reſtitution of Gibraltar: He ſays, He is oblig'd to inſiſt upon it, by the Command of the King his Maſter; and indeed the Emperor by the Treaty of Vienna had oblig'd himſelf to inſiſt upon it too, in the ſoft Term of a Mediator; tho' King Philip, when he acceded to the Quadruple Alliance, had confirm'd and repeated the Ceſſion of it to the Crown of Great Britain, by the Treaty of Utrecht.

That this Reſtitution was agreed to be thus inſiſted upon by the Contractors in the Treaty of Vienna, appears by what Ripperda, who negotiated that Treaty, ſaid inſolently on ſeveral Occaſions after the Concluſion of it; ſuch as theſe, being his common Diſcourſes.

Ripperda's Inſolence about Gibraltar.

'If King George ſupports France, we know 'very well how to place the Pretender upon 'the Throne. Alberoni was a great Man, but 'committed many Blunders; one great one 'was, that he ſent the Spaniſh Fleet to Sicily, 'inſtead of ſending it to England, to dethrone 'the King, which might eaſily then have been 'done; and this once done, the Way had been 'made plain for every Thing elſe. King 'George had beſt conſider how to come to 'Terms with us, for we have it in our Power 'to puſh the Pretender's Intereſts with Efficacy.'

Tho' this Apoſtate ſpoke in this like a Madman, and it would have been much eaſier for the Engliſh to have driven Philip a third Time out of Spain, than for the Spaniards to have made ſuch a Puſh for the Pretender's Intereſts; yet doubtleſs ſuch were the Viſions and Expreſſions of the Spaniſh Courtiers at that Time: And the Court of Spain did not ſo heartily diſavow Ripperda in theſe Inſolences and Menaces,

A.D 1727 as to clear themſelves of having authoriz'd or approv'd them, till he had offended them in other Matters, of which the main one was probably a further Intimation of their ill Intention towards His Britannick Majeſty. 'Twas as falſly as impudently ſuggeſted, by the Diſaffected in England, that the King of Spain was provok'd by Sir George Byng's attacking his Fleet off Meſſina, not only to demand the Reſtitution of Gibraltar, but to renew the War for the Recovery of it: For Philip had, by acceding to the Quadruple Alliance, as abovemention'd, confirm'd the Crown of Great Britain's Right to that Town, after the Conqueſt of Sicily.

Sir George Byng's beating the Spaniſh Fleet, not the Cauſe of the Siege of Gibraltar.

Ripperda was ſo far from uſing Diſcretion or Temper in his Diſcourſes againſt the King of Great Britain, that in one of them he aſſum'd this daring Air. 'I know all that I ſay is told 'again; I am very glad of it: I ſay what I 'ſay on Purpoſe that it may be told.' Nay, ſpeaking of the Allies of Hanover, the King of Great Britain, his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and the King of Pruſſia, he ſaid, 'Yes, yes, we ſhall 'teach thoſe little Gentlemen, Petits Meſſieurs, 'to make Treaties.' Theſe Things are treated of at large in a Pamphlet, publiſh'd at this Time, entitul'd, An Enquiry into the Reaſons of the Conduct of Great Britain, which the Annaliſt informs us, was father'd upon a Reverend Perſon in a very high Station in the Church, and no leſs eminent for ſeveral other Writings of this Nature. He tells us, it was a Preparatory to the opening of the Britiſh Parliament; which being met on Tueſday the 17th of January, His Majeſty, by the Mouth of the Lord Chancellor, made a moſt gracious Speech; the Contents will be underſtood by the Addreſſes of both Houſes of Parliament upon it.

Ripperda's further Inſolence.

The Lords, as ſoon as the King was withdrawn, reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs of Thanks, which was done accordingly the next Day, January 8th. Their Lordſhips ſay in it:

The Lords Addreſs.

'The World muſt now be convinc'd, that the 'Courts of Vienna and Madrid have laid the 'Foundations of ſuch an extraordinary and 'formidable Power, as may in Time overturn 'the Balance, and deſtroy the Liberties of Eu- 'rope: Were we not fill'd with the deepeſt Re- 'ſentment, at the Indignities which have been 'offer'd to your Majeſty, we ſhould be unwor- 'thy of all the Bleſſings we enjoy, under your 'Majeſty's moſt gracious and excellent Govern- 'ment. The Invaſions made upon the Rights 'and Privileges of your People, in the moſt 'important Branches of their Commerce; the 'Menaces and Inſults uſed towards your Maje- 'ſty; the peremptory Demand of the Reſtitu- 'tion of Gibraltar, which Place, and the 'Iſland of Minorca, both being of the utmoſt 'Conſequence to your People, were yielded up 'by the preſent King of Spain himſelf, and do 'indiſputably belong to the Crown of Great 'Britain, by moſt ſolemn Treaties: But above 'all, the Engagements enter'd into for placing 'a Popiſh Pretender upon your Throne, muſt 'raiſe the warmeſt Indignation in all thoſe, 'who have the leaſt Senſe of their Duty to the 'beſt of Sovereigns, and any Regard to the 'Proteſtant Religion, to the Honour, Intereſt, 'and Proſperity of their Country.'

It will be worth while to carry this in our Memory, till we come to the ridiculous Turn that was given to the Apprehenſion of Danger from the Pretender, in a Speech or two in the Lower Houſe. Their Lordſhips proceed;

A.D. 1727

'We are truly ſenſible of the wiſe Meaſures 'taken by your Majeſty, to prevent the Dan- 'gers which threaten'd us: Your early Care in 'forming and entring into the Defenſive Alli- 'ance, to which the Acceſſion of the States Ge- 'neral has added ſo great Weight: The eſta- 'bliſhing a perfect Harmony, Union, and Con- 'cert, between your Majeſty, the moſt Chri- 'ſtian King, and the States General: The ſeve- 'ral Negotiations which your Majeſty, in Con- 'junction with your Allies, is carrying on, 'with Sweden, Denmark, and other Powers; 'and the ſhewing the Power and Influence of 'your Naval Force, by the ſeaſonable Equip- 'ment of three conſiderable Squadrons, are the 'apparent Cauſes to which, next under God, 'we owe the Preſervation of the publick 'Peace, and the preventing the Execution of 'thoſe deſtructive and unjuſt Deſigns, that had 'been form'd againſt this Nation, and the Li- 'berties of Europe.'

Approving the Treaty of Hanover.

And the Naval Armaments of Great Britain.

Let us bear this alſo in Mind, till we ſee what wretched Railery is thrown away upon theſe Treaties, by ſome Spokeſmen of the Malecontent Party; for when the Motion for an Addreſs was made, in the Houſe of Commons, 'twas objected to by the uſual Negatives to all Meaſures of the Government. If theſe Gentlemen did ever ſo little conſider, what a ridiculous Figure a Man makes, who is known to be reſolv'd to ſpeak againſt ev'ry Thing, right or wrong, that is propos'd by one Party, becauſe he will not be of it, as much as it is his Duty and Wiſdom to be ſo, they would be aſham'd of making it.

When the Commons were return'd to their Houſe, after hearing the Report of His Majeſty's Speech, Mr. Onſlow mov'd, 'That an 'humble Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty 'to return him the Thanks of this Houſe for 'his moſt gracious Speech from the Throne: 'To acknowledge His Majeſty's Goodneſs in 'acquainting his Parliament with the ſeveral 'Proceedings and Alliances, entred into between 'the Emperor and King of Spain, giving ſuch 'juſt Cauſe of Jealouſy to the neighbouring 'Princes and States, ſo formidable and deſtru- 'ſtructive of the true Balance of Power in Eu- 'rope, and ſtriking at the Foundation of the 'moſt valuable Privileges and Intereſts of the 'Subjects of His Majeſty, and thoſe of his 'Allies: To declare the Reſentment of the 'Commons of Great Britain, at the unjuſt 'Demand of the King of Spain, for the Reſti- 'tution of Gibraltar, and the unwarrantable 'Uſurpation of the Emperor, in erecting and 'carrying on the Oſtend Trade, and their mu- 'tual Obligations to ſupport each other, in 'thoſe unjuſtifiable Attempts and Undertа- 'kings: But above all, to expreſs our higheſt 'Indignation at the Reſolutions and Engage- 'ments enter'd into, for attempting to place 'the Pretender on the Throne of theſe King- 'doms. To return His Majeſty the Thanks of 'this Houſe, for his great Care in ſtrengthening 'his Alliances, and for employing the Royal 'Fleet ſo uſefully for the Security, Advan- 'tage, and Glory, of this Nation. And as 'this Houſe cannot but look upon the Mea- 'ſures and Reſolutions, taken in Oppoſition 'to, and in Defiance of, moſt ſolemn Treaties, 'as tending to an immediate Rupture; hum- 'bly to deſire His Majeſty, that he will forth- 'with

The Commons Addreſs.

A.D. 1727 'with give the neceſſary Orders for putting 'this Kingdom into a poſture of Defence; and 'to aſſure His Majeſty that this Houſe will not 'only chearfully and effectually raiſe the Sup- 'plies neceſſary for the preſent Exigency of 'Affairs, but will ſtand by and ſupport His 'Majeſty in making good his Engagements with 'his Allies, in preſerviug the Balance of Power 'in Europe, in defending the Poſſeſſions of the 'Crown of Great Britain, in ſupporting the 'Trade of the Nation, againſt all unjuſtifiable 'Encroachments; and in defeating and con- 'founding all Attempts that ſhall be made in 'favour of the Pretender, and to the Deſtruc- 'on of our Religion, Liberties and Properties. 'And this Houſe will apply the Produce of the 'Sinking Fund to its proper Uſes, and repoſe 'ſuch a Truſt and Confidence in His Majeſty, 'as the Publick Utility ſhall require, and His 'Majeſty ſhall find reaſonable and neceſſary for 'carrying on the great Work in which His Ma- 'jeſty is engaged, for the Intereſt and Security 'of His People and the Common Cauſe of 'Europe.'

Mr. Onſlow's Motion was ſeconded by Mr. John Finch, and back'd by other Members; who were ſtrenuouſly oppos'd by Mr. Shippen, Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Hungerford, Mr. William Pulteney late Cofferer, Sir Thomas Hanmer, and others; who were as ſtrenuouſly anſwered by Mr. Dodington, Mr. Horace Walpole, Sir Robert Walpole, and others.

Speeches againſt the late Treaties.

A Gentleman on the negative Side of the Queſtion, took notice of the Unſteadineſs of our Counſels, and decorated his Argument with ſome falſe Wit, as if when the Courts of Vienna and Madrid had changed their Counſels, ſo much to the detriment and danger of England, the latter ſhould have kept ſteady to former Meaſures, and have ſuffer'd the Emperor and King of Spain to have diſpos'd of the Trade and Poſſeſſions of theſe Kingdoms as they thought fit; contrary to their own late moſt ſolemn Treaties: 'But, ſays this fine Reaſoner, of late 'Years our Meaſures have been in a perpetual 'Fluctuation, and, Penelope like, we are con- 'tinually weaving and unweaving the ſame Web: 'One time raiſing up the Emperor and depreſ- 'ſing France, and now we are for depreſſing 'the Emperor to aggrandize France.' This Sophiſtry is ſo conſpicuous, and withal ſo mean, that there's certainly enough of it. Great Britain was not for depreſſing the Emperor, nor aggrandizing France, but for ſecuring her Own by the help of France. What he ſaid farther, is rather worſe than otherwiſe: 'So that under 'the Pretence of holding the Balance of Europe 'we ſhall be engag'd in continual Wars.' This Term, under Pretence, was eternally in the Mouths of the Enemies to our Proteſtant Conſtitution. All the Proclamations, Addreſſes, Speeches, &c. in the Reigns of the two Brethren Charles II. and James II. whenever they mention'd Proteſtant Aſſemblies of Diſſenters ſaid, Under Pretence of Religious Worſhip: So the Abdicating King James was under Pretence of preſerving Religion and Liberty: The ſettling the Succeſſion in the Royal Houſe of Hanover was under the ſame Pretence; and to ſhorten the Argument, which Faction could not defend, this Phraſe was, upon all ſuch Occaſions, put in its place.

Another Gentleman ſaid, The Dangers with which we are threaten'd are not, in my Opinion, ſo great as they are repreſented to be, the Czarina and King of Spain's Deſign of Invading us with five or ſix Men of War, ſeems altogether Romantick; ſuch a Project may at any time be defeated by our ordinary Guard-Ships; therefore the Fears of the Pretender are groundleſs; and I cannot ſee how they could bring him over, unleſs they borrowed Captain Gulliver's Floating Iſland. This wou'd have look'd more like common Senſe had it been ſpoken in the Abdicated King's Parliament, before the Duke of Monmouth landed at Lyme, when there were not only as many Guard-Ships as uſual, but a Fleet and Army to hinder him; and he had but one poor Frigate to convoy him and his two Tenders. This is nothing, compar'd to the other Nonſence in this Argumentation; for the Spaniards had 12 or 14000 Men for that Service, and cou'd not want Shipping for them, if Care had not been taken in England to be before-hand with 'em in Naval Preparations; and after our Men of War appear'd on their Coaſts, the Spaniards did not think fit to proceed further in their Project. The Learned Author of the Enquiry before-mentioned, refers to ſuch wonderful Politicians as the laſt Spokeſman, where he ſays, 'It is common to 'laugh on ſuch Occaſions at the Name of the 'Pretender, as a Political Bugbear, a Scarecrow, 'or a Puppet, to be play'd with by Stateſmen 'at their pleaſure: But it wou'd be very un- 'fortunate for Great Britain, if thoſe at the Helm ſhou'd ſuffer themſelves to be laugh'd 'out of their Care and Wakefulneſs which their 'King and Country require of them.

A.D. 1727

The Queſtion being put, upon Mr. Onſlow's Motion, it was carried in the Affirmative by a Majority of 251 Voices againſt 81, and an Addreſs being drawn up in Form, purſuant to that Motion, it was preſented to His Majeſty the 19th of January. To which His Majeſty return'd this moſt gracious Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

I return you my Thanks for this very dutiful and loyal Addreſs: The juſt ſenſe you have expreſs'd of the preſent Poſture of Affairs in Europe, and the hearty Aſſurance you have given me of your Support in defending my Poſſeſſions, and the Rights and Privileges of my People, as they are Evidences of your known Zeal and Affection to my Perſon and Government, I am perſwaded they will confirm the Spirit and Vigour of my Allies, and convince my Enemies how vain and illgrounded all their Expectations are, of being able to ſucceed in any Attempts to diſturb the Peace of Europe, and in offering Injuries and Inſults to this Nation.

Inſults from the Allies of Vienna.

Indeed theſe Inſults were not only againſt Juſtice and Prudence, but even Decency and good Manners: As for Inſtance, A Perſon expreſſing his Doubt at the Court of Vienna, whether His Britannick Majeſty would undertake to be Guarantee of the Auſtrian Succeſſion? One of the moſt conſiderable Courtiers anſwer'd with a great deal of Emotion, Then let him look to himſelf, for we are well Inform'd, they begin to be weary of him in England. An inſolent Expreſſion, that call'd for other ſort of Chaſtiſement than Rebuke; and how the two Courts of Vienna and Madrid tally'd in their inſolent Behaviour, may be ſeen by what one of the Miniſters of the King of Spain ſaid concerning the Reſtitution of Gibraltar as the Senè qua Non of the continuance of the Alliance

*A.D.*1727 ance and Commerce between Great Britain and Spain. Let him, meaning His Majesty, then at Hanover, make haste home, and call his Parliament, and propose the Restitution immediately. This shews too, that the Spaniards were sensible that Gibraltar could not be restor'd without Consent of Parliament, and proves the Vanity of their urging it on any other Pretence.

All the Lords in Town were summon'd to attend on the 24th of January, when His Majesty's Speech having been read by the Clerk, the Earl of Strafford mov'd, That the House might resolve into a grand Committee, to take the important Matters contain'd in it into Consideration; which being unanimously agreed to, several Letters and Memorials, that had past between the Ministers of Great Britain, France, and Spain, and the Act of Accession of the States General to the Hanover Treaty, were read; and then the Lord Bathurst open'd the Debate with a Speech of some Length, which, the Annalist says, was receiv'd with Applause: However, we shall only make Use of some Parts of it. 'So that the Dutch accede only 'upon account of the 5th and 6th Articles of 'the Treaty of Munster, for preserving and 'maintaining their Rights, with respect to 'Commerce: Whereas, by the Treaty of Hano- 'ver, Great Britain and France, stand engag'd 'to guaranty to the Dutch, not only the 5th and '6th Articles of the Peace of Westphalia, but 'likewise the Barrier Treaty, and the Treaty of 'Oliva, in Favour of the Protestants of Germa- 'ny: And thus, in short, the Dutch having 'engag'd themselves to nothing, what they 'had done, did not deserve the Name of Ac- 'cession.' We shall be better able to judge of the Applause the Annalist speaks of, when we have read what the Lord Viscount Townshend said upon it. 'That the Treaty of Hanover 'being partly defensive, had made no Alterа- 'ration in the Treaties subsisting before, either 'between the contracting Powers, or other 'Princes and States: That the true Aim and 'Intention of this Alliance, was a reciprocal 'Guaranty for the protecting and maintaining 'the Dominions and Countries, both in and 'out of Europe, whereof each of the Allies 'was actually possess'd at the Time of the sign- 'ing of this Alliance; so that by acceding 'thereto, the Crowns of Great Britain and 'France became Guarantees, of the 5th and 6th 'Articles of the Treaty of Munster, by which 'the Dutch are entitled to exclusive Rights and 'Privileges of Trade in the East-Indies. But 'that this Guaranty was reciprocal between 'Great Britain and the States General, since, 'by the Treaty of 1667, Spain had granted 'the same Rights and Privileges to England, 'which the Dutch enjoy'd by the said 5th and '6th Articles of the Treaty of Westphalia: 'That therefore the suppressing of the Ostend 'Company, which manifestly invaded those 'exclusive Rights and Privileges, was become a 'common Cause between us and the Dutch. 'That our Concern therein is almost equal to 'theirs, since our East-India Trade brings a- 'bout 300000*l.* a Year into the Customs; 'which being part of the general Mortgage, if 'so considerable a Branch of Trade should be 'lost, that yearly Sum would be taken from 'the sinking Fund. That by former Treaties 'Great Britain was Guarantee to the Dutch, 'for their Barrier in the Netherlands, as, re- 'ciprocally by the same Treaties, they were 'Guarantees to Great Britain for the Prote- 'stant Succession: So that in those Respects, 'we stood no more engag'd to them than they 'to us. That, indeed, by their Act of Acces- 'sion to the Hanover Alliance, the States Ge- 'neral exempt themselves from the general 'Guaranty of the Treaties of Westphalia and 'Oliva, to which they were engag'd; but, 'nevertheless, by the same Act they engage 'themselves to employ, jointly with Great 'Britain and France, their friendly Offices, 'for obtaining a reasonable Satisfaction and Re- 'paration, as to the Infractions which might 'have been made i the Treaty of Oliva; 'which is as much as the contracting Powers 'have engag'd themselves to by the first secret 'Article of the Treaty of Hanover, and is in- 'deed as little as the Protestant Potentates 'could do, in Commiseration of the Severities 'lately exercis'd against the Protestants of 'Thorn.' 'Tis probable the Applause before- mention'd, was apply'd to the Antitheses, at the end of the Speech, so receiv'd: What can we get by a War, if it be a successful one? I'll say it in one Word, Nothing. What can we lose, if it be unprosperous? I'll say it in one Word, a Syllable, All. These quick Returns affect the Ear, and that affects the Passions very often without reaching the Understanding. If the War was prosperous, we got by it the Preservation of our Trade, and the Security of the Government; which secur'd to us our Religion, Liberties, and Properties. If the War was unprosperous, we must take our Fortune, or else never enter into any War, unless we are sure of being successful in it; which is a way of arguing that will no where be applauded.

Lord Bathurst's Speech.

The Lord Townshend's Answer.

East-India Trade pays 300000 l. per Ann. Customs.

The Lord Viscount Townshend having done speaking, the Lord Bingly stood up, and supported what had been offer'd by the Lord Bathurst, urging in Substance, 'That in the pre- 'sent Situation of our Affairs, we should use 'all possible Methods to avoid entring into a 'War, which might prove of long Continu- 'ance, and of which we should be oblig'd to 'bear the main Burden, without any Prospect 'of real Advantage in the Conclusion. That 'we are not only a divided People, but in- 'volv'd in an immense Debt, which could not 'be increas'd, (as it would infallibly in the Pro- 'gress of a War,) without endangering the Na- 'tions sinking under the Load. That after all, 'our Misfortunes, and the Distractions that 'now threaten'd the Peace of Europe, were 'mainly owing to our fluctuating Counsels, 'and unsteady Measures.' It is a hard Task upon us to prove our Impartiality by such Repe- titions. 'That after a long and expensive but 'most glorious War, we had, at last, compass'd 'the main End of the grand Alliance, which 'was to give the House of Austria a reasonable 'Satisfaction.' (Every body there present knew, it was to give the House of Austria the entire Spanish Monarchy.) 'Which was effectually 'done by the Peace of Utrecht.' (Every body there present knew, it was effectually undone by the Peace of Utrecht.) 'But that upon His 'Majesty's Accession, some Persons thought it 'a Merit, and made it a Business to exclaim a- 'gainst (and unravel) all that had been done 'in the former glorious Reign.' Every body there present knew, that the Reign here spoken of, ceas'd to be glorious, from the Time that the

A.D.1727 the Perſon who ſpoke it was admitted into the Adminiſtration; and that himſelf, and thoſe, in Conjunction with whom he acted, were the Unravellers of the Glories, which for ſome Years diſtinguiſh'd that Reign from all others, in the Hiſtory of England. This is obſerv'd by the Lord Carteret, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in his Reply. 'It was 'no Wonder that noble Lord ſo highly 'applauded the Peace of Utrecht, and 'aſcrib'd our Misfortunes to the Meaſures 'purſu'd in this Reign: For this way of 'Reaſoning, however ill grounded, was 'natural to (and became well enough) thoſe 'who had gone ſo great Lengths with the 'late Queen's laſt Miniſters. Nor was it, for 'the ſame Reaſon, at all ſurprizing, his Lord-'ſhip ſhould give ſo melancholy a Proſpect of 'our Affairs, upon which he would only ob-'ſerve, That the Courts of Vienna and Ma-'drid, undoubtedly entertain'd the ſame Noti-'ons of Great Britain, elſe they would not 'dare to provoke and inſult us; to offer In-'dignities to His Majeſty, and to treat our Mi-'niſters with Contempt, making them wait in 'an Antichamber for a Cedula.' The Lord Bingley added, 'Whatever Grounds there were 'for theſe Counſels, the Reaſon now given for 'running counter to them, is ſtill the ſame, to 'wit, That it is the Prerogative as well as the 'Intereſt of Great Britain, to hold the Balance 'of Power in Europe. That he did not abſo-'lutely deny this Maxim; but as it might 'ſerve to juſtify any Rupture, it ought to be 'confin'd within proper Bounds. For if this 'Prerogative were wantonly exerted, it might 'engage us in perpetual Wars, and at laſt 'prove fatal to our Trade, the main Spring of 'our Wealth and Strength: That the Repub-'lick of Venice, was a pregnant Inſtance of 'this Truth, and a ſtanding Warning to all 'Trading Nations. For by their refin'd Poli-'ticks, and meddling too far in the Differences 'of the great Potentates of Europe, under Pre-'tence of holding the Balance, they firſt loſt 'their Commerce, and ſoon after, their Great-'neſs and Conſideration. That by our late 'Quarrels with Spain, that Branch of our 'Trade, which heretofore was very conſidera-'ble, is almoſt intirely loſt.' What follows, rather excites Pity, than raiſes Diſguſt, it is ſo contrary to common Knowledge and Experience. 'And if, upon account of the unprofi-table, not to ſay ruinous, Trade to the Eaſt-'Indies, we ſhould now engage in a War againſt 'the Emperor, it will endanger the Loſs of the 'great and profitable Commerce we drive in 'Germany, Cujus Contrarium, &c.' The Lord Carteret continuing his excellent Speech, in Anſwer to this, ſaid, 'That we ought not 'invidiouſly to inquire into the Source and 'Cauſes of our Misfortunes, but conſider of 'proper Means to do our ſelves Juſtice, and 'to make ſuitable Returns to His Majeſty's 'Goodneſs and paternal Care, in laying before 'his Parliament the preſent State of Affairs in 'Europe, and the Meaſures taken to prevent 'the Dangers that threaten'd us. That we 'want neither Wealth nor Strength, and, he 'hop'd, we ſhould not want Spirit and Reſo-'lution, to aſſert our Rights and Privileges, 'and to maintain His Majeſty, and his Royal 'Progeny, on the Throne. That the Example 'of the Republick of Venice, far from deter-'ring us, ought rather to excite us to make our 'laſt Efforts to ſupport the Commerce of theſe 'Kingdoms, againſt the Incroachments made 'upon it, contrary to the moſt ſolemn Trea-'ties, and ſtricteſt Engagements: For the De-'cay of that powerful State was not owing, 'as was ſuggeſted, to their meddling with the 'Differences among the Potentates of Europe, 'but rather to the Loſs of the great Trade they 'carry'd on in the Eaſt-Indies, thro' the Red-'Sea, by Reaſon of the Settlements which the 'Portugueſe, and after them the Dutch, and 'other Nations, made there. That our Share 'in the Eaſt-India Trade, is neither ſo incon-'ſiderable, nor ſo unprofitable, as ſome were 'pleas'd to repreſent it. That indeed as that 'Commerce drains Europe of a great deal of 'Silver, and returns only trifling Commodities, 'that ſerve to feed Luxury, and which conſe-'quently we might be without, it were per-'haps to be wiſh'd, that it might be entirely 'laid aſide: But that this ſhould be done by 'common and general Conſent of all the King-'doms and States concern'd in it, otherwiſe 'they who ſhould give it up, would be en-'gag'd to buy at a dear Rate of them who 'ſhould carry it on, thoſe Commodities, which 'Faſhion and Cuſtom have render'd in a man-'ner neceſſary; ſo that in the end the Nations 'who ſhould preſerve that Trade, would grow 'rich and powerful, and the others poor and 'mean, in Proportion. That as to the Trade 'with Spain, we have for many Years paſt, 'loſt a great Part of it: But that, on the 'other hand, we have very much enlarg'd our 'Dealings with Portugal, which are far more 'advantagious to us: And as for our Trade 'with Germany, tho' the Emperor may cramp 'and reſtrain it in his hereditary Dominions, 'as he has already done, by prohibiting ſeveral 'of our Commodities, that Loſs is inconſide-'rable, ſince he cannot deprive us of our Com-'merce to the other Parts of the Empire, and 'the North, by the way of Hamburgh, Dant-'zick, and other hanſe Towns.'

Lord Carteret's Anſwer.

A.D.1727

It will not be improper to ſubjoin ſome other Remarks on the Lord Bingley's Speech, relating to the Eaſt-India Trade, becauſe it is a very unjuſt and dangerous Notion, that it is unprofitable and ruinous, and ſhews that his Lordſhip was by no means ſufficiently acquainted with it, to be a Judge in the Matter, and ſpeak of it ſo deciſively.

The Eaſt-India Company, in the Year 1721, laid before the Parliament an Account of their Trade for five Years, from 1711, to 1716; in which Time it appear'd, their Exports to the Eaſt-Indies were, 1,636,257 l. above one Tenth of which was of our own Produce, and Woollen Manufactures; and the Re-exports of their Goods imported, came to 3,335,928 l. So the clear actual encreas'd Wealth to the Nation from Re-exports only, in five Years, was, 1,699,671 l. or, in other Words, one Third of a Million yearly. This being the Fact, what Opinion muſt the Reader have of an Argument, that aſſerts the Trade to be unprofitable and ruinous.

East-India Trade conſider'd.

Farther, Their Exports from Chriſtmas 1716, to Chriſtmas 1721, came to 2,816,906 l. and their Re-exports from Chriſtmas 1717, to Chriſtmas 1722, amounted on their Net Value, excluſive of their Drawbacks and prompt Payments, to 5,992,646 l. and by this means they had a Balance due to them from Foreign Parts, of 3,175,740 l.; which muſt be ſatisfy'd by

A.D.1727 Goods, Exchange, or Bullion; and so the Nation, as well as the Company, find ample Amends for the Bullion exported to the East-Indies, to purchase those Cargoes, which are sold here to so much Advantage. Thus it appears that the East-India Trade from the Year 1711, to 1722, brought immense Wealth to this Nation, no less than 4,875,410*l.* near 500000*l.* a Year, besides all the contingent Advantages, which are well mark'd out in the following Paragraphs.

'The great Articles (for it would be endless to 'mention each distinct and minute Advantage) 'to prove the Importance and Necessity of the 'East-India Trade to the Nation, are the Vent 'of our Woollen Manufactures, and the other 'Product of our Lands; the Employment of 'so much Shipping, and of so many Seamen, 'with the whole Train of consequential Pro-'fit from that Quarter. The great Service to 'the Publick, in such certain and large Sup-'plies to the Customs and Excise, from the 'Duties on East-India Goods, to discharge the 'publick Debts, no less than 300000 l. a Year. 'The Increase of the National Wealth, from 'the great Estates got in the East-Indies, and 'brought home, and laid out in Land, or em-'ploy'd in the several Branches of our general 'Trade: The great Advantage we gain by this 'Means in our home Consumption of a Mul-'titude of India Goods, that either Necessity 'or Luxury would import from Foreign Coun-'tries; such as, Salt-Petre, Drugs, Tea, China, '&c. which we have now at easy Rates, and 'would otherwise cost the Nation treble of 'what we now give for them. And, Lastly, 'the general Profit of the Trade, in the com-'mon and ordinary Way of Traffick, in buying 'and selling Goods; and the Produce of that 'divided among the several Proprietors of the 'Company's Stock.'

In descending to Particulars, the Writer, from whom I took this Quotation, shews, that the Company's Trade, in the staple Commodities of this Kingdom, maintains 14000 People; that they employ 40 Ships, of 430 Ton each; and 5000 Seamen, to, from, and in the East-Indies; and occasion the laying out of 63000*l.* yearly, in building and repairing of Ships: In a Word, he computes the whole Benefit arising from this Trade, at one full and compleat Million: Adding, But this Account falls considerably short of the Valuation of the Advantage of this Trade to the Publick, made by an able and experienc'd Officer of the Customs: For this Gentleman reckons, that we gain full a Million and a Half every Year, on a just Computation of every Circumstance, and the giving it its due Weight, which ought to be done, when we consider the Usefulness or Disadvantage of any particular Trade to the Nation, which Dr. Davenant, and Mr. Henry Martin, both already mention'd, did not do; but made their Computation on the great and general Articles, without enumerating and considering the Particulars; and yet, they both made the East-India Trade about 700000*l.* a Year advantage to us.

The popular Objection to this Trade is, that it carries away our Silver, and the Generality of the People, which Dryden terms, the Great Vulgar, and the Small, take nothing for Riches, but Cash, Gold, or Silver. There's one Answer to this Objection, which does its business with little Trouble, and that is, that the very Silver which the East-India Company export, is imported by them for that Use, and which without it, would not have been imported at all. I would be thought to mean, says the last quoted Writer, what is the real Truth and Fact, that 'tis Foreign Bullion only, bought generally in Holland, and not the Coin or Plate of the Nation melted down, that they thus export. A.D.1727

One would have thought, that the Sense of the Legislature in England, would have convinc'd People of the Error about exporting Silver; as this, in the Preamble to an Act, 6 W. 3. allowing such Exportation. Forasmuch as several considerable and advantagious Trades cannot be conveniently driven and carried on, without the Species of Money or Bullion, and that it is found by Experience, that they are carried in great Abundance into a common Market, in such Places as give free Liberty for exporting the same, Be it enacted, &c.

The Lord Bingley having in his Speech spoken of the Advantages of the German Trade, as preferable to that of the East-Indies, own'd, that we were like to lose it, by opposing the Emperor in the Ostend Company. 'Tis fit to repeat what the above cited Writer says of the Trade to Germany, upon the Prohibition of Calicoes in England. It has serv'd only to encrease the Consumption of the dearest of German Linnens; which are purchas'd chiefly with ready Money, at about four Times the Price the Nation us'd to buy Calicoes. And it is no wild Conjecture, that the Gain by the Re-exports of East-India Goods to Germany, tho' 3 or 400000*l. per Annum*, is hardly sufficient to discharge the Over-balance of the Trade in Cambricks, &c. on the Side of the Silesians and Germans. It is more than probable, that what the same Writer urges, as Merit in the East-India Company, their Zeal for King William's Service, and (ever since) for our happy Constitution, set the Hearts and Tongues of many against them, and made them rather incline to see the Ostend Company establish'd upon their Ruins, than any vigorous Steps taken to prevent it.

'The Zeal which they shew'd for King 'William, in that seasonable and necessary 'Loan of two Millions, is known to every 'body. 'Tis equally well known too, that 'they advanc'd 1200000*l.* in Queen Anne's 'Time, for the Necessities of the publick Ser-'vice; and for this particular Sum, they had 'no distinct and additional Recompence, and 'Allowance of Interest. They have chearful-'ly, tho' with much Difficulty, born a greater 'Share of the publick Duties, than any other 'Branch of Trade, during our expensive Wars, 'with the same publick Spirit, with which 'they assisted King William; and they still pay 'those heavy Duties with the same Zeal, as 'Part of them are appropriated for the Civil 'List, to support with proper Dignity and 'Honour His Majesty's Houshold.'

This Digression cannot be censur'd as mala Propos, because it relates to that Trade, the Security of which was what His Majesty in his Speech recommended to the Consideration of the Parliament.

And after the Debate upon it in the House of Lords, it was resolv'd, That it fully appears to this Committee, upon Consideration of His Majesty's Speech, and the Letters and Memorials laid before the House, by His Majesty's Order, That the Measures His Majesty has thought The Lords approve the Treaty of Hanover.

A.D.1727 thought fit to take, were honourable, juſt, and neceſſary, for preventing the Execution of the dangerous Engagements, enter'd into in Favour of the Pretender, for preſerving the Dominions belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, by ſolemn Treaties, and, particularly, thoſe of Gibraltar, and the Iſland of Minorca; and for maintaining to his People, their moſt valuable Rights and Privileges of Commerce, and the Peace and Tranquility of Europe.

This Reſolution was carry'd upon the Queſtion, by a Majority of 98 Voices againſt 25.

Sir William Wyndham mov'd, January 23d, to addreſs His Majeſty for a Copy of the Memorial preſented to the King of Sweden, by Mr. Stephen Poyntz, His Majeſty's Envoy, relating to the Acceſſion of the Crown of Sweden to the Treaty of Hanover. Another Motion was made, to addreſs His Majeſty for the ſecret offenſive Alliance between the Emperor and the King of Spain; but upon the Queſtion, both Motions were carry'd in the Negative, without dividing; and the Commons proceeded heartily in granting Supplies for the next Year's Service, purſuant to their Addreſs. They voted 20000 Seamen; and Mr. Pelham, Secretary at War, having ſhewn the Neceſſity of an Augmentation of about 8000 Men, Dragoons, and Foot, the ſame was warmly oppos'd by Dr. Friend, and Sir William Wyndham, (both whoſe Commitment to the Tower for High Treaſon, has been beforemention'd,) Mr. Shippen, Mr. Hungerford, and ſome other Gentlemen; who were anſwer'd by Mr. Pelham, Sir William Yonge, Colonel Bladen, General Wade, and other Members; and the Queſtion was carry'd, 250 againſt 85, for 26383 Men for the Land Forces.

Augmentation of the Forces oppos'd.

On the laſt Day of January, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, preſented a loyal Addreſs to His Majeſty, wherein they ſay, among other Things, 'We cannot hear, without a juſt Indignation, that Gibraltar, and Port-Mahon, '(thoſe important Acquiſitions, which were 'gain'd by the victorious Arms of our late 'moſt glorious Queen) are now demanded, &c.' The upbraiding thoſe, who by their Valour and Conduct gain'd thoſe Acquiſitions, with delighting in War, did afterwards very much diminiſh the Glory of that auſpicious Reign. They cloſe their Addreſs with this good Paragraph. 'We therefore (who are more immediately intereſted in thoſe valuable and darling 'Benefits of Trade) are in a particular manner 'oblig'd to return our moſt dutiful Thanks to 'your Majeſty, for that prudent Care which 'has hitherto render'd abortive the chimerical 'and unjuſt Deſigns of your Enemies; and to 'aſſure your Majeſty, that your loyal City of 'London, will be always ready to ſacrifice 'their Lives and Fortunes, in Defence of your 'Royal Perſon and Government, and our excellent Conſtitution, both in Church and State, againſt all your Enemies whatſoever.'

City of London's Addreſs.

To which His Majeſty was pleas'd to return the following Anſwer.

'This very dutiful and loyal Addreſs from 'my City of London, is truly acceptable to me: 'I return you my kindeſt Thanks for the Reſentment you expreſs, at Engagements enter'd 'into in Favour of the Pretender, and for the 'affectionate Aſſurances you give me, of exerting your ſelves to the utmoſt, in Defence 'of my Perſon and Government, and of our 'happy Conſtitution, in Church and State. 'Nothing could have added more Weight to 'this Declaration of your Duty and Fidelity, 'than the Unanimity with which you have 'proceeded upon this Occaſion. As the Preſervation of the Trade of this Kingdom, and 'of Poſſeſſions of the utmoſt Importance to it, 'has been the conſtant Aim of the Meaſures I 'have hitherto taken, you may be confidently 'aſſur'd of the Continuance of my beſt Endeavours, to ſecure and perpetuate the Enjoyments of thoſe ineſtimable Advantages to my 'People; and my City of London, in particular, may always depend upon my Favour 'and Protection.'

His Majeſty's Anſwer.

His Majeſty was pleas'd to receive the Addreſſers very graciouſly, and to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon William Billers, Eſq; Edward Bellamy, Eſq; and John Thompſon, Eſq; Aldermen; and on William Ogborne, Eſq; one of the Sheriffs: As alſo to order a magnificent Dinner to be provided for them, in the Royal Palace, where the Great Officers of State din'd with them.

On the 19th of January, Sir Charles Wager, with a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War, ſail'd from Spithead to Gibraltar, which Place the Spaniards threaten'd with a Siege.

Sir Charles Wager ſails to Gibraltar.

About this Time, Henry Parſons, Eſq; was made one of the Commiſſioners for victualling the Navy. John Finch, Eſq; was appointed one of His Majeſty's Council at Law. Rowland Hill, Eſq; of Shropſhire, was created a Baronet. On the 27th of January, Mr. Treaſurer preſented to the Houſe of Commons, Copies and Tranſlations, of ſeveral Memorials, Letters, and Papers, which had lately paſt between the Miniſters of the Courts of Great Britain and Spain.

On the 6th of February a Motion was made in the Houſe of Commons, by Mr. Sandys, for an Addreſs, to have a Copy of the Declaration, concerning a Promiſe for the Reſtitution of Gibraltar. This was ſtrenuouſly ſeconded and ſupported by Sir William Wyndham, Mr. Hungerford, and Mr. William Pulteney; who were ſtrongly oppos'd by Mr. Pelham, Mr. Thomas Broderick, Mr. Horatio Walpole, and Sir Robert Walpole; who, according to the Annaliſt, did not diſown, 'That ſuch a Promiſe might 'have been made in a former Adminiſtration, 'but this he was ſure of, that if there was ſuch 'a Promiſe, it was upon certain Conditions, 'which not having been perform'd, was there-'by become invalid; and as for the Declarati-'on or Letter, the Communication of which 'was inſiſted upon, the ſame was altogether 'impracticable and unprecedented, the private 'Letters

Debate about a Report for Reſtoration of Gibraltar.

A.D 1727 'Letters of Princes being almoſt as ſacred as 'their very Perſons.' The previous Queſtion being put, after a long Debate, it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 204 Voices againſt 97.

The next Day the Lord Morpeth, mov'd for an Addreſs, that the Repreſentations from the Crowns of Sweden and Denmark, which induc'd the ſending the Squadron into the Baltick, might be communicated to the Houſe. This was ſeconded by Sir William Wyndham, and oppos'd by Sir William Yonge, Mr. Verney, and other Gentlemen; and the Queſtion paſt in the Negative, by a Majority of 196 Voices againſt 79. Three Days after, a Debate aroſe about a Charge in general Terms of 125000 l. diſburſt for ſecret Services, which will never fail of giving a Handle to Oppoſition, to know the Particulars, which cannot be known without betraying the Counſels of State; nor can that be done, without depriving ſuch Counſels of their Effect, for the publick Welfare and Safety. This Motion too was vigorouſly ſupported by Mr. Shippen, and Mr. William Pulteney.---When I meet with certain Conjunctions, I never forget the firſt Image in Horace's Epiſtle to the Piſo's.---They were oppos'd by Sir William Strickland, Mr. Horatio Walpole, and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer; who carry'd the Queſtion by a Majority of 178 Voices againſt 78. However, when afterwards the Reſolution of the Committee of the whole Houſe for 160,306 l. to make good the Deficiency for the laſt Year's Service, was read, it occaſion'd a warm Debate, and was like to have miſcarry'd, by reaſon of the 125000 l. abovemention'd: And a Motion being made for an Addreſs, to have an Account of the Diſpoſition of that Money, it was carry'd without dividing; and then the Reſolution for the 160,306 l. Deficiency paſt, after a ſmall Debate: And a Week after, February 21ſt, Sir Paul Methuen, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, reported to the Commons, His Majeſty had commanded him to acquaint them, in Anſwer to the Addreſs about the 125000 l. That the Sum mention'd in it, was iſſu'd and diſburſt, purſuant to the Power given to His Majeſty by Parliament, for neceſſary Services and Engagements, of the utmoſt Importance to the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and the Tranquility of Europe; and which require the greateſt Secrecy; and therefore a Particular of the Diſtribution of it cannot poſſibly be given without a manifeſt Prejudice to the Publick.

The Debate about 125000 l.

An Addreſs upon it.

The Anſwer.

Mr. William Pulteney was ſo far from being ſatisfy'd with this Anſwer, that he mov'd for a further humble Addreſs to his Majeſty, for a diſtinct Account of that 125000 l. I do not repeat the Arguments, becauſe they turn upon this only, that without Accounts the publick Treaſure would be imbezled, and a general Charge might cover the Miſapplication of particular Sums; which is ſo true, that there wanted neither Logick nor Rhetorick to make it good: But then it is as true, that Money for ſecret Services is the moſt neceſſary Part of State Diſburſements; and when the Diſburſement ceaſes to be ſecret, 'tis of no Service. His Motion was ſeconded by Mr. Shippen; but they were both well anſwer'd by Mr. Dodington, Mr. Lewis, Sir William Yonge, and ſeveral other Gentlemen; whoſe Argument and Temper cou'd not fail of Succeſs upon the Queſtion. Mr. St. John Broderick forwarded it very much, by mentioning a Precedent in the beginning of the Harleian Miniſtry, when the Houſe of Commons acquieſc'd, in ſuch a general Anſwer brought them from the Queen, by Mr. Henry St. John. That 'twas not poſſible to give an Account of the Contingencies, the Nature of the Service requiring the utmoſt Secrecy. Mr. Pulteney's Queſtion was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of 235 Voices againſt 110; and inſtead of it, it was reſolv'd, without a Diviſion, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty, to return His Majeſty the Thanks of this Houſe, for his great Care and Wiſdom, in taking ſuch Steps, and entring into ſuch Engagements, as His Majeſty thought would beſt conduce to the Security of the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and to the Preſervation of the Peace of Europe; and to aſſure His Majeſty, that this Houſe placing an entire Confidence in His Majeſty's Goodneſs, and Regard for the true Intereſt of his People, will ſtand by, and ſupport, His Majeſty in all ſuch further Meaſures as His Majeſty ſhall find neceſſary and expedient, for preventing a Rupture, and for the Honour and Advantage of theſe Kingdoms. A.D. 1727

Tho' the Management of the Commiſſioners of Hawkers and Pedlars, lately (with great Reaſon) turn'd out of Commiſſion, George Townſend, jun. Mountague Bacon, John Atwood, and John Burton, in ſuffering Thomas Tomkins, their Caſhier, to embezzle the Money ariſing by that Duty for ſo many Years, had render'd them very obnoxious to the Publick, yet it was thought proper to compound with them for Tomkins's Debt, after he was run away; and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer acquainted the Houſe of Commons, that His Majeſty had given his Conſent that a Bill might be brought in to enable the Lords of the Treaſury to make that Compoſition, according to the Prayer of the Petition of George Townſend, and the other late Commiſſioners; which being referr'd to a Committee of the whole Houſe, Mr. Farrer reported from the Committee, March 7, two Reſolutions.

1. That no Money had been paid into the Treaſury, on account of the Duty on Hawkers and Pedlars, from Midſummer 1719, to Midſummer 1723, except 1500 l.

2. That there is a Deficiency of 36693 l. over and above 6000 l. paid by Tomkins's Securities.

Tho' this Deficiency roſe when the Gentleman, who was now at the Head of the Treaſury, was not in the Adminiſtration, and tho' it is impoſſible to reach Perfection in the Conduct of human Affairs, yet, as if this Miſmanagement had been done deſignedly, and as if the Gentleman before ſpoken of had been chief Manager, thoſe that ſpoke againſt every thing that was propos'd by the Miniſtry, ever ſince His Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, and thoſe that ſpoke againſt every thing that was propos'd by the Miniſtry, after they were themſelves out of Employment, could not but be well pleas'd with the Handle that was given them in Tomkins's Caſe, to diſguiſe their private Animoſity and Pique with a laudable Zeal for the publick Good. The Annaliſt ſays, 'Sir William Wyndham made a ſet elaborate 'Speech,' a part of which may be ſeen in his Collection. The Cloſe of it will be enough for the Curioſity of thoſe who do not delight to fiſh in troubled Waters. 'That thoſe who 'were

A.D. 1727

'were a Check on the Management of that 'Branch of the publick Revenue, were more 'guilty than the Commiſſioners of Hawkers 'and Pedlars themſelves, ſince they not only 'had conniv'd for four Years at the Imbezzle-'ment of the publick Money, but had for three 'Years more neglected to recover the ſame, 'and ſeem'd at laſt to have encourag'd a Peti-'tion to the Houſe, to have it remitted.' Our Author proceeds, 'He was ſeconded by Mr. 'William Pulteney, late Cofferer, who ſpoke 'with notable Vehemence againſt the Neglect 'of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury;' who were not the Commiſſioners when Tomkins made the Deficiency; as was obſerv'd by Sir William Yonge, and other Gentlemen: And the Multiplicity of arduous, important, and intricate Affairs, that fell out ſince, had ſo taken up the Attention of the Managers of the Treaſury, that it was no Wonder if ſo inconſiderable a Branch of the Revenue had eſcap'd their Notice. And as to the Treaſury encouraging a Petition to enable the Petitioners to Compound, which was call'd remitting the Debt, the Lords in that Commiſſion were ſo far from intending any thing more than laying the Matter before the Parliament, to do therein what might be thought moſt for the Intereſt of the Publick, that one of theſe Lords, (the ſame juſt mention'd) Sir William Yonge, mov'd, That the Petition of the late Commiſſioners of Hawkers and Pedlars, be rejected; which was carry'd without a Diviſion. As every body knew the main Scope of thoſe that ſpoke about the Deficiency, was to lay the Blame of it on an honourable Perſon, who was not in the Management of the Treaſury when that Money was imbezzled, ſo he did not ſuffer the Injury intended him, to paſs off without Animadverſion; but with equal Spirit and Reaſon, reflected on the Envy and Rancour of ſome Men, who made it their conſtant Buſineſs to thwart and revile thoſe, who had the Honour to have a Share in the Adminiſtration, and who, not ſatisfy'd with ſhewing their Malignity within thoſe Walls, ſhot likewiſe their Poyſon in the Dark, and ſcatter'd it under Allegories in vile Libels; which was but too true, and too miſchievous. The moſt notorious of theſe ſcandalous Papers, was the Weekly Libel, call'd the Craftſman, publiſh'd by an expell'd Member of the Univerſity of Oxford, every Saturday, full of Sophiſtry, Falſhood, Malice, and Scandal, againſt the beſt Friends to the Government. To ſave the Authors and Publiſhers from the Puniſhment the Laws would otherwiſe have inflicted on them, they abus'd Hiſtory, ancient and modern, and even Fable and Fiction, by applying what was ſaid of the worſt Princes and Miniſters, in former Ages, to the preſent, by throwing in ſome Circumſtance or other, to direct the factious Reader how to interpret it. Theſe Libellers pretended to be the only Patriots in the Kingdom, tho' the Chief of them was one of thoſe that had been a Fugitive abroad, under an Attainder of High Treaſon, ſeveral Years; and by His Majeſty's Clemency, at the Interceſſion of the very Perſon againſt whom the Libel was always level'd, was permitted to return to his own Country again, which he endeavour'd once more to ruin. This Man has never deny'd the Share he took to himſelf, in ſupporting that ſeditious Weekly Paper, at the Expence of Truth, Duty, Reaſon, Decency and Modeſty.

The Case of the Commiſſioners of Hawkers and Pedlars debated.

The Craftſman a Weekly Libel, by whom publiſh'd.

In this renown'd Work, he had for Aſſiſtant a Perſon who till then had his Principles and Practices in Abhorrence; but reſenting the Diſgrace, of which he affected to be proud, he went as far in abuſing and villifying the Miniſters, out of Diſguſt, as the other did out of Hatred; and aſſociated himſelf with the very Man, whom a few Years before he voted to the Gibbet, for Crimes, of which he never repented. As faſt as any in Employment ſo misbehav'd, as oblig'd the Government to get rid of them, they immediately join'd with this Faction, and ſet themſelves in Oppoſition to the Adminiſtration, of which they had render'd themſelves unworthy, either by Inſufficiency, or Perverſeneſs, or both. Was it likely that an abandon'd Traitor, a profeſt Creature of the Pretender, ſhould all at once be a Convert to the Conſtitution, and become a Champion for Liberty, in the Inſtant he quitted the Arms he took up for Slavery? But Perſons under Poſſeſſion of ſuch evil Spirits, as Envy, Pride, Reſentment, Revenge, cannot think ſoberly; and matter not with whom or in what they join, againſt thoſe whoſe Deſtruction they have vow'd; which is the lively Image of the Craftſmen Authors, and Publiſhers of the Libels abovemention'd.

Having ſpoken of the Addreſſes from the Parliament and City of London to His Majeſty, on Occaſion of the Danger threatening this Nation, and their Commerce, by the Alliance between the Courts of Vienna and Madrid, we will ſee a little more of the Senſe His Majeſty's good Subjects had of it; and it is happily expreſs'd in the Addreſs from the Univerſity of Cambridge, preſented to His Majeſty by Dr. Gooch, Deputy Vice-Chancellor, attended by many of the Heads of Houſes, Doctors, &c. accompany'd by ſeveral Biſhops and Deans, introduc'd by His Grace the Duke of Grafton, Lord Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold. Tho' the whole Addreſs is extreamly well drawn up, yet, for the ſake of room, we can only inſert this excellent Paragraph, equally juſt, pathetick, and eloquent.

A good Addreſs from Cambridge Univerſity.

'We ſtand before our Patron, and our King, 'greatly indebted, and highly ſenſible of our 'Obligations, in both Views; but as the Li-'berty which we enjoy as Engliſtmen, and the 'Religion which we poſſeſs as Proteſtants, are 'of all earthly Bleſſings the greateſt, and with-'out which all others would ſoon become vain 'and inſignificant, 'tis to your Royal Care and 'Vigilance over theſe common Bleſſings, in 'which every Briton has a Share, that we 'come now to pay an Acknowledgment, of 'which our Hearts are full, and which we feel 'far more ſenſibly than we can expreſs, &c.'

His Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer.

I thank you for this dutiful and loyal Addreſs. The Zeal and Affection which you expreſs for my Perſon and Government, are very ſeaſonable at this Juncture, and give me great Satisfaction: My Univerſity of Cambridge may be aſſur'd of the Continuance of my Protection, Favour, and Encouragement.

This Addreſs was preſented the 11th of March; and it was a Week after that the Univerſity of Oxford paſt a Vote for an Addreſs in their Convocation; againſt which a Speech

*A.D.*1727 was made; and when it was ready, it was sent to their Members of Parliament by the Beadle, and they presented it to the King. There was not one Word against the Pretender in it; he was not nam'd; and the whole was so cold, that they could not expect it would be so welcome as was that hearty one from the University of Cambridge.

Some Days before this, the Protestant Dissenting Ministers, of the three Denominations, in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, were introduc'd to His Majesty, by the Lord Viscount Townshend, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and the Reverend Mr. Joseph Burroughs presented their Address, in which, among other Things, they say, speaking of the worst of Mischiefs, the Imposition of a Popish Pretender, 'This last Insult 'above all others raises our Indignation. If 'ever God, for our Sins, should suffer that vile 'Project to take Effect, it must entirely revert 'all the distinguishing Advantages procur'd to 'these Kingdoms by the glorious Revolution, 'and since farther secured with the Expence of 'so much Blood and Treasure, and deprive 'late Posterity of all the Happiness contriv'd 'for them by the wise Counsels of King WILLIAM, of immortal Memory. It must subvert our fundamental Laws, which secure the 'Right of your Majesty, and of your Protestant Descendants, to reign over Britain, as 'firmly as they secure to British Subjects their 'private Rights. It must therefore inevitably 'involve us in Confusion and Ruin: And not 'affect Britons alone, but the Liberties of Europe, and the Protestant Interest in general; 'for we are perswaded the Conviction is growing universal, that neither the one, nor the 'other, of these can subsist, without the Protestant Succession, &c.'

The Dissenters Address.

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

His Majesty's Answer.

I thank you for this dutiful and loyal Address. This seasonable Instance of your Zeal for my Person and Government, cannot but be very acceptable to me. You may depend on my constant Protection.

The Artillery Company of the City of London, distinguish'd themselves by their Zeal for the Protestant Succession, so much, in the last Years of the late Queen, that they were threatened to have their Charter taken from them; but those Threats did not at all deter them from giving the most signal and frequent Proofs of their Attachment to the illustrious House of Hanover. Their Address at this Time was presented to His Majesty by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Sir Gerrard Conyers, and Sir Charles Peers, introduc'd by the Lord Viscount Townshend; and was, as follows.

GREAT SIR,

The Artillery Company's Address.

'We cannot but observe, with the greatest 'Concern, the present Situation of the Affairs 'of Europe, and the Menaces and Threats us'd 'by the Spaniards, and the Emperor, against 'your Majesty, your Dominions, and our Liberties and Properties.

'Therefore we take this Opportunity to 'wait on your Majesty in Arms, to assure your 'Majesty that we are ready at this Time, and 'shall be at all Times, to defend your Majesty, 'and your Royal Family, against all your Enemies, and the Enemies of our Laws, Liberties and Properties, and all those that dare *A.D.*1727 'attempt to invade or disturb them.'

To which His Majesty was graciously pleas'd to answer,

I thank you for this dutiful and loyal Address, in which you express so much Zeal and Affection for my Person and Government.

These Soldiers, for by their gallant Appearance, and regular Exercise, they well deserve the Name, past in Review before the King and the Prince of Wales, their Captain General, in St. James's Park.

Declarations of the Ministers of Great Britain and France at Ratisbon.

Monsieur De Chavigny, the French Minister, at the general Dyet at Ratisbon, communicated to them a Declaration, dated February the 27th, containing his most Christian Majesty's Reasons for entring into the Treaty of Hanover, which did not directly or indirectly concern the Germanick Body, and whereas the Imperial Ministers had caus'd it to be reported, that the Ambassadors of Great Britain and France, at Constantinople, had solicited the Turks underhand, to come to Resolutions contrary to the Tranquility of the Empire, the most Christian King declares solemnly that this is a CALUMNY. The Imperial Commissioners at the Dyet were highly offended at this Declaration, which was not register'd according to Custom, and they publish'd a few Days after an Imperial Decree, full of Invectives against the Steps taken by the Courts of Great Britain and France, particularly against His Britannick Majesty's Speech to his Parliament. Mr. Le Heup, the British Minister at Ratisbon, deliver'd to the Dyet a Declaration of the same Tenor with that of Monsieur De Chavigny, both which made no small Impression on many of the Deputies to the Dyet. The Court of Vienna still haughty and obstinate, and not considering what little, or rather what ill Effect the Airs they gave themselves had in Great Britain, order'd Monsieur De Palms, their Resident at London, to present an Insolent Memorial to the King, and afterwards to publish it to the whole Nation, as an Appeal to the People of Great Britain against their lawful Sovereign; an unprecedented and great Insult upon the Crown, and His Majesty's sacred Person, which cou'd not but be resented in the most lively manner. Accordingly Monsieur De Palms was required forthwith to depart the Kingdom; and four Days after, March 8, the Lord Viscount Fitz-Williams took Notice of it in the House of Commons, and mov'd for an Address, that his Memorial might be laid before them, which was done by Sir Paul Methuen, the 11th of March, and on the 13th the House taking it into Consideration, the following Members spoke on this Occasion.

Mr. Palms the Imperial Minister, order'd to depart.

Sir Robert Walpole.	Mr. Shippen.
The Ld. Fitz-Williams	Sir William Wyndham.
Mr. Dodington.	Mr. Hungerford.
Mr. Onslow.	Mr. William Pulteney.
Sir William Yonge.	Mr. Sandys.
Sir William Strickland.	Sir John St. Aubin.

Who all agreed in expressing the highest Indignation and Resentment at the Affront offer'd to His Majesty, and only differ'd as to the manner of Wording their Censure upon so daring an Insult; but at last it was mov'd and resolv'd, Nemine Contradicente, to present an humble Address to His Majesty thereupon, and to desire the Concurrence of the Lords; to which Purpose

A.D.1727 poſe the Lord Harvey was ſent to the Houſe of Peers, with a Meſſage for a Conference in the Painted-Chamber, where the Managers for the Commons, deliver'd to the Managers for the Lords, the Addreſs the Lower Houſe had agreed to, and the Papers relating to this Affair; which being taken into Conſideration by the Houſe of Peers, their Lordſhips agreed to the ſaid Addreſs, and their Managers, at a ſecond Conference, declar'd the ſame to the Managers for the Commons; the next Day, March 16. Both Houſes preſented it to the King as follows.

Moſt gracious Sovereign,

'We, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and faithful Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament aſſembled, think it our indiſpenſable Duty to expreſs the higheſt Reſentment at the Affront and Indignity offered to your moſt ſacred Majeſty, by the Memorial deliver'd by Monſieur De Palms, the Emperor's Reſident, and at his Inſolence in printing and diſperſing the ſame throughout the Kingdom.

An Addreſs againſt his Memorial.

'This audacious Manner of appealing to the People againſt your Majeſty, under the Pretext of applying to you for Redreſs and Reparation of ſuppoſed Injuries, and turning a Memorial, preſented to your Majeſty, into a ſeditious Libel, is a Proceeding that creates in us the utmoſt Abhorrence and Deteſtation.

'The endeavouring to inſtill into the Minds of any of your faithful Subjects the leaſt Diſtruſt or Diffidence in your Majeſty's moſt ſacred Royal Word, or to make a Diſtinction between your Majeſty and your People, is an Attempt as vain as preſumptuous; for, by your Goodneſs, the Intereſt of your Majeſty and your People is but one, and as inſeperable, as their Duty, Affection and Confidence, in your Majeſty, are moſt juſtly and deſervedly unalterable; and if Time has not effaced the Memory of the glorious Exploits, and important Succours, (confeſſed to have been received from Great Britain) Gratitude, Affection and Eſteem, for this Nation, will be beſt manifeſted, by doing Honour to the King, whom the People honour, and Juſtice to the People, whoſe Rights and Privileges the beſt of Kings is now defending, againſt the Invaſions and Encroachments made upon them.

'We return your Majeſty our ſincereſt Thanks for your Care and Vigilance, in diſcovering the ſecret and pernicious Deſigns of your Enemies; and for your Goodneſs in communicating to your Parliament, the Dangers that threatened this Kingdom.

'And we beg Leave to aſſure your Majeſty, that no Amuſements by artful or evaſive Deſignals, ſhall lead us into a falſe Security, or A.D.1727 divert us from exerting our ſelves in Vindication of your Majeſty's Honour, and in defending and ſupporting your Majeſty againſt all your open and ſecret Enemies, both at home and abroad. And if any among your own Subjects have been ſo wicked as to countenance, encourage or abet, the Diſturbers of the publick Tranquility, in this extravagant Inſult upon your Majeſty, or flatter'd them with Hopes, that an obſtinate Perſeverance in their deſtructive Meaſures, cou'd ſtagger the Firmneſs of the Britiſh Nation; we are reſolv'd effectually to defeat all ſuch groundleſs Expectations, and to convince the World, that the Intrigues of a few cannot in any Degree abate or ſlacken that Vigour and Reſolution, with which a true Love and Concern for our Country, a juſt Senſe of its Intereſts, and an unſhaken Loyalty to your Majeſty, have inſpired us.'

To this Addreſs His Majeſty was pleas'd to return the following moſt gracious Anſwer.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

Your unanimous Concurrence in this dutiful and affectionate Addreſs, gives me the greateſt Satisfaction. The juſt Concern you expreſs for my Honour, and the Dignity of the Crown, is very becoming a Britiſh Parliament: And this freſh Proof of your Confidence in me, will convince the World, that all Attempts to divide our Hearts and Intereſts will be vain and ineffectual.

The vigorons Reſolutions of the Britiſh Parliament, and the Detention of the Spaniſh Plate Fleet in America, by Admiral Hoſier, which hinder'd the Remittances from Madrid to Vienna, held the Imperial Court a little in ſuſpence, notwithſtanding they were ſo intent on ſupporting the Oſtend Company by War. The Obſtructions they met with from Great Britain, in their ambitious Projects, very much ſharpen'd their Sentiments and Language againſt that Court. Mr. St. Saphorin, and Mr. Charles Harriſon, the Britiſh Miniſters at Vienna, were not only order'd to depart from thence, but the ſame Orders were ſent to Mr. Hoeldenberg, who reſided there in the Quality of Envoy from the Elector of Brunſwick. Mr. Le Heup, the Britiſh Miniſter at Ratisbon, was ſent from thence; and whatever ſecret Diſpoſition there might be in the Emperor's Councils, to accommodate Matters, there was no Appearance of it in publick.

CHAP. VII.

From the Siege of Gibraltar, to His Majesty's Death.

Containing the Space of Four Months.

*A.D.*1727 DUring these Debates and Transactions in Great Britain and Germany, King Philip, depending on the powerful Diversion the Emperor would give the Allies of Hanover by his Armies on the Rhine, and in the Netherlands, order'd the Conde De Les Torres, Captain General of his Forces in Andalusia, to lay Siege to Gibraltar, for which Preparations had been long making. His Army, when he open'd the Trenches, February the 11th, consisted of about 20000 Men; and he was well provided with Artillery of all Sorts, with Ammunition, and warlike Stores, proportion'd to the Strength of the Place, and the Bravery of the Garrison, which the Spaniards expected wou'd lengthen the Siege. Colonel Clayton, Lieutenant Governor of the Place, had Troops and Necessaries, sufficient for Defence, till Supplies cou'd come from England: For which due Preparations had been made in Time. His Excellency Colonel Stanhope, the British Ambassador in Spain, having receiv'd the Passports, he demanded of King Philip, set out from Madrid for Bayone, the 11th of March, in his Way to England, having given the British Merchants in that Kingdom, such timely Notice to take necessary Precautions for securing their Effects, that when Orders came to the Spanish Governors to seize them, those Merchants suffer'd no considerable Loss by that Seizure. In the beginning of March, Colonel Hayes and Colonel Middleton's Regiments of Foot, were put on board the Transports at Portsmouth, and sail'd for Gibraltar, under Convoy of the Torbay, Captain Nicholas Haddock; and the Pool Fireship: Colonel Clayton's Regiment was about the same Time order'd to embark in the River of Thames; and a Draught of ten Companies out of the First Regiment of Foot-Guards, was made by Lot, which fell on those of Colonels of the Guards to go to Gibraltar.

Colonel Price.	Colonel Inwood.
Colonel Hastings.	Colonel Treby.
Colonel Pearson.	Colonel Brown.
Colonel Meyrick.	Colonel Oughton.
Colonel Duncombe	Colonel Williamson.

The whole Detachment to be under the Command of Colonel Guise, Major in the said Regiment.

Of these, Colonel Treby, resign'd his Commission, and was succeeded by Colonel Onslow; Captain Stanhope, of the same Regiment, also laid down his Commission, and was succeeded in it by Mr. Parker. The Earl of Portmore, Governor of Gibraltar, notwithstanding his advanc'd Age, having been a Colonel near 40 Years, thought it his indispensable Duty to repair to his Government, and embark'd at Portsmouth, on board the Prince Frederick, one of the Men of War appointed to convoy the Transports, on which the Detachment of the Guards, and Clayton's Regiment, were em- *A.D.*1727 bark'd. The Lord Carpenter, Governor of Minorca, sent Orders thither, for sending a Detachment of 500 of the British Troops in that Island, to Gibraltar. And on the 18th of March, His Majesty being in Council, an Order was made for general Reprizals, against the Ships, Goods, and Subjects of the King of Spain, which was very grateful to the Merchants, who had fitted out Ships for that Purpose. Reprizals granted against the Spaniards.

About the middle of April, His Majesty was pleas'd to make a Promotion of general Officers; seven Lieutenant Generals, sixteen Major Generals, twenty-one Brigadier Generals.

There was also an Augmentation of thirty Companies of Foot, and necessary Orders were issu'd for preparing and shipping the 10000 Auxiliary Forces, which England was oblig'd by Treaty to send to the Assistance of the States General, when they were in Danger of being attack'd, as they were now, the Emperor's Armies being in Motion on the Rhine, and all Advices from Germany importing, that they were design'd to march to the Netherlands, and begin the War, by attacking the Dutch Barrier, and driving their Troops out of that Country, the States and their Allies had conquer'd for him. Germans threaten War.

We have seen with what Insolence Mr. De Palms, the Imperial Minister, behav'd in England, and how audaciously he charg'd the King's Speech with Falshood and Calumny, contrary to plain Fact and Decency, at the same Time that the Imperial Ambassador in Sweden, asserted in a Memorial, presented to that King, the blackest Calumny that the Malice of Man ever invented; having urg'd, that the Design of the English in pressing that Crown to accede to the Treaty of Hanover, was to embroil it with the Empire, and make it depend absolutely on England; and to deprive His Royal Highness the Duke of Holstein, of the Succours he might expect from this Kingdom, to restore him to his Dominions, and rob him of the Friendship and Prerogative he enjoys here. The Ambassador had the Confidence to add, With an Intent to procure one Day or other the Succession of the Crown of Sweden to the youngest Prince of the Electoral House of Hanover, either under Pretence of the Want Sweden would stand in of the Protection of England, or by applying open Force. This was so flagrant a Falsity, that it had a quite contrary Effect to what was expected, and instead of retarding, did rather accelerate the King of Sweden's Accession to the Treaty of Hanover; the Instruments of which were brought to England, by Mr. Zollman, Secretary to Mr. Poyntz, His Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary, at Stockholm. His Britannick Majesty, to support the King of Sweden in this new Alliance, so disagreeable to the Imperial Courts of Vienna and Petersburgh, A false Reflection on His Britannick Majesty in the Imperial's Memorial.

A.D.1727 burgh, order'd a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War to be equip'd for the Baltick, under the Command of Sir John Norris, who had with him Captain Morris, appointed Rear Admiral of the White Squadron, and Captain Hughes, Rear Admiral of the Blue; and the Ships following. A.D.1727

A Debate about an appropriating Clauſe in the Malt-Tax.

On the 12th of April, when the Committee of the whole Houſe of Commons was upon the Malt Bill, Mr. Scrope, Secretary to the Treaſury, mov'd, 'That it be an Inſtruction to the 'ſaid Committee: That they have Power to 'receive a Clauſe of Appropriation, with a 'Power to His Majeſty to apply ſuch Sums of 'Money as ſhall be neceſſary for anſwering and 'defraying ſuch Expences and Engagements, 'as have at any Time been, or ſhall, before or 'until the 25th of December, 1727, be made by 'His Majeſty, in concerting ſuch Meaſures as 'he, in his great Wiſdom, thinks will beſt con-'duce to the Security of the Trade and Navi-'gation of this Kingdom, and to the preſerving 'and reſtoring the Peace of Europe,' which were but other Terms for ſupporting the Alliance of Hanover, form'd for thoſe great and good Ends. Mr. Scrope was ſeconded by Mr. Farrer, Chairman of the Committee for Ways and Means, but oppos'd by Mr. How, Mr. Winnington, and ſome other Members; who being reply'd to by the Gentlemen on the Affirmative Side of the Queſtion, this Debate was the longeſt and warmeſt that happen'd this Seſſion. The Speakers were,

It was alledg'd, in Support of the Motion, 'That His Majeſty was ſo unwilling to put his 'Subjects to any extraordinary Expences, that 'he had demanded no more Supplies this Seſſi-'on, than what he thought abſolutely neceſſa-'ry for the Service of the Year: But that in 'the preſent Poſture of Affairs, ſome unfore-'ſeen Accidents might require a farther Ex-'pence, for which no Eſtimates could now be 'made, becauſe ſome Treaties, His Majeſty 'thought fit to enter into, were not yet finiſh'd, 'therefore they ought to enable His Majeſty to 'anſwer ſuch Contingencies: That the Houſe 'had ſeveral Times repos'd the ſame Confidence 'in His Majeſty, which had never been abus'd, 'and what was now ask'd, was only for a 'ſhort Time.'

If we ſhould leave out what was ſaid againſt the Motion, it would be call'd partial, tho' the inſerting it will only ſerve to ſhew the Weakneſs of the Argument. 'Twas urg'd, 'That the granting of Supplies without Eſti-'mate, was unparliamentary;' yet it had been juſt ſaid, that the Parliament had done the ſame Thing ſeveral Times. Again, 'That 'ſuch an unlimited and abſolute Power ought 'never to be given in a free Government, but 'upon Occaſion of evident Neceſſity, when the 'very Being of the Government is in imminent 'Danger. That the repoſing a Confidence in 'the Crown, in the Diſpoſition of ſuch im-'menſe Sums of Money, as by the Advice of 'unthrifty Miniſters may be expended, might 'be attended with great Prejudice to the Pro-'perties of the Subjects, and great Danger to 'our moſt excellent Conſtitution.' All which is certain, on a Suppoſition, that what had been ſaid of the Engagements of the Emperor and King of Spain, againſt the Trade and Peace of this Nation, was falſe, or had not brought it into Danger, that the preſent Miniſters were unthrifty, and that the entruſting the King for a ſhort Time, was to deſtroy the Conſtitution, which, as no body thought, ſo no body durſt aſſert; and the Negatives founded plauſible Arguments on falſe Premiſes, which was, and will be, the conſtant Practice of Perſons engag'd in Parties againſt the Adminiſtration, and eſpecially of thoſe vile Libellers mention'd in this Houſe a few Days before. The Pith of all the Argument on the Nega-

The Clauſe was carry'd by a Majority of 225 Voices againſt 109; and ſix Days after, occaſion'd a very high Debate in the Houſe of Lords. The Arguments were on both Sides much the ſame as in the Houſe of Commons: The Dukes of Argyle and Newcaſtle, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and the Lord Biſhop of Peterborough, ſpoke for the Clauſe: The Lord Lechmere, the Lord Bingley, and the Lord Bathurſt, againſt it: And the Queſtion paſſing in the Affirmative, Yea's 76, No's 20, the under-written Peers enter'd their Proteſt.

Two Days after, April 26th, Sir William Yonge, one of the Lords Commiſſioners of His Majeſty's Treaſury, mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, 'That towards raiſing the Supply 'granted to His Majeſty, the Sum of 370000 l. 'be rais'd by Loans, or Exchequer Bills, to be 'charg'd on the Surpluſes ariſen, or to ariſe, 'from and after Michaelmas, 1726, for the 'Duties on Coals and Culm, granted by the 'Act of the fifth Year of His Majeſty's Reign, 'from the 27th Day of September, 1725, to 'Lady-day, 1751, &c.' This Motion was ſeconded by Mr. Dodington, and back'd by Sir Charles Turner, two other Lords of the Treaſury; but vigorouſly oppos'd by Mr. Shippen, and Mr. Hungerford, which doubtleſs thoſe worthy Members expected; but neither they nor others could expect that theſe Gentlemen would be back'd by Sir Joſeph Jekyll. The main Objection was, That all the Surpluſes of publick Funds were to be apply'd towards the leſſening of the publick Debts, or the Increaſe of the ſinking Fund: Which had a ſhort, and, one would think, a ſatisfactory Anſwer. That the Surpluſes on Coals, could not be deem'd a Part of the ſinking Fund, ſince they had never been appropriated, but were reſerv'd, for the Diſpoſition of Parliament. However, the Debate was carry'd on, and the Speakers in it were as follows. A.D. 1727

The Motion was carry'd in the Affirmative by a Majority of 209 Voices againſt 82. In the mean while the Spaniards made very little Progreſs in the Siege of Gibraltar, tho' their Fire was very great, and they boaſted much what they would do, with a Mine they were digging from an old Cave in a Rock, under Willis's Battery, which annoy'd them very much.

The Miniſters of the Allies of Hanover, gave not over concerting Meaſures for preventing a War; and the Duke De Richlieu, the French Ambaſſador at Vienna, deliver'd the Ultimatum, or laſt Propoſals of thoſe Allies, to the Emperor's Miniſters, who anſwer'd it by a Counter Project; which being not ſatisfactory, the Miniſters of the Allies enlarg'd their Ultimatum with two Articles more: The Subſtance of it was to ſuſpend the Oſtend Trade for ſeven Years, and to ceaſe all Acts of Hoſtility, and form a Congreſs for a general Peace, to ſettle all Things on a ſure Foot; but theſe pacifick Steps did not hinder the Allies from continuing their military Preparations, to defend themſelves in the beſt manner. His Britannick Majeſty order'd the following Regiments to hold themſelves in a Readineſs for Embarkation.

Propoſals of the Allies of Hanover.

At Gibraltar. Colonel Middleton and Colonel Hayes's Regiments arriv'd at Gibraltar the 26th of March, and Sir Charles Wager came into the Bay with his Squadron the next Day: About a Fortnight after, Colonel Cosby, with 500 Men arriv'd there, from Port-Mahon; as did the Earl of Portmore, and Colonel Guiſe, with the Battalion of Guards, and Clayton's Regiment, all which Troops, with the Garriſon, form'd a Body of 6000 Men. The greateſt Part of this little Army encamp'd on the South Point without the Town, while the reſt did Duty within, and were reliev'd from the Camp. The Beſiegers flung a great Quantity of Bombs into the Place, which did the leſs Damage, for that moſt of the Houſes were empty, by the Deſertion of the old Inhabitants; and thoſe that were then there, were at laſt ſo familiariz'd to the Bombs, that they no more terrify'd even their Women and Children, as I was inform'd by a Principal Inhabitant, then there. They had Store of Salt Proviſion from England and Ireland, and of Freſh from Barbery, for which Purpoſe a Frigate was ordered to be continually going to and from Tetuan and Tangier. Sir Charles Wager having caus'd the Ammunition and Warlike Stores, with 24 Pieces of Canon to be put on Shore, ſail'd from Gibraltar to cruize with the Torbay, Sterling-Caſtle, Burford, Kent, Royal-Oak, Canterbury, York, and Pool, Fireſhip, leaving there the Tyger, Wincheſter, Lyme, Solebay Bombſhip, Thunder Bombſhip, Cruizer and Hawk Sloops; which were join'd by the Portland and Durſley Galley: The Colcheſter and Swallow were order'd to Port-Mahon, to clean: And in this Diſpoſition of Ships and Soldiers, the Siege of Gibraltar gave little Pain to the Engliſh, either abroad or at home: The moſt remarkable Incident in it was the Activity of the Duke of Wharton in the Spaniſh Trenches, where he deſir'd thoſe about him to be Witneſſes for him, that he behav'd well, or elſe, ſaid he, None will believe it to be true.

Duke of Wharton in the Spaniſh Army againſt Gibraltar.

Sir John Norris, with the Squadron beforemention'd, arriv'd on the Coaſt of Jutland, in the beginning of May, and on the 12th anchor'd in the Road of Copenhagen: The next Day the Admiral and the Lord Glenorchy waited on his Daniſh Majeſty at Fredericksburgh; and the Engliſh being join'd by a Daniſh Squadron, the Ruſſians thought fit to put a Stop to the Equipment of their Fleet; which was no more talk'd of after the Death of the Czarina, which happen'd on the 17th of May, about the Time of Sir John Norris's Arrival in the Baltick; and the Government of that Empire falling under a Minority, the Deſtractions occaſion'd by the Cabals and Breaches among ambitious and aſpiring Courtiers, kept that Court a while from being ſo troubleſome to their Neighbours as they had been in the two laſt Reigns, and in the Czarina's, as much as in the Czar's: The former, a Prodigy of Fortune, roſe from a Degree ſo obſcure, that 'tis unknown, firſt to be Wife of one of the greateſt Emperors in the World; and then to be her Self Miſtreſs of one of the greateſt Empires; which cou'd not be done without Genius and Merit equal to her Fortune.

The Czarina's Death

A.D.1727 Her Pedigree.

On the 15th of May, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, Acts paſt.

An Act for 370000*l. Loans on the Surpluſes of* Coals and Culm.

An Act for the Relief of the Creditors of Robert Knight, Eſq; late Caſhier of the South-Sea Company.

An Act for the better regulating of the Woollen Manufactures.

And ſeveral Acts for Roads, and Navigable Rivers. After which the Lord High Chancellor read His Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

'I acquainted you at the opening of this 'Seſſion, with the Dangers that threaten'd this 'Kingdom, and the Peace and Liberties of Eu-'rope: I am now to return you my Thanks 'for the Zeal and Diſpatch with which you 'have proceeded upon the ſeveral Points I then 'recommended to your Care; for the Confi-'dence you have repoſed in me, and for the 'Aſſurances you have given me of your Sup-'port and Aſſiſtance, in Vindication of my 'Honour, and in the Maintenance and Defence 'of the undoubted Rights and Privileges of 'this Nation, ſo openly and notoriouſly inva-'ded and attack'd.

'The Siege of Gibraltar proves, beyond all 'Diſpute, the End and Deſign of the Engage-'ments enter'd into by the Emperor and the 'King of Spain; but the Preparations I had 'made for the Defence of that Place, and the 'Bravery of my Troops, will, I doubt not, 'convince them of the Raſhneſs and Folly of 'that Undertaking: However, the Love of 'Peace has hitherto prevail'd upon me, even 'under this high Provocation, to ſuſpend, in 'ſome meaſure, my Reſentments, and inſtead 'of having immediate Recourſe to Arms, and 'demanding of my Allies that Aſſiſtance, 'which they are engag'd and ready to give me, 'I have concurr'd with the moſt Chriſtian 'King, and the States General, in making ſuch 'Overtures of Accommodation, as muſt con-'vince all the World of the Uprightneſs of 'our Intentions, and of our ſincere Diſpoſition 'to Peace; and demonſtrate, to whoſe Am-'bition and Thirſt of Power the Calamities of 'a War are to be imputed, if theſe juſt and 'reaſonable Propoſitions are rejected. In the 'mean time, I have the Pleaſure to acquaint 'you, that the Crown of Sweden has acceded 'to the Treaty of Hanover, and that the Con-'vention between me, his moſt Chriſtian Ma-'jeſty, and the King of Denmark, is actually 'ſign'd.'

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons:

'The Vigour and Chearfulneſs you have 'ſhewn, in raiſing effectually, and upon ſuch 'eaſy Terms, the neceſſary Supplies for the 'Service of the current Year, are not only In-'ſtances of your Zeal and Affection to me,

'but

A.D. 1727 'but demonstrate, the establish'd Credit, Power and Strength, of this Kingdom.'

My Lords and Gentlemen:

'It would have been a great Satisfaction to 'me, if before your Separation I had been 'able to speak to you more positively, and 'with more Certainty, upon the present Po'sture and State of Affairs: But as you have 'now dispatched the publick Business, and as 'the Season of the Year requires your going 'into your respective Countries, I chose rather 'to put an end to this Session, than to keep 'you any longer together unnecessarily. The 'Provisions you have made, and the perfect 'Union and Harmony between me and my Al'lies, will, I hope, enable me, by the Divine 'Assistance, either to withstand, or to defeat, 'the Designs of our Enemies, if their Conduct 'shall bring upon us the Necessity of a War; 'or to improve the Blessings of Peace, if Peace 'can, with Justice, Honour and Security, be 'obtain'd.'

Then the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 27th of June next.

A Week after the Parliament broke up, Sir Hans Sloan, President, the Duke of Richmond, the Duke of Queensberry, the Lord Cadogan, with several others of the Council, and other Fellows of the Royal Society, introduc'd by His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, presented to His Majesty this most humble Request.

The Royal Society's Request.

May it please your Majesty.

'The President, Council, and Fellows, of 'your Majesty's Royal Society of London, for 'improving Natural Knowledge, your most 'dutiful Subjects, presume to approach your 'Sacred Person, with the deepest Sense of Gra'titude for the many inestimable Blessings they 'enjoy, under the Influence of your Majesty's 'wise and gentle Government.

'The numerous Instances of your Royal Fa'vour extended to other Societies, founded for 'the Advancement of Learning, have also en'courag'd them to beg, of your Majesty, that 'they may have the Honour of seeing your 'august Name inscrib'd in their Book of 'Charters and Laws, as their most gracious 'Patron. This great Honour, added to the 'like they have receiv'd from some of your 'Royal Predecessors, will encrease the Repu'tation of the Society; and as it shews them 'they have the Happiness of being more imme'diately under your Royal Protection, will yet 'more strongly excite them to the Pursuit of 'the great End of their Institution, the Ad'vancement of all Sorts of useful Knowledge, 'and that particularly, by such Observations 'and Experiments, as may tend to the Im'provement of the Natural Produce, the Ma'nufactures and Navigation, of your Majesty's 'Kingdoms, by which the Riches of the Nation 'may be increas'd, and many Benefits, they 'hope, be deriv'd to the latest Posterity.'

The King's most gracious Answer

They were most graciously receiv'd by His Majesty, who was pleas'd to write his Name in their Book, as Patron of the Society; and the said Noblemen and Gentlemen had all the Honour to kiss His Majesty's Hand: And truly they stood in Need of this great Honour, to afford them some Consolation, after the irreparable Loss they had sustain'd in the Death of their late President, Sir Isaac Newton, who dy'd at Kensington, six or seven Weeks before, in the 85th Year of his Age. He was the most Learned, Able, and Celebrated Mathematician, not only of his own, but of all Ages and Nations, and as well by the Judgment of Foreigners, as of his own Countrymen; as appears fully in the Elogy made upon him by Monsieur Fontenelle, who was then at the Head of the Academy of Sciences, at Paris. This great Master of Reason and Science, was as sound in his Political, as in his Philosophical Principles, ever steady in the true Interest of his Country, and consequently zealous for the Revolution and Protestant Succession, of which he gave constant Proofs when he sate in Parliament, being twice chosen Representative for the University of Cambridge, of which he was alike a Pillar and Ornament.

Sir Isaac Newton's Death.

A.D. 1727

After his Decease, his Corpse lay in State in the Jerusalem Chamber, and was bury'd from thence in Westminster-Abbey, near the Entry into the Choir, where there's a beautiful and elegant Monument erected to his Memory. The Pall was supported by Peter Lord King, Lord High Chancellor, the Duke of Montrose, the Duke of Roxburgh, the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Sussex, and the Earl of Macclesfield, being Fellows of the Royal Society. Sir Michael Newton, Knight of the Bath, was chief Mourner; and the greatest Part of his Estate, which was very considerable, was bequeathed to his Niece, Mrs. Barton, who marry'd John Conduit, Esq; Member of Parliament for Whitchurch in Hampshire, who enjoy'd his Office of Master of the Mint, which Sir Isaac held many Years.

Bishop of London's Directions.

About this Time was publish'd, Edmund Lord Bishop of London's Directions to the Incumbents in his Diocese, for preventing the great Scandal to our Holy Religion, by employing Readers, and others, in Parochial Duties, of irregular Behaviour, against which the Bishop provides, by demanding the Names of such Persons so employ'd, who have not been Ordain'd or Licens'd by him; and if his Lordship has found that his Ordination or License is an effectual Remedy against irregular Behaviour, it would be well, if the like Directions were general, and imitated by all Dioceſans.

On the last Day of May, His Majesty in Council, declar'd his Intention of going out of the Kingdom for a short Time, and was pleas'd to declare the following Persons to be Lords Justices, for the Administration of the Government, during his Absence.

Lords Justices.

William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
Peter Lord King, Lord High Chancellor.
William Duke of Devonshire, Lord President.
Thomas Lord Trevor, Lord Privy Seal.
Lionel Duke of Dorset, Lord Steward.
Charles Duke of Grafton, Lord Chamberlain.
Charles Duke of Bolton.
John Duke of Argyle and Greenwich, Master General of the Ordnance.
Thomas Holles, Duke of Newcastle, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
James Earl of Berkley, First Commissioner of the Admiralty.
Francis Earl of Godolphin, Groom of the Stole.
Charles Lord Viscount Townshend, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.
Simon Lord Viscount Harcourt.

Sir Robert Walpole, Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury.

The ſame Day, William Stanhope, Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain of the Houſhold, was ſworn one Creations. of His Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council; and the Duke of Hamilton was appointed one of the Gentlemen of His Majeſty's Bedchamber. About the ſame Time, His Grace Charles Duke of St. Albans, was made Lord Lieutenant of the County of Berks; and Thomas Lord Onſlow, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Surrey: John Munckton, Eſq; of Serlby in Nottinghamſhire, was created Baron of Killard, and Viſcount Gallway, in the County of Ireland; and Joſeph Baron Micklethwaite, was created Viſcount Micklethwaite, in the ſaid Kingdom: (He was Brother to the late Thomas Micklethwaite, Eſq; Repreſentative in Parliament for Arundel in Suſſex,) and did not by his Conduct and Character ſupport his new Dignity. It was now alſo declar'd, that His Majeſty had been pleas'd to advance Dr. Timothy Goodwin, Biſhop of Kilmore and Biſhops made. Ardagh in Ireland, to the Archbiſhoprick of Caſhel: Dr. Joſiah Hort, Biſhop of Leighlin and Fernes, to the Biſhoprick of Kilmore and Ardagh; and Dr. John Hoadley, to the Biſhoprick of Leighlin and Fernes. The Lord Waldegrave, was appointed His Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Emperor of Germany.

Articles of Pacification ſign'd at Paris. The Preliminary Articles for a Pacification, were ſign'd at Paris, by the Imperial Miniſter, and the Miniſters of Great Britain, France, and the States General, the 20th of May.

Henry Ingram, Eſq; was made Commiſſary of the Stores at Gibraltar; Sir Thomas Lyttleton, one of the Lords of the Admiralty; and the Lord Malpas, Maſter of His Majeſty's Robes.

The King having ſettled the Government of his Britiſh Dominions, expreſs'd a very great Deſire to viſit thoſe in Germany, in this Critical Juncture: His Majeſty ſet out from St. James's, on Saturday the third of June, about ſeven a-Clock in the Morning, and about nine embark'd at Greenwich, on board the Carolina Yatcht, where he was attended by the Dukes of Grafton, Dorſet, Newcaſtle, Richmond, Argyle: The Earls of Suſſex, Orkney, Selkirk, Leiceſter, and Ilay: The Lord Viſcount Townſhend, the Lords Finch and De la War; Sir Robert Walpole, Mr. Vice-Chamberlain Stanhope, Mr. Secretary Southwell; who, together with ſev ral other Perſons of Quality and Diſtinction, went on board to pay their Compliments, and take Leave of His Majeſty. The Earl of Ilay, and the Lord His Majeſty embarks Viſcount Townſhend, who, with two of the latters Sons, were to accompany His Majeſty beyond Sea, embark'd on board another Yatcht. About eleven, the Yatchts were all under Sail with little or no Wind; but being tow'd by Boats, they proceeded as far as Graveſend, where they continu'd till Monday, the 5th in the Morning, when the Wind coming fair and freſh, they got under Sail at ten a-Clock; and at twelve paſt by the Nore, towards the Gunfleet, where they were join'd by the Squadron commanded by Rear-Admiral Norris, appointed to attend His Majeſty. The next Day about eight a-Clock in the Morning, His Majeſty's Yatcht paſt in Safety over the Hinder towards Goree, and ſo went up the Maeſe for Gravendael, where His Majeſty went on board the States Yatcht, and from thence to Lands in Holland. Vaert, where His Majeſty landed on Wedneſday the ſeventh at Night, and lay there. The next Morning His Majeſty proceeded on his Journey to Hanover, Detachments of Guards being order'd by the States General to attend His Majeſty thro' the Territories of their Republick: As from Vaert to Utrecht, Amerſfort, Voerthuyſen, Appledoren, Deventer, Holten, Delden, to Ottmarſen and Nordhorn. Being arriv'd at Delden, on Friday the 9th of June, between ten and eleven a-Clock at Night, in all Appearance in perfect Health: His Majeſty eat his Supper pretty heartily, and, among other Refreſhments, part of a Melon, which, it ſeems, did not digeſt well: For having ſet out again at three a-Clock the next Morning, His Majeſty had not travell'd two Hours, before he felt the Gripings of a Cho- Is taken ill. lick. Being come to Linden, where his Dinner was provided, His Majeſty could eat nothing; whereupon he was preſently let Blood, and had ſuch Remedies as were judg'd proper adminiſter'd to him. His Attendants wiſh'd he would have reſted at Linden, but His Majeſty being deſirous to reach his own Dominions, with all poſſible Speed travell'd on; and falling into a kind of Dozing in his Coach, reſted in the Arms of a Gentleman that ſate in the Coach with him 'Twas reported His Majeſty ſhould ſay in French, C'eſt fait de Moy, 'Tis over with me, or, I am a dead Man. About ten that Night, the King arriv'd at His Highneſs the Duke of York his Brother's Palace at Oſnabrug, where his Lethargy encreaſing, notwithſtanding all the Phyſicians could do for his Recovery, he departed this And Expires. Life on Sunday the 11th of June, about one a-Clock in the Morning, in the 68th Year of his Age, and the 13th of his Britiſh Reign.

A PRINCE ENDOW'D WITH ALL ROYAL VIRTUES.

The ſhort but juſt and full Panegyrick on his late Majeſty King George I. of glorious Memory, in the London Gazette, of the 17th of June, 1727.

The Preliminary Articles for the Pacification abovemention'd, were ſign'd at Vienna, on the 31ſt of May, N. S. by the Plenipotentiaries of the Emperor, France, Spain, and the States General. Mr. Walpole, the Britiſh Ambaſſador at Paris, to ſupply the Want of an Opportunity of ſigning in Form the ſaid Preliminaries with a Plenipotentiary of the King of Spain, had ſign'd an Inſtrument by Virtue of his full Power, obliging the King his Maſter to the Obſervance of the ſaid Preliminaries towards his Catholick Majeſty, on Condition that the Duke De Bournonville, the Spaniſh Plenipotentiary at Vienna, ſhould ſign a like Inſtrument Obligatory on the King of Spain's Part: The Duke De Bournonville did accordingly ſign an Inſtrument of the ſame Tenour, obliging the King his Maſter, to the Obſervance of the ſaid Articles towards the King of Great Britain. His Catholick Majeſty having receiv'd from Paris an Account of the Signing of the Preliminaries for a general Pacification the 31ſt of May, N. S. order'd the Marquis De la Paz, Secretary of State, to diſpatch a Courier to the Conde De las Torres, to command him to forbear all farther Hoſtilities againſt Gibraltar; and by the ſame Courier, the Dutch Mi-

A.D. 1727 niſter at Madrid, Monſieur Vandermeer, wrote a Letter to the Earl of Portmore, acquainting him that he had an Account from Mr. Walpole, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador, of the Signing of the ſaid Articles. The Orders from the Court of Spain, could not but be very agreeable to the Conde De las Torres, ſince in obeying them he ſuſpended the Siege of Gibraltar with leſs Diſgrace, than he muſt otherwiſe have done, by reaſon of the Impoſſibility of ſucceeding in that raſh Undertaking, in which he loſt above half of his Army, by Slaughter, Sickneſs, and Deſertion, during the Siege, which he obſtinately continu'd, contrary to the Opinion of the Engineers, about four Months. His late Majeſty could not have had Advice of the Preliminary Articles being comply'd with at Madrid, but that Event, and the Suſpenſion of the Siege of Gibraltar, and all Hoſtilities between Great Britain and Spain, and the giving of the Preliminary Articles of Pacification, between the Allies of Hanover and Vienna, was effected before His Majeſty's Demiſe, when he left his Britiſh Dominions in Peace and Proſperity, owing to His Royal Cares and Fatigues for their Security and Happineſs.

The Siege of Gibraltar rais'd.

His late Majeſty leaves his Dominions in Peace and Proſperity.

A Sketch of His Majeſty's Character.

His Majeſty's glorious Character, is a Subject to which my Talents are in no degree equal: Wiſdom, Juſtice, Clemency, Fortitude, Firmneſs and Moderation, are Ingredients in this divine Compoſition. His Love and Concern for his Subjects were apparently like thoſe of a Father, and their Duty and Affection to Him like thoſe of Children. As there was no Rigour in his Rule, there was no Conſtraint in their Obedience. There was not a Soul in His Majeſty's German Dominions, that was not devoted to Him with all its Powers; nor a virtuous reaſonable Man in Great Britain, that did not center all Temporal Happineſs in his Government. The Miſerables that were Enemies to it, were only freſh Inſtances of the aptneſs of created Spirits to riſe againſt their Benefactor and return Evil for Good. Heaven itſelf has not been free from Railing and Rebellion; and the nearer His Majeſty's mild and equal Sway approach'd to Divinity, the greater were the Envy, Hatred and Rage of the Factious and Rebellious. If Patience and Forbearance can have any Blemiſh, there was that One amidſt the Luſtre of His Majeſty's Royal Virtues. He was always as ready to Forgive, as the Diſaffected to Offend, tho' the latter abuſing an exceſs of Goodneſs, were rather harden'd in their Crimes by it, than brought to a ſenſe of their Guilt, and a change of their Conduct. In ſo large an extent of Empire there was no Part of it which did not feel the happy Influence of his Adminiſtration, of which there was no Branch that he did not acquaint himſelf with and have under his Eye, at proper Seaſons, without the Affectation of appearing over-buſy and vigilant. The ſerenity and benignity of His Majeſty's Mind diſcover'd themſelves in His benign and chearful Look, ſo uncommon in ſo Great Princes, that it was the more remarkable in Him, and ſurpriz'd and captivated all that approach'd Him. As the former Part of his precious Life was ſpent in Arms, ſo was the latter in Counſel for the Defence and Security of Chriſtian Religion and Liberty. In both which He alike prevail'd, and was, by the common Conſent of the greateſt Potentates and States in Europe, the Mediator and Arbiter in all their Differences; and the moſt ambitious and turbulent of them found all their raſh and chimerical Schemes baffled and broken by his Foreſight, Prudence and Steadineſs; the laſt a Quality ſo peculiar to His Majeſty, that among all his Illuſtrious Adjuncts, there is none that He is more remember'd by than that of, The Steady.
